72ND YEAR

ELDORADO—SCHLEICHER COUNTY, TEXAS (76936) Thursday, September 6, 1973

Number 36

By—Bill Boykin

Austin, Tex.—Next big political campaign shaping up is for legislative pay raises and annual legislative sessions on the November 6 election ballot.

Top four elected Texas officials launched the campaign with the cooperation of 35 citizens' organizations.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Atty. Gen. John Hill, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. are united in support of Constitutional Amendment One.

The amendment would raise legislative pay from $4,800 a year (plus expenses) to $15,000 a year (plus 18 a day during sessions).

It would also provide for regular legislative sessions of 180 days during odd-numbered years and of 60 days, mainly for budgeting matters, during even-numbered years.

Austin attorney Will Davis was selected chairman of the organizational support group, with Phil Strickland of Dallas as vice chairman.

An executive committee headed by Davis and Strickland will work with the 35 cooperating trade, civic and professional associations in the campaign. (Texas Press Association is among the organizations.)

"This is a must thing," said Attorney General Hill. "It is a necessity that we pay the right amount for an honest day's work in a very high calling."

"Annual sessions in this day and time are essential for an efficient, responsible, intelligent and accountable legislative branch to properly function," said Daniel.

The statewide support organization will coordinate fund-raising and publicity activities for the campaign.

Legislators have been paid $4,800 a year since 1960.

Voters defeated proposals for pay raises in 1965, 1968, 1969 and 1972.

They also rejected annual sessions of the legislature in 1969.

Commissioner Resigns

Byron Tunnell resigned his position as a member of the Texas Railroad Commission and was immediately replaced by Mack Wallace of Athens.

On September 15, Tunnell, 47, will become vice-president of Tenneco of Houston in the company's governmental affairs department.

Wallace, 43, a former district attorney, has been serving as executive director of Governor Briscoe's Criminal Justice Council and as legal advisor to the governor. Briscoe appointed him two days after Tunnell's resignation.

Tunnell was appointed to the powerful, three-member oil, gas and transportation regulatory agency by former Gov. John Connally in 1965, succeeding Ernest O. Thompson. He was re-elected to a six-year term in 1972.

800,000 New Adults

Texas picked up about 800,000 new adults overnight August 27 when a new law took effect granting majority rights to 18-to-20-year-olds.

Under the new law, the young Texans can buy alcoholic beverages, enter contracts, get married without their parents' consent, and serve on juries, among other things.

A total of 249 acts of the 63rd Legislature took effect last week. Among them was reduction of the penalty for first offense possession of marijuana (up to four ounces) to a misdemeanor.

Post Script

I drove out last week to Cecil Williams's country store in Reynolds to return an article in which he had delivered five pounds of snapped black-eyes, two weeks ago, and then had a chance to visit with Cecil and Gertrude as well as with Billy Williams who was there doing some shopping.

The store is a popular community stopping place with people coming and going all the time.

Gertrude said that they had really had a run on blackeyed peas and customers had been driving out from town buying all they had available. Some even got out in the field and gathered their own. She also mentioned that there seems to be a bigger demand now for all kinds of vegetables.

"Can you use some okra?" "No, I've never learned to like okra."

Well, anyway, her okra is coming along fine, and if you are an okra lover, there is the place you can get it.

Then Cecil called my attention to a 2-foot high stack of cotton sacks and he asked Gertrude, "Don't you think we ought to advertise them?"

I interrupted to ask if there was any demand for cotton sacks anymore, but Cecil said they sold a lot of them last year, and Billy Williams said, "Yes, cotton was already starting to open out there."

As far as this writer knows, it has been years since any supermarket in Eldorado stocked cotton sacks. I had thought that all cotton was now gathered mechanically, one way or another.

Apparently there is some cotton still hand-gathered, and I mention it here now (for free) that cotton picking socks are available now at the Country Store out in Reynolds.

Before leaving I was able to buy the last three pounds of snapped black-eye peas from Gertrude and proudly brought them back to my refrigerator.

