The meeting will be held in the court room at 2:30 p. m. and I urge that all contract signers and interested parties be present. The information will be thoroughly explained and we will discuss cotton plans for this year.

The necessary forms and contracts are expected to arrive soon.

C. Snell, County Agent.

Izaak Walton League Sponsors Meeting

On Wednesday, January 30th a meeting will be held in Austin by sportsmen, conservationists of fish and game and outdoor lovers. The meeting during the day session will be called to order in the convention room of the Stephen F. Austin Hotel at 10 a. m. and will adjourn at 5 p. m.

Following this conference and at 7 p. m. a banquet dinner will be held on the roof garden of the Stephen F. Austin Hotel, at which dinner, members of the Legislature will be guests. Governor James V. Allred will deliver an address from the speaker's table following addresses made by Dr. Preston Bradley of Chicago, National President of the Izaak Walton League and C. A. Wheatly, President of the Texas Division of the organization.

The day session will be conducted on the order of an open forum or conference between individuals and representatives of sportsmen and outdoor conservation groups, from all over the state. A large number of bills pertaining to fish, game, forests and streams have already been offered for passage and many more are in the making. Some of these bills are considered highly beneficial, while others are detrimental, as far as the general public is concerned.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss these measures, as well as ways and means toward the conservation of fish, game, forests and streams and all that part of our outdoor natural resources that brings health, recreation and enjoyment to the citizens of Texas. Great state-wide interest has been aroused in this proposed conference since the bills that are already offered have statewide effect. All individuals, both men and women will be privileged at the day session to participate and render a voice in any subject in which this organization is interested. Sportsmen are anticipating the largest gathering of this kind that has ever been held in the State.

Among some of the bills to be offered are:

- H. B. No. 101—The regulation of the killing of doves and quail.
- H. B. No. 175—For the gathering of statistical information on the catch of various marine products along the Texas Coast.
- H. B. No. 113—Protection of the Antwerp Homing Messenger Pigeon.
- H. B. No. 45—Requiring resident fishing license.
- H. B. No. 61—Declaring the Colliard Pecary or Javelina a game animal.
- H. B. No. 60—Regulation of fish dealers license.
- H. B. No. 3—More adequate penalties provided for using explosives for taking fish.
- H. B. No. 6—Resident hunting license bill.

All outdoor conservationists, both men and women are urged to attend and take part in the above meetings. No registration fees will be charged for the day conference, the price of the dinner at the evening banquet will be nominal. Reservations should be made in advance.

His wife predeceased him in death by several years.

Pall bearers for the Mather funeral were Tom Jones, Tom Johnson, Ed Flinnigan, O. E. Conner, Don McCormick and Joe Tisdale.

They resided in Coke County until 1919 when they moved to this county. They reared three children, two daughters, Mrs. Joe Wilson who now lives at Dryden and Mrs. Steve Armentrout who lives at Sterling City, and one son, Richard who died in 1929.

Besides the widow and two daughters, Mr. Mercer is survived by four brothers and six sisters.

Pallbearers for the Mercer funeral were Hugh McAngus, W. J. Luedcke, H. F. Webb, Judge H. W. Finley, B. E. Moore, E. C. Hill, C. C. Doty and George Faught.

Plans Well Underway For Stunt Night

A number of organizations have responded to the invitation offered by the Parent-Teachers Association to participate in Stunt Night which will be held in the high school auditorium on the night of February 8. The purpose of Stunt Night is to raise funds for the County Home Library movement. The stunts will be held upon a contest basis, the organization presenting the best stunt will be awarded a prize of $5.00.

The program for the hour was made up with a homely man's contest in which Lion Doyle and Lion Joiner presented three candidates each for the honor. After qualifications were given on each of the six candidates, the judges went into a huddle and voted Lion Sample as the winner. He was presented with a prize. The other candidates were Lions Leaman, Alexander, Jones, Ratliff, and Quinn.

They took over the Metro Goldwyn Mayer and other contracts which have been running at the Palace and will run these along with their old contracts. They now have pictures lined up with Metro Goldwyn Mayer, Paramount, Universal, Warner-First National and the other major producers and expect to give Eldorado the best of film entertainment.

Mr. Hall states that Money night will be continued with Thursday night of each week being the night used in that way.

In Wednesday night's City League Basketball games, the Printers ran their percentage up to 500 by taking a 46 to 19 score game from the Cowboys while the Teachers ran their string of victories up to five with a 43 to 26 win over the Lumber Jacks.

Coach Williamson continued his scoring rampage in the game with the Lumber Jacks by raring up 18 points. He was followed by Coach Billy Cooper who raring up six field goals for twelve points. Con Isaacs was scintillating scoring ace for the losers, making ten points. The high point of the game, however, was the field goal made by Clarence Knight.

Curtis Duncan won scoring laurels for the evening in the game against the Cowboys. The tall center for the Printers hit the basket for ten field goals. Stud Ballew made twelve points on six field goals. Glenn Ratliff, of the Lumber Jacks but filling in with the Cowboys, was high scorer among the losers in this game with six points.

Twenty Fifth Year Of Scouting To Be Celebrated

Extensive plans for the celebration of the twenty-fifth year of Scouting during the 1835 Anniversary Week, February 3 to 14th, are being made by Concho Valley Council Boy Scout Troops.

Friday night, February 8th, Boy Scouts of this Council, as all over the nation, will gather in their Scout meetings and formally renew their Scout Oath and Law at 8:15 o'clock. The mobilization over the United States is a new "wrinkle" in Anniversary Programs.

Almost every town of the Concho Valley Council will promote Parent-Scout nights on this night. A program is being prepared in each town. Troops will contest for a Council banner, based on the total number of guests and old Scouts out at the meetings.

Saturday, February 9th, a census is expected to be taken of most towns of Brothers, 18 years and older. This information will be used in enlisting Scouters. Scout Sunday is February 10th, Scouts and parents alike attending to hear many Scout sermons over the Council.

School Day is Monday, with all schools promoting Anniversary Week Scouting programs. Tuesday is Pioneer Day, the committee recommending Memorial Services of Lincoln and local pioneers. Wednesday, February 13th is Home Day with Scouting emphasized in the home while Thursday is Citizenship Day, with civic programs being scheduled and civic buildings being toured by Scouts.

Library Committee Hold Meeting

The Eldorado Library Committee met at the court house last Thursday afternoon in interest of the library movement. Plans for the promotion of a public library were discussed and it was decided that members of the committee would write to publishing houses for book reviews and other necessary equipment.

The Library Committee is made up of representatives from the various clubs of the county with Mrs. W. E. Eaton as chairman.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the need of a public library for Schleicher County and every club and every individual should join the move and work together in order that an up to date and well equipped library can be had.

The County has given a room in the court house for a library and has offered some money toward the promotion of the cause.

The committee will meet again next Thursday January 31.

CORRECTION

In last weeks story on the Ever Pupil Scholarship Test it was stated that Elizabeth Graves made 81 out of a possible 50 for the highest score in the third grade. This was an error as she made 51 out of a possible 53 for the highest score. The medium score among the third grade pupils was 40 and the lowest 22.

Mrs. Ben Hext has just recently recovered from a spell of illness.

NEW TEACHERS ADDED TO ELDORADO FACULTY

Miss Mary Ella Millar and Miss Hazel Bruton have been added to the faculty of the Eldorado School System. Miss Millar is instructing in Physical Education and Miss Bruton is teaching in the grammar. Miss Bruton is a graduate of Sul Ross College at Alpine. She completed her college work there last year finishing with high honors. She is a graduate of Eldorado High School. Miss Millar is a graduate of the University of Texas.

The local fandom will have the privilege of seeing what promises to be the best basketball games of the year when Coach Ted White and his basket-keepers in the local gymnasium tomorrow night for a double header. Coach Cooper will take his squad to Ozona tonight for a double header and the games will be returned tomorrow night.

The games here Saturday night will begin at 7:30 o'clock and an admission charge of 5h, 10c and 20c will be made, 5c being for the grammar school children, 10c for the high school students and 20c for adults.

The Eagles who have won all of their recent games by impressive scores will face a real test against the Ozona quintet. Coach White has a number of tall players who are very adept at hitting the basket. Just recently they waded out a number of strong high school teams to win the Iran tournament. They defeated the strong Big Lake quintet last week. The Eagles, however, are no set up for any of the high school teams in this section. Getting away to a slow start this season, due to the lack of experience, Coach Cooper has fast developed a quintet that will give all comers some stiff competition. This is evinced from the fact that they just recently defeated the pick of the local town players by a score of 22 to 19.

The Eagle mentor will use both his first and second teams in the games with Ozona. The first team against Ozona's best and the second team against Coach White's second string.

The games tomorrow night will probably be the last real high school contests to be had here this season as the Eagles will be entered in out of town tournament play practically every week end for the remainder of the season. They go to Big Lake next week to participate in the annual tournament staged by that high school.

