Justice Peace Rob'son Resigns; Montgomery Named Successor

At this month's meeting of the County Commissioners Court of Schleicher county, Payne Robinson submitted his resignation as Justice of the Peace of Precinct 1, and the Court elected Jack Montgomery to fill his unexpired term, which extends through 1962.

Mr. Robinson's resignation was submitted to the Court at their special meeting Jan. 3. The Court accepted it at their regular Jan. 10 meeting, at which time they also elected Montgomery to fill the vacancy.

Mr. Montgomery is well known to Eldorado people, having been in business here. He is the son of Mrs. Nan Montgomery and the late J. B. Montgomery.

He will be assigned office space in the court house as soon as his bond is approved, which will be any day now. Mr. Robinson's office has been located on the second floor of the court house, and he will vacate it soon.

Mr. Robinson is retiring to look after his place on the northwest edge of Eldorado. He has served 25 years as Justice of the Peace. He took the job in 1935 succeeding C. C. Doty, who is now deceased.

In other business Monday, the Court voted to purchase a new 1961 model Ford for the sheriff's department for $2,286.60. They also accepted M. H. Woodward's $627 bid for the 1957 Ford which the sheriff's department had for sale.

Post Script

Poll tax sales continue to lag. Tuesday noon, there had been only 292 payments made in the sheriff's office.

Local voters must pay the $1.75 tax in order to qualify themselves to vote in elections in 1961.

More on this in this week's State Capitol news, elsewhere in this week's issue.

Varied reports continue to come in about the remaining cotton crop. One successful grower in the Reynolds community was contacted last week end while the big rain was in progress. "It may be March," he said, "before we get it all gathered, but I and my neighbors alone have at least 400 more bales to go."

Tom Ratliff reports that there have been more delays in getting the T-V cable system in operation here in Eldorado, but that all equipment is on hand and that the system should be in operation by the end of January.

The tower workmen will be here by Jan. 16th to work on the tower which has been erected in Orients Heights. Work will be done to synchronize the equipment and put it in working order.

Half of the cable has been strung over town to which local subscribers will tie on their T-V sets.

Eldorado Rates Mention In Texas 'Observer' Article

In an article in the December 30 edition of the weekly Texas Observer, Eldorado was mentioned in an article on medical care and doctor supply over the state of Texas.

Entitled "Investigating Medical Care; No Planned Distribution of M.D.'s," the article points out that numerically Texas has no shortage of doctors, yet 11 counties are without medical help of any kind. Texas' problem is one of distribution and geography regarding its doctors. The Texas Observer is an "Independent-Liberal Weekly Newspaper" and has circulation in nearly all of this state's 254 counties.

Other facts of interest pointed out were that although Texas can boast of some of the most modern hospitals in the country, it must also admit to some of the most ill-equipped—as well as having no hospitals at all in nearly one-tenth of its counties.

Concerning Eldorado, the article stated:

Eldorado, alone in sheep-rich Schleicher county, was in dire straits five months ago when its only doctor moved away. Recently a replacement arrived, and Schleicher residents could go back to having babies and broken arms again.

The replacement, Dr. M. D. Paul, 41, illustrates the fact that the community must fit the man—which is why so many way-off communities are without medical help. Small town "type" doctors are getting scarcer.

Fortunately, Paul and Eldorado suit each other. He grew up in South Dakota towns just about the size of his new home. He told the Observer:

"The basic reasons for my coming to Eldorado are complex and personal, but unquestionably I was influenced by the type of people you find out here:

friendly, they take you right in. "The social life centers around the high school, but I don't have time for social life anyway. I'm always on the go."

Eldorado has a three-bed clinic. For real hospital work, Paul must travel 20 miles to Sonora. There has been some talk of building a hospital for him in Eldorado.

Such communities as Eldorado because of their isolation, are fortunate to have even one doctor; but it is large enough to support three, and to limit a community of that size to one doctor is to push human nature too far; that is, the law of averages will perversely determine that SOME of the people in the town won't like him, will think he is too young or too old or too flirty, and will simply refuse to go to him for care. It is easy enough to shrug these people off as "making their own beds," but the fact remains that a second doctor makes incalculably smoother the gears of social interrelationships in towns large enough to support as many as two doctors.

