Jeffs remains quiet on child's whereabouts

Warren Jeffs, jailed leader of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, ignored an order Friday issued by Utah District Judge James L. Shumate and refused to answer questions regarding the whereabouts of 2-year-old Levi Musser.

Wendell Musser, 22, has been prevented from having contact with his young son ever since he was stripped of his "priesthood authority" in the FLDS Church just over a year ago.

Musser had been assigned to safeguard a number of Jeffs' wives during the time he was listed on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted List. However, when he was picked up by Colorado authorities on a drunk driving charge, Musser was exiled from the FLDS church, and forbidden to see his wife Vivian and their infant son, Levi, while he "repented from a distance."

But Musser was never forgiven by Jeffs and soon he learned that his wife and child had been reassigned by church officials to another man.

In recent months, Musser has actively sought a reunion with his family, even going so far as to file a lawsuit against Jeffs. That prompted a meeting in May of this year with his wife and child. But, Vivian was accompanied by several men from the FLDS church and Musser was neither allowed to touch his son, nor discuss his parental rights.

Judge Shumate ruled recently that Jeffs must assist Musser in establishing ongoing contact with his son. And, as if to emphasize the point, Shumate gave Jeffs until Wednesday, July 25th to comply.

But Jeffs either wasn't convinced by the judge's ruling, or was concerned that heeding the order might cause him even more legal grief. During an hour-long deposition attended by Musser, his attorney Roger Hoole, and private investigator Sam Brower, Jeffs and his attorney Richard Wright declined to provide information concerning the whereabouts of Levi Musser. At one point, when asked by Hoole to identify a group of people in a photo, Jeffs refused to answer on the grounds that it might incriminate him in a criminal case.

Jeffs now faces $600 per day penalty as ordered by Judge Shumate. Musser may access Jeffs' jailhouse commissary fund in order to pay a private investigator to search for his son. Musser may also claim any property seized when Jeffs was arrested in Nevada on August 28th of last year.

It is also possible that Jeffs will be brought before Judge Shumate and ordered to answer. Failure to comply could result in criminal charges for contempt of court.

EMS volunteers rolled Johnathan Mejia toward the front door of Schleicher County Medical Center last Thursday moments following a head-on collision on West Murchison Avenue, directly in front of the hospital. Mejia was treated at SCMC then airlifted to San Angelo where he underwent surgery to repair a broken leg.

Head-on collision injures three

Two Eldorado youths were hospitalized Thursday, July 26, 2007 following a head-on collision on West Murchison, directly in front of Schleicher County Medical Center.

Jonathan Mejia, 16, of Eldorado suffered a broken leg and lacerations, while passenger Rudy Sanchez sustained lesser injuries, when Mejia's 2000 Mercury Sable was struck by a 2000 Chevrolet pickup driven by Michael Blaylock, 62, of Eldorado.

DPS Trooper Steve Torres of Mertzon investigated the crash. He reports that Blaylock was headed west-bound on F.M. 915 (W. Murchison) when his pickup crossed into the oncoming lane of traffic and struck the car driven by Mejia.

Blaylock was cited for driving on the wrong side of the road. Meanwhile Mejia was cited for driving without a license. Neither of the youths in the Mercury were wearing seat belts, according to Trooper Torres.

Eldorado man killed in rollover

Rodolfo Iglesias, 54, of Eldorado died Saturday, July 28, 2007 of injuries sustained when the 2000 Chevrolet flat-bed pickup he was driving overturned about a half-mile west of Eldorado on County Road 412 (Rabbit Road). The accident occurred at about 11:00 p.m. and was reported to the Schleicher County Sheriff's Department by 9-1-1 call.

According to investigators at the scene, Iglesias was driving westbound on CR 412, when his truck left the roadway and rolled. The vehicle crashed through a fence before coming to rest in a pasture on the north side of the road.

Iglesias was reportedly ejected from the truck during the accident. Emergency personnel found his body at the base of a Mesquite tree near the wreck vehicle. He was taken by ambulance to Schleicher County Medical Center where he was pronounced dead by Dr. Gordy Day.

