Highlights Of 4,000 Mile Tour Reviewed

Experiences of a party of 4-H club boys from District six during a 4,000 mile trip through four states, recounted by W. G. Godwin Schleicher County Agent, one of five officials accompanying 19 youths on the journey that started at El Paso and reversed at the Golden Gate Exposition in San Francisco, California.

"There were 25 in the group that traveled in five automobiles over the route to New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and California. Not a single mishap occurred during the expense-paid trip that came as a reward for fine records established by outstanding boys from their respective counties.

"The boys camped outdoors all the time and "roughed it" all the way. They took the District Six chuck wagon along and hired Austin More, negro cook of Bryan to prepare the meals. The trailer wagon alternated behind the different cars. Early each day two of the party of Texans were dispatched to find a suitable location for camping and secure the needed supply of groceries.

"Harold Williams, 4-H club boy selected from Schleicher County, and Mr. Godwin, left Eldorado on Saturday morning, August 5, to join others in the group at El Paso. The boys left El Paso August 6, but their experiences really started unfolding the previous night. They crossed the border into Juarez where some of them purchased Mexican souvenirs. While in El Paso, they took a scenic drive in country surrounding the city and visited Fort Bliss.

"The so-called "middle route" beckoned the Texans in reaching the West Coast. Near Miami, Arizona they drove through Devils canyon. The first night was spent at Mesa, Arizona, the second at El Centro, 50 miles from San Diego.

"At the California metropolis, the delegation that was garbed in cowboy toggerly visited the zoo. There a group picture was napped by a San Diego Sun photographer which was printed along with a full story.

"Other sights viewed in San Diego were the U.S. Naval and air bases. Large destroyers were anchored in the Pacific harbor.

"The fourth day took the young farmers and ranchmen to Los Angeles and on to San Francisco. In the latter, camping quarters were laid out in Charles Lee Tilden National Park, their home for the two days and three nights spent (Continued on Supplement)

RULES FOR A SON

Modern young men would hardly find to their liking the rules laid down by Alexander Hamilton, first secretary of the treasury, for his eldest son, Philip. Somewhat condensed, they were as follows: "From April to October 1 he will rise at 6 o'clock; the rest of the year not later than 7. Ten will be his hour of going to bed throughout the year.

From breakfast until 9 he is to read law. At 9 he goes to the office to write and read law until dinner. After dinner he reads law at home until 5. From 5 to 7 he does what he pleases; from 7 to 10 he reads or studies what he pleases.

"From noon on Saturday he is at liberty to amuse himself. On Sunday he will attend church, and may devote the rest of the day to innocent amusements."

Phillip Hamilton was described as a youth of great promise but he did not live many years under the rules prescribed for him. At the age of 17, for resenting disparaging remarks about his father he was challenged to a duel, in which he fell mortally wounded.

About three years later Alexander Hamilton, at the age of 47, was also mortally wounded in his famous duel with Aaron Burr, vice-president of the United States. Burr was thereafter virtually an outcast from society.

NEW WAR ON CRIME

Following the impaneling of a new Federal grand jury in New York, a nation-wide investigation of crime conditions is to be made, unhampered by state, county or city lines.

The grand jury will be in session 90 days, and it is expected that witnesses from all parts of the country will be summoned before it. The jury is composed of 23 men, all prominent in the business and professional life of the city.

They will have the full assistance of the Federal Bureau of Investigations and its G-men. More than 500,000 pages of the bureau's reports on crime compiled during the last 10 years will be available to the jury.

At the moment the man most wanted is Louis (Lepeke) Buchalter, designated as the nation's head racketeer, whose operations embrace particularly the fur, garment and bakery industries, from which his "collectors" have long exacted tribute.

It is said that henchmen of his have been systematically murdering persons who might appear as witnesses against Lepke and recently killed Irving Penn, a business man, by mistake in pursuance of their work of extermination. Reward totalling $30,000 are offered for Lepke's arrest.

Attorney General Murphy is backing the anti-crime campaign, and special Federal grand juries will shortly be impaneled in other cities.

AUSTIN—A showdown fight between oil conservation authorities of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Louisiana, Arkansas and New Mexico and a group of major oil companies which cut the price of crude oil in the face of the best statistical position which the industry has enjoyed in 12 years, was under way this week end.

Led by Ernest Thompson, Texas railroad commissioner, the oil states enumerated, which produce more than 65 percent of the nation's crude, through their representatives at an extraordinary session held in Oklahoma City, ordered shutdowns of their producing wells as a "strike" protest against increasing gasoline prices and declining crude prices.