Open House For "Pop" Schafer

For those who would like to come by and say hello to Pop Schafer on his 94th birthday, he will be at the Granvil Hex home this Sunday, September 9th.

The calling hours are from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m. This was his birthday wish that he be able to come back to Eldorado one more time.

Mrs. Jack Griffin has bought the Phil Olson house in Glendale, and the Olsons have bought the Dr. Peterson house.

The Glenn Luckeys have moved from Galveston to 1818 Main (no. 3) LaMarque, Texas 77568.

Mona Beth Wagoner recently completed her two year nurse training in San Angelo, and is now at 3146 Hudnall, Apt. 265, Dallas Texas 75235.

Kathy Robinson has moved to 909 Baylor Ave., Apt. 208, Waco, Texas 76706.

Monday passed quietly in Eldorado. Main Street was practically deserted all day except that B&B Campers had some work going on, and at the Success shop printers were catching up on unfinished jobs.

Late in the afternoon various locals were observed leisurely driving around as though they didn't know what to do with the extra time—and they didn't know how to rest.

Eldon Calk came down to the drug store to pick up the evening papers; then closed the door and proceeded to do book work in his office.

But over on the highway all the filling stations were open for business and travel seemed to be brisk. Various cars were seen pulling motorboats, returning home from the lake.

Coffee drinkers had to congregate at Java Junction and El Dorado Restaurant where Jerroll Sanders off red his usual Catfish Buffet in the evening. This county had no car accidents.

Our public school, which was in session all last week, was closed for the Monday holiday. They were back in business again Tuesday morning with all school buses running and teachers now getting settled into serious class work.

And of course football. Coaches have assured us that a football reporter will be appointed from among the Senior girls to furnish news reports of the games throughout the ten-game season.

Don't forget: The Eagle Band Boosters will meet this coming Monday evening, Sept. 10th. Read the write-up on page 2 for details.

The City of Eldorado will hold their Board of Equalization meeting this coming Tuesday evening, Sept. 11, at 7:30 in the City Hall.

Eagle football fans were treated to a fine show and (we hope) a preview of the season to come, as the varsity Eagles overpowered the Ballinger Bearcats by a 4-3 count Saturday at Ballinger.

The revitalized Eagles showing exceptional poise and execution for so early in the season, dominated play throughout most of the game.

In the B game which preceded the varsity contest the story was the same with the Junior Eagles moving the ball well and showing a solid defense.

Folklife Festival Set This Week End In San Antonio

Visitors to San Antonio this week end are in for a big dose of nostalgia as the second annual Texas Folklife Festival gets into full swing.

The festival opens Thursday, September 6, for a four-day run at the Institute of Texan Cultures grounds on HemisFair Plaza.

There will be 2800 participants from 126 cities in the state on hand to show an estimated 100,000 visitors how Texans of all races and national origins have fun.

The huge variety show will feature the foods, songs and dances, celebrations and customs of the state's 26 ethnic cultures. The festivities will include 32 games, contests and demonstrations, 55 artists and craftsmen, 12 special exhibit areas, plus 1,800 persons dispensing tasty foods from 24 cultures.

Seven hundred entertainers will perform their specialties during the festival and, in addition, visitors will have the opportunity to partake in 24 of the state's top festivals and celebrations.

New this year is a 3,500 square foot Pioneer Brush Arbor, constructed by San Antonio's Turtle Creek Optimists Club. The rustic structure will be the setting for old-time music and gospel singing. Visitors can sit on the grass, take part in sing-alongs and eat old fashioned ice cream.

A frontier section, complete with log cabin, corral, cane and grist mills, will be on the site for many pioneer-type games and contests. Children at the festival can make their own pioneer toys, play in a haystack, and slide down the grassy slopes surrounding the Institute.

Four acres have been added to the festival grounds this year to accommodate the expanded show, and an additional 30,000 sq. ft. of shade will be provided.