Other towns were discussed. Deep East Texas and the sparsely settled areas of West Texas are most critically in need of better (or some) med. services. Looking to West Texas for examples, the article continues:

There is no doctor in Mertzon, the county seat and only town in Irion county, and the chances are slim of a doctor setting up practice there, because the town has no hospital. Young doctors—the only age that will venture into such a set up—do not have the money to establish their own clinics, and without clinics any doctor is largely incapable of giving more than high class first aid. Then there are towns of marginal need, such as Bronte, in Coke county, where there is one doctor. He owns the hospital. He has tried unsuccessfully to get help on a salary basis, which is not the most appealing lure in the profession. Meanwhile, though that community could be better served with an additional physician, there is relief in nearby communities: Ballinger has five doctors, Robert Lee one, and Winters three, all these within a half-hour drive.

Summing up . . . After seven years of surveying the situation, the Texas Medical Association finds no great and present need for more doctors, but an acute need to scatter them over the state in a way that will best utilize them.

All the smart planning in the world won't bring the distribution about, however; only lack of business or the whimsical desire for a change of social scenery can be counted on to push a doctor out of a community where he isn't needed into a community where he is needed.

Houston, El Paso, and Dallas are among cities in which doctors have increased by more than 50% since 1950.

Outside the big cities, doctors have increased by 5% as against a 23% jump in population.

A letter from the president of Waco's Civil War Round Table a few days ago, inviting this writer to become a member of that group, served as a reminder that Texas has only two such Round Tables at present; the one in Waco and another in Houston.

The Round Tables, organized to bring together those interested in one of the most colorful and critical periods of American history—are experiencing a phenomenal growth due to the increased interest brought on by the approach of the Centennial. There are now some 100 well-organized groups scattered throughout the United States and in three foreign countries. England, Germany and Canada each have at least one Round Table group.

Members of the Round Tables meet periodically to talk about and hear discussed various areas and personalities of the war.

The Waco Round Table is headed by Air Force Col. Harold B. Simpson, who is an ardent student of the war. He is currently involved in writing a definitive work on Gen. John Bell Hood's Texas Brigade, of which Jefferson Davis said in an address to the Texans near Richmond in 1861: "The troops of other States have their reputation to gain; the Sons of the Defenders of the Alamo have theirs to maintain! I am assured that you will be faithful to the trust."

If the plans outlined by Colonel Simpson for the Waco group's second year of operation are any indication, there should be some lively programs and discussions between now and next June.

Some of the members of the Round table who will be featured in regular programs include Waco attorney Sam Lanham, who will speak on "Dick Dowling and the Battle of Sabine Pass"; Lt. Ed Leland of James Connally Air Force Base on "The Battle of Vicksburg" and Colonel Simpson, who will talk about this favorite subject, "The Texas Brigade in Battle."

Colonel Simpson says one does not have to be an "expert" on the Civil War to be a member of the Round Table, for most of them merely have an interest in the War and want to learn more about it.

I'm more convinced than ever that an unholy alliance of some kind exists between magazine editors and newsstand operators and between book publishers and book store owners; an alliance calculated to keep all Civil War buffs such as this writer forever in their clutches and eternally out of pocket money.

Editors and publishers picture a Confederate flag on the cover of their product, give their stories intriguing titles and their allies in the book stores or at the corner newsstand put the material in plain sight on their shelves or racks; each knowing all the while that we Civil War bugs can't resist.

But the alliance becomes a pleasant one when it brings to the reader such provocative material as the story in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post or the little book sub-titled "The Civil War and I," published recently by McGraw-Hill.

Entitled, "Who Fired the First Shot?" and written by Ashley Halsey Jr., the article in the Post is among the top articles that I've read about the Civil War in recent months.

According to the author, there were several claimants to the honor of having fired the first shot at Fort Sumter in early 1861, and each of them could very well have done so, as all were apparently on hand for the beginning of what became America's most romantic war.

Lt. Wade Hampton Gibbes and Lt. Henry S. Farley, both West Pointers, were among the officers garrisoned with the artillery on James Island, facing Fort Sumter in Charleston Harbor. Each of them claimed the honor as did Edmund Ruffin, a volunteer in the Palmetto Guards stationed on Morris Island near the harbor entrance.

