Lions Vote to Sponsor Yard Contest

The Lions Club will sponsor a better yards and gardens contest this year according to action taken at Tuesday's luncheon, following a talk by Mrs. W. A. Breining, chairman of the local beautification committee.

Mrs. Breining stated that the ladies' organizations would cooperate and that the News editor would not enter the contest this year, having won first place several times in succession, and no class being contemplated for plantings of that extent. It was suggested that different classes would be made, with a prize to the person making the most improvement on his grounds this year. It was also suggested that the national better yards and gardens contest rules be followed.

It was pointed out that no city beautification plan can be entirely successful unless individual property owners cooperate by beautifying their homes.

A committee consisting of T. A. Landers, E. L. Sitter and W. E. Bogan was appointed to draft rules for the contest and report at the next meeting.

Past International Director Sam M. Braswell, Clarendon editor and zone secretary, and W. H. Patrick, zone president, were present, both gentlemen making talks.

"Lionism," said Chairman Patrick, "has for its object that which cements men together. No community can prosper with two factions. All must pull together for a better community and citizenship."

Other visitors presented by Lion Turner Cryer were: County Attorney Sherman White, Justice of the Peace J. H. Todd, Jr.; County Supt. of Schools W. B. Weathered, all of Pampa; and Bert Hobson of McLean.

Boyd Meador, T. A. Landers and W. W. Boyd were appointed program committee for the zone meeting to be held here in April.

Boyd Meador, chairman of the extension committee, reported a visit by himself, Boss Lion Greene and Creed Bogan last Friday evening in the interest of a Lefors Lions Club, and the members present were asked to meet with Lefors business men Friday night of this week. The following were appointed as transportation committee for the Lefors trip: W. W. Boyd, E. L. Turner, W. K. Wharton, Clifford Allison, M. D. Bentley, Witt Springer, Boyd Meador, T. A. Landers, Creed Bogan and E. L. Sitter.

McLEAN CLUB JOINS COTTON BELT GOLFERS

By Pres. D. A. Davis
McLean golfers are making preparations for an active golf program this year.

The greens have been resanded and well oiled, and quite a few of the boys are showing quite an interest in golf for the coming season.

The annual green belt tournament will be played at Quanah this year on May 20 to 23, according to word received from O. T. Nicholson of Shamrock, who is president of the Green Belt Association; and will be played strictly under U. S. G. A. rules, which means that all members entering must be playing members for at least 90 days.

A good feature of the tournament this year is that Sunday is eliminated from the program, which is indeed gratifying to quite a few green belt members who do not believe in holding tournaments on Sunday.

This means that McLean will have several matches this season and as many matches as possible will be held on some day other than Sunday.

All local members are urged to start playing at once in order to qualify for the green belt tournament.

The greens are now in good condition and all golfers will get quite a pleasure in playing.

The ladies are also urged to start playing, and any new gentlemen golfers who have recently moved to McLean are cordially invited to join the local club.

Mrs. H. E. Franks, Miss Mattie Howard and Leonard Howard visited Childress one day last week.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY by Vance Wynn

All on Account of a Bunch of Keys

WHEN the list of the victims of the Lake Shore railroad wreck near Ashtabula, Ohio, on December 31, 1876, was published the name of John Weyler was near the head of the list.

Many of the bodies were so charred and mutilated that it was impossible to recognize them, and the identification was made through articles of clothing and jewelry found near the dead men and women.

Weyler was an old soldier who had been unable to work for some time because of physical infirmities. His family was poor and the fact that he was unable to help them depressed him very much.

He mourned over the fact that he was a hindrance rather than a help and more than once expressed the wish that his wife and children might be rid of such a burden.

It was known that he intended going on this particular train, although his family were unaware of his destination.

A reputable Rochester physician testified that he had met Weyler on the train that morning.

In addition to this a bunch of keys belonging to the man was found at the scene of the wreck. Mrs. Weyler identified them as having belonged to her husband.