Thompson asked Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel to call a special session of the Legislature, and submit a 5-cent per barrel additional tax on oil, to finance social security in Texas, but O'Daniel promptly refused the request, with the same quick sympathy which he displayed during the recent regular session at every attempt to tax the large interests of the State for social security. He declared it his opinion the Legislature would not pass an oil tax bill, in rejecting Thompson's request. O'Daniel's judgment of what the Legislature will or will not do proved so inaccurate during the regular session that observers here doubted whether the governor was qualified to forecast legislative action. The oil companies contribute not one penny to the present $20,000,000 a year social security program in Texas, the money being derived from taxes on liquor, amusements and contributions from the Federal government.

HUMBLE PRECIPITATES CRISIS

The oil crisis was precipitated by the Humble Oil Co., leading Texas refiner of crude, and subsidiary of the outlawed Standard. Railroad Commissioner Jerry Sadler demanded an investigation by the Attorney General, and Gerald Mann announced that he already had under way a probe to ascertain whether Humble was violating the State's anti-trust laws. Simultaneously, the Railroad Commission began a hearing on application of Humble to increase by 45 percent the allowable quotas of its East Texas wells, as the result of a Federal Court order, based on the recent Rowan and Nichols case. Outcome of this hearing was expected to be a complete revision of the present allowable basis used for years in the East Texas field by the Commission, and a new East Texas proration order. The Humble and certain other majors have consistently opposed intensive drilling in East Texas, while Thompson, that his "first order of business" would be to raise pension money. His own plan failed before the Legislature, and when Thompson proposed what his friends say is a certain and painless method, the Governor shied away from it immediately. All this becomes a part of the "record" which the candidates are so fond of reviewing on the stump and over the radio, when another summer starts the political sap to rising in Texas.

gressman Cole of Maryland, which failed of passage during the regular session just ended.

Opponents of Federal control, which includes most Texas independent oil men, pointed to the prompt and effective cooperative action by the largest oil producing states in agreeing upon and ordering the shutdown, through the Interstate Oil Compact, as a complete refutation of Ickes' contented sap to rising in Texas.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. Marvin Williams, Pastor
"Unaware of Angels." Heb. 13:2.

The Ideal was once among us, and we beheld His glory, and did not know it. While he tabernacled among men they doubted Him, questioned Him, criticized Him, and scorned Him. It was not till He was taken from them that the full truth burst upon their sight. As He neared the Great Altar where He offered up the Perfect Sacrifice, He said that He would send the Spirit to reprove the world of righteousness. In a hush of love and reverence He was laid in a new tomb, and since that hour He has through, the spirit, been the hope of our fallen humanity.

Subject Sunday morning, "His Face."

There will be no night service in our Church Sunday.

Preaching service will be conducted in the Rudd community on Sunday at 3:00 p.m.

Club Girls Learn Points On Good Grooming At Camp

Talks on the psychology of good grooming and building for living, reports from short course delegates, and plenty of exercise from skating, swimming, and riding bicycles are things worthwhile included in the program of County 4-H club girls when they held their annual encampment at Christoval last week.

A report from short course was given Tuesday afternoon by Bertha Sauer and Mrs. J. R. Conner, sponsor who accompanied them, gave a general summary of the course.

In a good grooming contest held Wednesday morning, Bertha Sauer won first place and was given a belt rack as a prize. In the run-off were Gertrude Sauer, Mary Lee Taylor, Sammie Bawcom, and Edda Jean Meador.

In a talk on the "Psychology of Good Grooming", Miss Margaret Stewart, County Demonstration agent, stated that the attention we give the phases of personal cleanliness and good grooming rather than showy dress is what makes a favorable impression on the right people. "Good grooming is so much an indication of breeding that we often have a feeling of surprise when we see a girl who is careless about her personal cleanliness and care of clothing," said Miss Stewart. "The underlying principles of good grooming are cleanliness and neatness.

"We are most like the pictures we carry around in our mind", said Miss Stewart in discussing Building For Living.

"Think of yourself as the person you would like to be, and remember that perfection is your birthright." She emphasized the thought that Personality is the quality of being somebody; it is built day by day.

