COTTON COMES BACK CAPPER BACKS FARM BILL COOLIDGE IS EARLY WHY FARMERS LAUGH

Cotton growers will be glad to hear that big department stores are specializing in cotton goods. "Cotton arrives" is the announcement of one store, biggest in New York, doing about $90,000,000 a year.

"Dotted swiss," "pigne" and "ginghams" are featured energetically.

"Often women changes," the French say. Real or imitation silks have been the rage; now King Cotton comes back.

If America will advertise, and emphasize, "Cotton goods grown and made in America," instead of advertising "British cotton cloth, that will help.

Senator Capper, of Kansas, trusted by farmers, backs President Hoover's farm bill. He opposes the debenture subsidy plan which would pay a bonus to exporting middlemen, cost the taxpayers heavily, and do the farmer little, if any good.

Calvin Coolidge, as director of the New York Life Insurance Company, arrived twenty minutes ahead of time for his first directors meeting.

Seest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings.

The former President is interested in life insurance, not for profits, but for possibilities of public service. His days work paid $50 dollars; not much according to present ideas. But it is fifty times as much as Mr. Coolidge's father paid the black-bearded giant who earned in the Coolidge blacksmith shop $1 a day fifty years ago.

Tears and laughter afford relief. Loud laughter, violent weeping cause the mind to rest and bring temporary peace.

There will be farm-relief laughter in news that railroads have consented to lower freight rates on wheat flour from Middle West to the Atlantic.

The notion that farmers will get more for their wheat when flour mills pay lower freight bills will make the saddest farmer laugh.

Relief for flour manufacturers is welcome. They are having a hard time, with chain stores regulating their profits.

But charging them ten cents less a barrel for shipping flour will not cause them to give farmers two cents a bushel more for wheat.

Relief for farmers and for many others will come from generally increased prosperity, and especially from sharing national wealth more widely.

American farmers once sold corn for less than the amount of the tariff now proposed.

Prisons have changed. One ancient her solitary in prison, had to encourage him only the example of a humble spider spinning and respinning a web as fast as it was torn down.

A well known oil magnate, jailed because he wouldn't answer Senator's questions, has the deeper, pleasanter insinuation of a blonde trained nurse.

R. T. Trail Takes Charge Of Ford Garage

R. T. Trail, new owner of the Ford Agency of Eldorado, returned the first of the week to take charge of his business. Mr. Trail has been connected with the Ford business at Brady for the past six or seven years and comes here well recommended and we feel sure that he will make the business go forward and be a great help in the affairs of the town as a wide awake business man, ready for progress. He states that the place will not actually be open for the next thirty or sixty days as he is straightening out and ordering a complete line of parts for the Model T and the Model A Ford cars. He has some news cars that will be in soon.

Eldorado Gin Greatly Improved

W. B. Cobb who recently purchased the Eldorado Gin, has moved the old gin up to the new one on the Sonora highway and has installed new modern machinery and has overhauled the other machinery and will have one of the best gins in the state. Mr. Cobb has also installed the round-bale system too. He is ready for the bumper crop that is in the making now.

Entertained

The Eldorado Bridge Club was entertained last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Ben Hext with four tables of members and guests present. Six games of bridge were enjoyed. The high club prize was awarded to Mrs. H. T. Finley and the high guest to Mrs. A. P. Bailey.

This was the farewell party of Mrs. Hext and Mrs. H. T. Finley, President of the club presented her with a hat box of presents as a token of remembrance and enjoyable friendship from the club and guests present.

Mrs. Hext will make her home near Marble Falls, Texas.

INSTRUCTION

CAR WRECK 1 Killed, 2 Injured

On returning from what had been a very pleasant outing and fishing trip last Friday afternoon, was turned into a tragedy when the car in which Mr. and Mrs. Joe Williams and baby daughter Peggy were riding in collided into a tree, killing the baby and seriously injuring the mother and father of the child. The car from all indications, after hitting a dip, became uncontrollable, hitting the tree almost head on. The baby was killed instantly and Mr. Williams received many cuts about the head and many bruises about the body. Mrs. Williams received a broken ankle and many bruises and cuts about the head and face. The wreck happened about twenty miles out of Junction on the Junction-Kerrville road and the occupants of the car were rushed to the Junction Hospital. No one witnessed the wreck but members of the party were at the scene of the accident a few seconds afterwards.

Peggy was 10 months and 18 days old and the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Williams. She was brought back to the Eldorado Cemetery Saturday morning and was laid to rest at eleven o'clock.