The flow of pedestrian traffic will be eased with three additional entrance gates. Two stages have been added and there will be continuous entertainment on all eight stages. All entertainment is free once visitors have paid the modest admission—$1 for adults, 50c for children under 12.

Foods and beverages will be sold by coupons and this year, festival visitors can purchase admission and food tickets in advance at the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, downtown hotels and the Institute.

In addition to the countless activities at the festival, visitors can tour the Institute's exhibits which tell the story of Texas' cultures, see the unique dome show every half hour and view the new Texas Ranger 150th Anniversary exhibit.

Free shuttle bus service will be provided during the four-day event. The buses, decorated with colorful festival banners, will pick up passengers every 10 minutes from major downtown parking lots.

Festival Manager O. T. Baker said, "The festival is the biggest entertainment bargain in the Southwest. But more important, we encourage participation in an atmosphere of family fun. Every effort is being made by exhibitors to hold the line on food prices." He concluded with a grin, "Beer will still be two bits a cup."

Market Report

College Station, Tex.—Despite lower prices this week, watch for fluctuations in poultry supplies and prices during the weeks ahead.

This advice comes from Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Buy a whole chicken and cut it up yourself—then pocket the savings," she suggested.

Turning to other meats, the specialist predicted uncertainty over beef prices after the freeze lifts on Sept. 12.

"Although supplies will be somewhat larger, prices will likely go up. So careful shopping and creative cooking continue important.

"One way of making food dollars go further involves planning meals with less meat. But this is not easy—and usually requires additional shopping and preparation time.

"Casseroles, meat loaves and sausage & vegetable combinations make a little meat go a long way," Mrs. Clyatt said.

"Or, a small portion of meat served with milk, cooked beans, peas or lentils provides necessary protein at less cost than a large serving of meat."

The specialist noted that several varieties of fresh plums decorate market fruit sections—including attractively priced purple prunes. Cantaloupes and watermelons remain plentiful and of excellent quality. Peaches, on the other hand, are priced high.

Pears, bananas, nectarines, pineapples, grapes and oranges warrant consideration, she added.

"Some vegetables flaunt lower prices than a week ago with cabbage, head lettuce, dry yellow onions and sweet potatoes the most noticeable."

Carrots, bell peppers, celery, corn, collard greens, mustard greens and hard shell squash are moderately priced, Mrs. Clyatt concluded.

NEWS OF ECOLOGY

REVERSING POLLUTION IN OUR LAKES

Science has come up with a new way to prevent and reverse pollution of our nation's 1.6 million lakes, more than half of which are already decaying, or eutrophying.

During summer, a lake has three distinct layers. The top layer is the warmest and the bottom layer coldest.

Water currents in the bottom layer are minimal, and no surface oxygen gets down that far. This absence of oxygen speeds up the decaying process with many harmful results. Cold water fish such as trout and salmon can't survive. Foul-smelling gases are given off. And nutrients formerly trapped on the bottom are released promoting dense growth of unwanted surface plants and algae.

The harmful results could be prevented, or reversed if they have already begun, if only it were possible to oxygenate the bottom layer of water. But scientists have long known that if a hose were run to the bottom, and air bubbles pumped through the hose as in a fish tank, most of the air would simply float to the surface instead of oxygenating the bottom layer of water.

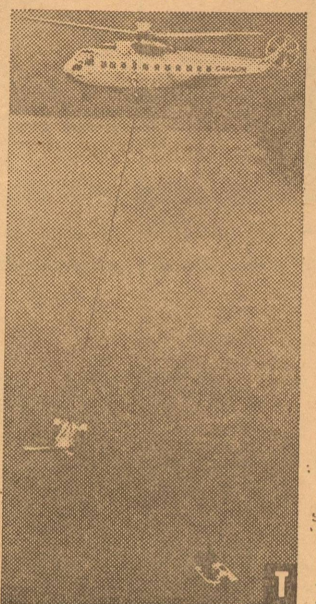

THE NEW IDEA

At an ecology-oriented chemical company, a group of scientists decided to try a new technique that has been confined essentially to use in Europe.