If further proof were needed it was furnished when it was found that one of the keys fitted the front door of his house, another opened a chest in his room and the third one proved to be the key with which he was in the habit of winding the kitchen clock every night.

Naturally a suit for damages was instituted against the railroad.

The funds to do this were furnished by kind friends of the family who felt that the poor woman deserved damages of some kind.

Naturally, also, there was some question regarding the identification of the body.

This, however, gave promise of being a long-drawn-out controversy, and officials of the corporation offered to settle the claim of the widow for $4,000.

Her lawyers advised her to stick out for $5,000 on the ground that the amount was small enough for the loss of a husband.

She followed their advice and this caused the railroad officials to make a second and more thorough investigation.

There was nothing new to be gleaned from the scene of the wreck, so the detectives who were put on the case began to interview anyone who might have been acquainted with Mr. Weyler.

One of these was General Martindale, under whom the old soldier had served during the war.

The officer said that he had not seen Weyler for more than a year, but that the last time he met him the old man had expressed a wish to go into a soldiers' home, where he would no longer be a care upon the members of his family, who were having a hard struggle to exist.

Thereupon General Martindale had given him a letter authorizing his admission into a soldiers' home in Wisconsin.

There was no time limit to the order.

With this as a clue the investigators went to Wisconsin.

They located the home and found therein an old man who answered the description of John Weyler.

He was in a sort of dazed condition, but it was found from the records that he had arrived there on the last day of the year—the very day of the train wreck—and had been admitted into the institution.

When questioned he said he had a wife and children in Rochester.

The man was John Weyler.

The mystery of the keys that fitted the front door, the chest and the clock, were easily explained.

Weyler said he had lost his keys in the street only a few days before, and they must have been picked up by the man who was killed on the train.

He said that he had boarded the train himself, but had left it at Buffalo, and had made the rest of his journey the best he knew how.

Thus was a great mystery cleared up, and in its clearing it was brought out that the wife and the other witnesses had testified in the best of good faith.

They honestly believed that he had been killed in the wreck, and the truth might never have been disclosed if it had not been for the interview with General Martindale and his recollection of the fact that he had given the letter to John Weyler.

Arts and Sciences

According to Jevons, a science teaches us to know and an art to do. Astronomy, for instance, is the foundation of the art of navigation; chemistry is the basis of many useful arts. The arts are distinguished as fine arts and useful arts, the former including painting, sculpture, music, poetry, architecture; the latter (useful arts) including the trades. The sciences have been variously classified. The principal ones are physics, chemistry, astronomy, meteorology, mathematics, geography, geology, ethnology, anthropology, archeology, biology and medicine.

Straight Thinking

By Cleve Well

Texas declared her independence on March 2, 1836. Since this is 1935, within the last 99 years Texas has made a wonderful progress. Ninety-nine years ago Texas embraced a very extensive and valuable territory. A single glance at the map will be sufficient to indicate the great advantages from its local position in point of climate and commercial facilities. The only intercourse carried on ninety-nine years ago was by water, and it would take from three to four days to sail from the coast of Texas to the mouth of the Mississippi river.

When the Republic of Texas was organized ninety-nine years ago, there were not any railroads in the Republic, there were not any airports, there were not any fast moving vehicles, but the transportation was by way of water, ox cart, and occasionally the horseback rider.

Today, Texas is a network of railroads. It has many beautiful airports with air lines crossing the state in every direction. It has many miles of hard surface highways which make transportation an easy matter.

We, as young citizens of this great state, will never be able to fully appreciate and realize the hardships, privations, and obstacles our fathers had to overcome. A two hundred mile distance today is only an afternoon drive, while ninety-nine years ago it would have taken many days to make the two hundred miles.

Since Texas is located so favorably having a varied climate, a varied topography, and elevations ranging from sea level to many thousands of feet, it gives to the landscape of this great state something that no other state can boast of. It may be cold in the Panhandle in June, while it is warm and pleasant on the coast in December.

