Serving McLean and the Area Since 1903

Volume 79 McLean, Gray County, Texas 79057 Thursday, November 4, 1982 Price 25¢ Number 44

Last week I spent several days sitting in the waiting room of the intensive care unit of a large hospital in Amarillo. Thankfully, our visit was a pleasant one, because our patient, my father-in-law John, recovered from his surgery and is doing fine. But as I sat in that waiting room, I talked and visited with many who had spent days and weeks in the stuffy confines of that plastic room as they waited for a loved one to die.

I couldn't help thinking how different our rituals concerning death are now. The family waits in a cold room, which is filled with plastic-covered furniture and smells of a thousand stale cigarettes, while the patient spends his last minutes on earth in a sterile white room, surrounded by whirring dials, clinking machines, and efficient strangers, dressed in white.

How different that is from my childhood! My first contact with death came when I was in the third grade. My boyfriend Billy came to school one day and solemnly announced that his mother was going to die. For several days, this announcement gave Billy a special place among us, as we allowed him to lead all the games and to have the special privilege of being "it" more than his turn.

But as the days dragged on, and nothing unusual seemed to happen, Billy lost some of his special appeal, and some of us began to wonder what he was really talking about. I remember that my mother took her turn with the other women in our rural community, when she went to Billy's house and "sat up" with his mother. In the Fifties, in a small community like ours, people could not afford nurses, and most people just didn't go to hospitals when there was no hope anyway.

So the women of the community took turns doing housework and cooking for the family. The men helped the husband with some of his routine chores, and we children, when we paused in our playing long enough to notice, wondered exactly what was happening.

But finally the day came when Billy's mother died. He didn't come to school one day, and we were told that she was McLean volunteer firemen fought two major blazes this week. A fire Monday morning about 10:30 a.m. destroyed a mobile home belonging to the Lavon Sanderson family. The trailer and all contents were totally destroyed. A car and a truck parked near the home were also damaged by fire. A mobile home belonging to Thomas Todd, parked next to the destroyed trailer, was also damaged. According to local officials, the family had 50 percent insurance on the mobile home, but no insurance on their contents. The family lost all their clothing and personal possessions in the fire. Anyone who is interested in helping the family may bring clothes or donations to the First United Methodist Church, according to the Rev. Billy Wilson. Mr. Sanderson wears a size 17 (neck) shirt, and 38 waist trousers; Mrs. Sanderson wears a size 5; their daughter wears a child's size 2.

The McLean firemen also fought a grass fire on the Johnson Ranch Friday afternoon from about 12:30 until 6 p.m. The blaze destroyed about 1,000 acres of grassland, according to fire chief Jim McDonald.

Sheriff Investigates Dog Poisonings

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan was in McLean Tuesday to help launch an investigation into the reports of several dog poisonings in McLean within the last three weeks.

"Our office has received reports of at least three poisonings," Jordan said, "and we understand that other dogs have been killed in the same area of town."

Jordan said that autopsies performed on two of the animals led authorities to suspect the use of strychnine, a controlled substance which can no longer be purchased on the open market, or another convulsive-type of poison.

According to Jordan, the Texas criminal code states that killing, injuring, or administering poison to an animal belonging to someone else is a Class A misdemeanor. "If a person is caught and convicted of such a crime, he is subject to a fine not to exceed $2,000 and or confinement in jail for up to one year," Jordan said.

"We consider this a serious matter, because the substance is so dangerous. If this is not stopped, it is possible that a human life could be lost," Jordan said.

McLean veterinarian Dr. David Woods said that the poison is now controlled by the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

"It is illegal to sell or use the substance without specific approval for use," Dr. Woods said. He explained that pure strychnine is not for sale except to manufacturers who use it to make rodent poison, etc.

"Several years ago, the poison could be easily purchased by anyone," he said. Dr. Woods also said that one reason the poison is so hazardous is that it does not lose its strength.