Mr. Williams operates a cleaning and pressing shop and Gents Furnishing Store in Eldorado. The many friends of the young couple extend their heartfelt sympathies to them in this time of trouble.

W. H. McClatchey And Family Move To Alpine

Mr. W. H. McClatchey and family left Eldorado the first of the week for Alpine where they will make their home. Mr. McClatchey purchased a ranch near Alpine and has gone there to help in the operation of the ranch. His son-in-law, Frank Newman, has been living on the ranch since the purchase. Miss Mable who graduated from the Eldorado High School this year will enter Sul Ross College next term. From unknown reasons Cecil did their trip.

We regret very much the loss of this family but wish them much success in their new location. They have been in the ranch business in Schleicher County for several years and during that time made many lifelong friends who regret the loss of them.

Baby Night at Palace Theatre

The parents of Eldorado had the pleasure of seeing their babies on the screen at the Palace Theatre last Wednesday night through the cooperation of the manager Mr. J. P. Flynn and a travelling photographer who photographed the babies and for the show. This show was the first of its kind to be put on in Eldorado and was enjoyed very much by many citizens of the town.

Ben Hext Moves Away

Mr. Ben Hext and family will leave the last of the week for their new home near Marble Falls, Texas. Mr. Hext has leased a ranch there for a period of ten years and goes there now to take possession. He has been engaged in the ranch business for a number of years in Schleicher County. The Success with the many friends of this family express their regrets in losing them but congratulate the community in which they are moving on their gain. They will be accompanied by "Uncle" Bob Hext who is interested in the ranch with his son Ben.

COTTON KING AGAIN

This is going to be the biggest cotton season since before the war. Every indication confirms this statement. Cotton will be King again, and rule over the entire world of fashion this summer; even Paris is showing cottons in preference to other fabrics now.

For everything from hats to shoes, cotton is now being advocated and used and most summer wardrobes now bearing the sanction of Dame Fashion utilize cotton to some extent. It is even said that cottons are being used more than silks in the latest styles.

The story of the cotton comeback proves that you can't down a good thing. Experience has proven the wonderful qualities of cotton as material for wearing apparel. It will always be popular, even though it may now and then suffer a temporary eclipse.

When parking your auto in town why not park it right and as close as possible to the next car so your neighbor can find room to park also. Don't think that the streets belong to certain people.

The new parking law for Eldorado is now effective, why not cooperate and make it successful?

Now the world has a new endurance record for staying up in the air. Texas furnished both men for the job. Texas people are always in the air.

Mr. and Mrs. George Williams and family left last Friday for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Westfall, in Phoenix, Arizona. Mrs. Westfall is the daughter of Mr. Williams.

While on the trip they will visit the Carlsbad Cavern and other places of interest.

ANOTHER EDISON?

Governors of many states are cooperating with Thomas A. Edison to help him find his successor. The great inventor, after half a century of work in which he revolutionized modern life, is seeking a youth of unusual capabilities who may perhaps be able to continue the work he has so well started.

To the high school boy who gives the best answers to one of his questionnaires, Edison offers a free scholarship. One boy from each state, the one considered the possessor of the highest ability in scientific subjects, will be given a free trip in August to Mr. Edison's Orange, N. J., laboratories, where the questionnaire will be presented to him. Each of these boys will be entertained and made a gift of an Edison radio-phonograph.

We doubt that another Edison will be found. This miracle worker is unique. Yet we have no doubt much rare talent will be discovered in the search and several promising youths will be given impetus that may result in new benefits to humanity.

Therefore, this enterprise is more than commendable, it is a particularly lovely gesture of a man much beloved, revered and admired—"another of whom, however, we fear cannot be found easily."

H. H. Whitley and family are now moving on the Eugene W. Jones ranch northwest of town which he has leased for a term of years and like all new comers who desire to keep up with the home news, he's a subscriber to the Observer. Mr. Whitley is well and favorably known in West Texas and we join with his many friends in welcoming him and family to our community.—Christoval Observer.

J. H. Rodgers was in from the farm Wednesday and reports his cotton looking good and will be ready for choppers soon.

Mrs. W. B. Trppening, who has been visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Johnson, has returned to her home in Chicago. She left the first of the week.

J. J. Bradshaw has a bunch of cotton choppers at work this week thinning out his cotton.

I was beginning to get a little worried. Bill who stood over me with a gun seemed a trifle impatient. I could see that he did not believe that I was making an honest effort to start.

"Try it on the magneto," suggested Jim Cooper.

"She never starts on magneto, I replied.

"Try it anyway," Bill commanded briefly. "And hustle."