DPS Trooper Van Gundy investigated the accident assisted by Deputy Kevin Herbert.

The Last Hawk Standing

WASHINGTON -- This is the center of the storm in the debate over the Iraq War, George W. Bush's White House. The president is meeting in the Roosevelt Room with nine conservative journalists to discuss the war, and, as with a hurricane, the eye of the storm is unbelievably calm.

Bush is as confident and upbeat as ever. Even once-friendly commentators like The Wall Street Journal's Peggy Noonan wish he'd show some strain and worry as the war drags into its fifth year. But Bush must have confidence and optimism written into his DNA. As leaks, GOP defections and plummeting approval ratings swirl all around him, he remains resolute: The Iraq War must, and can, be won.

Asked about persistent reports that he is looking to find a compromise with Congress around the recommendations of the Iraq Study Group for a troop drawdown, Bush is adamant that he is going to see the troop surge through September and then rely on the advice of Gen. David Petraeus on how to proceed.

"What you're asking me is that in order to placate people in Congress, am I going to write a strategy before the military reports back?" he says. "And the answer is, 'no.'"

Bush gives the impression that he is more steadfast on the war than many in his own administration and that, if need be, he'll be the last hawk standing.

He says he'd like a compromise on Iraq for the long term, but sounds skeptical that it will happen: "The ideal world is that there would be some kind of bipartisan consensus at some point in time, to be there for a while. And can we achieve that? I don't know. It's worth trying, it's worth talking to people about it." But when he says that he's not going to abandon the surge, "it's just very important for you all to understand that's exactly what I mean."

Bush curtly rejects the suggestion that he will be forced by troop constraints to pull back the surge come next spring, no matter what. Nor will Bush allow the political environment to constrain his policy. He cites his decision to go forward with the surge in January, even though the "outcry was quite significant." He knew what people were thinking: "How can he possibly do this? Didn't he see, didn't he hear?"

What he saw was a war effort that was stumbling, so he removed his top generals and brought in Gen. Petraeus and his surge plan. His confidence in Petraeus is total: "My job ... is to say to David Petraeus, 'I trust your judgment, I trusted you going in and I trust you now.'" He calls Petraeus "the most credible person in the fight at this moment."

Bush says that one of his most important audiences is not just the American public, but the enemy, who "thinks we're weak." He says "these are sophisticated people and they listen to the debate." They doubt "that we're going to be tough enough. I really believe that the additional forces into Iraq surprised them -- a lot."

In trying to game out the future U.S. policy in Iraq, there is an intense focus on the periphery -- what is Defense Secretary Robert Gates thinking, what's the Lugar-Warner plan? But what's still most important is the center of this storm, where President Bush sits, apparently in no mood whatsoever to budge.

It's Just a Record

When Hank Aaron broke into the big leagues, he wasn't allowed to walk through the front doors of most buildings. When Barry Bonds broke into the big leagues, he waltzed into his manager's office without knocking and introduced himself as the team's No. 1 draft pick.

Bonds was kicked out of the office; Aaron, as he did most other nights at the start of his career, ate a dinner of pork chops and french fries.

The point of this is not to compare the two players and their run for the all-time home run record. Plenty of media are doing that and we all know that story. Aaron was an incredibly disciplined and consistent athlete who routinely hit .300, while turning in 40 home run, 100 run and 100 RBI seasons. Bonds is a prodigy who remained relatively consistent throughout his career, but put together a streak in his final years that propelled him to where he is now -- namely, the top of the baseball record books.

Aaron was a hero. He played through segregation and had to endure threats on his life because of the color of his skin. It's hard to imagine that he broke the record in 1974 and had to endure pre-civil rights-era discrimination up until that point. In fact, you can make the case that that single moment in time, the moment that Aaron hit the record-breaking home run, the moment those two white college students ran beside him and jubilantly slapped his back -- that was the true turning point for race-based hatred in sports.

Bonds is not a hero. He's just a darn good ballplayer who thinks he's the center of the universe and is nearly universally despised by all sports journalists who've ever met the man.