McLean Businesses Lose Thousands In Series Of Burglaries

The McLean Saddle Company lost $1500 in merchandise and cash in a burglary in the early morning hours Oct. 27 in the latest of a string of incidents that have cost McLean merchants more than $4,000. John Dickson, owner of the saddle company, said the burglars entered his business at 111 McCarty Street through a rear window, and carried off new spurs, belt buckles, and chaps. "They even took used boots that I had repaired for other people, so not only did I lose my work in the boots, I had to pay my customers for their boots," he said.

Dickson said that the merchandise was not insured. "Most McLean residents are not aware that the businesses in town do not have insurance which covers stolen items," he said. Local insurance agent Jane Simpson said that companies she has contacted will not issue theft insurance on mercantile businesses unless the business has a burglar alarm, and other security devices.

"I've called several companies trying to find one that will insure businesses, but I haven't found one," she said.

The burglary last week is just the last in a string of incidents in the past month which have hurt merchants on Interstate 40 through McLean. Danny Lee at L&P Chevron has lost a total of 2,053 gallons of gas in the last 28 days. His station has been broken into at least seven times since Sept. 28, he said, and the burglars gained entry to the inside of his station at least once. "We've had a window shot out once, and the lock on the door has been broken. I have no idea how much equipment has been taken from the station," Lee said. "Without insurance, we just can't stand this kind of loss," he said. He said the largest single loss had been 696 gallons. His station is located near Main Street on 1-40.

Lee said that he really appreciated the town's teenagers. "They have called me and notified me several times when they could tell that something was wrong at the station. We've got great kids," he said.

Jack Bonner, the manager of Wil-Mart, located across the interstate from the L&P station, said that his business had lost about 900 gallons. The gas was stolen five or six nights in a row, he said, but the thefts have stopped since locks were installed on the pumps about two weeks ago. He said the vents to the pumps at Wil-Mart were located near the pumps, so that thieves would be very conspicuous if they tried to use those to steal the gas.

Mrs. Thelma Holman at the C&T Shamrock, located next door to the Wil-Mart on I-40, said that her station was broken into Oct. 23. She said that 177 gallons of gas were stolen, plus a television set, candy and cigarettes from the inside of the station. The burglars broke the window on the front door of the business to gain entry. "They made a real mess on the inside of the station," she said. "Glass was scattered from the driveway clear to the back room of the station."

Gray County constable Jim McDonald said that the investigating officers have three sets of suspects. "We need evidence, not just suspicions," McDonald said. He said that other area towns have been having the same trouble with increased burglaries. "Shamrock and Pampa have been having a rash of burglaries for the last four months. We're just now getting it," he said.

Investigating officers suspect that most of the burglaries are occurring between 3 a.m. to 5 a.m. "Someone may have seen something suspicious around those businesses," McDonald said.

"We need the help of the law-abiding citizens in town," McDonald urged anyone who had spotted anything that might be suspicious to notify him. "If we could just get one good lead, we could break this thing open," he said. He emphasized that any information he received would be kept strictly confidential.

"It's our town, and we all have to cooperate to keep it a good place to live," he said.

McDonald urged all business owners to take extra precautions to prevent burglaries. "McLean businessmen should be sure that all doors are properly locked, and valuable portable items should be placed in safes if possible," he said. "Merchants should remember to make daily bank deposits, so that little cash is left in the stores to tempt thieves."

Christmas Bake Off Contest Announced By Chamber

McLean cooks will get an opportunity to display their skills and to win some "McLean Bucks" if they participate in an up-coming Chamber of Commerce event. In an effort to promote Christmas shopping at home, the McLean Chamber will sponsor a Christmas Bakeoff contest, with the winners to receive "McLean Bucks" (money which can be spent with any McLean merchant) of $150 for first place, $100 for second place, and $75 for third place. The competing cooks must send in an entry blank with a copy of the recipe which they will use by Dec. 1. There is no entry fee, and cooks may enter as many recipes as they want. On Dec. 11, the competing cooks will bring their prepared dishes to the McLean Lions Club at 10 a.m. where out-of-town judges will choose the winners. The dish must be a dessert, and will be judged on appearance and taste.