Group singing was included in other recreation. Girls to attend were Dorothy Bruton, Elaine Watson, Fay King, Helen Craig, Jean Sproul, Ora Ballew, Sammie Bawcom, Birdie Ballew, Irene Sauer, Josephine Faught, Gertrude Sauer, Willis Mae Castello, Bertha Sauer & Edda Lou Meador. Others present were Mary Lee Taylor of San Angelo, Mrs. G. L. Ballew, Bud Ballew, Mrs. J. R. Conner, Rosa Sauer, Mrs. Victor Sauer, Miss Nell Campbell and Miss Stewart.

"Foreign exhibits held the most interest for the boys. Displays from many foreign countries caused the young men to spend long hours before the exhibits. The carnival and other night life entertainment was given some time.

"The homeward itinerary included trips through the Grand Canyon and Painted Desert. Other interesting stops were at the Boulder and Buchanan dams.

"The boys were enthusiastic about the Painted Desert. Early in the morning they went on a scenic drive through it, viewing for the first time the thousands of hues of colors that are visible in early morning sunrise."

The tired but elated youths reached El Paso Thursday, scattering to their respective homes in West Texas. Harold and Mr. Godwin arrived in Eldorado Thursday afternoon.

Authorities other than Mr. Godwin chaperoning the boys were Noel Fry, Tom Green County, J. T. Davis, Irion County, X. B. Cox, Scurry, and V. G. Young of Glasscock county.

ONE THING And
THEN ANOTHER
By Fred Gipson

SAN ANGELO — It's funny sometimes how a kid'll fivure out some fool thing he'd like to do, and then if he never gets to do it, keep wanting to all the rest of his life.

Me—I want to drift down a long river in a boat. I don't know why. I can't row a boat. I can't even pole one. I went out in the Laguna Madre one night with Joe Wall, state boat captain, and never was so aggravated at myself for not being able to pole a boat. I'm lazy, but I do like to be able to do my part on a trip. Like it was, all I could do was just sit and let Joe do the work.

Ever since I was a kid, I've wanted to drift down a river in a boat, like Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn." Likely, that's where I got the idea. I want to load up with a coffee pot and a little bed roll and push off from shore and tell the world to go to hell for a spell.

I want to sit and listen to the water gurgling and lapping about the boat. I want to trail a frog—or worm-baited fishline and drag in a flopping fish every once in awhile.

I want to shade up at dinner-time, cook my fish, stretch out on my roll and listen to the drowsy whirr of the locusts in the trees and to the raspy calls of the katydids.

And when the cool of the evening comes, I'll load up and drift again.

And I'll pull out on a sand bank every once in awhile and read the stories the wild things have left written with their tracks at the water's edge. And maybe I'll shoot a couple of squirrels for supper. Or, knock over a cottontail rabbit on the bank. Cottontail rabbit makes pood eatinb, out in camp that way if a man'll fry it hard, to take out the rabbit taste.

And sometimes, when I find a real shady place, where the water runs clear under the overhanging willows next to the bank, I'll shuck out of my clothes and slip overboard and let the water stroke my naked hide. Running water's mighty soothing to a man that way, calms his ragged nerves.

And then there'll maybe be a muscle shoal somewhere. And a man can tie up and gather armloads of the bi-valve mollusks and sit on a grassy bank and cut open and maybe find a pearl or two. I always did want to find a pearl, a real good one. I found a little seed pearl one time, but I lost it.

And at night, after the squirrels have been cooked and eaten and the ants are polishing off the bones I've scattered about, I can lie and look up at the stars and wonder how far away they are and whether there's any life on the other planets of this universe.

And off in the darkness, There will be an old hound dog singing his song to the moon. I like to hear hounds. And down in the river, the feeding fish will leap at a bug and slap the water with their tails. And the foxes will bark from the ridgetops. And the hoot owls will call from the tree-tops. And the quavering cries of the screech owls will quiver in the dank air of the river bottom. And a couple of old he-coon's will start a row over who caught which frog. And the night will become a squaling din of sound, until they settle their quarrel.

And always there'll be the murmuring and whispering of the water as it ripples over the rocks and through the lily-pads and reeds.

And I'll go on off to sleep, knowing that tomorrow I can still drift on downstream.

That's just a dream. I don't expect it ever to happen. But not long ago I found a girl who has the same sort of dream sometimes.