Ninety-nine years ago, there was little cultivation, little farming; in fact, there was very little carried on in Texas, since it was under the control of the Mexican government, which, at this particular time, was not offering any great inducements for commercial relations; but today Texas with its great agricultural fields of cotton, wheat and feed-stuffs is offering advantages and opportunities to many. Still, with the great potentialities of this state, only about twenty-three per cent of Texas land is being cultivated.

Ninety-nine years ago, people in Texas did not realize that it would soon become the leading cattle state in the Union, the leader in oil, the leader in agriculture products. We as citizens of Texas, can fully appreciate that Texas is the birthplace of the cowboy and certainly played its part in the great cattle kingdom, the greatest kingdom that has ever been known to man. Just a few years ago the buffalo, the coyote, the antelope and the Indian roamed the vast prairies of Texas and offered nothing good for the advancement of civilization.

It has been less than ninety-nine years since Marcy made his recommendation to the United States government that Texas should be left alone, particularly the Panhandle, for the buffalo, Indians, antelope, coyote, and other animals too numerous to mention, were suited for the Panhandle. He felt that the obstacles were so great that they could not be overcome by man and that the Panhandle section, whose soil is fertile, where there is found some of the largest wheat fields in the world, could not be put into the highest state of cultivation.

Many great and wise men have made prophecies which have not been altogether correct. Today the citizens of Texas look with pride to their great state, while less than a century ago it was being prophesied that it could not be developed sufficiently for the white man to make a comfortable home.

Let us stop for a few moments and take an inventory of what Texas contains: notice position of Texas, notice position of Amarillo and Galveston, and see in between these four points the magnificent cities which have sprung up within the last ninety-nine years. See the beautiful farms with magnificent homes, see the pureblooded Herefords roaming the pastures where once buffalo roamed. Watch the airplanes flying through the air, carrying passengers to all sections of the world. Here, there are cultivated fields, oil fields, also coal fields, the greatest sulphur deposits in the world, and many other things too numerous to mention. All these have been developed within the last ninety-nine years. Texans should be proud of Texas, for it has made a progress; its equal not anywhere in the world to be found.

I Want to Know

By J. A. Davis

Folks, this week my slogan is "parking," and I am plenty mad at you all for the way you are doing your parking. Just this Saturday evening I drove down town and there were at least twenty parking places that could not be used because some of you all just shut your eyes and "parked."

I may not have much sense, folks, but honestly it looks to me like it's the very simplest matter in the world to watch how you park when you drive in to the curb, and for the life of me I can't see no excuse whatever for any of you all to park your car so as to take up space enough for two cars, and why you folks that I positively know have as much gray matter in your heads as I have, will park your car in a way that takes up the space for two cars. It would not do for me to be the city marshal or the mayor or city council, because if I was, believe me I would get plenty hard boiled and stick plenty of fine on you folks that drive in and park so's to take up the whole block.

And folks, just as much as you think about it, all our traffic laws are just as simple as they can be, and just that easy to observe, and if I was some of you all that violate most all our traffic and parking rules, I would simply be ashamed to let other folks know I didn't have brains enough to observe them. It's a downright shame and disgrace and insulting to the intellect of any of us to be so self-righted careless and hoggish as to violate any of our simple parking and driving rules. (Now get mad as a bunch of hornets, for all I care).

And another thing, I'm starting in right now to bawl you goody-goody folks out that go to church and Sunday school on Sundays and "hog" all the parking space around our churches. Folks, this is the biggest disgrace of all. Why in the same patch don't you watch where you are parking, so somebody else can get to within at least a block of the church? Just Sunday before last I went to church and there were five cars out in front of our church (Methodist) that had all the space taken up where really there was plenty of space for at least twenty cars. Some of you Methodists park'd anti-godlin one way and some of you parked anti-godlin the other way, and some were parked lengthways. Folks, if there is anything in the world that makes my religion slip a few notches is to drive up to the church and find all the space taken up with five or six cars. Why don't you drive straight in to the curb and give somebody else a chance to park his car, and at the same time retain what little religion the rest of us have? The Lord knows we have hard enough time keeping religious without having to go to church and find all the space taken up by a few of you goody-goody church members. (Now pray that off).