An aerator is submerged on the bottom of a lake and connected to an air compressor placed in an acoustically insulated enclosure on the shore. The aerator draws water into it, saturates the water with oxygen, then expels the oxygenated water. This way, instead of the oxygen bubbling up to the surface, it stays on the bottom where it is needed.

To demonstrate the idea, scientists of Union Carbide Corporation have submerged two cylindrical aerators, each 8 feet in diameter and 15 feet high, at the bottom of Lake Waccabuc near New York City. Every day, each unit will add about 550 pounds of oxygen to the water.

As part of the program, Union Carbide will maintain a mobile laboratory—a chemistry lab on wheels—at the site to monitor and control results. In addition, continued assessment of the two neighboring lakes will be conducted for comparison purpose.

The project to restore Lake Waccabuc is part of a broad scientific program in the area of aquatic environmental sciences. Union Carbide initiated over two years ago. It aims to develop expertise in four distinct but related aquatic areas—assessment, where the nature, cause, extent, and complexity of an existing environmental quality problem in a body of water can be specifically determined; aquatic bioassay studies, in order to develop reliable, standard methods to determine the impact of chemicals and heavy metals on aquatic ecosystems; monitoring and control methods, to quickly spot physical changes in a body of water, and restoration approaches designed to return a body of water to a quality consistent with a given desired use.

Specific programs in all four areas are in progress, some of which are being conducted under contracts with the Environmental Protection Agency.

"We are trying to make up lost time," stated Clem Cowley, Manager, Aquatic Environmental Sciences for Union Carbide. "As is usually the case when science attacks a broad problem it has ignored for too long, what we don't know exceeds what we do know. However, in the last two or three years we have cut into that deficit significantly."

Mr. Cowley also reported that Union Carbide will conduct two other lake oxygenation programs in 1973 using a different approach which is proprietary to Union Carbide. The Attica Reservoir in Attica, New York, and the Ottoville, Ohio, quarry, both of which are highly eutrophic, will be aerated using pure oxygen.

Supermarkets Survey

Some 250,000 shoppers this year went to the grocery store and said what they thought about it.

A survey made this year of some 250,000 shoppers set its sights on finding out how shoppers really feel about the food stores in which they shop—and it pointed out some interesting things about consumers. Compusamp, a marketing research firm, was "commissioned" by Supermarketing Magazine, in cooperation with The National Association of Food Chains, to conduct the survey in 30 major U. S. markets.

Questions were asked about unit pricing, nutrition information, open code dating, packaging, food prices, meat grading, discount stores, pollution, coupons, "cents-off," and stamps, games and price specials.

Results of the survey include the following:

Discount Food Stores—The majority of shoppers interviewed believed that discount stores saved them money. However, the study indicates there is reason to believe that shoppers with low levels of education and income are more likely to be interested in discount stores than are shoppers who are well-educated and who have higher incomes.

Unit Pricing—There has been a great deal of discussion about this topic, and, at present, unit pricing is generally available somewhere if a consumer really wants it.

However, the survey indicated that even though nearly everyone says he or she wants it, very few people actually use it. And the higher a shopper's level of education, the more likely she is to consider it important.

Age and income were also factors in the answer to this question. The older the shopper, the more she considers unit pricing important and the lower the level of income, the more important it becomes.

Nutrition Information—Current concern about nutrition is reflected in shoppers' attitudes toward nutrition information.

Sixty-three per cent of the shoppers interviewed in the survey believed that food stores should be responsible for providing shoppers with nutritional information and keeping them informed. This attitude was strongest among people whose income was between $5,000 and $15,000 a year.

Open Code Dating—Even though some shoppers had no real understanding of open code dating and did not know how to use it, a large majority—89%—said they want open dating. Apparently they strongly believe open coding will "guarantee" freshness.