Independent Quintet Enters Christoval Tournament

The Eldorado Independent Basket ball team will meet the Ditz Bakers quintet from Big Springs for the first round of the Christoval invitation tournament which will get on way at 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

These strong independent teams have entered the tournament and H. A. Chapple, manager of the Bats, states that everything points toward a very successful tournament.

The Eldorado team will be selected from the players which make up the City League team. Dave Williamson is manager and coach of this team.

World Court Adherence Proposal Sidetracked in Senate—President's Social Security Plan Arouses Storm of Discussion.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

RATIFICATION of the world court protocols received a setback when Senator Hiram Johnson, Republican, California, bitterly denounced such action as a "back door entry" to the League of Nations, and senate leaders rather than risk an immediate vote, delayed definite action.

Sen. Hiram Johnson

Senator Johnson's attack came on the heels of a special message to the senate from President Roosevelt who asked for early ratification of the protocols. It was the most determined movement yet made to put the United States into the court.

Other senators, it is said, were ready to follow Johnson's lead, particularly Senator Borah, long time foe of the court.

Johnson supported his opening attack on the court by offering four embarrassing reservations to the resolution of ratification:

1. Prohibit the court from entertaining jurisdiction on any question relating wholly or in part to its internal affairs.
2. Permit recourse to the court only by agreement through general or special treaties between the parties in dispute.
3. Prohibit the court and the league of nations from trying to assume jurisdiction on any question which depends upon or relates to the Monroe Doctrine.
4. Declare the United States, by joining the court, assumes no obligations.

Through Johnson's action, these questions must be voted upon before a final vote can be reached on the resolution of adherence.

Although the question has been sidetracked for a time, it will be brought up soon, it is said, and Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, has stated that he was confident of ratification when the final test comes.

THE third phase of testimony presented by the state in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, charged with the murder of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's son, has begun. Eight handwriting experts called by the prosecution have completed their testimony, each declaring that in his opinion, the four ex-carpenenter was author of the ransom notes, and the state now moves on to the story of finding the tiny corpse in a shallow grave in the woods near Hopewell, N. J., two months and twelve days after the kidnaping on the night of March 1, 1932. Following this, the story of how Hauptmann was captured last September through identification of one of the gold certificates which made up the ransom, will be told.

Eight men, who have qualified with the court as experts, have declared that Hauptmann penned the ransom notes. Photographic enlargements of the notes and of Hauptmann's admitted writings have been shown in the court, and each peculiarity of each character has been carefully gone over.

Defense lawyers have fought each scrap of testimony bit by bit. An attempt has been made to show that some one might have forged Hauptmann's handwriting in an effort to throw suspicion on him, but this has been vigorously refuted by witnesses who have been firm in their assertions that only the prisoner could have been the author.

An attempt to forestall efforts of the defense to pin the crime on Isador Fisch, furrier, who died in Germany, is being made by New Jersey officials. Pinkus Fisch, brother of Isador, his wife, Czerna; his sister, Hannah, and Fisch's nurse, Minne Steingnitz, have been brought from Germany to testify. Pinkus has asserted his belief that his brother is not guilty.

THE Saar will be returned to Germany on March 1, a special committee of the League of Nations has decided. The proposal will be submitted to Berlin at once. Opposition to this proposal is expected, since the reich originally demanded the basin's return formally on or before February 15.

Another difficulty arises over France's demand that Article 42 of the Versailles treaty establishing a demilitarized zone should be applied to the Saarland. This would ban Nazi storm troops and Brown Shirts from the territory after its return. Compliance of this demand would be an admission from Germany that the Brown Shirts are a semi-military organization, and this Berlin has long denied in computing her military strength.

Germany won an overwhelming victory in the plebiscite held to determine the wishes of the inhabitants of the rich Saar basin as to the future status of that territory. The complete vote as announced by the commission was for return to Germany 477,119, for annexation to France 2,124, and to return to present status under League of Nations control 46,513. Their margin of victory exceeded the hopes of even the most optimistic Nazi leaders.

Love of the fatherland won over antipathy to Hitler principles in influencing the voters. The Saarlanders in voting to return to reich rule exchange their personal and political liberties for the regimentation of a dictatorship with its curb on the press, free speech and individualism.

GENERAL REVISION of air mail rates to prevent possible destruction of commercial aviation has been recommended by the bureau of air mail of the Interstate Commerce Commission. An investigation conducted by the bureau discloses that most of the routes are being operated at substantial losses, and rate increases were recommended on 19 routes. Rates on one route would remain unchanged, and 11 others would be decreased. If the recommendations are carried out, the proposed new increases range up from nine cents per mile for poundage not to exceed 300 pounds per mile, while the reductions ranged as high as 13.5 cents per mile. Operation losses of $1,757,993.39 were shown in tables submitted by the 31 existing operating companies, and it was pointed out that the industry would be endangered if the contractors were forced to continue operating at tremendous losses.

THE most far-flung innovation of the New Deal has proposed thus far—the "social security plan" proposed by President Roosevelt—has aroused a storm of discussion. Administration adherents greeted the scheme with wild enthusiasm, while the opposition, led by Senator Borah, Idaho, has voiced vigorous criticisms.

All business in congress has been sidetracked to permit immediate action on the proposed measure. Public hearings have already been started in the senate finance committee, and the house ways and means committee has postponed consideration of the bonus bill to work on the security plan. This is being done at the President's behest. The plan provides:

Flexible, but compulsory unemployment insurance under a federal-state system restricted to workers and financed by a 3 per cent tax on pay rolls after January 1, 1938. The government will aid in bearing administration costs, and the treasury will handle the fund. Ninety per cent of the pay roll tax is to be refunded to employers who contributed to state unemployment plans. A maximum of $15 a week of compensation to begin four weeks after the worker loses his job and to last for not more than sixteen weeks is contemplated.

The second part of the plan provides for old-age pensions. The government is to co-operate with the states and pay a maximum of $40 a month to persons over sixty-five. The national government is also to aid states in formulating a plan for persons under sixty-five which will be financed jointly by employer and employee through a pay roll tax; the funds to be handled by the federal government; the amount of pensions to be a percentage of the employee's wage; with non-manual employees receiving more than $250 a month to be exempt from the plan.

The third section of the scheme provides for appropriations to give better facilities to caring for mothers, and dependent and crippled children, and the fourth section would furnish larger appropriations for public health aid, investigation and research.

Cost of the entire program to the federal government will be $100,000,000 next year and $200,000,000 in succeeding years. The cost to the states will be $75,000,000 next year and $150,000,000 in succeeding years. Some idea of the size of the plan may be gained from the report of the President's cabinet which said reserves for old-age pensions must be maintained after some years at $15,250,000,000.

ONE of the most spectacular prison breaks in history was effected when four convicts in the San Quentin (Calif.) state prison overpowered two guards, slugged the warden unconscious, kidnaped six hostages including four members of the state prison board, and fled in a state owned automobile. The felons were captured two hours later 54 miles from the prison after a running gun fight with prison guards and posses. One of the convicts was wounded, as were two of the hostages.

Trouble has been expected at San Quentin, where some 6,000 prisoners are housed in space designed for only 3,000. Unrest has been evident for some time, especially since it became necessary to put more than one man in each cell. Only 190 guards have been regularly employed.

IMPROVED conditions among corn belt farmers are indicated by a federal report which shows a gain of $82,980,592, or more than 30 cents a bushel for each grower, has been realized by farmers in 10 states who availed themselves of the government 45-cent corn loans. Only slightly more than $500,000 of the $120,492,250 remains unpaid. About 18,000,000 bushels are under seal under the new 55-cent price, report states.

EXTENSION of life of the Reconstruction Finance corporation for two years will be asked, informed congressmen assert. The RFC's authority to make loans expires on January 31. It is rumored that the extension will include a proviso permitting the President to put the organization out of business by proclaiming the emergency ended at the conclusion of one year.

The extension plan may also carry a section doubling the length of time for maturity of loans the RFC may make. The present limit is five years. It is also said that the RFC may be permitted to extend instead of renew existing loans providing value of security is unchanged.

THE final fate of NRA seems to be up to the President. Reports from the capital say the National Industrial Recovery board, successor to Gen.

Hugh Johnson, who asserts NRA is "as extinct as the dodo," has avoided a direct recommendation that the institution be made permanent. Since this was evidently done with the approval of the President, the future of the Blue Eagle seems to be somewhat clouded.

The board, of which Donald Richberg is chairman, pointed out three possible courses which the President can follow. The first course would be to make NRA permanent, but in simplified form. Under this plan, every industry would have to go under a code fixing wage and hour limits and prohibiting child labor. Trade practice provisions would be entirely voluntary. In rare cases where price fixing is employed, the government, not the industry, would fix the price.

The second course would be to extend the NRA as it now stands, but for a limited period. Unless legislation of this kind is enacted, the act will expire automatically on June 16. The third course would amend and extend the NRA.