Only those cooks who have mailed in their entry and sent their recipes will be eligible to compete.

At least 30 recipes must be entered, or the contest will be cancelled. The competing recipes will be printed in a booklet, and will be offered for sale by the Chamber on the day of the Bakeoff.

Following the judging, each dessert will be served for $1 per slice to those who attend the Bakeoff.

Cooks who wish to enter, should write their recipe on a 3x5 card. The recipe should include a list of all ingredients, with the amount used, complete instructions for See CONTEST, Page 8

Dangerous Mix

One of the most basic of the founding principles of this country was the separation of church and state. Since the beginning of our government, most citizens have interpreted that to mean that religious leaders should stay out of politics.

Of course, the principle has been violated at times in our history, but I think that the recently completed campaign marks the worst example of the mingling of religion and politics that I have seen in my lifetime. Fundamentalist preachers and Moral Majority leaders spent millions of dollars trying to defeat candidates who did not espouse their pet causes. Sincere, honest, upright Christian people listened to their leaders and cast their votes as they were told.

And that, I think, is dangerous.

To win endorsement of these groups, the candidate does not have to be an upstanding moral Christian himself. He merely has to say that he will use his vote to push the groups various pet projects. Many commercials boosting those candidates seemed to imply that anyone who votes for the opposing candidate is voting against God, morality, the church, motherhood, apple pie...all the "good" things we value.

This type of politicking is demagoguery at its worst. Instead of asking the voters to think through the issues, these leaders are simply using the shabbiest sort of scare techniques.

Free Americans should always be suspicious of someone who tries to force his opinion of politics, whether that person is an employer who demands his workers vote his way, a union leader who threatens his members to vote correctly, or a preacher standing in a pulpit threatening his congregation with hell fire.

If this trend continues, and enough of this group's candidates gain office, this country will see repression and governmental witch hunts which will make the infamous McCarthy era pale in comparison.

"slipping" The whole family spent the day by the bedside of this young woman who was dying with cancer. When the end finally came, the community went into action again.

It seems to me that there were some very formal rituals connected with a death then. Although the body was "prepared" at a funeral home, the casket was brought back to the family's home and placed in the seldom used "front room" or parlor.

The men assumed all the husband's farm chores, and the women cooked and baked enough food to feed the family and all the visitors who flooded the house for the next several days.

I remember going with my parents to pay a call of respect to Billy's father and sister. Mother and Daddy and I walked into the dimly-lit room where the powerful, unfamiliar scent of gardenias almost overpowered me. I remember that the room was dimly lit with candles. I watched as my parents solemnly paused to look at the body, but I decided there had been a mistake. The body in the coffin bore no resemblance to the laughing woman I remembered as Billy's mother.

When we left the musty room through shining french doors, my parents went into the little kitchen where the adults were gathered around an oil-cloth covered table. While they sat drinking coffee and eating cake, I slipped outside with the other children. We ran and screamed through the dark summer night, playing wild games of chase and hide-and-seek in the dark farmyard.

When Mother called me back to the house, she told me that Daddy and I would go home alone, as she and two other women were going to "sit up" with the body. Although I think some of the customs practiced then are definitely antiquated, I do think the community and the family were able to express a warmth and loving concern that is sometimes difficult in our sterile, unemotional environment today. In those days when a member of the community died, the entire group was affected. Life did not go on as usual for a few days, as the women left their own homes to help their friends, and the men rushed through their own chores to help their neighbor.