Packaging—This apparently presents problems for homemakers, and many seem to doubt that the larger sizes actually represent a savings for them. Even shoppers with large families were not convinced that large sizes of items meant savings, the survey reported.

Food Prices—Many shoppers blame supermarkets for rising food prices. And the more money and education, and the older the shopper, the more likely she is to feel the supermarket is responsible rather than farmers, processors or consumers.

Meat Grading—65% of the shoppers interviewed said they rely on their own experience in choosing meat items rather than on the government grading systems—USDA Prime, Choice, etc.—and this was true especially in homes where consumers were older or had children.

Survey results indicate, as might be expected, that younger shoppers who are less sure of themselves are much more likely to depend on government grades or other such quality guides to help in making decisions about what to buy.

Pollution—Supermarkets should not sell products that are harmful to our environment. That is the response of 84% of the persons interviewed in this survey.

Coupons and Cents-Off Offers—Age, education and children apparently do not affect the use of coupons or cents-off offers. Only income seemed to be a factor in whether shoppers believed that such devices were a savings. When income dropped, coupons and cents-off offers became more important.

Stamps and Games—These have been around a long time; however, 83% of the shoppers interviewed in the survey believed that they paid higher prices in stores which used games or gave stamps.

Specials—If stamps and games have been around for a long time, specials have been around much longer. Stores use them for some very good reasons, but probably the most important is to get people into the store.

Most shoppers today have access to a car and can—and do—shop around. This makes the success of its specials very important to a supermarket. However, the survey results indicate that one out of every two shoppers believes that stores raise other prices to compensate for their specials.

Better To Beware Of Cookware "Bargains"

College Station, Tex.—Despite claims and advertisements, waterless cooking isn't anything new or fantastic, one authority said this week. "It simply involves cooking food by steam rather than water—so great quantities of liquid aren't necessary," Lillian Cochran, home management specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, explained. Salesmen for "waterless cookware" have several sales pitches, the specialist cautioned. Some include "reducing the amount of food needed" and "increasing flavor and nutritive value of food prepared." "However, wise consumers know that cookware will not improve family health or decrease food bills."

Sometimes sales pitches offer additional temptations—"discounts" or "free bonuses" such as glassware or silverware. "However, prices are usually set very high to allow the salesman to offer such so-called bonuses. "Prospective brides, single women on their first jobs and young people in school often make prime targets for zealous salesmen," Miss Cochran continued. Actually, waterless cooking can be done in any heavy metal pan which has a tight-fitting lid, she noted. "The tight lid allows only a small amount of steam to escape. "Utilizing low heat is extremely important in keeping vapor losses to a minimum." In general, waterless cookware is made of a heavier gauge metal than normally used in top-of-the-range pans.

However, it's usually sold in sets, so use caution when considering a purchase, the specialist advised. "Pots included in a large set may not come in sizes needed—and buying a set that includes items you won't use is hardly a bargain," Miss Cochran emphasized. "When purchasing cookware—whether it's waterless or regular—a pan should possess several characteristics," the specialist contended. A good pan is: —made of thick, durable, non-warping material. —constructed of a material that heats quickly and evenly. —designed with wide, flat bottom; wide, smooth rounded corners and straight sides. —complete with a tight-fitting lid, and —made of materials and construction features which permit easy cleaning.

September Is Better Breakfast Month

College Station, Tex.—Breakfast begins a new day—so start out right.

September is "Better Breakfast Month" and the ideal time to get into the habit of eating a good breakfast. Frances Reasonover, foods and nutrition specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, said.

"It's important to every family member — especially youngsters starting back to school. Generally, students make better grades and learn more when they eat breakfast."

Breakfast is exactly what the name indicates—ending the fast from the night before, she continued.

"However, it doesn't have to consist of bacon, eggs, cereal or toast—any nutritious food will do if it furnishes one-fourth of the day's needs.

"Try hot dogs, hamburgers, peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, cheese, beans, soup, macaroni and cheese, creamed meat or fish over potatoes, or cottage cheese and fruit," Miss Reasonover suggested.

