interest the audience enough to make them want to read the book reviewed, then Mrs. Dale Morrison of McMurry College, Abilene, more than fulfilled her requirements Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Morrison gave "On the Long Tide" by Mrs. Laura Krey at the Settles hotel under auspices of the Philathea class of the First Methodist church.

Morrison gave the background of the life of the author and pointed out that if in this life the romantic type novel returns, much of it will be due to Mrs. Krey. The author, who also wrote the best seller, "And Tell of Time," belongs to the school of a few modern writers that believe much of present day writing is sordid and too realistic.

The novel, "On the Long Tide," concerns the part of Texas history known to all Texans when the was establishing itself. The story concerns one man, Jeffrey, and his life against the historical ekground of Texas and its birth Scenes of the Alamo, the colony started by Austin, and other high-lighted spots of Texas history are included in the novel.

Maybe you were one of the many who clamored so long for the city to take over the collection of garbage so that the town as a whole would be assured systematic service. Maybe you had hard things to say because of the long delay in effecting this much needed service. And maybe you are one of those who are yelling loudest now about having to obtain a regulation can in order to have your garbage picked up regularly.

The city is not in the garbage can business. Get that out of your head. It has a reason for specifying that you have a regulation container with top. That's simple reasoning. A can with a top keeps out files, simple reasoning. A can with a top keeps out files, preventing spread of disease germs, and prevents the refuse from scattering. Honestly, do you have any democratic right to have any other type of can?

No intention is made to take away your liberties by requiring that you conform with regulations. To hold back on this point is small town stuff. A city of 12,600 people must have regulations for the benefit of all. Don't be cantankerous about that.

We all know that. But your taxes are no higher than before the service was inaugurated, and you are having to pay out 25 to 50 cents less a month for having your garbage collected regularly. So aren't you ahead that much. Wouldn't you soon pay

If everybody would comply, garbage truck crews could work much faster. They can handle decently constructed cans faster and better than heavy, worn fron barrels. They could make more trips per week if all met regulations without quibling. We all would benefit. The city would be cleaner and more santers.

Be fair. Aren't you making a mountain out of a molehili over this garbage can ordinance? Be a good sport and a good neighbor. When you reach for the phone to raise all get-out with the city for not picking up trash out of an old barrel, just call your dealer instead and say—"I'm a regular fellow. Send me out a garbage can."

Country Must Go On Wartime Basis If Arms Program Works

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26 - This between having the usual large suntry's attitude towards the war, nanifested here at the capital, has already passed through two quite distinct phases. In the first distinct phases. In the first program, is not a difficult choice to make. of France, our interest in the war was not generally acknowledged. Nothing much was done about it, the situation is that the president, beyond the painless repeal of the the chiefs of the defense services embargo. In the second hase, only now coming to an end. was realized that the war afvital American interests. Yet the attempt was made to cope

The fairly obvious fact that win-ling the war is a full-time job fense commission that he intended seems likely to be recognized at to superimpose defense production last in the third phase, soon to be on normal business production. At ushered in by passage of the that time the president had a hap-lease-lend bill. The change, to py idea that the slack between our py idea that the slack between our actual production and our potential date, is largely atmospheric, but it can be taken for granted that such would be sufficient for all war needs. Although both men later perceptible change of atmosre portends more tangible de-oments in the near future.

4,500 Planes a Month
case in point is the air proram. It was reported in this pace a few days ago that responfor air production was to be fixed, either in the or F. H. LaGuardia, as a sort american Beaverbrook, or in the it is on a wartime basis, to the ally capable hands of Robert OPM's behind-the-scenes struggle of American Beaverbrook, or in the A Lovett and Thomas G. Corcoran. as assistant secretaries of war and navy respectively. Simultaneous-ly, a movement is afoot to recognise the inadequacy of our present scope of air preparation, and to expand it greatly. If the president approves...and the grim facts of British and American air needs will almost force him to do so.... the objective of the air program will be raised from 3,000 planes a month to 4,50 planes a month by the end of 1942.

In certain quarters, the need to raise the air program objective was clearly understood two months ago. During periods of transition ago. During periods of transcribes such as the present, however, the governmental machine moves with cumbersome deliberation. The matter is only now coming to a head.