There were said to be 40 beat reporters following Barry Bonds around as he went for the record-breaking shot. Bob Hope, who handled public relations for the Atlanta Braves during Aaron's day, laughs at that number. More than 100 reporters followed Aaron around. Bonds wants to know where his entourage is. Bonds wants to know why everyone was so upset when he pulled out of the home run-hitting contest during the All Star Game to "rest," but ended up admitting on national television that he was out partying with Jay-Z the night before instead.

When Aaron was asked if he thought anyone could break his record in the late '90s, he said, barring injuries, Ken Griffey Jr. had the best shot. Griffey got injured, but Bonds got "the clear." It doesn't make the record any less of a record, but sometimes its not the end result that matters, it's how you got there. The sports world doesn't need to feel guilty for not falling all over themselves to congratulate the guy.

When Aaron did it, it was something more. Now, it's just a baseball record. And it will eventually fall.

Austin renames Town Lake in honor of Lady Bird Johnson

by Ed Sterling
AUSTIN -- The city council on July 26 voted unanimously to rename Austin's Town Lake "Lady Bird Lake."

The name change honors Lady Bird Johnson, who died at age 94 on July 11. She was the widow of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson.

City council members said the renaming is a fitting way to honor the former first lady's life because of her personal efforts to improve the lake, its surrounding trails and greenbelts.

Weather prompts preparations

Weather experts are saying a 10-year drought appears to be over in all but a few sections of the state. And the rain keeps on falling in areas that have had more than their share.

With Gov. Rick Perry out of state on July 26, Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst exercised his official authority to beef up and position Texas military forces in preparation for continuing severe weather and flooding.

"I will continue to monitor this situation closely and work with the governor's office and state emergency coordinators to ensure the state is doing everything necessary to keep Texans safe," Dewhurst said.

For San Antonio-Martindale Airfield, Dewhurst called for 30 more personnel, 10 more vehicles and three more helicopters and crew.

Also, for Camp Mabry in Austin, he called for 30 more personnel and 10 more vehicles, including Humvees and so-called "high profile vehicles."

Dewhurst asked all Texans to heed the warnings of local officials and take every possible precaution to stay safe.

Funding veto prompts action

One of Gov. Perry's line-item vetoes in the $151 billion 2008-2009 state budget was about $154 million to fund community college employees group health insurance.

Lt. Gov. Dewhurst on July 25 said lawmakers and college officials across the state had let him know their concerns about the veto.

Dewhurst said he doesn't want community colleges to have to raise tuition or limit enrollment or have local taxes increased as a result of the veto.

In his June 15 veto statement Perry said money appropriated from general revenue may not be expended for employee benefit costs, and that community colleges wrongly have been using such funds to pay the benefits on non-state paid employees.

Dewhurst said he wants the matter addressed right away and plans to bring it up in a fall meeting of the 10-member Legislative Budget Board. The board has the power to reauthorize the vetoed funding.

Meanwhile, Dewhurst said, he plans to meet with Sens. Zaffirini, Hinojosa, Shapiro, Duncan, Ogden, other interested lawmakers, the governor's office and state agencies to work out a solution before the year's end.

Teen birth rate ranks highest

Texas currently has the highest teen birth rate in the nation: 63 births per 1,000 females ages 15-19.

Nationally, there are 41 births for every 1,000 teens.

Tulsa's famous buried Belvedere

It's one of those stories you just can't pass up. When I first heard about the 1957 Plymouth Belvedere that was buried in 1957 in Tulsa as part of Oklahoma's 50th year of statehood celebration (they called it Tulsarama), I became curious. Then when I heard it was going to be unearthed on June 15th of this year, I was chomping at the bit to get up there. Imagine. A 57 Belvedere wrapped up in a hermetically sealed plastic cocoon and placed in a concrete vault with 6-inch walls and buried on the courthouse lawn. What an idea. The car sold for $2,000 in 1957. I never did find out just why that particular make and model of vehicle was chosen as a symbol of the age.

About two days before the big dig, a friend of mine who currently resides in Tulsa, Bill Murchison, told me he would cover it for me. He did a fabulous job. He interviewed all sorts of folks and got their opinions about the event. He sent me tapes of the interviews along with two copies of the Tulsa World newspaper.