But perhaps the most unlikely suspect of all was a two-year-old girl, the daughter of Francis W. Pickens and his Texas-born wife. Named Frances Eugenia Olga Neva Pickens, the child was described by the more lurid part of the Northern part as having fired the opening gun while held in the arms of the Confederate commander, Gen. P. G. T. Beauregard. (Incidentally, the author points out that Beauregard was not even in the batteries when the Confederate guns opened up on Fort Sumter.)

There are other claimants, both likely and unlikely, to the honor of firing the first shot in the Post article, each of them striding through the story in his turn, lending dash and color to the unsuccessful search for the answer to the question "Who Fired the First Shot of the Civil War?"

But perhaps the best thing about the story is that it is only the beginning of a Post series on "Untold Stories of the Civil War." There's more to come in future issues and I, along with other buffs will scan each issue eagerly for the "untold stories."

One of the best Civil War books I've read recently is the unassuming little volume entitled "The Sword Over the Mantle" and sub-titled "The Civil War and I" by J. Bryan III.

There are bigger and more scholarly books on the War being published every week, but I doubt that readers will find one that will entertain and amuse as this one. The author is a member of a prominent Richmond family and grew up among survivors of the War. The names of Southerners of great fame emerge from his book as though they were his next-door neighbors as he recalls events from his own youth and writes an unvarnished memoir of life among "unreconstructed" Confederates.

As rousing as a rebel yell, "The Sword Over the Mantle" is calculated to provoke the thinking and renewed pride in the heart of every real son and daughter of the Old South.

W. G. Martin, a Civil War fan from Kerrville, has written to chide us for referring to General Bernard E. Bee as a Texan and for misspelling the general's first name.

This column mentioned General Bee recently in connection with the Battle of Manassas and said that during the battle General Thomas J. Jackson's name was "changed to Stonewall by a Texan, General Bernard E. Bee." Bee was attempting to rally his troops and called to them "there stands Jackson like a stone wall."

Mr. Martin says that Bee was South Carolinian and that the name should be spelled Barnard rather than Banard.

We plead guilty to the first charge but innocent to the second for we checked and found that the name was spelled Barnard on the original copy, but evidently the first "r" was dropped out somewhere along the line.

General Bee was indeed a South Carolinian and as Mr. Martin pointed out that state presented the general with a sword of honor for "patriotic and meritorious conduct" in the Mexican War. Douglas Southall Freeman, the great biographer of Robert E. Lee and author of Lee's Lieutenants, speaks of "Col. Barnard E. Bee of South Carolina."

We do, however, find some justification for calling Bee a Texan.

The general, who had the same name as his father, came to Texas with his family in 1835 when about 11 years old. Barnard E. Bee, Sr., was appointed minister plenipotentiary of the Republic of Texas in 1839. Both Bee county and its county seat, Beeville, in South Texas were named for Barnard E. Bee, Sr.

Gentry Dugat of Pottus, chairman of the Bee County Historical Commission and a collector of material about the Bee family, told us in a letter a number of years ago that there were many intimations that Colonel Bee (the father who died in 1853, eight years before the Civil War began) had done the things that his two Civil War sons, General Barnard E. Bee, Jr., and General Hamilton P. Bee, had done.

Mr. Dugat has been collecting material and doing research on the Bee family for more than 10 years and has been offered the use of the Harry S. Truman papers for his research. Mrs. Truman is a relative of the Bee family.

So we stand corrected on the account that General Bee, who gave General Jackson his sobriquet of "Stonewall" was indeed a South Carolinian. But at least he lived in Texas for awhile and his family has many Texas connections.

Mr. Martin, who corrected us on this score, is a graduate of The Citadel, a South Carolina academy which played a major role in setting the stage for the Civil War.

During the siege of Fort Sumter in January of 1861, a federal ship, the Star of the West, attempted to re-provision the garrison at Sumter and was fired upon by cadets of The Citadel in what is considered the first overt act of the War.

Beginning on January 7, cadets from The Citadel re-enacted that incident in ceremonies which were to include a dress parade, memorial services, tours of Fort Sumter, a dance, and a final gathering at the school for a program designed to call proper attention to January 9, 1861, the date on which the vessel tried to get into the Charleston Harbor.

The program was the first official ceremony of the four-year-long Civil War Centennial observance.