Assuming that the objective is governmental effort will be reto meet it. Planning, so ar, has been extremely haphazard. Neither the war and navy departents, nor the office of production management have enforced real priority for defense production over normal business. Speeding up the expansion of air manufacturing facilities to produce 50 per cent more planes will call for rigid priorities and exact planning. The job can be done. The factory space exists or can be built. The labor exists or can be trained. The airframe and engine models are ready to be turned out. But severe sacrifices will be called for to procure adequate machine tools. There is a machine tool bottlenack for three reasons. (1) Because planning was poor or nor existent, and because the scope of preparation was too small, mass orders for machine tools were not seed at the start of the defense ogram. (2) Reasonable economy machine tool use was not at-mpted. Instead of tapping American industry's huge reserves of standard tools, and only ordering new special tools, standard and special tools were ordered together indiscriminately. Thus the machine tool industry was doubly overburdened. (3) Sub-contracting ras long delayed, thus encouraging manufacturers to expand heir plants enormously, while other plants stood idle.

Had planning been better at the start, no sacrifices would be necessary now. As it is, however, ma-chine tool priorities will have to be rather harshly enforced in two directions. As the air expansion is undoubtedly the most vital secor of the deefnse effort, it will have to be given the right of way over other defense work. And whenever peace-time industry has tools that can be converted for use n manufacturing airplanes, conversion will have to be made. This will mean diminished output, and perhaps a complete stoppage of peace-time production, in a good Manhattan-

Tommy Tucker Was Phi Beta Kappa Student

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK-Tommy Tucker is an orchestra leader and a Phi Betta Kappa who thinks so little of jewelry that he doesn't even own a Phi Beta Kappa key.

He is a University of North Dakota product who played baseball and debated during his undergraduate days and then tried his hand at teaching, which bored him, and drove him, presently, to banging a hot piano in a Minot cafe. Thus the transition from professorship into band leader, though, despite all the good things that have come to him, his great ambition has not been realized and never will "I have always," says Tommy Tucker, "wanted to pitch for the Minneapolis Millers."

In his off moments Tucker is "escape" movie fan and a reader of thrill fiction. He plays a lot of golf and dotes on bar-becued ribs. In his wallet is a card which identifies him a special police officer of Santa Mon-"Doesn't mean a There are many significant straws in the wind, from the de-fense officials demand that the thing," says he,

His musical signature is "I You '(Oh, How I Love You)," and there are, he says, same title. only 251 other songs bearing this

Unlike Kay Kyser, the late Hal Kemp, Skinnay Ennis, and other band leaders who had their own bands in college, Tommy never became identified with a musical organization while residing amid the sacred groves of the U. of N. D. On the side, however, he fiddled around with a trombone and a plano, writing bad songs that never got published but which drew curious rejections from publishers, such as the one about a football hero which the publisher called "Too English in Character."

So Tucker became an orchestra leader proper and began those criss-crossings of the continent which seem essential to the deplayed tank towns up and down the country for years and finally became known, and here it is. At 29 Tommy Tucker is still a bachelor. He is a native of Souris, N. D., a metropolis smack-dab on the Canadian border and sporting a population of 250. His daddy was a railroad 000 on the screen) is an acknowledged asset instead of a freak. By assembling the crew minor actors early, a troup is set up, rehearsed and ready to shoot at 9 when the stars report—instead of waiting until 10:30 or 11. By confining expenditures to items which are essential or which enhance production values concretely a movie outfit can get the same picture for a smaller budget, and a better picture when the resultant savings are thrown into the kitty.

Hollywood in 1940 saw many films, in addition to "Gone With the Wind," which lived up to or exceeded the best production standards of past years. It was the year of "The Grapes of Wrath," "Foreign Correspondent" "Boom Town," "North West Mounted Police," "Tin Pan Alley," "The Philadelphia Story, "Our Town," "The Sea Hawk," "Repecca," "Kitty Foyle," "Santa Fe Trail," "The Long Voyage Home," "Abe Lincoln in Illinois, "Down Argentine Way." "Es-cape," "The Mortal Storm," "Pinocchio" and many other films of similar "production

Not all of this random list nicked the box-office strongly or at all. Some are what the trade calls "smash hits" and some are what the trade knows as "artistic successes" only. But such a list shows that Hollywood, even in a war year, kept its chin up as well as out.