I guess I'll try to marry that girl.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

tion that Federal regulation is necessary. In addition to the cost and inconvenience having to go to Washington to get a permit to drill an oil well, Texas oilmen realize that Washington control will deprive the state of one of its largest potential sources of tax income, should the Federal government preempt the taxation of oil, a natural corollary to Federal control. There have always been some major oil companies whose guiding geniuses favored Federal control. Many Austin observers believe that the time is not far distant when the oil industry is going to be required by the people of Texas to contribute something toward the costly social security program. Having failed, even with the help of the Governor, to write into the constitution a provision limiting their contribution under a distinct suspicion of hoping to force Federal control to avoid future state taxation in Texas and elsewhere.

WHY
Humble Oil & Refining Co.
Reduced the Price of Crude

This statement is published as a paid advertisement by Humble Oil & Refining Company for the benefit of those who are interested and not acquainted with the facts.

On August 11 the Humble Company posted reductions in the prices at which it purchased crude oil in Texas and New Mexico by amounts ranging from 5c to 32c per barrel, and averaging 18.3c per barrel. In view of the fact that this action on our part has been severely criticized before the public, we outline below the facts and reasons on which it was based:

1. On August 1 the quantities of crude oil listed below, aggregating 218,920 barrels daily in Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas, were moving to market at prices substantially below the Humble's postings for similar crudes:

AREA	BLS. DAY
Texas—
East Central	37,000
Gulf Coast	22,600
Southwest	16,900
East Central	12,800
East Texas Field	6,850
Panhandle	1,500
Total Texas	97,650
South Louisiana	81,920
North Louisiana and Arkansas	39,350
Total	218,920

2. The amount of crude moving below Humble's postings was greatly increased when on August 10 the Sinclair-Prairie Company posted a reduction of 20c per barrel affecting the oil produced and purchased by it in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas, which action was followed immediately by reductions in the price made by a number of smaller purchasers. These reductions applied to more than 150,000 barrels of oil. This, added to that mentioned in the preceding paragraph, equals 368,000 barrels. In the three States in which Humble operates, Texas, New Mexico, and Louisiana, the aggregate volume of oil moving below Humble's prices approximated 17½% of the total current production in those States.

3. The movement of constantly increasing quantities over the past year or more of crude produced in the new Illinois fields, reaching a total of 300,000 barrels daily on August 1, on a price basis substantially lower than Humble's postings in its territory, exerted a progressively depressing effect on the crude oil market. The effect was felt in Texas; and actually since April 1 Humble has lost 10,000 barrels per day of business absorbed by Illinois crude. This loss of business was in addition to that lost by Humble as a result of the movement of crude at low prices in the territory where we operate.

4. On August 11, therefore, the total volume of oil moving at prices below those of the Humble was approximately 668,000 barrels.

5. The crude oil market has been under pressure for more than a year. The price adjustments made last October did not remove fully the disparity between Humble's prices and those of some oil moving in its markets. Since that time the volumes of crude moving below our prices have increased steadily, with the result that when the reductions of Sinclair-Prairie and others came on August 10, affecting approximately 150,000 barrels of crude per day, conditions were so bad that we were compelled to reduce our prices to meet this competition. In no case are our new postings lower than the Sinclair-Prairie postings for similar crudes.

6. The Humble Company is primarily a producer of oil. Its crude oil properties constitute its principal asset. Its net production averages 133,000 barrels a day. We are also crude oil merchants and purchase, at our posted prices, 251,000 barrels of crude oil daily in Texas and New Mexico. These prices also govern the price at which we sell the oil which we produce. Because of our large production we are vitally interested in the maintenance of fair prices.

Our refineries consume something near the amount of oil which we produce. As a consequence, with respect to our purchases we are in the same position as a merchant dealing in any commodity. To continue in business, we can not over a long period of time pay higher prices than our competitors. We are compelled to meet competition. The price of oil, like that of other commodities, is subject to change with market conditions. These are simple and fundamental business principles. We were reluctant to cut the price of crude, not alone because of its adverse effect on our own earnings, but also because of its effect on our customers and upon the industry and the state at large. Under these circumstances, we could not continue to pay the prices we had been paying.

7. As a matter of policy the Humble Company maintains stocks of crude oil very slightly in excess of the amount required as working stocks to carry on operations. We do not believe in storage of oil above ground but in production of oil currently as required for market. We do not speculate in oil. We have no desire to buy oil at any price to accumulate for storage.

8. We think the price for oil brought about by the competitive conditions above mentioned is lower than should be realized. In our opinion the flood of oil from Illinois and Louisiana, most of which is being produced wastefully, in violation of conservation principles, is primarily responsible for the market conditions which necessitated our price reductions. It is our hope that these conditions will be corrected and that the market will improve.