When the car rose from its grave, crowds cheered. People paid good money to get a seat in bleachers that had been set up. Participants in an antique car show that was going on in Tulsa got special passes. News people from all over the world were in Tulsa to report on the condition of the car. Some people actually thought it could be driven away. Boy, were they wrong. The thing was a mess. A big mess.

The concrete vault was full of water that had seeped in over the years. One person said the water might have come from a busted water main. One man, when he saw the car up close after it was hoisted out the ground, said, "It looks like it's been at the bottom of the ocean for 50 years." Mud was everywhere. The upholstery was gone and springs were showing through the seats. The door hinges were frozen. The tires were flat. It was a ghastly sight.

A time capsule that was buried with the car survived just fine.

Contents inside it were dry. They included 812 contest entries from people who guessed what the population of Tulsa would be in 2007. The winner got the car. The closest guess to Tulsa's current population of 384, 743 was submitted by Raymond Humbertson, who guessed 382,457. Tulsa's population in 1957 was 264,300. Raymond died in 1979 and his heirs will decide what to do with the car. Some people recommend it should be left as is and placed in a museum, since it is the only car buried for 50 years.

Some folks in Tulsa have burying cars on the brain. To celebrate Tulsa's 100th anniversary in 1998, a new Plymouth Prowler was entombed in an above ground mausoleum in Centennial Park. It will be unveiled in 2048. The Prowler was encased in a seamless plastic box especially manufactured in Tulsa. Officials drained all the fluids and replaced them with synthetics that won't degrade. The vault was filled with an inert gas to keep the exterior in good shape. The car's garage for 50 years was sealed and covered with dirt. Officials expect the Prowler to be in much better shape than the Belvedere.

OBITUARIES

Betty Wilson

ELDORADO — Betty Wilson, 82, passed away quietly at her home in Eldorado on Sunday July 29, 2007. She was a loving wife and mother and will be dearly missed.

Betty was the only child of Billie and John Lee Hollingsworth of San Angelo. She attended San Angelo High School and San Angelo Business School. Betty met her lifelong love on a blind date and continued correspondence with him while he was in the Navy until she and Raymond Wilson were married on June 16, 1943 in San Angelo. They were blessed with four children, three sons, William and wife Mary Ann of Brady, Steve and wife Suzan, John and wife Sonya both of San Angelo, and daughter Shirley Joiner and husband Wayne of Eldorado. Betty's greatest pleasure was spending time with her family.

Betty and Raymond lived and worked in the San Angelo area until they bought a stock farm in Eldorado where Betty worked at the Tax Assessors office. She really enjoyed this job where she would see almost everyone in the community. Betty was a den mother to her son's scout troops and a Sunday school teacher. Upon retirement she helped with the elementary reading program and continued to help Raymond on the stock farm. She was a member of the Lakeview Methodist Church of San Angelo and then the First United Methodist Church in Eldorado.

Betty is survived by her dear husband Raymond of 64 years, her children and her grandchildren Heather Oxley and husband Matt, Shay Wilson, Amanda Hryb and husband Adam, Julie Wilson, Travis Joiner, Rachel Joiner and Evan Joiner. Great-grandchildren Laura Ann and Abigail Oxley and Kora Gayle Hryb.

The family would like to thank her wonderful caregivers, Hospice and Maria Guadarrama.

Graveside services will be held at 11:00 Thursday August 2 at the cemetery in Eldorado at the direction of the Kerbow Funeral Home.

All memorials can be made to the First United Methodist Church of Eldorado or Hospice of San Angelo.

Rodolfo Pina Iglesias

ELDORADO — Rodolfo Pina Iglesias, 52, died Sunday, July 29, 2007. Service was Tuesday at

Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church with burial in Eldorado Cemetery. Services were by Kerbow Funeral Home.

Survivors include wife Alicia Iglesias; children Juanita Iglesias Avila and Rodolfo Iglesias Avila, all of Muzquiz; parents Jose Raul and Maria Iglesias of Eldorado; brothers Edmundo of Muzquiz, Jose Javier, Raul Jr., all of Eldorado, Luis of New Braunfels and Rogelio of Denton; sisters Dora Iglesias, Quirina Iglesias, Guadalupe Romo, Gloria Granados, all of Eldorado, Norma Iglesias of Denton and Maria Rodriguez of New Braunfels.