"Don't strain yourself to be nasty," Gert's voice was knife-like with irony. "It's no fun for Lovely to have to accept favors from Gert had always been a human marvel to her. A tender wonder. Suddenly she assumed heroic proportions. But she couldn't let Gert go on that way any more. Much of Gert's and Ring's trouble had been over her, her extra mouth to feed, her extra body to clothe. That would stop tonight.

Lovely turned and moved noise essly down the stair.

Out in the night air, still jan gling with only partially muted street noises even at that hour, she moved swiftly toward Avenue. She must get as far as possible from the atmosphere of that walk-up flat. Her steps slowed as they turned

She was good, Lovely thought, straight through.

Gert, being the older, had so nemory of her parents. Lovely had none. First their father had vanished. One Saturday night had seemed to swallow him up as a wave does the litter at the water's edge.

Less than a year later their mother, perhaps worn out with the struggle, had vanished in the same WAY. Just walked out into the night, telling the two young childran not to wait up for her. Eventually neighbors had informed authorities who came and put them in an orphanage. Lovely paused on the thought of her mother. Old questions were like fire leaping in the darkness. Questions that probably never would be answered because and Gert were like two shells washed up on a beach and then left there forgotten. Strange there north on the avenue. It had worked out for a while Ring had pinched her cheek and gone from that to other familiarities. Lovely was young and puszied and not quite happy. It was after Sunny came that Gert saw Ring kissing Lovely one day, kissing her over Lovely's frantic resistance.

"Stop that!" Gert said sharply. "Can't you take it, old girl?" Ring asked in irony. "Wouldn't be jealous, would you?" "I'm not thinking of myself,

DETROIT, Feb. 27. - Henry Ford's plastic car may widen the search and experimental labora-field of agriculture to a point tory convinces Ford that advances where, Ford believes, all vegeta-tion eventually will be utilized by farm products are immediately

The revolutionary use of plastic for the superstructure of an automobile would require, for 1,000,000 cars, at least 170,000 tons of agricultural products and 50,000 tons ter ways to use the soil, and that's of synthetic chemicals. Ford said. what we are learning in our labor-Materials would include 100,000 bales of cotton, 500,000 bushels of wheat, 700,000 bushels of soybeans and 500,000 bushels of corn. Upon the success of Ford's new venture hangs many hopes for ful-fillment of his "back-to-the-farm" philosophy which for years has exinded the virtues of living close to the soil. If agricultural product outlets can be broadened, Ford reasons, farming will become a more attractive vocation to youths

Seen as Peace Factor

"Enduring peace and the real prosperity of the nation can be inured only in finding new and better ways to use the soil, and that's

Robert A. Boyer, head of the research laboratory said the plas-tic sheats weigh one-half as much as steel sheets of the same and would absorb a blow 10 times greater than steel without denting. Fenders can be broken but minor collisions which would dent a steel fender leave plastic fenders undamaged. The plastic, unlike steel, does not "take a set," Boyer explained.

Paint May Be Eliminated

Plastic panels also can be im pregnated with the proper color at the time they are formed. If this process can be carried out at lowcost the panels will not need

A typical Ford experimental plastic consists of 50 per cent southern slash pine liber, 30 per cent straw, 10 per cent hemp, 10° per cent ramie and chemicals.

Boyer developed an inexpensive method of drawing and forming the plastics between dies in a press, that eliminated need for a high resin content. The fiber materials now are suspended in liquid and deposited on a screen of the approximate shape of the part to be reproduced. It then is impregnated with a low cost soybean resin binder, and the semi-formed part is put under heat and pressure by the finishing dies.

More tensile strength can be added to plastics by use of greater proportions of the ramie plant in the solution. At present, the plastics have about half the tensile strength of steel.

A sub-committee has been ap-pointed to work out a comprehen-sive bill.

Asserting 85 per cent of the gasoline processed in Texas was shipped out for sale beyond its borders, proponents of a higher tax declared the levy was fair, while opponents, arguing Texas oil ompanies already were heavily taxed, contended an increase would penalize refineries "almost to the point of extinction."

A bill requiring pre-marital medical examinations for women

It had been recommitted to the group after opponents on the house floor contended the people "would-n't stand for such examination for girls who want to get married."

The bill would require a physician's certification that the individual cows strong, other cattle and was free from transmissible venereal disease.