Today we seem afraid to face the very natural fact of death. We lock our dying friends and family members away and give them over to the care of strangers, even when we know that it is only a matter of time. When a death does occur, we pick up the phone and order flowers, or we write a note, or if it's someone close, we bake a pie, or pay a visit. But we seem to think it is important of life to go on as if nothing had happened.

And maybe that's why we are so terrified of death that it has become the "unclean" subject of the Eighties.

In today's world, most people feel comfortable discussing almost any subject, from strange religions to kinky sex to radical politics. But we shun the discussion of death. We stand mute in front of friends who have lost a family member, unable to find the right words. If a loved one learns that he has an incurable disease, we fidget, and don't mention "it", and "Life must go on."

Life shouldn't go on as usual. We should pause in our hectic pace, and

I'm sorry that we have allowed modern technology and "progress" to rob us of one of the most powerful experiences of life.

Loose Marbles

by Lisa Patman

In a recent article called "Women in Crime," the author expressed surprise that women are capable of criminal activity. "What startles so many," the author wrote, "is that these women are bright and capable...that women, even with increased opportunity, would commit these crimes at all."

The author, who also happens to be of the feminine persuasion, goes on to give examples, such as the woman who drained $95,614 out of a bank where she worked as a teller; the female school board secretary who embezzled $9,233 worth of the board's money, which she obtained by writing checks to substitute teachers and cashing them herself; and the lady executive who made false financial statements to the Securities and Exchange Commission, as well as systematically committing mail fraud.

My question is, why is this female author so startled? Surely she doesn't expect us to believe that she hasn't juggled her own financial statement by writing a large check at the nearest grocery store, and furtively pocketing the excess cash.

Has she never, when pressed by her husband, son or father, replied "$5.98" to the question, "How much did that new dress cost?"

Has she never hidden a new coat for a week, then claimed, "This old thing? I've had it a long, long time."

Has she never made a chocolate cream pie, sneaked a piece before dinner, then been forced to eat the whole thing so that nobody would know she had gone off her diet?

Has she never lied about her age, her weight, or her dress size?

What has this woman been doing all her life? Doesn't she realize that women are born criminals, that crime is in our blood, that we have been at it ever since Eve tried to frame Adam for the apple episode? Whatever the author's problem, it's obvious that she is in need of some good training to be an effective "real" woman. It probably would be a good idea for her to follow me around for a few days to get a good idea of how a great criminal mind works. After all, I just bought a new dress that I've had for ages, which I bought for only $9.99 with cash I got from returnable bottles.

I'll be able to wear it as soon as my weight gets down to what I claim it is, which isn't bad for a 28 or 29 year old woman affectionately known as "Chocolate Breath."

Stick with me, kid, and you'll soon learn that crime does pay.

did you know?

As partners of Southwestern Public Service Company, you, our customers, are invited to an open house at the new coal-fired power plant near Muleshoe, Texas. We hope you'll tour the plant, Tolk Station, November 20 or 21. Tolk is located about 10 miles east of Muleshoe, just south of highway 70. The open house will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 4 p.m. on Saturday, November 20; then continue from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. on Sunday the 21st. As our partners, you have helped SPS make energy decisions which built Tolk Station. Come see it.

Ben Green, Tolk Station Manager, Muleshoe

It won't be hard to find Tolk Station. It can be seen across the plains from miles and miles away. The stack is 400 feet tall, and the structure which houses the boiler for the turbine generator is as high as a 20-story building. The great size is required for equipment large enough to supply the growing demand in our area for electrical power. Tolk can produce enough electricity for 225,000 people.

Dave Cavitt, Manager, Muleshoe

We are proud Tolk Station's Unit No. 1 was completed for less than one-half of the national average cost for coal-fired plants. The 561,000-kilowatt unit began testing in June and began commercial service in August. Unit No. 2, which will be identical to Unit No. 1 at Tolk, is now being built and is scheduled for completion in 1985. Our own generation-plant design engineers help us tremendously in keeping down the cost of the plants. And that helps us keep down the rates you pay for electricity.