Most members of the board, it is said, prefer the "permanent" plan which would broaden the government's regulation of business. No industry would escape the wage and hour codes. Today many industries, among them the telephone, telegraph, and tobacco industries, are not under trade codes, since these have not been able to agree on terms. The present law permits the President to impose a code only when an industry refuses to submit voluntarily, such as in the case of the cotton garment industry.

Observers are not at all sure the President wants a permanent code. Several uncertainties have made it difficult for the President to decide, one of which is the status of section 7a, the collective bargaining clause.

A NUMBER of important issues await the League of Nations as it convenes at Geneva on its fifteenth birthday. Five major disputes will come before the body, of which the Saar plebiscite, involving as it does the disposition of the future national allegiance of that rich territory, holds most immediate interest.

Other decisions which await action of the league include: the dispute between Iraq and Persia over alleged border violations by the latter; the border conflict between Italy and Ethiopia; the Greek complaint that Greek minorities in Albania are being deprived of their guaranteed rights; and the long war in the Chaco Boreal between Bolivia and Paraguay.

FIRST legislation to be put through the house of representatives was completed as the $779,916,000 independent offices appropriation bill was passed in virtually the same form as recommended by the appropriations committee. The amount for the securities and exchange commission was increased to $2,000,000. Efforts of Representative Blanton of Texas to reduce the $264,043 for the home loan bank board and of Representative Taber, New York, to cut down the appropriation for the federal communications commission were defeated.

Signs of gathering storms were seen, however, as Representative Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, chairman of the house interstate commerce committee, declared on the floor that he would not support a bill to place production of oil under government control. Emergency legislation to supplant control measures invalidated by the recent decision of the United States Supreme court will undoubtedly be proposed, and Rayburn's declaration is seen as an indication that opposition may develop.

SWEDEN, apparently, has found a way to beat the depression. King Gustave in his annual message to parliament, reported that solution of the problem of unemployment appears near, the budget is balanced without new taxes having been imposed or new loans floated, and the national debt will be reduced this year. Only 60,000,000 kroner (about $15,000,000) has been asked for unemployment relief, as compared to 160,000,000 kroner last year.

Washington. — Out of President Roosevelt's eight-billion-dollar budget is developing a very real controversy which runs to the heart of the New Deal. True, this controversy like nearly all of the others will not result in changing the President's plans, but it seems to me to be a matter which justifies consideration even though the Roosevelt will in the end must prevail.

Budget Starts Controversy

Included in the budget was provision for an appropriation of four billion dollars and, as stated by the President, to be supplied "in one sum, subject to allocation by the Executive principally for giving work to those unemployed on the relief rolls." Beyond that, there was no exposition of its intended use nor has there been any detailed statement of the plan. As a result, there is a considerable body of opinion in the halls of congress which is saying in effect that Mr. Roosevelt ought to define his work relief program. He has not done so, and the best information I can obtain is that no explanation may be expected in the near future; he intends to proceed as he has in the past by developing a program piece-meal and using the funds as the occasion requires.

In the critical days of 1933 when Mr. Roosevelt took office, I believe it was generally conceded that the emergency was so serious as to warrant delegation by congress of almost any power even remotely desired by the President. He used that power during 1933 and 1934. Now, many members of the house and senate believe that the time has arrived for congress to become more inquisitive about the expenditure of taxpayers' money and to avoid following in blind trust however the President may direct. While it is probable that congress will not be told how the President intends to use the money and while it is also probable that the requested appropriation of four billion dollars will be rubber stamped, the fact remains that at no time during the New Deal has there been such a buzz of discontent in the President's own list of wheel-horses. Senator Byrnes, the South Carolina Democrat who has been looked upon consistently as Mr. Roosevelt's spokesman on financial affairs in the senate, has informed that body that it is impossible "to be more specific at this time" on the work relief program. Senator Byrnes will go no further. He has given no interviews respecting his own thoughts on the matter and apparently has elected to wait at bat until the President tosses him the ball. Nevertheless, there are some senators who think they detect just a trace of concern in the attitude of this administration spokesman and they are wondering how long he will continue to repress his known energies.

Presentation of the budget was expected in many quarters to disclose the means by which the President hoped to get employment going again in private industry. It showed nothing tangible in this direction. Consequently, critics of the administration who have had opportunity to speak in the house and senate have begun to chide the administration on its third experiment in three years. Representative Snell of New York, Republican leader in the house, has called attention to the situation something in this manner: The President tried out one plan in 1933; he tried out a second plan in 1934, and now he is trying a third experiment. The first two were found to be all wet, and the Republicans, it seems, are convinced that the current effort has two strikes on it before it gets started. They are predicting failure for it in every way except the success that is assured in getting rid of money which the treasury is borrowing. Their conversations all have the same theme song, namely that the country is seeing activity, but they are not predicting how long this action can continue until the nation goes broke.

Whether the business leaders who met at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., a month ago were right or wrong in proposing the use of a dole instead of the more expensive work relief plan, or whether they were correct in any of the other recommendations they made, the truth is the administration has rejected without comment every single one of the recommendations made by that group. Mr. Roosevelt made no mention in his budget message or in his annual message to congress of plans for balancing the budget, and this fact at last has sunk in. The result is additional fear on the part of many business leaders who can see in the future only inflation and economic chaos for the country.

Privately, I have heard many expressions indicating that men of wealth are putting their money into tangible property—something that will not dry up and blow away. That is always the refuge of individuals who fear that the currency which their government controls is losing its worth. These men will be criticized for that course, naturally enough, by blind followers of inflation plans.

From all of the signs now visible and from the undercurrent of mumbled that I hear, it certainly is made to appear that Mr. Roosevelt is confronted with a necessity for some definite outline of his plans and an assurance that he will adhere to those plans. Without such, the situation assuredly is that he will not have the confidence of the business structure. It seems illogical even to suppose that he can gain the co-operation of business in expanding its activities, thereby re-employing workers, unless he takes a different tack than his pronouncements thus far indicate. At least, such is the conclusion of a vast number of thinking people.

I heard a visitor to Washington say the other day that he would like to ride airplanes, "but the confounded things fly most of their schedules at night."

The individual is a man of great wealth and his time is of great value. He insisted he was sincere in his statement that he would much rather save time by flying if the planes were on day-light schedule.

The statement aroused my curiosity to the extent that I conducted some inquiry into the situation. I found the night schedules of the air lines to be due to the fact that they are fixed by the Post Office department. If a line desires to carry mail it has to subject itself to the dictates of "Big Jim" Farley, the postmaster general. His office can and does say to an air line that it will fly a ship leaving New York at 9 p. m. or else it does not get the mail contract. The result is that the plane leaves New York at 9 p. m. or it leaves Chicago or Washington or any other city on a time stated by the Post Office department.

Many persons feel that such a policy is taking undue advantage of private industry. It is true that the Post Office department is paying for carrying the mails at a rate probably well above the rate it receives in postage on that mail. It is, therefore, a subsidy. But this government has for years maintained a policy of subsidizing new industries and that course is responsible for the success attained by the development of the transportation systems of this country.

The President's special commission named to study the airplane problems of this country and to make recommendations heard much testimony and received much data showing that the airplane industry in the United States had placed this country in the number one position in the air among all nations of the world. Individual members of that commission have stated they regard this as highly beneficial. Some of them at least maintain that development of an air industry was one of the greatest steps taken in national defense preparation. They appeared to consider this one end as justifying the course without even considering the maintenance of a great industry within the borders of our nation as a commercial unit.

But while this has been going on, and while many authorities on economic matters continue to urge development of the air industry, we find another agency within the government placing handicaps on that same segment of the economic structure. The least that can be said is that the courses cannot be reconciled.

The administration is determined to control oil production. If it cannot do so by Executive order —and the Supreme Court of the United States has decreed it cannot do so in that manner—there will be laws predicated upon the interstate commerce clauses of the Constitution which will permit the executive branch of the government to keep its hand on the valve of oil wells.

President Roosevelt apparently was not much concerned over the Supreme court decision which invalidated that part of the recovery act, giving the Chief Executive authority to allow or prohibit interstate movement of oil as it decided best. The President appeared to feel, in responding to questions by news correspondents, that the rebuff was only temporary. He announced at that time a determination to control oil production in one way or another to avoid what he describes as a criminal waste of a great natural resource.

The oil case, the Supreme court decided, had its origin in regulations and executive orders issued under what the administration believed to be authority accorded by the recovery act. Those regulations and orders prescribed quotas allowed to be shipped from each of the several oil producing states. The motivating spirit was a desire to avoid accumulation of a vast surplus of crude oil with the consequent depressing of prices until crude oil was worth little or nothing. But, like many other prohibitory laws and rules of conduct, individuals resented being told they could not do a certain thing and immediately began to devise ways by which it could be done—a characteristic that was developed to its fullest during the bootleg days of national prohibition. The oil that was moved surreptitiously came to be known as "hot oil," and the controversy over the validity of the regulations and executive orders consequently was called the "hot oil" case.

