The alfalfa weevil is a pest of alfalfa that becomes active in early spring after having overwintered as adults in the crown of alfalfa plants and in trash left in the field, or, as eggs in the old alfalfa stem.

The adult weevil is a snout beetle about 1/4 inch long, light brown with a dark stripe running about halfway down the back from the head. Older weevils may be much darker in coloration. Eggs are bright lemon yellow when first laid and are deposited in masses in stems.

The newly hatched larvae are approximately 1/20 of an inch long and are cream colored with a shiny black head. Mature larvae are about 3/8 inch long, dark green, and possess a white to yellowish-white stripe down the middle of the back paralleled by two faint white stripes on each side. Pupae are usually attached to the dead leaves of the lower third of the plant and adults emerge from the pupae in one to two weeks.

Generally only one generation of alfalfa weevils are produced each growing season. As the overwintered weevils become active in early spring, females lay eggs in clusters in the stems of the alfalfa. These eggs hatch in one to two weeks in warm weather. The newly hatched larvae feed within the plant tips of opening upper leaves and then the lower foliage, skeletonizing the leaves. They are most numerous from the time plants are about six inches tall until early flower bud stage.

Damage by the alfalfa weevil first appears greenish-gray and the damaged leaves dry rapidly and the field takes on a grayish-white cast. Once a field becomes infested with the weevil, damage usually occurs year after year.

The first cutting should be made when most plants are in the bud stage as clean and close as possible to deprive larvae of food and shelter.

Frequent observations in several locations in a field are necessary to determine if and when insecticides should be applied. An insecticide treatment is usually necessary when 25 to 30% of the terminals show damage or if 25 or more larvae per square foot are found.

The application rate should be from 15-20 gallons of spray per acre where ground equipment is used and at least two gallons per acre when application is made by airplane.

For details on recommended insecticides and harvest intervals after application, you can call the county extension office, 669-7479.

One way of making nutrients available to plants gradually is to apply time release fertilizers.

Time-release fertilizers are plastic coated pills, tablets or other special packages containing essential soil nutrients that dissolve into the soil gradually when moisture penetrates the plastic coating. The warmer and more moist the soil is, the faster the pill disintegrates and releases nutrients.

One advantage time-release fertilizers have over other types of fertilizer is that they are easier to apply to the soil. Since these fertilizers become available over a period of months or even years, fewer applications are required.

In addition, there is less leaching with time-release fertilizers and less chance of root burning.

Time-release fertilizers are used mostly on potted plants and to a lesser extent with trees and shrubs.

Grass Seedings Improve Forage Production

Grass seedings have greatly improved forage production on many ranches in Gray County. Pasture plantings of various grasses, such as Lovegrass and Tall Fescue, have not only increased the carrying capacity of many acres but has also provided excellent protection for soils against wind and water erosion. Range seedings on many brush infested lands and other poor condition rangelands have helped to return the land to its optimum natural cover. Range seedings, like pasture plantings, also protect the land from erosion while increasing its carrying capacity.

Pasture plantings can increase the annual carrying capacity of an acre of land from 20 acres per animal unit to as high as 1 acre per animal unit yearly as is the case with irrigated Fescue Pastures. Pasture plantings basically strive to establish a 100% stand of a highly productive quality forage.

Presently the widespread use of time-release fertilizers on field crops would be uneconomical, but they may be used in the future on certain vegetable crops.

We had a real good garden seminar last week. If anyone is needing information about vegetable gardening, I suggest you come by the extension office in the courthouse annex. Several bulletins are available on gardening.

If you are needing vegetable seeds, the Gray county 4-H Club members are selling packets of garden seeds as a fund-raising project.

Although, pasture plantings greatly increase forage production, it is essential that intensive management practices be applied for the stand to survive and continue optimum production. Such practices include fertilizer application, weed control, grazing management, fencing, and in some cases irrigation. Pasture plantings generally require a greater investment per acre as opposed to range seedings, although gross receipts are also generally greater with pasture plantings.

Range seedings basically strive to restore the land to its optimum natural cover. Generally a mixture of grasses native to the particular site are planted and establishment of the stand as a rule is slower than pasture plantings. The advantage of a range seeding over a pasture planting is that it generally does not require intensive management practices to maintain a good stand. Range seedings will generally maintain a strong stand with proper grazing management.