Running of BULL successful despite inclement weather

submitted by Jim Runge

The overall rainy weather in the state during the past several weeks and the weather forecasts that predicted that the rain would continue, created hesitancy on potential travelers and contributed to the smaller than normal attendance at this year's Running of the BULL. The rain failed to materialize at all on Sunday and only reared it's head late Saturday afternoon. This was enough though, to keep the anticipated visitors from Austin, San Antonio, Houston and the DFW metroplex from making the long drive. And the rain that did appear in the surrounding counties dampened those residents' enthusiasm for dropping by, no pun intended.

Surprisingly however, most vendors reported good sales and some even reported larger sales than last year, despite the sparse crowds. The food booths did exceptionally well, and joined the arts, crafts and game booths to provide quite a midway for visitors. Shoppers could choose between barn wood furniture, CD's, candles, children's clothes, crosses, jams, jellies, jewelry, knives, leather goods, purses, religious tracts, roasted nuts, rock night lights, rope baskets, sauces and toys. The children's activities included a plethora of inflatables, plus numerous game booths. Saturday began with 5K and one mile runs, organized by Evelyn Gordon. Annie Arispe did her usual bang up job of organizing probably our best parade ever. Janna Pridemore, as usual, conducted a washer tournament at the tossing cups on the courthouse lawn.

The lineup of speakers however, was the best ever. Dennis Gaines from Kerrville and Monte Jones from San Angelo, both national award winners from the Academy of Western Artists, thrilled the listeners with their wit and wisdom. Steve Smith, a multi-talented artist from Carrizo Springs returned to keep his five year record of attendance unblemished. Jerry Schleicher, a cowboy poet from Kansas City, Missouri, spent the weekend here, adding his "farmer's renditions" of cowboy poetry to the mix. Curly Butts of Bowie returned to entertain his many fans for the third straight year. The "Hoofing Heifers running from the BULL," returned with their cow jokes routine of year's past and other "speakers" included Punkin Danford, William Edmiston and Naomi Dodson of Eldorado, plus Bill Major of San Marcos. Hal Swift, a 95 year old poet from Sparks, Nevada, too old to travel, sent one of his poems to be read at the festival, which Bill Major handled admirably. The Lone Star Cloggers of San Angelo returned for their fifth straight year and the West Texas Cloggers were resplendent in their white and red Pamplona, Spain outfits. Volunteer electronics guru Danny Boyer enhanced the sound system operation exponentially.

All participants and spectators seemed to enjoy the cool weather and the show, and are already looking forward to next year's event.

Conaway explains vote against '07 Farm Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Last night, the U.S. House of Representatives began consideration of H.R. 2419, the Farm, Nutrition and Bioenergy Act of 2007. The bill passed by a vote of 231-191. Earlier in the week, Congressman Mike Conaway (TX-11) voiced support for the bipartisan Farm Bill that passed through the Agriculture Committee without any of the rumored tax increases or anti-business provisions that were injected into the bill. The day before the Farm Bill was to be taken up by the full House, Republicans on the House Agriculture Committee learned that a tax increase on companies with U.S. subsidiaries had been inserted into the bill without their knowledge or consideration. Conaway made the following remarks regarding the 2007 Farm Bill:

"Today is a momentous day here in Congress. I have voted against the single most important piece of legislation that agriculture producers in District 11 find important. When I came to Congress, I was honored to sit on the Agriculture Committee and to have the opportunity to work on the 2007 Farm Bill. Never in my wildest dreams could I have imagined that the Democrats would so poison a bill that is of such importance to agriculture producers across the nation that I could not support it. For the past eighteen months, I have worked with my Democratic colleagues to craft a bipartisan bill that we could be proud of. Last week, the bill passed out of committee with hard work from both sides. We thought we left the committee with a great bipartisan bill; a bill that would have Democrats and Republicans for it and perhaps some against it, but nevertheless, a bipartisan bill. We were assured at every turn that there would not be a tax increase in the bill. I worked diligently as a member of the bipartisan whip team working to increase bipartisan support for the bill, until we were told that a $4 billion tax increase would be included, breaking the promises previously made. All of the good bipartisan work accomplished by the committee has been squandered by the Democratic leadership in a way that will strip bipartisan support from this bill.