Henry Hamilton, Group Manager, Production, Amarillo.

For answers to your questions, call or write your SPS manager.

You and SPS, partners managing electricity, make the difference.

Thunder Moon's Challenge

Max Brand

Anyone who has read the writings of Max Brand, (Frederick Faust) and experienced the intense excitement generated in his books, will no doubt enjoy "Thunder Moon's Challenge," as it certainly fits the mold of Brand's many, many fine western offerings.

Brand, who wrote under twenty different pen names, was the creator of such famous characters as Dr. Kildare, Destry, and others, was one of the most prolific writers of our time, and wrote the equivalent of five hundred and thirty ordinary books.

"Thunder Moon's Challenge" is the story of a young white boy kidnapped by the Cheyennes, who grew up as an Indian, grew into a powerful warrior and leader, and was forced to contend with the jealousy created by his success and the natural disdain for his color, which was magnified by some of the influential people of his tribe.

Follow the exciting exploits as the hero decides to return to the people from whence he came and of whom he knows nothing. Ride with him as he has confrontations with unfriendly tribes and with distrustful whites, and meets the challenge of an unknown future at the end of a long and dangerous trail.

If you enjoy books by authors such as Louis L'Amour, Luke Short, or even Zane Grey, you will certainly enjoy this offering by perhaps the master of them all, Max Brand...It is now available at Lovett Memorial Library.

People Pleasin' Pumpkin
Want to see magic? Then give this a try -- Bake Up a Pumpkin Nut Bread or Pie. Set it out for the family, all steamy and hot...one minute it's there, the next it's not!

It is no secret that pumpkin is a real people pleaser. With its delicate taste and smooth creamy texture, it's a favorite of young and old alike. But great taste isn't the only thing about pumpkin that gives it people appeal. In a survey of 10,000 households nationwide, 81% of the people said they think pumpkin is a good value for the money. Another 70% said they consider pumpkin to be a good source of nutrients. It adds up to an unbeatable combination -- good nutrition with great taste for just pennies a serving. Inspired Pumpkin Tales

Pumpkin is among the most celebrated of farm-grown foods. This fruit-of-the-vine, marketed as a vegetable, is rich with legend and lore. There are mythical mentions of pumpkin in fairy tales, short stories, and rhymes. Pumpkin has also been held in high esteem in many cultures.

In ancient China, for example, the pumpkin was a symbol of success and wealth. Here in the United States, pumpkin played a starring role in the first Thanksgiving celebration and to this day, it remains a main attraction of the traditional banquet.

The Halloween practice of carving Jack-'O'-Lanterns is actually an old English custom. It is said that the eerie light cast off by these hollowed, lighted pumpkins would ward off evil spirits. Made Special the Pumpkin Way

Say "pumpkin" and thoughts usually turn to a golden-crust pie slowly baked to perfection. Yet pie baking is not the only way to send the tantalizing aroma of fresh-baked pumpkin drifting through the house. When it comes to baking, pumpkin is as versatile as it is economical, nutritious and good tasting. Try some pumpkin variety in your food preparation schedule -- pumpkin nut bread, pumpkin brownies, pumpkin cookies, pumpkin cake or cheesecake, pumpkin soup, pumpkin quiche, or pumpkin ice cream parfaits!

In The Kitchen

My favorite recipes are always the ones which take little time to prepare, or let me use up my leftovers, or just feature an unusual combination of canned goods stored in my pantry. The following recipes fit several of those qualifications. If you have not tried some version of the "fried rice" you are missing out on a delicious, easy dish.

FRIED RICE

Lightly scramble three eggs.

Add 1 small finely

diced onion
1/4 finely diced green pepper
1 cup cooked meat bits (shrimp, ham, fish, roast, chicken etc.) - (I like to use canned chicken, because I usually have it on hand)
1/4 cup slightly cooked green beans or English peas
2 c. precooked rice
1/2 c. soy sauce
1/2 cup water
pinch salt.
Simmer just until meat and vegetables are heated through.