I see where some guy up at Texline claims to have a perfectly "good" windshield wiper for sale cheap. Where did he get that "perfectly good" stuff? What I want somebody to do is invent a windshield wiper that will "wipe" when you need it.

BESTIALITY

Last week, down in old Texarkana, or near there, some of the older set put on a drinking party. All were not content to swill the booze themselves, so one fellow, to have a little fun, gave a mere child a full glass or cup of the stuff, and today that innocent little fellow fills an untimely grave. It was too strong for his little heart. But that big, strapping fellow wanted to see the child cut up, just for fun. Well, when the next grand jury of Bowie county meets, and the district court with it, very likely that "fun loving" man will laugh it off on the other side of his face.—Terry County Herald.

Consider the Cow

If your advertisement was in this space as many would read it as are reading this. But your advertisement isn't here, and people don't know or care a rap whether you are selling real estate, gasoline, peanuts or popcorn.

Did you ever sit down in the pasture with a pail between your knees and wait for a cow to back up and be milked? Of course not. You have better sense.

Well, business is kinder like a cow. You've got to go out after it and round it up. The fellow with the milk pail betwixt his knees may get some milk, but the odds are all in favor of the fellow who drives up the cow and feeds her.

A merchant may make a living by cushioning the "gouverment" and waiting for something to happen, but the merchant who makes money is the fellow who goes after business through the columns of his local newspaper.

THE STORY

Mary Brown, daughter of David Brown, self-made multi-millionaire, obsessed with the idea that her personality is obscured by the fact that she is the child of the "rich David Brown."

Mary's lips curved wistfully as she spoke, and her voice trembled—and Denis Craig recovered his unflinching optimism. "All right, dear," with his old teasing tenderness. "If it still has to be proved to you, we'll prove it. We'll drift along. But, Mary—if you won't be wholly mad, be mad enough for this: stay on as telephone central until we're able to go ahead with the engineering."

She must think. Get rid of the storm of emotion Denis Craig's entreaty had aroused in her, banish the pain of her refusal of dear old Wait-a-Minute. Something very sweet was beneath her anguish, however. Two men wanted her. Rid of her gold ball and chain, two men of the right sort wanted her!

As Mary entered the engineering offices, she met the father of the project's first-born. His face was a little tragic. He was so young; and this was the first time he had lost a job.

"Land anything temporary, Fred?" Mary asked. "No chance," with bravado. "Come back in five minutes, and there will be," said Mary succinctly. She went inside, then. She had it out with Hill and John.

"It's utter nonsense, Mary, for you to leave! If you don't want to take this job, stay on with Creesh and me!" But Mary was adamant. She left a note, finally, for Denis: "I just couldn't stay, Denis. I'll be at the Palace."

He would write to her there; come to see her there. She flew to the packing of her trunk. She thought her heart was breaking. She wasn't going to stick to Denis through his slump; wasn't going to prove her loyalty to him and the job by being telephone central—she, the daughter of the rich David Brown.

She was on the train. Now it was stopping at Foogy Gulch. How well she remembered that morning, nearly three years ago, when she had stepped off here. Here—here on the platform was Hank Johnson, himself. Of course! He'd have to know who was leaving, wouldn't he?

Mary rushed from the train, to grasp his hand. "I knew 'twould happen! Just a money-makin' scheme. The king-pin's made his little wad—" "Mr. Johnson!" "Wants me to pay cash for my place! I won't do it!" Mary smiled at him. Accustomed not to demonstrating the contradictory theorem that was Hank Johnson, she wrote the Q. E. D. Hank would pay cash. That would help Denis some.

No Quarter

Yet, a month from that day, when she was turning away from the hotel desk in hurt amazement—as she had turned away from it repeatedly—she was called back by an astonishing bit of advice:

"See here, my dear! It's none of my business—but the sooner you snap out of this, the easier it will be for you."

Mary looked quickly into the wise and friendly and somehow familiar eyes of the girl behind the desk—a girl about her own age in years, but immeasurably, anyone could have told, her senior in experience.