"I want to make it clear that I support the Farm Bill as it came out of committee. I do not, however, support the non-agriculture approved tax increase that has been disgracefully attached to this legislation. Over the last 48 hours, poison pills have been added to the Farm Bill. Last week at this time, I fully expected to be here supporting this bill, perhaps fighting off bipartisan opposition to this bill, but nonetheless supporting the bill. This bill is pro-producer and will help the hungry around the world, but it is anti-business and anti-manufacturing jobs. The tax increases included in this bill will jeopardize millions of manufacturing American jobs by raising taxes on companies that do business in the U.S. and could possibly abrogate treaties with other nations, leading to significant consequences for U.S. companies with operations in other countries. We sadly have gone from a bill that should have passed with broad bipartisan support to one that will not enjoy that support. It is sad that partisanship has trumped rural America and has inevitably destroyed bipartisan support for the Farm Bill."

New Postmaster

Dale Lipsett took over last week as the new Postmaster in Eldorado, the town he has called home for nearly thirty years. He says he is pleased to be working here so that he can "go home for lunch." Lipsett most recently served as Postmaster in Ozona. Before that he was Postmaster in Snyder. He commuted to both jobs from Eldorado.

DPS reminds motorists... Turn Around, Don't Drown!

If you see water running across a roadway, you should immediately turn around and not attempt to go through it, says the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"Many cars will float in only 12 inches of water, and two feet of rushing water will carry off pick-ups, SUVs and most other vehicles," says Col. Thomas A. Davis Jr., director of the DPS. "Six inches of water can be enough to stall a car or cause a loss of control over the vehicle."

Each year, more people die in flash flooding than in any other type of thunderstorm-related hazard.

"You might think that you can easily get across a flooded roadway, but it's not worth the risk. It's impossible to tell the depth of the water—or whether the road or bridge is damaged or missing. Don't endanger yourself or the first responders who may try to rescue you," Col. Davis said.

Bottom line: stay aware and cautious, especially at night, when recognizing dangers can be more difficult. Pay attention to the weather and the road conditions.

Remember: Turn Around, Don't Drown.

Senate passes border funding

The U.S. Senate on July 25 passed an amendment to the Department of Homeland Security appropriations bill that would provide $3 billion in emergency funding for border security.

The amendment includes a provision drafted by U.S. Sen. John Cornyn, R-Texas, to allow the money to be used for enforcing immigration laws, including electronic employment verification improvements and increased removal and detention of visa overstays.

Gas station violations now posted online

AUSTIN - With gasoline prices hovering around $3 a gallon, Texas drivers want to make sure they are receiving exactly what they are paying for. Now, keeping an eye on their local gas station is as easy as logging on to the Internet.

Agriculture Commissioner Todd Staples announced today the Texas Department of Agriculture is now posting results of gas station inspections on its Web site, so consumers can see which stations around the state failed their recent gas pump inspections.

"The Texas Department of Agriculture is committed to consumer protection. We want Texans to know our inspectors are on the frontlines ensuring they are receiving what they are paying for," Commissioner Staples said. "By visiting the TDA Web site, drivers will have the information they need at their fingertips to know where gas pumps have been found out of compliance."

TDA has 72 weights and measures inspectors throughout the state checking more than 65,000 fuel pumps a year. An inspector will place an "out of order" tag on any pump not dispensing the correct amount of fuel within the allowable tolerance.

The station owner or operator is responsible for having a pump repaired by a service company licensed through TDA before the pump can be further used to sell fuel. A TDA inspector will then place a new seal on the pump after it has been tested and found to be operating properly. TDA recently increased penalties for any fuel pump found out of tolerance in the state. This was the first increase in fines since 1996.