MOCK CHOW MEIN
1 lb. ground beef
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped celery
1/2 c. uncooked rice
2 T. soy sauce
1 cup water
1 can bean sprouts
1 large can Chinese Noodles
Brown beef with onion. Add all other ingredients except 1/4 can noodles. Pour into casserole and top with the remaining 1/4 c. noodles. Cover and bake 45 minutes to one hour at 350. (This can be cooked in about 20 minutes in the microwave).

Plastic Performs
TROY, Mich. --Beneath the hoods of new automobiles, weight-saving, high-performance plastics are taking the place of metal parts.

One such plastic called polyphenylene sulfide, made by Phillips Chemical, withstood months of exposure to hot engine oil, brake fluid, transmission oil, engine coolant and gasoline, according to a study reported here at a meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Strong, stable and resistant to heat and corrosion, so-called "engineering" plastics can be molded to precise dimensions.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

from the Texas Energy Extension Service

I have a gas-fired furnace and would like to have some suggestions on maintenance that would help the system operate more efficiently and save energy. L.E., Shiner.

The following is a list of steps for yearly preventative maintenance on gas-fired central systems to be performed before you begin operating the system:

- (1) Clean the air supply fan motor housing and oil the motor at least once a year.
- (2) Remove the fan assembly and clean the squirrel-cage fan blade.
- (3) Check the fan control and limit switch. (If you have doubts about how to handle this, consult a qualified service representative.)
- (4) Check the furnace adjustments. Light the pilot and check the burner air adjustments, paying particular attention to the color of the flame. Adjust the pilot light so that the flame is a sharply defined blue flame. This indicates the proper mixture of gas with primary and secondary air. Proper combustion means your system will operate efficiently.

If your furnace has an integral installed central air conditioner, then these additional steps should be performed:

- (1) On the outdoor unit:
 - (1) Oil the condensing unit fan motor.
 - (2) Clean the condensing coil fins and condenser fan.
 - (3) Check the condensing unit for refrigerant leaks.
 - (4) Check the electrical connections inside the condensing unit to make sure they are tight.
 - (5) Make a visual inspection of the compressor start and run capacitors.
 - (6) On the indoor unit, clean the drip pan and the entering-air side of the evaporator coil.
- Heating systems contractors and repairmen routinely perform this service by appointment. Services are frequently advertised in the paper, on the radio, and on television. Only a homeowner fairly knowledgeable about the mechanics of heating equipment should attempt this complete maintenance check. One of the things a homeowner could do is to check for air leaks in the supply air duct and repair with duct tape.

Powerful Booker Kiowas Scalp Tigers In District 1-1A Clash Friday

TIGER BILLY CORLEY tucks the ball away and heads up field for a short gain during the McLean-Booker game. [Photo by Linda Haynes]

Last week's Harris ratings predicted Booker over McLean by 29. And while that prediction was close with the 25-8 Kiowa victory, it did not predict a scoreless second half for Booker, nor did it take to account a 69-yard touchdown run by Tiger Billy Corley.

Corley, who averaged 9.5 yards in 10 carries, was the leading rusher for the Tigers in Friday night's gridiron contest. Gary Mills, all-state hopeful from Booker, checked out with a 7.7 yard average on 23 carries.

And the ratings didn't foresee a perfectly executed pass, from McLean's Randall Wynn to Robert Swaner, which netted the Tigers an extra two points after Corley's long touchdown run.

The first half of the game was decidedly Booker's, with 15 first downs, and 25 points. Mills ran the first score in from McLean's 25 early in the first quarter to start the Kiowas off at six, and early in the second, Mills stepped in from the one for another touchdown. Devin McQuitty's kick garnered the extra point on that play, bringing Booker to 13.