Now all this aint what I started in to write about. I started to write about some woman writing me about paying for her divorce as she had a better offer, and I just drifted into this mess. But at that maby I wouldn't be afraid to be confronted with it 20 or 30 years from now. Nothing would hurt me but my Conscience for living like a "Civilized Citizen."

Says WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS.—Well all I know is just what I read in the papers, or the mail. You get all kinds of letters, and say if you think this thing of being in the movies and in the papers is a cinch, you ought to read some of our mail sometimes, and what hurts is that most of the time they are about right. You know you really dont know how silly you are till you have to read it awhile after its written.

But we are all that way, not only with the written word but with the spoken. If somebody had a dictaphone on us all the time and then we had to sit and listen to it all run off every night or every month, or every year, I bet that would break us from shooting off so much. We had a great illustration of that out here in California during the late election. This fellow Sinclair had written an awful lot of stuff in his life. Well they would go back among his writings and reprint things that he had said. (Maby it was only one of the characters in one of his books that was made to say that thing, but as he was the author of it, why naturally he come in for the blame.)

Well that had an awful lot to do with beating him, for a lot of those things sounded mighty cuckoo, but on the other hand if he had had the means of publicity, that is the papers to do it with, and had been able to have every one of the papers who printed what he said maby in 98, and had been able to go back over their editorials and reprint what they had said, would have had them hollering "Quit". I sure would hate to be running for something and have somebody dig back through old papers and confront me with all the nut things that I have shown my ignorance on.

You see conditions and events change so fast, that what is passable today, is ridiculous tomorrow. Look at Mr Roosevelt. He started in with an idea of a balanced budget, and said that was what he would hold out for. But look at the thing now. But conditions are different, and he didnt know this thing was going to be among us so long. The N.R.A. looked like a good bet at the time, but part of it, in fact maby over half of it have proven to be non practical. It all had the right idea, but we are still just too selfish to see that exactly the right thing is done for the good of everybody.

I doubt very much if Civilization (so called) has helped generosity. I bet the old cave man would divide his raw meat with you as quick as one of us will ask a down and out to go in and have a meal with us. Those old boys or girls would rip off a wolf skin breechclout and give you half of it, quicker than a Ph.D. would slip you his umbrella. Civilization hasent done much but make you wash your teeth, and those days eating and gnawing on bones and meat, made tooth paste unnecessary.

Civilization n.s taught us to eat with a fork, but even now if nobody is around we use our fingers. In those days people fought for food an, in self defense. Nowadays we have diplomats work on wars for years before arranging them. That's so that when its over nobody will know what they were fighting for. We lost thousands, and spent billions, and you could had a sheet of paper to one million different people and tell em to write down what the last war was for, and the only answers that will be alike will be, "D—, if I know".

So that's what you call Civilization. Civilization is nothing but acquiring comforts for ourselves, when in those days they were so hard they didnt need em. We will strive to put in another bath, when maby our neighbors cant even put in an extra loaf of bread.

No our Civilization is not so hot. Poor Mr Roosevelt has tried to right some of it. He couldnt do it by persuasion, and he cant do it by law, so he may just have to give it up and say, Boys I have tried to bring a little social justice to you all, but even the Constitution is against me, so back to the old time s. "Sicke em Tige".

Now all this aint what I started in to write about. I started to write about some woman writing me about paying for her divorce as she had a better offer, and I just drifted into this mess. But at that maby I wouldn't be afraid to be confronted with it 20 or 30 years from now. Nothing would hurt me but my Conscience for living like a "Civilized Citizen."

While General George Rogers Clark Ohio in 1778 in the start of his campaign against the British strongholds in the Northwest, he came to and crossed the rapids during an almost total eclipse of the sun, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. But these hardy backwoodsman, divorced themselves from superstition, refused to look upon this as an omen foreboding ill fortune. Instead they jested that this was the sun which Great Britain boasted never set on English territory—and it was at last setting on America and particularly the Northwest.

"And whom have you invited to give it the bohemian atmosphere?" she was asked, to which she replied with emphasis:

A few obeyed him. The rest could not, he suddenly realized; and he had to leave them, dying. Jack Taylor was beside him, firing a rifle. They were five altogether who were falling back, firing.

Figures from the black leaped at them, and it was hand to hand. Tony fought with a bayonet, then with a clubbed rifle, madly and wildly swinging. He was struck, and reeled.

"Come on!" cried Jack Taylor's voice; and with Taylor he ran in the dark. They reached the buildings. Gunfire was flashing from the laboratories which otherwise were black. The dormitories sprang into light; windows shone, and spread illumination which showed that they were deserted and were being used now by the defenders of the camp to light the space already abandoned.

The attackers could not shoot out hundreds of globes so simply as they had smashed the searchlights. And they could not advance into that illuminated area, under the machine guns and rifles of the laboratories. They had first to take the deserted dormitories and darken them.

They were doing this; but it delayed them. It held them up a few minutes. Room by room, dormitory windows went black. The lights were being turned out; they were being smashed and the window-panes were crashing. Yells celebrated the smashing, and shots.

The yells ceased; some sort of assault was being reorganized. Tony moved in the dark. "Keep down—down—down—down," he was crying. "Below the window-line. Down!" For bullets from machine guns, evidently aimed from the dormitory windows, were striking in.

Many did not obey him; he did not expect them to. Yells at the farther end of the main laboratory told that it was hand-to-hand there, in the dark. A charge—a rush had been pushed home.

Tony found Taylor beside him; they had stuck together in the dark; and a dozen others rose and ran with them into the melee. The best brains of the modern world, fighting hand to hand with savages! Shoot and stab and club wildly, desperately, in the dark!

More and more lay where they fell. Tony, stumbling and slipping on the sticky wet floor, realized that this rush was stopped. There was nobody left in the room for fight—nobody but two or three distinguished as friends by the spots of the arm bands.

"Jack?" gasped Tony; and Taylor's voice answered him. They were staggering and bleeding, both of them; but they had survived the fight together. Tony found the flashlight which, all through the fight, he had had in his pocket, and he bent to the floor and held it close to the faces.

He caught breath, bitterly. Bronson was there. Bronson, the discoverer of the two stranger planets whose passing had loosed this savagery; Dr. Sven Bronson, the first scientist of the southern hemisphere, lay there in his blood, a bayonet through his throat! Beside him Dodson was dying, his right arm hacked almost off. A few of those less hurt were rising.

"To the ship! Into the ship!" Tony cried to them. "Everybody into the ship!" There was an alternative.

Creeping on hands and knees, from wounds or from caution, and dragging the wounded with them, the men started the retreat to the Space Ship. Women were helping them. Yells and whistles warned that another rush was gathering, and that this would be from all sides.

Tony caught up in his arms a young man who was barely breathing. He had a bullet through him, but he lived. Tony staggered with him into the great metal rocket.

When he laid his burden down, Ransdell confronted him. From head to foot, the South African was dabbled and clotted with blood. He was three-quarters naked; a bullet had creased his forehead; a bayonet had slashed his shoulder.

The second rush was coming. No doubt of it, and it would be utterly overwhelming. There would be no survivors—but the women. None. For the herd would take no prisoners. They were killing the wounded already—their own badly wounded and the camp's wounded that they had captured. Elliot James, a bullet through his thigh, but saved by the dark, crawled in with this information. Tony carried him into the ship.

They were all in the ship—all the survivors. The horde did not suspect it. Then they suddenly seemed to realize that the ship was the last refuge. They surrounded it, firing at it. Their bullets glanced from its metal,

Somebody who had grenades bombed it.

A frightful flame shattered them. Probably they imagined, at first, that the grenade had exploded some sort of powder magazine within the huge metal tube. Few of those near to the ship, and outside it, lived to see what was happening.

The great metal rocket rose from the earth, the awful blast from its power tubes lifting it. The frightful heat seared and incinerated, killing at its touch. A hundred of the horde were dead before the ship was above the buildings.

Hendron lifted it five hundred feet farther, and the blast spread in a funnel below it. A thousand died in that instant. Hendron ceased to elevate the ship. Indeed, he lowered it a little, and the power of the atomic blast which was keeping two thousand tons of metal and of human flesh suspended over the earth, played upon the ground—and upon the flesh on the ground—as no force ever released by man before.

Half an hour later, Hendron brought the ship down.

A pale delicate light carried away the depths of night. From the numbness and exhaustion which had seized it the colony roused itself. It gazed with empty eyes upon that which surrounded it. The last battle of brains against brutality had been fought on the bosom of the earth. And the intelligence of man had conquered his primeval ruthlessness. But at what cost. Around a table in the office of the laboratories a few men and women stared at each other; Hendron pale and shaken, Tony in shoes and trousers, white bandages over his wounds; Eve staring from him to the short, broad-shouldered, silent form of Ransdell, whose hands, blackened, ugly, hung limply at his sides, whose gorilla-like strength seemed to have deserted him; the German actress, her dress disheveled, her hands covering her eyes; Smith, the surgeon, stupefied in the face of this hopeless summons to his calling.