Range seedings and pasture plantings both establish quicker and last longer if planted into a well prepared seedbed. Many ranchers often plant a sorghum or small grain crop on acres to be seeded to help prepare the seedbed, eliminate brush and weeds, and build up a moisture supply in the soil. When a cover crop is planted prior to seeding, it should be close spaced, on the contour, and the stubble should stay on the ground as long as possible to prevent wind and water erosion. Occasionally seedings can be drilled directly (in to) the standing stubble.

Many pasture plantings were established in 1975. Gene Hall established about 300 acres of Lovegrass last spring to complement his grazing program on adjoining rangeland. Bill Graham, and James Johnston also planted a great deal of Lovegrass last spring. Gene Hall was the only landowner known to establish range seedings in Gray County last Spring. Gene got an excellent stand of a native mixture of Sand Bluestem, Indian Grass, Switchgrass and Sideoats

The Soil Conservation Service is available to provide individual assistance in planning grass seedings on your land.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. A.A. Wiginton. The groom is the son of Mrs. J. Boyd Smith.

Rev. Herman Bell officiated for the double ring ceremony.

They stood in front of an altar arrangement of blue stock, white stock, and baby's breath intertwined with emerald greenery. Mrs. Paul Miller at the organ accompanied Mrs. Ida Hess with "Welcome to My World."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of white polyester satin fashioned by the groom's mother. The long full sleeves ended at the wrist with a wide band. The bodice with a scooped neckline was accented at the empire waistline and sleeves with imported lace trim and tiny self covered buttons at the cuffs. Her elbow length, two tiered veil of illusion fell from a headpiece of lace and seeded pearls. She carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations, white palms, and baby's breath with streamers of eggshell satin.

For something old and something borrowed she wore a penny in her shoe. For something new and blue she wore a blue garter.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Ann Long of McLean, was her matron of honor and Claudia Brown, the groom's sister, was bridesmaid. They wore identical floor length dresses of blue polyester crepe back satin. The bodice had short puffed sleeves that ended with a band accented with double organdy trim. They carried nosegays of blue carnations and baby's breath with blue satin streamers.

The flower girls, Crystal Edwards, Eraina Ailen, and Kim Wiginton, all nieces of the bride, wore dresses alike made of cotton polyester batiste with dainty flowers. The high bodice was trimmed with blue velvet belts. They carried white baskets of daisies and baby's breath with

Consider Their Latter End'

Very early in His dealing with Israel God had to show them that faithlessness on their part will break the covenant with Him and bring about their destruction. The rule was: "be faithful to Me and enjoy good; unfaithful to Me and suffer evil." In the context of this principle, Moses wrote, "Oh, that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!" (Deut. 29)

Exactly what He had told them! After 1500 years intermittently serving God, in A.D. 70 the nation of Israel as established by God was utterly destroyed by the mighty Roman army, never to be again! (Deut. 28, Daniel 9:24-27, Matt. 24:35, Luke 21:20-28).

Most of the time we never stop to ask where the road we are about to embark upon will lead us. There is usually the optimism that we can change it if things get worse or even bad. This is not always true. We can be "overtaken" in a sin, submerged, overwhelmed. (Galatians 6:1)

It takes a wise person to "consider their latter end". Hindsight is far easier to come by than foresight. And most of us will not profit from the mistakes of others but seek to experience it for ourselves.

The first drink of alcohol may be a road that will lead to a bitter "latter end". The first cigarette may be the one that addicts you to them for life. The first "puff" taken from a "friend's" ??? marijuana cigarette might very well lead you to a living hell here on earth as a dope addict. The very first roll of the dice might infect you with the fever of gambling.

The girl or boy whom you date for the very first time, with no serious thought, could be the mate you will spend your married life with.

Friends with whom you spend time that have no regard for things holy can influence you in their reaction. "Evil communication (or companionship) corrupt good manners (or morals)" (1 Cor. 15:33). A job that requires time that should be given to the Lord may totally envelop our life and shut out spiritual interests completely.

How wise we would be if we could stop and ask on any major decision, "Where will this lead?" Will the 'latter end' bring me closer to Christ, or further away from Him?"

How is YOUR spiritual condition right now? Are you truly "considering the latter end?"

Bloomfield got three runs back in its half of the sixth. Neal Hugg's double, an error, Bloomfield entered the seventh in control of a two-run lead again, with the victory seemingly within easy reach.