"Believe me, Miss Brown, I know a case of The-Letter-That-Never-Came

"Men Are Like That"

when I see it." "You—are bitter," said Mary non-committally.

"Men are like that." "Not this one," Mary defended. "There's some reason—"

"We women all kid ourselves like that—until we learn. I suppose he's going to send for you when he gets a little stake ahead, or something like that?"

Mary smiled. Somehow she couldn't take offense at the girl's friendliness. She had liked her ever since she came to the hotel, and now she didn't even resent being asked, "Are you married to him, Miss Brown?"

"No." "That's good. At least you won't have divorce and a baby to worry about. You wouldn't listen to me, would you, Miss Brown, and go home to your folks while the going is good?"

Mary flushed in apparent embarrassment. "I—can't do that." "Then why don't you find a job, and forget the villain in the play?"

Mary laughed with a new candor. "I've been walking the streets for a month, looking for a job." The girl threw up her hands. "I've been there, too. Something, I suppose it's that, has drawn me to you from the first. I've worried about you. Actually worried. Am I being impertinent?"

Mary made a husky noise purporting to be a laugh. "I never realized before how heavenly it was to have someone worry about me. I've liked you, too."

Wistfully, "I wish I could help you. You aren't the same girl who came here a month ago. You've lost weight. You've lost the sparkle from your eyes, your cheeks are pale, you look, and act positively weak—"

She broke off to study Mary closely. "Miss Brown, let's go out to lunch together, and talk as we eat." "Thanks," said Mary, "but I haven't time to eat. I must pack. I'm leaving the hotel this evening."

The girl gave her an eloquent look, then summarily snatched her hat from the rack, and came outside, to link her arm in Mary's. "On the square, Miss Brown, how long since you've eaten?"

Mary laughed weakly in surrender. "All right. It's been two days. And I'm strong and husky, and quite able to stand up under a little dieting when it seems expedient."

Next week—Mary goes to live with Edna Dale, and finds another job.

SERMONETTE

By Rev. Stephen M. Tully, Lutheran Pastor, Oviedo, Fla.

Vol. 2 No. 7 Text: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."—John 3:36. DO YOU BELIEVE?

In the sixteenth chapter of the Gospel according to St. John we read of Christ our Lord comforting His disciples against tribulation by promising them the Holy Spirit and assuring them that their prayers will be acceptable to His heavenly Father. He then sealed His statements by clearly identifying Himself. The disciples answered: "Now are we sure that Thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask Thee: by this we believe that Thou camest forth from God." (John 16:30). Thereupon our Lord answered: "Do ye now believe?" (John 16:31b).

Jesus asks us also: "Do you believe?" It is necessary, yes essential, for everyone in this world to believe in order to be saved from sin and damnation and have everlasting life. Everyone must believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God; the Savior and Redeemer of all men; that He became our substitute and died for us on the cross of Calvary. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life." Do YOU believe this?

Many outspoken unbelievers admire Jesus Christ as the greatest teacher that ever lived. They use His principles of teaching in their books. Yet this admiration and acknowledgement alone does not entitle them to a one-way ticket to heaven.

Neither will lectures and talks on religion in highly polished words and phrases change the heart of man and make a believer out of him. Every one has some religion in his heart. That is what we call the "natural knowledge" of God. This natural knowledge is not sufficient for salvation. To believe in a "power" or a "great spirit" is not enough. One must believe definitely in the true, definite triune God of the universe: the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. One God in three persons. A great mystery, yet a true fact taught in the Bible.

Some claim to believe in God the Father, but not in Christ, the Son of God. Nevertheless one must believe in the Son of God in order to be saved. "He that believeth on the SON hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."

In Russia the atheists take great pride in the fact that they are godless. They believe that they do not believe. A pathetic paradox! They are more honest, at least, than many religious leaders in our own country who do not frankly and openly deny God, yet deep down in their hearts they are rank infidels. Their published articles and books betray them. To them the following words apply: "They profess that they know God; but in works they deny Him, being abominable and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate." (Titus 1:16).