At last Hendron sucked a breath into his lungs. "My friends, what must be done is obvious. We must first bury the dead. There are no survivors of the enemy. If others are gathering I believe we need fear no further attack. Doctor Smith, you will kindly take charge of all hospital and medical arrangements for our people. I will request that those who are able to do so appear immediately on the airplane field. I shall dispatch the majority of them to your assistance, and with those who remain I shall take such steps as are necessary. Let's go."

Only three hundred and eighty persons were counted by Tony as they struggled shuddering to the landing field. Almost half of them were women, for the women, except in the case of individuals who joined the fighting voluntarily, had been secluded. As in the other emergency, Tony was assigned to the kitchen. He walked to the kitchen with his men. Tony, with ten other men, a pitiful number for the appalling task that confronted them, went down to the field and began to gather up the bodies there. Not far from the cantonment, on what had been a lumber road, an enormous fissure yawned in the earth.

All that day they tended their own wounded. Many of them perished. In those nightmare days no one spoke unless it was necessary. Life-long friendships and strong new friendships had been obliterated. Loves that in two months had flowered into vehement reality were ended. For two weeks abysmal sadness and funeral silence held them. Only the necessary ardors of their toil prevented many of them from going mad. But at the end of two weeks Tony, returning from an errand to the fissure where the last bodies had been entombed by a blast of dynamite, stood on the hill above the encampment and saw that once again the grass grew green, once again the buildings were clean and trim.

While he stood there his attention was attracted by a strange sound—the sound of an airplane motor, and the plane itself became visible. It landed presently on their field, and Tony was one of several men who approached it. The cabin door opened and out stepped a man. There was something familiar about him to Tony, but he could not decide what it was. The man had a high, crackling voice. His hair was snow-white. His features were drawn, and his skin was yellow. His pilot remained at the controls of the plane, and the old man hobbled toward Tony, saying as he approached, "Please take me to Mr. Hendron."

Tony stepped forward. "I'm Mr. Hendron's assistant. We don't allow visitors here. Perhaps you will tell me your errand."

"I'll see Hendron," snapped the other.

Tony realized that the man constituted no menace. "Perhaps," he said coldly, "if you will tell me your reason for wanting to see Hendron, I can arrange for the interview."

The old man almost shrieked. "You can arrange an interview! I tell you, young fellow, I said I would see Hendron, and that's all there is to it." He came abruptly closer, snatched Tony's lapel, cocked his head, and peered into his face. "You're Drake, aren't you, young Tony Drake?"

Suddenly Tony recognized the man. He was staggered. Before him stood Nathaniel Borgan, fourth richest man in America, friend of all tycoons of the land, friend indeed of Hendron himself. Tony had last seen Borgan in Hendron's house in New York, when Borgan had been immaculate, powerful, self-assured, and barely approaching middle age. He now looked senile, degenerate and slovenly.

"Aren't you Drake?" the crackling voice repeated. Tony nodded mechanically. "Yes," he said; "come with me."

Hendron did not recognize Borgan until Tony had pronounced his name. Then upon his face there appeared briefly a look of consternation, and Borgan in his shrill, grating voice began to talk excitedly. "Of course I knew what you were doing, Hendron, knew all about it. Meant to offer you you alone for weeks." Again he bestated.

"Yes?" "That fight you put up—" Ransdell took a huge pocket knife from his flannel shirt and commenced to open and shut its blade nervously. "That was a d—n fine piece of work, fellow."

"What was yours?" Tony replied, heartily. Ransdell held out his hand. They gripped, and in that grip the hands of lesser men would have been broken. From that time on those rivals in love were as blood brothers. Another general meeting was held in the dining hall. Hendron again took charge.

"The matter which I have to discuss with you," he began, "is one which will come, I am sure, as a distinct surprise. It is the result of my earnest thought and of careful calculations. From the standpoint of realism—and I have learned that all of you are courageous enough to face truths—I am forced to add that my decision has been made possible by the diminution of our numbers."

"All of you know that I founded this village of ours for the purpose of transferring to the planet that will take the place of the earth a company of about one hundred people, with the hope that they might perpetuate our doomed race. It seemed to me that a ship large enough to accommodate such a number might be fabricated and launched by the one thousand persons who were originally assembled here. It is obvious, of course, that the more intelligent and healthy the units of humanity we are able to transfer to the planet, the better the chances for founding a new race will be."

He paused and his eyes roved over the throng. Not a breath was drawn, and not a word was spoken.

"My friends, we are five hundred in number. There is not one man or woman left among us who bears such disability as will prevent him from financial assistance, but got tangled up taking care of my affairs in the last few weeks. I haven't been able to come here before, for a variety of reasons. But now I'm here. You'll take me with you when you go, of course." He banged his fist on the table in a bizarre burlesque of his former gestures. "You'll take me all right, all right, and I'll tell you why you'll take me—for my money. When all else fails, I'll have my money. I ask only that you spare my life, that you'll take me from this awful place, and in turn go out to my plane, go out to the plane that is waiting there for you. Look inside." Suddenly his voice sank to a whisper, and his head was shot forward. "It's full of bills, full of bills, Hendron; hundred-dollar bills, thousand-dollar bills, ten-thousand-dollar bills—stacked with them, bales of them, bundles of them—millions, Hendron, millions! That's the price I'm offering you for my life."

Hendron and Tony looked at this man in whose hands the destiny of colossal American industries had once been so firmly held; and they knew that he was mad.

They sent Borgan away with his pilot and his plane full of money; and the last words of the financier were pronounced in a voice intended to be threatening as he leaned out of the cabin door: "I'll get an injunction against you from the Supreme court, behind me within twenty-four hours."

Nearly three weeks after the attack a census was retaken. There were two hundred and nine uninjured women, one hundred and eighty-two uninjured men. There were about eighty men and women who were expected wholly to recover. There were more than a hundred who would suffer some disability. Four hundred and ninety-three people had been killed or had died after the conflict.

Work of course was redistributed. More than five months lay ahead of them. The Space Ship could be completed, even with this reduced group, in three weeks.

On one of the unseasonably warm afternoons in December, Tony received what he considered afterward the greatest compliment ever paid to him in his life. He was making one of his regular tours of the stockyards when Ransdell overtook him. In all their recent encounters Ransdell had not spoken a hundred words to Tony; but now said almost gruffly, "I'd like to speak to you."

Tony turned and smiled. The South African hesitated, and almost blushed. "I'm not talkative," he said bluntly, "but I've been trying to find

Height of Angels

The customs authorities of one of the central European states have been engaged in a very interesting controversy. A sculptor entering their country objected to paying duty on a statue of an angel, which, he said, he had no intention of selling. Under the rules, he was told, works of art of this type were only exempt if they weighed over ten pounds and were at least life-size.

But what, in the case of an angel, was life-size? The statue was five feet high, but the customs officials were quite sure an angel was taller than that. So, in spite of his protests, the sculptor had to pay.

He really can't grumble, because the best authorities seem to agree that, while angels can change their height and general appearance at will, they are normally considerably over five feet.

This feature not only from Milton's "Paradise Lost," but also from details given by the learned men of the Jews. According to them some angels, at least, are nearly 8,000 miles high, and one of them, Sandalfon, is described as "taller than his fellows by the length of a Journey of 500 years."

(Use what Doctors do)

Why do the bowels usually move regularly and thoroughly, long after a physician has given you treatment for constipation?

Because the doctor gives a liquid laxative that can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Ask your doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Your druggist has it; ask for—

SOCIAL SECURITY PLAN

(Dallas Morning News)

The scheme of social legislation submitted to Congress by President Roosevelt is the recommendation of four members of the Cabinet, along with Federal relief Administration. These recommendations are derived from reports made by experts in social service and social legislation. They embody the best thought of the day, after comparative studies of the social legislation of other countries and of the American States.

The fundamental idea in the recommendations respecting unemployment is that, as a permanent policy, there should be a wage fund, held in the Federal Treasury, to which contributions would be made by the employer, the State, and possibly by the employee. From this fund the capable unemployed would draw wages for a certain period, after which they would be certified as entitled to work on some public works project. Similarly, for the aged would be developed an old-age insurance system, resulting in small annuities at the age of 65 years. Aid for homeless and needy children is advised, after children's aid laws in the States have been unified in harmony with Federal required standards. A plan for health insurance is also contemplated whenever advisory health groups make their recommendations—presumably by March 1, this year.

These recommended permanent provisions are to be supplemented by temporary methods of aid until permanent systems are well under way. The burden of this aid, lasting for years, will fall fundamentally on the States, supplemented by Federal grants and appropriations for public works. States will be requested to pass legislation in harmony with expected congressional acts, and to pass heavy appropriations so as to meet the needs of the present situation.