This is back-slapping, job-seeking time in Washington. There is an air of guarded optimism in the transition, which is in keeping with tradition.

On the one hand, many skeptics express approval of the cabinet selections, indicating moderation, stemming chiefly from such choices as Dillon for Treasury and Rusk to head the State Department.

At the same time, eyebrows are raised and doubts expressed over such appointments as youthful and inexperienced Bobby Kennedy for Attorney General and the hords of college professors, mainly from Harvard, who have been placed in key spots, particularly as economic advisors.

"But," you can hear many comment, "maybe it will work out."

On the spending side, there is more pessimism in the air. Many budget-busters are dreaming up some spending dillys. A Kennedy-appointed Task Force, headed by free-spending, liberal Senator Douglas of Illinois, himself a former college Professor, in a recent report on how to cope with unemployment, calls for an immediate outlay of $3 billion in grants, loans, etc., to affected areas. This could precipitate a run on the Treasury because nearly every community in the country at one time or another has unemployment problems.

Another Task Force, headed by Professor Hofde, president of Purdue, demands a federal aid for education program that would cost $2.5 billion the first year.

In addition several new bureaus, agencies, and special jobs as "czars," "expeditors," etc., are proposed, somewhat reminiscent of New Deal days.

But much of this must be cleared through Congress, where the real battles will be fought. The radical-liberals in Congress, in both the House and Senate, are presently jockeying for changes in procedural rules which they claim is needed to speed up action on vast and varied spending proposals that are being offered.

If the Congress relaxes its diligence the free spenders could have a field day this year.

Only time will tell. Let us hope that the new President will, with courage, wisdom and foresight, rise to the occasion. He is faced with a very difficult task. It is the duty of every American to support and encourage him when they conscientiously can. This is indeed a time for unity.

I am getting a little alarmed. Too many people have said lately, "Well I'm glad Christmas is over." Actually, I think the feeling is shared by many who would rather not say so and that's where the troubled thinking comes in. What are we doing wrong? The usually most beloved season of the year has been reduced to an unknown dread, an unhappy time, a time to be endured rather than enjoyed. Take a look at your Christmas reactions; right now is the time to do something about the situation if you think it could be improved upon. I don't necessarily mean to start so early as some—I saw a woman buy 300 Christmas cards on December the 27th at half price—but I don't know whether she was going to address a batch for '61 that night or not. Take a look now and remember. It might come in handy next year.

There is a legend at Harvard to the effect that the late Le Baron Russell Briggs, long the beloved dean of the college, once asked a student why he had failed to complete an assignment. "I wasn't feeling very well, sir," said the student.

"Mr. Smith," said the dean, "I think that in time you may perhaps find that most of the work of the world is done by people who aren't feeling very well."

How is your vitamin C situation? Even though an orange a day will take care of it there are yet one fourth of the people of the whole country who are shorting themselves on this important easy-to-get vitamin. It can't be stored; like water you have to add it all along. It keeps the soft tissues healthy. Gums and nasal passage linings are examples of soft tissues. Too many people take a cold for the reason that they are short on vitamin C. The doctor says to drink plenty of fruit juices if you have a cold and the reason is: fruit juices (citrus fruits) are rich in vitamin C. Check yourself; check the whole family; neglect can cost too much in terms of health.

Dun & Bradstreet Questionnaires Mailed Recently A. J. Hemphill, manager of the Fort Worth office of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., announced statement requests were mailed to businesses in Schleicher county. He said figures obtained from a physical count of the Dun & Bradstreet Reference Book for January, 1961 totaled 45 manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers in this area. According to Mr. Hemphill, each January, business concerns in all parts of the United States are asked by Dun & Bradstreet for copies of their financial statements. This year requests are being sent to approximately three million business concerns—to the corner grocery store worth a few thousand dollars as well as to businesses worth millions. The Dun & Bradstreet Reference Book lists those manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers who seek or grant commercial credit but it does not include some of the service and professional businesses such as beauty and barber shops, security dealers and real estate brokers. Therefore, the figures for total businesses in the United States would be higher than the three million quoted above. During the past year, Hemphill added, 26 changes were made in the Dun & Bradstreet Reference Book listings of Schleicher county businesses, including 9 names added, 7 deleted, and 10 changes in the ratings of continuing businesses. The changes occurring in Schleicher county are about even with the rest of the country where a change of business significance is counted about every 5 seconds.