Unbelief is the greatest sin. Unbelief is no trifle but a very serious, devilish disease. Woe unto those that do not believe. "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." Do you believe? God grant that all people come to the knowledge of their personal Savior. Amen.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE SHOULD BE LIQUID

(Ask any doctor)

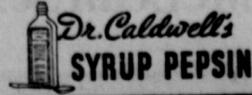

For your own comfort, and for your children's safety and future welfare, you should read this:

The bowels cannot be helped to regularly by any laxative that can't be regulated as to dose. That is why doctors use liquid laxatives.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

The right liquid laxative dose gives the right amount of help. When repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will clear up a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. Every druggist has it.

A booster never knocks, and a knocker never boosts.

Most of us are striving for contentment, yet the world owes its progress to the great unsatisfied.

The largest crowd ever seen in McLean was attracted by a news story in The News. No other form of advertising was used. This fact has been called to our attention several times recently, as a good argument for the pulling power of the home paper.

Opportunity still is an elusive thing and has to be taken advantage of at the right time. McLean will, perhaps, never have another chance to have streets graveled with federal money. Other towns have taken full advantage of their opportunities and we should do the same here.

There is more competition between towns now-a-days than among individuals. No town can afford to neglect certain fundamental business conditions and expect to keep pace with its competitor. And, not only must a town keep abreast of the times in every way possible, but it must have cooperation from its own citizens. There must be a measure of loyalty to local institutions, if any town is to survive.

The Road to Better Health

By Dr. William J. Scholes

HOW TO LIVE 100 YEARS

Whenever a man reaches the century mark he is interviewed by the press and asked for a statement telling how, in his opinion, one should live to reach the ripe old age of 100 years.

Rules of Others Do not Mean Much
 I have yet to see two sets of rules on how to live to be a hundred, given by such old-timers, that are essentially alike. Many are even contradictory.

Old Uncle Abner will tell you how he started smoking when he was "eight year old and ain't never missed a day since." Grandpa Jones will, on the contrary, insist that the reason he stuck around so long was because he "never touched the filthy weed."

What Makes Centenarians?
 These centenarians are largely the product of chance. They never got in the way of a bullet, automobile, or other deadly weapon. They never had the misfortune to contract a serious disease. Troubles slid off their backs easily. They never worried much about the morrow. Although they worked, their labor was of a kind that didn't sap their vital resources.

They retired from active life at about 45. They always got plenty of sleep, were the kind that could doze off anywhere, at any time. Their fare was always plain as they never exerted themselves enough to accumulate the price of fancy viands. For the most part they were outdoor workers, the result being that they got plenty of fresh air and sunshine.

In short, the average century plant is that literally as well as figuratively. He just vegetates—living simply and moderately and indefinitely.

What Causes Premature Senility?
 Contrast with the centenarian the man who is lucky if he reaches 60. This type will generally be found bent over a desk hour after hour in a room in which the air is stuffy and the sunlight seldom enters. Year after year finds his muscles growing more flabby through lack of exercise. He does not spare himself. He works until he is over-fatigued both mentally and physically. Some nights he gets six hours' sleep, on others not quite so many.

He eats irregularly, his capricious appetite rejecting everything but the kinds of foods which are usually the least digestible. He resorts frequently to stimulants to spur him up, and to sedatives to quiet him down. He neglects to attend to his physical duties regularly. He is worried, annoyed, and harassed much of the time. Perhaps he gets in some golf once a week and then overdoes that so it does him more harm than good.

Take Your Choice
 Which man, in the very nature of things, is going to live longer? The answer is not far to seek. At the same time it tells how to live to be a hundred.

Lesson text, Acts 3:1-10; 4:8-12.
Golden text, Acts 3:6—"Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee."