So I did. As you may know, starting a motor on the magneto involves spinning the flywheel rapidly for several times before enough electricity is generated to make a spark. It is one of the most heart-breaking exercises I know of, especially when the motor has excellent compression such as Grandmother Page boasted.

The distribution driped from my brow and my arm seemed like a leaden weight that was about to drop off.

I paused for breath.

"Now you quit your kidding," snarled the highwayman, showing the muzzle of the revolver under my nose. "Take off that coat and make her go. Take it off, I say!"

I obeyed. Neither of us was prepared for what followed. I had forgotten the white tights, which were all I wore beneath my overcoat, and he, of course, was not expecting me to look as pale as I did.

His jaw fell and his arm dropped limp at his side.

"W-w-what are you?" he asked. It was probably the only opportunity that I would have and I made the most of it. As the muzzle of the gun dropped, I jumped for him and pinned his arms to his sides.

We rolled over and over in the snow, the revolver exploding as we fell.

Sometimes weight is an advantage. This was a case in point. In two minutes I was sitting on his chest and had taken his weapons away from him.

Finger on trigger, ready to fire I looked around for the other bandit.

"Where is he?" I asked. "Gone," replied Maryella. "He ran away when he saw you were winning."

"It's all for the best," Jim asserted. "You couldn't fight him and sit on this other gentleman at the same time anyway."

I rose from my seat. "Get up!" I ordered my prisoner.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT What Happened Before

The Sherifen Dramatic Club, of which Tom Bilbeck, the narrator, Maryella, the girl he cares for and Jim Cooper, his rival, are members, start a performance of Pygmalion and Galatea at the Old Soldier's Home, but are interrupted by a fire. During the rehearsals Tom Bilbeck is accused by the husband of one of the actors, Mr. Hemingway, of being in love with his wife.

Riding away from the scene of the ill-fated play in their costumes and overcoats, the group of players is held up by two escaped convicts, one of whom is captured by Bilbeck after a struggle.

Now Go On With The Story He obeyed meekly enough. "Will you answer one question?" he asked deferently.

"Yes. What?"

"Are you a ghost?"

"No."

"Then what are you?"

"I only agreed to answer one question."

"Oh!"

He was obviously disappointed. "What are you going to do with me?"

"Turn you over to the sheriff, I suppose."

The sound of the shot had aroused curiosity at the Old Soldier's Home, and now half a dozen of the most nearly complete of the inmates led by Colonel Stewart came down the road in military order. They were armed with rifles and had bayonets fixed. I learned afterwards that the weapons were the Spanish-American War trophies which were not loaded and had not been fired for sixteen years.

We told the Colonel what had happened and he sent one of the old men back to the Home with the ladies with instructions to telephone the sheriff. The rest of us went after the other escaped prisoners.

He had broken away from the road and gone into a patch of woods that lay alongside, as we could easily tell by his fresh tracks in the snow. It seemed as if it was going to be a comparatively simple matter to trail him.

We changed our minds, however, when the tracks led out of the comparative quiet of the timberland to a meadow. Here they ceased abruptly. There was enough wind blowing so that the snow was kept clear in some places and drifted in others. He had evidently avoided the drifts.

We had only one lantern or we could have searched to better advantage and by spreading out might have picked up the footprints without much delay. As it was we worked slowly and ineffectually.

A complete circle of the field gave us no clue. The snow was falling more rapidly now and ev-

DID YOU KNOW—that most slip covers for formal rooms are made from rayon damasks and brocaded, both of which are washable and of sturdy wearing quality that brings them within the first requirements for the purpose.

We all love the chintzes and figured linens. Yet there are certain rooms wherein they do not fit, and times when silky fabric is needed to give a touch of richness.

When this be the requirement the brocaded covers add a great deal of importance to the setting and—being washable—can be used from season just as you would linen.

en our own tracks were filled in very short time after we made them. I was anxious to get started, too, while the roads were not badly drifted.

"I think we've done all we can to-night," I suggested to Colonel Stewart. "That fellow is going to have a hard time travelling very far in this storm and probably he'll lay low somewhere until it lets up. The sheriff can organize a posse and pick him up after daylight."

The colonel agreed. He was anxious to get his men under cover.

We took our prisoner back to the Home. There we found the lady Greeks sitting around disconsolate with their wraps on amid a group of negligee but wide-awake old soldiers having the extra attraction of a thief hunt.

There were no hand cuffs in the institution, naturally, so we bound our prisoner to a chair pending the arrival of the sheriff. He looked disconsolate enough. I was suddenly sorry for him. Poor fellow, all he had done was to make a break for liberty. It was only because we were all against him that he was against us.