CASH IN ADVANCE Please... Don't phone your want ads to the Success office... Our charge for the average little ad is only 50c, and with the increase in postage rates, we can't afford to keep books on 50-cent items and mail out bills. Please bring your little ads (including cards of thanks, $1.00) to the office and pay for them cash in advance. Exceptions: If your husband is an advertiser and the item can be charged to his advertising account... Or if you are a shut-in and too feeble to come to town.

Garden Club Meets The Eldorado Garden club met Jan. 11 in the club room of the Memorial Building. Officers were elected for the new year. The program was on indoor gardening. Mrs. Kenneth Cheek gave a very interesting talk on dish gardening. She had terrariums that were very pretty for indoor gardens, made of cactus and other plants. Mrs. Joe Edens talked on pot plants and their care. She explained that pepper plants, also strawberry plants, can be brought inside and will continue to grow and bear during the winter months. Mrs. Perry Mittel told us how to grow and care for African Violets, and how to divide and repot the plants. —Reporter.

FARRIS NIXON

Austin.—Texas motorists soon will be "seeing red" when they approach highway construction projects.

State Highway Department announced that the signalmen who direct traffic around construction projects will start wearing fluorescent red nylon vests and waving flags of the same bright material. Use of the new material has been adopted as an additional safety measure since it will be more visible, day and night. At night, flares will be used also.

Same signals will be used by the flagmen. Flag-holding arm fully extended horizontally means stop. Movement of the flagman's free arm means proceed.

Lake Succeeds Steakley

P. Frank Lake is new secretary of state, succeeding Zollie Steakley. Steakley was appointed associate justice of the State Supreme Court.

Lake served as assistant secretary of state under Steakley for the past four years. An attorney, he formerly lived in Tyler. He is a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps Reserve, retired; married and the father of four children.

Poll Taxes Due

Texans have until January 31 to pay the poll tax that will enable them to vote in 1961 elections.

Despite 1961's being an off-year, a major election will be held this year. U. S. Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson ended his 12-year career in the Senate by submitting his resignation on the opening day of Congress.

Daniel appointed William A. Blakley of Dallas to serve until a successor is elected this spring. A special election to fill the office for the remainder of the term will be held April 4. If no candidate receives a majority in the first election, a run-off will be held from 30 to 40 days later.

In the last special senatorial election in April, 1957, there were 23 candidates. Same sort of crowded field is expected this year with enough activity to give every poll tax payer his $1.75 worth.

Inauguration Ceremony

Tuesday, January 17, Gov. Price Daniel and Lt. Gov. Ben Ramsey will be inaugurated. Since it is a third term for Governor Daniel and a sixth for Lt. Gov. Ramsey, it will be "one of the simplest inaugurations in years," according to the Governor's office. No parade is planned.

New Insurance Chairman

Former Dist. Judge Thomas C. Ferguson of Burnet has been named chairman of the State Insurance Board by Governor Daniel.

Ferguson succeeds another district judge, Penn J. Jackson, who has returned to his bench in Cleburne.

New board chairman is also a former newspaperman, deputy district clerk, member of the Texas House of Representatives, mayor of Burnet and county judge. As he begins his service on the Insurance Board, one of the most pressing problems before it is whether to revise auto insurance rates.

Water Program Targets Set

Reorganization of the State Board of Water Engineers after the pattern of the State Highway Commission has been proposed by Governor Daniel.

Daniel advocated separating the engineering services under a chief engineer from the semi-judicial functions of the Board. He made the proposal before a pre-legislative meeting of the Statewide Water Committee.

Committee, composed of laymen to help in development of a state water program, endorsed broader lending authority for the State Water Development Board. At present the Board can grant loans to subdivisions for 1/3 the cost of a water project or $5,000,000, whichever is less. A $15,000,000 maximum is recommended by the committee.

Church-School Conflict Appealed

A group of Bremond citizens is appealing to the State Board of Education in protest of what it regards as a violation of church-state separation.

Bremond School District leases a Catholic-owned school building for use as a public elementary school and uses Catholic nuns as teachers.

This arrangement has been a source of local controversy for some years. Finally, a group of Protestant citizens brought the case before State Commissioner of Education J. W. Edgar.