Through imagination and planning, children can be well-fed at breakfast—even if the mother works away from home and has limited time for food preparation.

"Such working mothers can prepare foods the evening before and refrigerate them. Then family members can grab these breakfast foods before rushing off to work or school.

"Some examples include sandwich makings, reconstituted fruit juice, nutritious cookies or meat pies."

Mincemeat, oatmeal-raisin or other nutritious cookies make ideal "quickie" breakfast foods that can be eaten "on the run"—so keep plenty on hand, the specialist advised.

Another possibility involves having pancake batter made up and the skillet ready to use. This way, a child just turns on the heat and pours batter onto the hot skillet.

"It takes only a few minutes—and a little effort on the child's part—to have piping hot pancakes and syrup," she added.

Miss Swatzell And Mr. McWilliams Marry In Dallas Church Ceremony

MRS. MIKE C. McWILLIAMS
the former Sally Swatzell

Miss Sally Swatzell became the bride of Mike C. McWilliams during a ceremony Saturday in Perkins Chapel at Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, Texas.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phil D. Swatzell of Canyon, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl D. McWilliams. Grandparents of the bride are Alfred J. Stevens of Eldorado, the late Mrs. Stevens, and Cleburne residents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Swatzell. The bride's mother is a former Eldorado resident.

Officiating for the ceremony was the Rev. Douglas Watterson, pastor of Cliff Temple Baptist Church.

Miss Gayle Swatzell and Wade S. Huley were the couple's honor attendants.

Mrs. McWilliams was graduated from Texas Tech University in Lubbock in 1970 where she became a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, was named to the Dean's List and served on the Women's Residence Council.

The bridegroom was graduated from the University of Texas at Austin in 1969 and from UT-Austin School of Law last spring. A member of Beta Gamma Sigma and Phi Delta Phi, he is an attorney in Dallas where the couple will live after a trip to Hilton Head Island, S. C.

Meat Shortage, Cattle Prices Discussed

College Station, Tex.—What factors really caused the current "shortage" of meat—the boycott earlier this year or the government price ceiling?

"The old concept that a producer is a price taker rather than a price maker is undergoing a rapid change in this instance," pointed out Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. He emphasized that while the boycott in April was real and probably did have an impact on the total price of beef, yet it may have caused the producer to pull back on production, thus creating shortages.

"We have moved from the boycott phase to just the opposite viewpoint where consumers are concerned," Uvacek added, pointing to trends of hoarding meat.

After the meat price ceiling is lifted on September 12, fed cattle prices are expected to rise and then fall back to about 51 cents per pound during the pass-through phase, noted Uvacek. "This price rise, however, may actually already have been anticipated and therefore realized," he added.

His prediction for November saw fed cattle selling from 52 to 53 cents a pound, with the price range for the first quarter of next year prevailing around the 50 to 52-cent level.

"Feeder animals—those weighing 600 to 700 pounds—are currently selling from 35 to 37 a hundredweight above the comparable fed steer prices. By this fall, however, feeders should move more in line with finished cattle prices and should range from $2 to $4 per hundredweight above fed cattle prices," Uvacek forecast.

"Cow prices should follow along with feeder trends, but here we are talking about salvage value, since there are few cow offerings," added the specialist.

Miss Susan Kuykendall Engaged To Wes Wade

SUSAN KUYKENDALL

The engagement of Miss Lonette Susan Kuykendall to Charles Wesley Wade has been announced by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie C. Kuykendall of Barnhart.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wade are parents of the prospective bridegroom. The wedding will be Sept. 15 in First United Methodist Church here in Eldorado.

Miss Kuykendall is a 1972 graduate of Irion County High School, and her fiance is a 1972 graduate of Eldorado High School. He attended Angelo State University.

Mr. and Mrs. Don McCown and Vickie and Mary of California visited Mrs. L. T. Wilson over the week end. Mrs. McCown is a granddaughter of Mrs. Wilson's.