Late in the third Mills took it in from the fourteen to give the Kiowas a 19-point lead, and with only three seconds left in the half, Mills' pass to Mike Mounsey, from the McLean eight, finished the Booker scoring for the night, with the Kiowas on top 25-0.

But the Tigers gained strength both offensively and defensively during the second half, holding top-ranked Booker to six first downs, and keeping the Kiowas away from scoring territory. A handoff from quarterback Randall Wynn to Corley produced the thrilling 69-yard touchdown run for the Tigers. The Wynn-Swaner pass team snared the extra point conversion for the Tigers, late in the fourth quarter.

"Booker has an excellent offensive ball team," Coach Joe Riley commented. "But fundamentally we had a much improved defense. They never gave up; they hung in there until the end. It's not every day they face somebody like Mills."

"Of course, we still need lots of improvement, and we'll be getting prepared for the game against Follett. Follett is another tough ball team. They execute well, run from a wing-t formation, and have a really varied defense. It's going to be a tough ball game."

McLean will play Follett Friday night, Oct. 29, at 7:30 at Duncan Field in McLean.

Groom Takes Final Game Of Season From McLean

The McLean Junior High School Cubs ended their 1982 football season Oct. 28 with a 36-6 defeat by the Groom Cubs. The game left McLean with a 1-6 record for the year.

Groom and Wheeler will play tonight (Thursday) at Groom for the district championship.

Scoring the touchdown for McLean in last Thursday night's game was Clint Herndon, who took the ball in on a 55-yard run midway through the third quarter.

Commenting on the 1982 season for the Cubs, coach Joe Riley said, "The eighth graders gained a lot of valuable knowledge which will help them next year in high school play; they'll have a different type of ball play there. And the seventh graders got some much needed experience which will carry them through next year's football season. Our eighth graders also learned a lot about leadership, and that's the basis of our program; we feel that good leadership is the mainstay of a good sports program."

Final football play for McLean schools will be next week, with the McLean Tigers' high school game against Wheeler. This week's high school game, which is the last home game of the season, is against Follett Friday.

Avoid Allergy Traps In The Home

Most allergy sufferers will tell you that they're fighting an unseen enemy. It's hiding on bookshelves, drapes, rugs, in the very air they breathe. It's dust, pollen, molds, and spores... sometimes too small for the unaided eye to detect. Children and senior citizens are especially susceptible.

But anyone can develop an allergy to dust and pollen, even if they haven't been affected before.

That's why it's a good idea to eliminate as many allergy traps in the home as possible. What you accumulate through vacuuming and dusting is only the tip of the problem. Open doors and windows provide easy entry for bothersome particles.

One of the best defenses is the installation of a non-electronic high efficiency air cleaner on your home's heating system. When coupled with the proper humidity level controlled by a central humidifier, the air cleaner provides better air everywhere in your home.

Ask a local heating and air conditioning dealer about non-electronic air cleaners and central humidifiers. Or telephone this toll free number 1-800-356-9652.

The following diagram offers important steps to take for controlling allergy traps in your home. Cut it out for yourself, or pass it along to someone you know who is bothered by dust and pollen.

- ① Close fabric free chairs and headboards in the bedrooms. Washable furniture is best.
- ② Clothes dryer should be in enclosed area with outside venting.
- ③ If employers should be enclosed and carpeted. Don't store wool clothes.
- ④ Avoid dust catching mechanisms, bookshelves, and wall decorations.
- ⑤ Install non-electronic, high efficiency air cleaner and central humidifier on furnace.
- ⑥ Eliminate or in a good, efficient kitchen exhaust fan, and wash filter regularly.
- ⑦ Don't carpet bedrooms. Use washable throw rugs.
- ⑧ Use 100 percent synthetic fibers for rug, carpets, and padding.
- ⑨ Clean mop hard surface floors regularly.
- ⑩ Laundry drains in clothes dryer or "hot" will help remove dust.