To check out the new online reports go to the Texas Department of Agriculture's Web site at <http://www.tda.state.tx.us/> and click on "public information reports." Besides gas pump inspection reports consumers can also review weights and measures enforcement action reports to find out how much gas stations owners had to pay for the out of order violations.

$20 Million in fitness grants offered to Texas schools

AUSTIN — Texas Comptroller Susan Combs this week offered the state's public schools and charter schools an opportunity to receive $20 million in grants during the next two years to support in-school physical education, nutrition and fitness programs for students in grades 6 - 8.

Combs announced the new Texas Fitness Now grant program, aimed at middle school students attending schools where enrollment is at least 75 percent economically disadvantaged.

Approximately 700 schools qualify for Texas Fitness Now grants. The minimum grant is $1,500, and schools can get more, based upon their enrollment. More than 270,000 students could benefit from the grants.

Combs secured funding for the grants in the 2008-09 state budget (General Appropriations Act, Article III, Rider 89) and developed the rules for the Texas Fitness Now program in conjunction with the Texas Education Agency (TEA) and other interested stakeholders. TEA will administer the program, evaluate grant applications and award the funds to schools.

To be eligible for a Texas Fitness Now grant, a school must ensure that students in grades 6, 7 and/or 8 participate in physical activity for either 30 minutes a day or 225 minutes per two-week period for the entire school year and must have a physical education curriculum that meets the standards of the National Association of Sports and Physical Education.

In addition, the school must:

- Have or be in the process of adopting a Coordinated School Health Program required by the Texas Education Code;
- Have a quality physical education program based on the Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills (TEKS) that combines education, fitness and nutrition;
- Have submitted a wellness and nutrition policy to the Texas Department of Agriculture as required by law;
- Have established a School Health Advisory Council to review and make recommendations for using the grant;
- Have certified physical education teacher(s); and
- Conduct a campus fitness evaluation before Oct. 15 and again at the end of the school year, using an assessment instrument adopted by the state education commissioner and provided free-of-charge to participating schools.

The deadline for schools to apply for a Texas Fitness Now grant is Oct. 1. More information, including program guidelines and a list of frequently asked questions, is available online at the Comptroller's Web site: www.window.state.tx.us. The actual grant application is available on TEA's Web site at: <http://www.tea.state.tx.us/opge/formfund/pe/tfn/proguide.doc>. Schools may also contact Marissa Rathbone at TEA, (512) 463-3064, for more information about the Texas Fitness Now program, or TEA's Division of Formula Funding, (512) 463-8525, for more information about grant funding.

Touch of History

Workmen drove spikes securing rails to cross ties as the Orient Railroad made its way toward Eldorado in 1930.

The coming of the railroad

W. B. Silliman had high hopes of having a railroad through his newly founded town of Eldorado in 1900. A railroad would promote the development of this remote area considerably. Transporting supplies and commodities by freight wagons was difficult and slow on rough dirt roads.

A railroad through Eldorado to Sonora looked like a possibility in 1909 when the Orient reached San Angelo.

Citizens of Schleicher County united and appointed a committee to represent the county in dealing with the railroad promoters. The first committee members were M.B. McKnight, W.W. Barber, W.B. Silliman, W.F. Ford and E.A. Nall. A second committee was appointed to raise bonus for the railroad. Serving on this committee was J.S. Pelt, E.A. Nall, John Roach, Sol Mayer, J. Keeney, J.E. Dayton, O.C. Roberts and Lee Williams.

Despite the $100,000 raised by subscription, the deal with the Orient fell through. The Orient felt the investment was not feasible for this remote area due to lack of traffic and population.

Schleicher County had new hope for a railroad in 1929 when the Santa Fe Railroad System leased the Orient. The Panhandle and Santa Fe agreed to lay lines through Schleicher County if the county would provide right of way and $20,000 bonus. No money was to be paid until the railroad was completed through the county.

The proposal was readily accepted, and Schleicher County assessed tax money for the project.

The rails reached Eldorado town site on March 10, 1930. The Eldorado Success reflected the joy of the citizens by this quote in the paper:

"The 100,000 raised in December 1909 and contracts signed to have work started by January 1, 1910, was a happy event in the life of Eldorado, only to wither and decay, but from its roots has at last sprung a real railroad, one that can whistle, toot, and make a rumbling noise as it approaches our city."