"Hard luck, old chap," I said to him.

He looked up at me. It's all right," he said. "I don't mind a bit. I'm glad to stay here overnight where it is warm. I'm kind of worried about Julius, though, out there in the snow. He's delicate, and I'm afraid he'll catch cold."

"Well, I'm going home," I said by way of farewell. "But before I go is there anything I can do for you?"

"Not unless you're going to tell me what you are wearing those white things for. Did somebody steal your—"

"No they didn't," I snapped, turning away.

"Ain't you going to tell me?"

"No."

I rejoined the rest of our group around the fire.

"I'll go out and start the car,"

I notified them, "and back up to the gate once more. When you hear me outside you can come out."

"Let me go with you," Jim Cooper offered.

I would just as soon have gone alone, but there seemed no way of declining his assistance, so we trailed out in the snow together with an oil lantern flickering unsteadily in the wind.

It was only a few hundred yards to where the automobile was standing, but the wind, which was increasing, threw the snow into our faces in stinging blasts that made walking difficult and conversation practically impossible.

The lights of the car were still bravely hurling wedges of illumination into the black-and-white night. The seats were covered with snow. So was the windshield; around each wheel was a little heap.

"You can get inside if you will, I told Jim Cooper, "and advance the spork as soon as I get an explosion."

He did as I directed. I primed the motor thoroughly. I had no particular reason to suppose that the engine would start now when it had refused to do so half an hour before, except that from long experience I had great faith in the perversity of inanimate subjects, especially internal-combustion engines. Grandmother Page had thrown me down in an emergency, but now that the immediate danger was over I had no doubt that she would start up cheerfully. There is something unmistakably feminine about a gasoline engine.

"All ready," I said as I gave the crank a sharp pull upward.

I noticed that it pulled rather hard, but I bent an extra effort and yanked it over compression. "Bang!" responded Grandmother Page enthusiastically.

The first explosion was followed by a hideous clashing sound and then a terrifying thumping which could be heard even above the explosion of the motor.

"Cut her off!" I yelled. When Grandmother Page had subsided Jim Cooper asked solicitously:

"What's the matter?"

"Didn't you hear the racket she was making?" I asked sarcastically.

"I didn't notice anything special," Jim observed, which remark put him by unanimous vote into the Loyal Order of Henwethers. Pirk had nothing on him for saying wrong thing.

In silent exasperation I lifted the hood and with aid of the flickering lantern examined Grandmother's gizzard.

One look was enough. I closed the hood once more and stood silent, communing with nature.

Something in my manner must have penetrated Jim Cooper's consciousness.

"Is anything the matter?" he asked.

"There is," I announced briefly. "The pump froze while we were hunting for escaped convicts, and as soon as I started the engine she stripped the gear. She won't run again until I get some new parts from the factory. I turned out the acetylene lights and started home. Jim Cooper followed silently.

Half way to the Home he said brightly:

"It's all for the best, Tom. Think how glad the automobile repairmen will be."

JINGLE BELLS

When we entered the ladies' room ready to go.

"I didn't hear you come," said Maryella. "The car is awfully quiet to-night, isn't it?"

"It is," I assented glumly. "And will be for several days to come."

When I had explained what had happened a cry of dismay escaped the lips of Mrs. Hemmingway.

"I promised John I would come right home as soon as the performance was over and he will be terribly anxious," she wailed. "I wish I had gone home in the funeral bus," bemoaned Mrs. Lillielove.

"I wish you had too," I echoed feebly.

"It's probably all for the best," chirped Jim Cooper like a parrot. (Ornithologist's note: Parrots do not chirp.)

"Where do you feel the ray of comfort in this?" I demanded sarcastically.

"That's easy," Jim explained. "For one thing I am glad that it wasn't my car. For another it will give us all a chance to spend the night in an old soldier's home which is something most people who aren't veterans can't do."

"Spend the night here?" Mrs. Hemmingway exclaimed in dismay. "It's impossible. I have to go home!"

"How?"

"I don't know how, but you must think up some way."

"Nonsense!" I exclaimed. "It can't be done tonight. There's no train until morning. You can call up your husband and explain it to him."

"Oh, is there a telephone?"

"Sure. There must be," said Jim Cooper. You talk to John and tell him it's all for the best."

"I'll try," said Mrs. Hemmingway cheerfully.

The telephone was conveniently located in the living room so that all private conversations were distinctly audible to any one in the building.