Dr. Edgar said he had no authority to prohibit the school board's hiring nuns, but he strongly urged the district to get a school district-owned building.

Seeking more vigorous action, the protesting Protestants appealed to the State Board.

Two elections to approve bond issues to build an elementary school in Bremond have failed. Bremond, a town of about 1,100, is located 70 miles southeast of Waco in Robertson county.

Another Honor For Dr. Weldon B. Gibson

Menlo Park, Cal.—E. Finley Carter, president of Stanford Research Institute, has announced the appointment of Dr. Weldon B. Gibson at SRI's executive vice president, with responsibility for the executive management of Institute affairs. Dr. Gibson's appointment has been confirmed by the Institute's board of directors.

Dr. Gibson joined Stanford Research Institute in 1947 as head of economics research. He was appointed associate director in 1953, and in 1958 he was named vice president and a member of the institute's board of directors.

A native of Eldorado, Texas, Dr. Gibson graduated from Washington State College in 1938. In 1940 he received his MBA from Stanford University's Graduate School of Business, and the Ph. D. in 1949. For five years Dr. Gibson was a regular lecturer on transportation and business economics at the University.

Prior to World War II he was with the Burroughs Adding Machine Company and the Standard Oil Company of California, both of San Francisco.

During the war, Dr. Gibson served in the Air Force and spent four years at Wright Field, Ohio, where he was director of Material Requirements for the USAF. He left the service with the rank of colonel. Returning to civilian life in 1943, he became an assistant director of the USAF Institute of Technology at Dayton, Ohio.

He is a past president of the Palo Alto Chamber of Commerce. Dr. Gibson graduated from Eldorado high school in 1934.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN
 by Tiny Godwin
Schleicher County Agricultural Agent

A farm and ranch record book, accurately kept, carefully studied and utilized as a guide, is an important factor in successful farming and ranching.

It is the only means by which an agricultural producer can definitely determine the financial results of his business in analyzing the farm or ranch business for the purpose of finding ways to make or save more money.

It provides the definite figures which are necessary when the time comes to make a tax return. It provides the proof for your deductions in the event your returns are challenged. Tax regulations require you to keep records of your business for tax purposes.

Also, good farm records are a must under today's conditions of small margins of profit. Know your cost of production through good records enables you to base your management decisions on facts instead of guess work. Management needs to be more than putting in a good day's work on the farm or ranch.

Comparing the current year's records with other records of past years can show you where you need to improve to better meet today's competition in agricultural production.

A full set of records should include:

1. A complete inventory of land, buildings, livestock, feed and equipment.
2. A listing of all income and expenses.
3. Records of crop yields and livestock production.
4. Records of feeds, grown or purchased and disposal by livestock enterprises.
5. Record of labor on each enterprise.

Records are a valuable tool for sound business management. The only requirements: an inexpensive record book and a few minutes time each day.

miles between lubrications

30,000 is the most famous number of the year. It's every '61 Ford owner's license to save. How can Ford do it? Conventional chassis lubrication fittings have been replaced with metal plugs that help protect each lubrication point against abrasive mud, dirt and dust. And then, for only about $4 and about 20 minutes your Ford is ready for another 30,000! This is just one of the many ways the '61 Ford is built to take care of itself. Your Ford Dealer can show you more.

HERE'S HOW THE '61 FORD TAKES CARE OF ITSELF

Lubricates itself—You'll normally go 30,000 miles between chassis lubrications (which cost only about $4.00 and take about 20 minutes) because Ford has replaced conventional grease fittings with a sealed-in lubrication system.

Cleans its own oil—You'll go 4,000 miles between oil changes because Ford's Full-Flow oil filter gives you filtration through fibers... trapping more dirt than any other type of filter made.

Adjusts its own brakes—New Truck Size brakes adjust themselves—automatically.

Guards its own muffler—Ford mufflers are double-wrapped and aluminized to last three times as long as ordinary mufflers.

Protects its own body—All vital underbody parts are specially processed to resist rust and corrosion, even to galvanizing the body panels beneath the doors.

Takes care of its own finish—Just wash and clean Ford's new Diamond Lustre Finish and it continues to glisten like new. It never needs waxing.

Only FORD is beautifully built to take care of itself