Texas only state not free of Cattle Brucellosis

Texas was officially "singled out" as the only state not free of cattle brucellosis on July 23, when Idaho regained its class-free status from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Texas, due to undergo a USDA review of its brucellosis program, also may achieve "free" status by the year's end. Cattle brucellosis, a bacterial infection, does not pose a threat to food or pasteurized milk products, but it can cause cows to abort or deliver sickly calves. The brucellosis-free status allows cattle to be moved across state lines without a test for the disease.

"Idaho eradicated cattle brucellosis in 1991. Infection in cattle resurfaced in 2005, spread by infected elk from the Greater Yellowstone Area. Idaho lost its 'free' ranking in early 2006," said Dr. Bob Hillman, former Idaho state veterinarian. Since 2003, Dr. Hillman has served as executive director of the Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC) and Texas' state veterinarian. "Thousands of cattle have been tested for the disease in Idaho, and the USDA has determined that the state is again officially free of the disease."

"We have not found an infected cattle herd in Texas in more than a year," said Dr. Hillman. "In 2006, the TAHC convened a Brucellosis Eradication Working Group, comprised of about 40 cattle industry members. The group evaluated all aspects of Texas' brucellosis program, to ensure we had done everything possible to eradicate the disease and to prepare for our Texas USDA review. The USDA brucellosis review has been requested, and if we do not identify any additional brucellosis infected herds, Texas could be declared brucellosis-free by the end of the year."

Dr. Hillman said that brucellosis testing of adult cattle at livestock markets must continue for at least two years after the state gains "free" status, as a way to find infection that may have yet gone undetected. As added protection, he suggested that replacement heifers-those heifers kept, purchased or sold for breeding continue to be vaccinated with RB-51 brucellosis vaccine, especially in the eastern portion of the state.

"The vaccination of heifers between the ages of four and 12 months has been voluntary and at producer expense since 1996," he said. "The cost can be a wise investment to protect herd health, just in case there is undetected infection in the state. The vaccination also can add value to breeding heifers and meet current requirements for selling Texas heifers in a number of other states."

The key to successful brucellosis vaccination is timing, noted Dr. Hillman. Heifers must receive their dose of RB-51 prior to being exposed to brucellosis bacteria, a situation that can occur when an infected cow in a herd aborts or delivers a calf. Naturally curious, heifers and other herd mates will nuzzle or lick the fetus or newborn, ingesting the millions of bacteria shed by the infected cow. Brucellosis-infected heifers will thrive and appear normal, harboring infection until they are cows, when the disease cycle is repeated.

"In the 1950s, the country had at least 100,000 brucellosis-infected herds, with 20,000 of those in Texas," said Dr. Hillman. "It's obvious we've made tremendous progress. We're in a race, not just to eradicate brucellosis, but to maintain Texas' credibility as the country's top cattle production state. Replacement heifer vaccination, good recordkeeping and concern for Texas' cattle health status can help achieve these goals."

New law bans all hunting of wildlife from roads

AUSTIN, Texas — With the passage of House Bill 12 by the 80th Texas Legislature, it is now unlawful to hunt any wild bird or animal on a public road or the right-of-way of a public road.

Prior to this year, it was unlawful to hunt game animals or game birds on a public road — meaning that nongame species such as snakes, turtles, frogs and most mammals other than deer, bighorn sheep, javelina, and pronghorn antelope could be legally taken, provided that the take was not by firearm and did not occur from a vehicle.

For many years, the department has informed the public that a hunting license was not required to take or possess any animal other than terrestrial vertebrates, such as insects. Although the new law could be construed to apply to the collection of invertebrates, the department will not enforce the provision as it relates to invertebrates at this time.

"The department strongly encourages all persons to avoid engaging in the collection of any animal life on public roads or the right-of-way of public roads," said Maj. David Sinclair, TPWD chief of wildlife enforcement.

The new law does not apply to licensed falconers trapping raptors (birds of prey) or persons engaged in activities under department permits for scientific, educational, or zoological collection if allowed under the conditions of the permit.