After considerable delay in getting a long-distance connection, Mrs. Hemmingway managed to get the ear of her husband who fortunately had not left the office.

"Is that you John?" she asked in the telephone.

Apparently it was.

"Well, listen, John dear, I can't get home to-night. I'm going to stay all night at the Old Soldier's Home."

The rest of us tried to talk about something else so as not to appear to be listening, but we couldn't help it and sudden silence fell at her next remark.

"Yes, of course, Tom Bilbeck is here. It's all for the best."

The receiver hummed for a moment. Even we knew that he had raised his voice.

"Silly; of course I would come home if I could. But Tom broke his automobile."

"No, no. He didn't break it on purpose."

"Listen dear, you mustn't say such things over the telephone. Some one might be listening. Besides, you are entirely mistaken. How could I fall in love with a man who looks like Tom Bilbeck? There was absolute silence in the room, also on the part of Mrs. Hemmingway.

"Yes, he has got a funny face. Of course I laugh at him and all that but—What's that? You are coming here? Oh, is there a train yet coming this way? Good. That will be lots of fun. Then we can go home together in the morning. I am so glad. Good-bye, dear."

Mrs. Hemmingway hung up the receiver and turned back to our frantically silent company. I wished that I could say something to show that I was alive, but my throat choked.

Something in my face must have shown, however, because Mrs. Hemmingway looked at me and exclaimed in dismay.

"Did you hear what I said, Tom?"

"Well part of it," I admitted.

"You mustn't think I meant it."

She tried hastily to repair the harm that she had done.

"I simply had to make John think it was all right."

A loud "whoa" outside distracted our attention from the conversational tangle into which we had fallen.

"The sheriff," exclaimed Colonel Stewart, going to the door.

A fur wrapped figure came in shedding snow.

"Evening sheriff," the colonel greeted.

The sheriff unwrapped a muffler which had been over his mouth before he responded.

"Evening Colonel."

Only tires built to stand abuse could be BONDED against abuse..

Ask for this SURETY BOND with your next DUNLOP

WOULD you rather have trouble-free tires, or the biggest tire guarantee in the world? Why not both?

Because Dunlops are built to stand even severest abuse, they are covered by a Bond that guarantees your tires against accidents (like broken milk bottles) and even against abuses (like misalignment).

It's a guarantee that cannot be questioned, a Surety Bond, backed by Dunlop and the American Surety Company.

See for yourself how sweepingly it covers everything. Ask for specimen copy.

The parking ordinance has already been published the required number of times to make it effective and the city officials passed on it before it was published and therefore if you are fined for something regarding your driving or parking, we are not to blame—we have warned you and if you don't take the Success that is your hard luck.

The parking ordinance in a small town is almost as essential as it is in a larger town. We do not have as much space to park on as the larger town and there are probably not as many cars and other vehicles visit our city as in the larger ones but with the small amount of room we have to park on it seems necessary that some system of parking should be enforced and we hope that it is the intention of the officers to enforce this. At times it is almost impossible to get your car away from the curb as some other car is parked directly behind yours in the middle of the street and gone to get a snave or something else and you either have to wait for him to return or push it out of the way. This is not only dangerous but does not speak well for the order of the town.

A few weeks ago we carried in The Success a short editorial on "taxing the milk dealers", or people using this method for their living as a large part. We received comment on the subject pro and con but mostly "con" and by one who sells a great deal of milk. This article was written with the intention of protection to the milk dealers and not as a not just to tax them just because they were selling something. A man who has many cows to feed and is trying to furnish the people with milk should have some method of protection and this is the only way that it can be done. The man who has just one cow and is using her for his own use and sometime sells a quart or two to some person will hurt the dairyman. The tax on milk selling will eliminate this class of milk dealers and the man that is really trying to operate a dairy and spending money to keep the dairy in first class condition will have some protection other than he has at present. The tax he would have to pay will be easily made from the additional customers.

An Oklahoma Mother Says:

"BLACK-DRAUGHT is a fine medicine to give to children. I use it for mine whenever I need to give them a laxative. They don't mind taking it when I make it into a tea, and it quickly relieves constipation and the bad symptoms which come from it. I can recommend it to other mothers, for I have found it useful in my home."

"When I was a child my mother gave it to me whenever I complained of not feeling well. I have always taken it for upset stomach and constipation. It is about the only medicine I have to take. A few doses of Black-Draught, now and then, keep my system in order. My husband takes it, too. I hardly see how I could keep house without Black-Draught. It has become a standby with us, in keeping the children and ourselves well."—Mrs. Luther Brassfield, Claremore, Okla.