The theory underlying the President's proposed plan for social security is excellent. In the long run, the United States must develop a program that will make permanent provisions for unemployment, old age, health and child welfare. In practice the President will find great obstacles in the way of accomplishment. After all, the Federal Government is one of enumerated powers, with their logical implications. The States have the residue of powers and use these at their discretion. The Federal Government may request and may try to induce the States to take part in its plans for social security but it can not order nor coerce, the Supreme Court serving as umpire to decide on the respective jurisdictions of Federal and State Governments. Persuasion and pressure may induce compliance but, after all, States that refuse to cooperate can not be compelled to legislate against their will.

The Nation as a whole will heartily endorse the President's idealism in his social proposals. But State legislatures may not all see eye to eye with the President, if added taxes prove to be necessary. Industrial leaders will protest at levies on wage funds and at additional taxation to meet the expense of the proposed social legislation. Rural workers and the great mass of the unemployable will wonder what there is in the new system for them. The aged will groan at the meager allowances of the proposed legislation, by comparison with the Utopian promises of Dr. Townsend.

Great Britain, after thirty years of experimentation is now trying to improve its social legislation. It is not unlikely that the United States in 1970, will still be trying to secure for its people "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" through "general welfare" legislation.

Well we have had some winter at last, mercury dropping to the lowest during the winter, registering at 9 above zero Monday morning at The Success Office, others report it some lower.

According to C. Snell, County Agent, our farmers are doing some tearrraring and getting ready to conserve the moisture during 1935.

Gov. Allred has revoked a few pardons that Gov. Ferguson granted during her rush at the close of the administration, some being granted to wrong persons.

Senator Morris Sheppard and Charles South have declared themselves to be in favor of the old age pension.

We understand that President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner are in accord as to who will side Roosevelt in the next election, if Garner is to be the man it suits the President.

It has been rumored around town that Jimmie West is still playing football, he says Palmer starts the game and make him finish it, anyway as we travel through life some guy is always ready to learn us new tricks.

JOINT SIGNATURES NECESSARY IN INCOME TAX REPORTS

The attention of all persons required to file income tax returns covering the year 1934 is respectfully directed to the following:

The Revenue Act of 1934 requires that all joint returns must be signed by both husband and wife. Either may prepare and acknowledge the return, but the signature of each must be affixed. Those persons desiring to make out their returns in the collector's office or at designated places in the various portions of the district should be accompanied by their respective husbands or wives. If this be impracticable, either may render the return under oath, and take to the other for his or her signature. The return, however, must be prepared and mailed in time to reach the collector's office on or before midnight of March 15, 1935.

Especial emphasis is given to the fact that the new Form 1030 (the pink slip) must be executed and submitted together with the income tax return. Failure to do this, in each case, will result in an arbitrary charge of $5.00, which amount will be added to the amount due and will be collected in the same manner as the tax. It is highly important that this new requirement be not overlooked, since the collector will be powerless to waive payment of this charge in case of failure to file said Form 1030.

Taxpayers should file their returns at the earliest moment possible so as to obtain better service and avoid the rush conditions usually prevailing during the last few days of the filing period.

W. A. Thomas, Collector.

MRS. HUBBELL TO CELEBRATE 85TH BIRTHDAY

Present day ideas of dress, the rearing of children, and speed are a little puzzling, not to say worrying, to Mrs. L. T. Hubbell who will celebrate her eighty-fifth birthday anniversary Tuesday. She lives with her daughter, Mrs. George Cauble, Sr., and her granddaughter, Mrs. Paul Medley, at the Medley home, 9 East Seventeenth Street.

Informal open house will be held all day Tuesday so that friends may visit with the honoree.

Mrs. Hubbell was born at White Rock, near Dallas, close enough to the city, she explained, so that her parents drove in to go to church. At the age of one year, she moved with them to San Antonio, living there until after she was married.

First On South Concho

The young married couple and their two children moved to the South Concho, near Christoval, the youths going to the DeLong School, "near where the town of Christoval is now," she said.

"We used to come to San Angelo to do our trading. It was a long drive. We drove a team of grays to a wagon and left by daylight in the morning. When we got the trading done and got back home, it was dark."

At the time of the Ben Ficklin flood, Mr. and Mrs. Hubbell were moving to San Angelo and had to camp on the far bank of Kickapoo Creek because it was up at the same time. After moving to town, Mrs. Hubbell had a boarding house on East Twelfth where the home of Mrs. Fred Schmidt now stands.

The two children of the couple, Eddie Hubbell, who is employed with the Andrew Saddle Shop, and Mrs. Cauble are both residents of San Angelo. Mrs. George Cauble, Jr., and Mrs. Paul Medley are granddaughters, and there are five great-grandchildren, Gwendolyn Medley Juanita and Frank Edward Bennett and George and Dick Cauble.

Mrs. Hubbell enjoys seeing her friends and visiting with them and regrets that calling is a lost art in these swiftly flying, busy days.

WAYS TO IMPROVE

OUR SCHOOL

Editorial

Although we have what is considered a good school there are many ways in which we might improve it.

For one thing take the campus: All of the rubbish, charred cinders, and our campus converted into one of which we would be proud. Trees, hedges and grass could be set out. All of the old swings and apparatuses, that have caused so many accidents in the past few years, should either be taken away or replaced by new ones.

I think with these and a few other equipment our school will be improved considerably.

The Owl

Outside my window in the morn
His song I always heard,
No greater songster ever sang
Like that one mocking bird.

He and his mate were happy then
And in the old elm tree,
They built their nest with ne'er a thought,
Of cheer and joy so free.

The four small eggs up in the nest,
Soon hatched and flew away,
When all the other birds had gone.

"Now I'm the Picture of Health," Says Lady After Taking CARDUI

Here is how Cardui helped an Alabama lady. . . . "I suffered from pains in my back and sides," writes Mrs. A. G. Gray, of Cusseta, Ala. "I was so thin and weak, I read of Cardui and decided to take it. I noticed at once it was helping me. I kept taking Cardui until I had finished five bottles. I gained. My health was much better. Now I am the picture of health. My color is good and my weight increased." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

These two had come to stay.

I loved to hear him sing his song,
It made my heart so light.
His love-song echoed through the hills,
From morning until night.

There came a hunter young and cruel;
And when the birds he spied;
A puff of smoke; a hum of lead;
He shot her from his side

And never more I heard his song,
Since when that cruel thief,
Stole from his side, his love and mate
And filled his heart with grief.

For two more weeks he hung around,
But never did he sing!
He seemed to think that God would see
And send her back again.

The winters days were raging cold
The trees were cold and bare.
But when you looked among their limbs,
You always saw him there.

One day the wind was biting cold;
Our evening chores were done.
He flew away toward the west;
Toward the setting sun.

Winter's passed and summer's here
And how my heart does yearn.
To hear him sing, but all in vain:
He never will return.

—Eagles' Screams— JANUARY

By Jack Hext

January seems to be a month of mishap for E. H. S. For one thing midterm exams are had in January.

The most important thing that knock Jan. is the birth of that month.

—Eagles' Screams— FINAL EXAMS

Whoopee! The mid-term exams are over. That is what all of the students in High School are saying, but when some one mentions Final Exams, their jaws drop and not a word is spoken. Now that the mid-term exams are over, the students will have time to take one or two more deep breaths before the finals. Then before anyone realizes that the school days go so fast the final will be upon the students.

What does Final Exam mean? It means a great deal to everyone in school. It gives every student a last chance to make up his work, and that chance means one-sixth of the final grade and one-third of the second semester's grade. So when they do get here, let every student do his best, for just think what they mean to you.

Ransom Notes May Be Death Warrant

These ransom notes may prove the death warrant of Bruno Hauptmann, accused of the murder of Baby Charles Lindbergh. In the upper left-hand corner is one of the initial demands made on Colonel Lindbergh. In upper center is shown the first note to "Jafste," while in the upper right is the note telling how the money was to be tied up. The lower left shows the note telling where to leave the money, and at the right is the false note declaring the baby was still alive.

EXPERTS ANALYZE KIDNAPER'S NOTES

Compare Handwriting With That of Hauptmann

By W. C. WEBBER

LEMINGTON, N. J.—Such seemingly innocent trivialities as failure to dot an "i" or cross an "t," the slant of a letter, or hyphenation, may prove a deciding factor in sending a man to the electric chair convicted of the crime of murdering little Charles Lindbergh, son of the famous aviator. Those tiny, individual characteristics, which handwriting experts assure are ineradicable in each person's writing, are being fought over point by point, curve by curve, as the state introduces what some observers claim is strong evidence that Bruno Richard Hauptmann, Bronx carpenter, was author of the notes which resulted in payment of the $50,000 ransom money by Dr. J. F. Gafstig, Condon.

Huge photostatic enlargements of certain words and letters, from the ransom letters, and from Hauptmann's admitted writings have been hung in the courtroom for the information of the jury. The sheets, each 6 feet in height and 4 feet in width have been tacked to the wall behind the witness chair where the kidnaping leader had refused earlier in the trial. The admitted writings and the disputed writings are shown in parallel columns marked "Hauptmann's writing" and "ransom notes."

Albert S. Osborn, seventy-six years old and silver-haired, testified in a clear, resonant voice that it was his opinion the ransom notes were all written by the writer of the ransom papers seized by Richard Hauptmann, and that all four of the ransom notes were written by the same writer.

Osborn was positive in his statement that Hauptmann penned the notes. The expert proved a good witness, despite his deafness which forced attorneys to speak very loudly when addressing him. He identified himself as an expert in 39 states and in Canada and England, and is the author of two books on the subject of handwriting. In several verbal exchanges with defense attorneys he proved himself more than a match.

In explaining his comparison, Osborn gave an exposition on the general basis for comparison of handwritings. Characteristics in handwriting, he said, are the same as the characteristics of any thing else. There are many things by which handwriting might be identified exactly as a woman, an automobile or a horse is identified by general description, and then by individual marks and scars and by characteristics which in combination make it apparent that they are not the result of accident, he continued.

When pupils learn the same system of writing, if they learn to write perfectly, the writing cannot be distinguished from another, but that does not occur, Osborn pointed out. Writing, he said, being as an acquired qualification, it is an acquired habit, first imitating the forms, and then the forms become more easily made, until finally writing becomes succession of habitual motions. Certain identical, habitual motions were to be seen in both the writing on the ransom notes and the accepted writing done by Hauptmann, Osborn declared.

Osborn pointed out to the jury was hyphen used between the two words in "New York." A specimen taken from the writing that was on the sleeping suit wrapper was pointed out as having this characteristic. A photostatic copy of Hauptmann's writing on one of the automobile registrations was then shown by Osborn to have this same name hyphenated.

Other words pointed out by the expert as showing examples of broken English and German spellings in both sets of writings were: "auer" for "our," "aus" for "us," "wy" for "why," "note" for "not," "gute" for "good," "ingore" for "ignore," "singature" for "signature" and "hte" for "the."

The expert testified that he had examined about a hundred samples of hand writing which had been brought to him by New Jersey police and federal agents. Among these, he said, were samples of writing by Isadore Fisch, German furrier, who, the state contends, was actually the abductor of the baby. Fisch died later in Germany.

Fisch continues to loom in the background as the defense's chief reliance. In suggesting that Fisch wrote the ransom notes, a spokesman for the prosecution declares that this line of defense will not avail, since it does not take the eye of an expert to see the utter dissimilarity between the neat, flourishing penmanship of Fisch and the scrawl of the ransom notes. It is understood from those who have samples of Fisch's handwriting in their possession that his hand was that of a man who took pride in his penmanship, forming his letters neatly and correctly and dotting all I's and crossing all T's.

The defense has maintained that Fisch is the actual receiver of the ransom money, that it was he who kidnaped the child, and Hauptmann was his wholly unconscious dupe. Hauptmann has declared that he was associated with Fisch in the fur trade, and that he loaned Fisch $7,500 and that Fisch left with him a package which only a few weeks before his arrest, Hauptmann discovered to be the ransom money, the bulk of which was found in his garage. The state holds it can prove that ransom notes were circulated by him many months earlier than last summer, or even last spring.

Relly attempted to show that too few handwriting exhibits had been brought into the courtroom, then opened up a line of questioning designed to force Osborn to admit that a Scandinavian could have written the ransom notes. The expert said there was an essential difference between German and Scandinavian script.

Some connection was seen between this line of questioning and that of Relly when Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, was on the stand, with reference to "Red" Johnson, Norwegian sailor, whom she admitted having told of activities of the Lindbergh household on the day the kidnaping occurred.

Another handwriting expert whose testimony has been unshaken under questioning of Relly is Elbridge W. Stein, who said he had testified in the recent Vanderbilt case in New York as well as the Wendel and Ridley cases. Stein said he had first studied the ransom notes and request writings of Hauptmann in July, 1932, and declared it was his opinion that the same man, Hauptmann, wrote both. He admitted there were differences, but insisted that there were similarities between the spelling in the two sets of writing. Charts and photographs of words taken from the ransom notes and the other writings done by Hauptmann were produced by Stein in support of his statements.

As the hearing progresses, Hauptmann appears to have lost much of the calmness which marked his first appearance in court. The stolidity of the ex-carpenter which was so remarkable when he was identified by both Colonel Lindbergh and Dr. J. F. Condon is not so apparent. Emotions show in his face, although even close watchers admit there has been no sign of fear or alarm among them. Occasionally he talks to his wife in a low voice.

The accused continues to follow each word of the trial with deep interest. He appeared especially interested in the handwriting testimony, craning his neck to see as the expert pointed out on the large chart the similarities between his own and the ransom writing. Colonel Lindbergh, who has been attending all the court sessions, was also absorbed as the experts gave their testimony.

Just the Thing for Little Lady

It's no wonder this young lady looks puzzled—she probably doesn't know whether to stand the way she is and let us see the front of her snug wool bloomer dress, with its unusual closing and its inset of pleats for spirited striding, or to turn around so that we may admire that important "back interest" produced by the long smartly stitched pleat. Clever mothers will make up a plentiful supply of those trim little white collars and cuffs, for they know that nothing looks prettier on bright wool dresses. The bloomers, and long sleeves for those who prefer them, come with the pattern.

Pattern 2065 is available in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 6 takes 2 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric and 3/4-yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

FINE RECORD OF ACHIEVEMENT BY 1934 EXPLORERS

The maze of water passages and adjoining islands in Tierra del Fuego, near the southern tip of South America, was explored in 1934, in a 26-foot boat by Amos Burg, on an expedition sent out by the National Geographic society. Burg also rounded Cape Horn in his small craft.

An expedition of the California Institute of Technology rediscovered a chasm in a mountainous section of Chihuahua, Mexico, comparable in size and grandeur to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. It was known only to Indians and a few miners.

The 17,000-foot twin peaks of Mount Foraker in McKinley national park, Alaska, were scaled for the first time August 6 by Charles Houston, T. Graham Brown, and Chychele Waterston.

Mount Crillon, previously unexplored peak near the Alaskan coast, 100 miles northwest of Juneau, was climbed on July 21 by Bradford Washburn and his Harvard-Dartmouth expedition. The mountain is 12,727 feet high.

In March, Polish explorers, led by M. K. Markiewicz-Jodko, found a new route to the top of 23,938-foot Aconcagua in the Andes, highest mountain in the western hemisphere.

In the Himalayas, F. E. Shipton and companions made the first exploration by westerners of the slopes of Nanda Devi, marking out possible routes for a future attack on the peak itself.

One of the most spectacular arches-logical discoveries of the year came in March when two French aviators, Capt. Edouard Cornillon-Molinier and Andre Malraux, flew into the interior of Arabia northeast of Yemen and sighted and photographed from the air the ruins of a great city previously unknown to the West.

The remains of seven Mayan cities, one surrounded by a moat, were discovered in northern Guatemala by expeditions of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

Uncommon Sense By John Blake

© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

If there were no guesses there would be no lotteries. If there were no lotteries, some millions of people would not lose the money they put up when they take chances which are so small as to be practically negligible.

When Isaac Newton noticed an apple fall in his father's orchard he did not content himself guessing why it fell down instead of up.

He had at the time no information on that subject.

Probably he asked elder people so many questions about it that they shuddered when they saw him approaching.

No grown-up person likes to be asked questions when he doesn't know the answer.

But the Newton boy refused to be satisfied with the explanations that were given to him.

He thought over that problem till at last he concluded that there was some force which controlled the apple's movements.

Today that force, which no man or woman had understood before, is being used to do about three-quarters of the really hard physical work that is being performed on this planet, as well as controlling the movement of the planet itself.

Don't guess. Know. Know all that there is to be known.

Ours may not be any more interesting, or so greatly interesting as some of the other planets, but it is the only one upon which this race of ours will ever dwell.

Our job is to find out more about it as we study it.

Don't be contented merely with looking at trees and flowers.

Find out as much about them as you can.

Already, thanks to Newton, you know why water flows down instead of up. Build on that.

Questions and answers comprise learning. And if you do not constantly learn you will be of as little value to your fellow duellers on the earth as is the snow you sweep from the streets after a storm.

Less value, indeed for the snow melts and waters the plants, or joins rivers that turn mill wheels and produce power.

Nothing brings such self satisfaction as to know that you are doing something, building something, bringing into the world some useful thing that has never been known before.

If we could get rid of the loafers and guessers and idlers in the world we would get rid of hatreds and wars.

That will take a lot of energy and team work, but eventually it will be accomplished.

I know that it is a common practice in this country to belittle politics and politicians.

Don't Sneer at Politics

But politics and politicians control the country.

They always will control the country.

And, as some early philosopher said: "If you can't like 'em, jine 'em."

For a great many years I was a political reporter, in Oregon, in New York and in Washington.

I met many crooked designing politicians.

But they were not, I am happy to say, in the majority.

I knew many honest, earnest men who were trying their best to better such conditions as could be bettered.

They had been doing that throughout their lives.

They had discovered that in a country where the ballot is free what is called politics is the only force which can change things for the better—or for the worse, for that matter.

For a long time I supposed that every member of the political faction which controlled the great city in which I live was a crook or a dolt.

Since then I have learned that many of the leaders are really honest men, who would not take graft under any circumstances, and who are really trying to get bad men out of office and good ones in.

If you will turn back the pages of history you will discover that some of the country's most revered men and women have been politicians.

Lincoln was one. Franklin was another.

Human nature began as human nature, and, as far as I can discover, is likely to remain so.

But not every man is office hungry because he wants a fat salary or because he thinks that his personal business will be helped if he joins some particular party.

Many of them are sincere and honest.

They want to do something to make their country better. They want to improve the morals and heighten the ambitions of the men and women around them.

They want to make of their country a better place for their children to grow up in.

Outbreaks such as have occurred in the last few years by gangsters and racketeers had their start in the transfer of a great power into the hands of evil and rascally men.

Now that this power is put back where it belongs, these rogues will soon lose their money, and their power for evil will be lost along with it.

RUG WELL NAMED "BED OF ROSES"

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The original rug shown measures 44 inches and requires four pounds of rags to complete. It is braided with three strands, but can be crocheted. A crocheted rug has better wearing properties. Many colors are used in the following combinations: Center circle in white, yellow, red, and black. Three of the outer circles in various rust shades. The other three circles in two shades of blue, and yellow. Outer edge is rose, yellow, black.

This rug shows that beautiful rugs can be made of rags. The regulation or common rag rug is either round or oval, with various color combinations, and when finished has no particular beauty. In making the above "Bed of Roses" rug, make seven small round rugs about twelve inches in diameter, and set together as shown here, then work rows all around to size wanted. It's a different rug and only another idea of what can be made of rags.

The best material for making rag rugs is "Linkraft." When using this new material no cutting or matching of sizes is necessary. Linkraft is a round knitted material like jersey. It comes in links about five inches long, but stretches to about nine inches when linking together. These links are to be linked together in solid colors or mixed as desired. Linkraft is very durable, does not fray like rag strips and Linkraft rugs weigh about 20% less than rag rugs.

If you are interested in making rag rugs, send for Grandmother Clark's Book No. 25 on Crocheted and Braided Rugs. Twenty-six rugs are illustrated, with instructions. A wonderful selection to pick from when having a good-looking rug in mind.

ADS. WILL TELL BANKERS' STORY

American Bankers Association President Announces Move to Stimulate Newspaper Advertising

NEW YORK.—Plans for stimulating wider use of informative newspaper advertising by banks in promoting public understanding and confidence in regard to existing banking conditions and methods have been announced by R. S. Hecht, President of the American Bankers Association, as a part of his organization's activities in aid of business recovery.

A general groundwork was prepared through a nationwide survey of advertising by banks relative to their willingness to extend justifiable loans to industry and trade. This, he said, revealed that a large number in all parts of the country are pursuing aggressive policies along this line and encouraging their customers to develop forward-looking business plans. "It is our aim to aid in fostering this constructive attitude wherever possible," he said.

The Theme of New Advertising
The association's Advertising Department, under the direct supervision of the general executive officers, has prepared, at the headquarters in New York City, an informative advertising series for the use of member banks in the association to aid them in developing in their own communities better general public understanding regarding banking, Mr. Hecht said.

"The underlying theme of this advertising is that sound banking is based on helpful human relations and that it has a unity of interest with the people of its community which binds them together with a common purpose," he said.
"We are confident that if a clear understanding of this is brought home to the people in all our banking communities, it will go far in restoring the public confidence which good banking deserves. A bank in which people deservedly believe is doubly safe. It is to the public interest for the people to have confidence in their banks."

The Place of Advertising
"We feel that bank advertising has a special public duty to perform in this connection under existing conditions. The copy which will be supplied in the service we have developed will not only aid the individual bank in promoting the use of its own facilities but is also aimed to bring about with the aid of newspaper advertising a clearer public viewpoint regarding the essential part it occupies in the life of its community."

Mr. Hecht emphasized in regard to the new advertising facilities being offered to the members of the association that they are not a profit making venture and that there is no intention to disturb existing advertising arrangements, the idea being that these institutional services shall supplement rather than replace present plans, or that they will give assistance to member banks now lacking satisfactory arrangements.

MANY BANKS LONG LIVED

In the United States—
168 Banks over 100 years old.
2,472 Banks over 50 years old.
10,391 Banks over 25 years old.

There are in the United States 168 banks that have been in continuous existence for more than one hundred years. There are 2,472 banks over fifty years old, while 64% of all the banks in this country, or 10,391, are twenty-five years old or older.

In other words, practically two-thirds of the banks in this country have come through several successive periods of depression and panic, including 1907, 1914, 1920 and 1929-33.

The Oldest Bank
The oldest bank in the country, which is in Boston, was chartered February 17, 1784.

In the 64% of banks that are twenty-five years old or older is lodged a major portion of the banking resources of the nation. In commenting recently upon the stability of a great majority of the banks in the United States, Dr. Harold Stonier, Educational Director of the American Bankers Association, said:

"The fact that we have so many banks that have been in existence a long period of years is an eloquent tribute to the genius of American managerial ability, for no other country has experienced such wild gambling eras and resultant periods of business stagnation as those through which our country has passed at frequent intervals during the past century."

NEW WEALTH FROM SOIL

New wealth which comes from the soil is of special interest to those to whom falls the responsibility of maintaining our credit structure.

Unless agriculture is successful farm borrowers cannot ultimately succeed, neither can the banks that serve. For closure sales are not a sound basis for good farming or good banking. Bankers, therefore, are as much interested in the permanent success of the agricultural industry as are the farmers, whether the deposits come directly from farm patrons, or indirectly through the ordinary channels of business.—D. H. Otis, Director of Agriculture, American Bankers Association.

Theater Calendar

Mary Carlisle, Phillip Holmes and Edward Arnold come to the Palace Theater today and tomorrow in Damon Runyan's "Million Dollar Ransom" story. This picture holds thrills and laughs galore for the local fandom.

"Sadie McKee", the picture which ranks third nationally among the motion picture productions of 1934 will begin a three day run Sunday. Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone are co-starred in this Metro Goldwyn Mayer Vehicle.

Beginning next week, watch the Theater Calendar in the Success for the Palace programs.

Centennial Club Being Pushed

Dallas, Texas, Jan. 24. (Special Centennial chairmen of the various counties of the State are publishing vigorously the campaign for members for the Texas Million Centennial Club, sponsored by the Texas Centennial Commission with the view that the responsibility for the Statewide program for the Texas Centennial celebrations in 1936 and for the carrying out of the mandate of the people, when a general election ordered the Centennial commemoration with State aid therefor, rests on everyone who calls himself a Texan. There are no membership fees and no financial obligations entailed for the individual.

The purposes of the Club are: To show that practically the entire citizenry of the State is backing the Centennial; To secure for each County a working organization that will support the Advisory Board and the Commission in whatever it may undertake to do in the State or locally to advance Centennial interests; To have a mailing list for sending out Centennial literature; To ascertain the native State of each member of the club; To secure National and worldwide publicity that will follow the organization of such a large supporting club; To aid in influencing legislation and securing other necessary support for the Centennial.

NATIONAL SAVINGS MARK INCREASES

NEW YORK.—The annual savings compilation of the American Bankers Association for the year ending June 30, 1934, shows that for the first time since 1930 total savings in all American banks recorded an annual increase.

A statement by W. Espey Albig, Deputy Manager of the association in charge of its Savings Division, in the organization's monthly magazine "Banking," says that savings deposited in banks as of June 30, 1934, gained 2.5 per cent as compared with a year earlier.

"The aggregate is an increase over last year of $742,132,000, the first since the year which closed June 30, 1930," he says. "This is a notable achievement, for the decline since 1930 had been precipitate and all-embracing. In that year savings had reached the all-time high of $28,478,631,000. A year ago the amount was $21,125,534,000, a loss in three years of $7,353,097,000. This year the figure stands at $21,867,666,000.

"Depositors, too, have gained in number, going from 39,392,442 on June 30, 1933, to 39,562,174 on June 30 this year, a gain of 299,732. Four years ago there were 52,729,432 depositors, or one depositor for each 2.3 persons in the country. Now there is one account for each 3.2 persons."