Peter and John were on their way to the temple in Jerusalem for prayer at the regular three o'clock hour. There were no doubt many others of the body of followers of Christ going for prayer also. Time and differentiation had not yet divided these converted Jews from their Jewish brethren as a definitely set apart religious body, in their minds, at least. As they entered the largest gate to the inner temple structure there was a crippled man sitting asking alms. He was forty years old, and had never walked. Each day relatives or friends carried him to the temple, that he might sit at the gate and beg alms from the people as they went into the temple for prayer and worship.

As Peter and John entered, the crippled man asked them for a gift as he did the others who entered. The two apostles did not have money, but the pitiful condition of the man touched their hearts. Peter singled the man's attention on himself and John, and then in the name of Christ commanded the man to rise and walk. Peter took his hand and helped him up. Strength came to his limbs, ankles and feet. The three went on into the temple. The cripple was well known, and as he went in shouting praises to God, skipping and running a crowd gathered about him. This was Peter's time to begin preaching. He and John were placed in prison until the next morning.

The next morning that same body of men that had condemned Jesus gathered to consider the case of two of Jesus' followers for healing a crippled man. To any right thinking man it seems that Peter and John should have had the commendation and praise of the Sanhedrin. But no! They received condemnation. Peter made bold to tell that body of men that he had not only healed the cripple, but that he had accomplished the miracle in the name of Jesus. Whom that same body had unjustly condemned and killed. In the name of this Jesus Whom God had raised from the dead, the miracle had taken place. This was bitter denunciation upon that body of austere men. But the facts were too outstanding to deny, and the people all knew the truth of the matter. The worst the Sanhedrin could do was to send the men away, commanding them to keep quiet and speak no more in the name of Jesus. And most of our brethren today are very zealously carrying out their stern command.

Why are the followers of the Christian churches of today not as bold as Peter when he answered that he had to obey God and that that group of men might judge for themselves as to whether it was right to obey men or God. What silent Christians are obeying today, I do not know—possibly their own inner timidity, fear of harming their business, or ruining their standing in the world. A little of the grace of God permitted to seep into the heart will change that timidity—a business built without the foundation and presence of Christ is built on a crumbling foundation of sand—Christ's command, stern and forcible, is for Christian men to be separate from the world. What can rightly take the place of a Christian's speaking openly for Christ? That will separate him from the world.

Christ's sole purpose for us in His service is to assist Him in raising spiritual cripples to unforeknown health in His kingdom. Peter might have looked at the crippled man and gone on, sorry for him. What good would that have done the cripple? What good does it do for you and me to see and feel sorry for the man whose spirit is crippled and dead? We shed a tear of which we are ashamed, and the man goes on his way of sin knowing nothing of the help, and no better for its shedding.

Peter had to act and speak and have, above all, faith. So must we today. We must speak for Christ openly, act for Him, and have faith. The man crippled in soul must have faith, act, and reply upon that faith first. The reason so many soul-crippled men never have faith is that so many of us never have any faith in Christ for them, first. We are trying to exercise a little faith that we may do well in our business, that a vacation trip may come out well, that our friend's trouble will soon be overcome, that our home may have the blessings of God upon it—but the poor crippled soul, possibly wealthy, or poverty stricken, indulging in an act of sin, is out of the line of our faith.

Again, our faith does not reach out to hold up Christian standards far enough. How seldom does it reach the ballot box! Too often our political judgment is swayed by beautiful falsifying phrases, paid for and trumped up propaganda to license liquor, gambling and other evils. It doesn't take much of a veil over these, as we have seen in our last few elections, to get our votes, simply because our faith is not sufficiently active. We are not relying upon God and His directions. Peter stepped into danger to defend His Christ and His power. Which one of us is willing to step out from behind our personal privilege to face the danger of even criticism, to uphold the standards of Jesus? Peter did—will we?

HOME ECONOMICS

Pauline McMullen was hostess at a luncheon served by the second section of home economics 1A girls Wednesday, at 12 o'clock. The menu consisted of the following: beef roast, gravy, creamed peas, mashed potatoes, buttered turnips, fruit salad, biscuits, butter, fruit batter cake.

SENIOR REPORT

We are happy to announce that both the commencement speakers have been secured. The commencement address will be given by Hon. A. C. Michelson attorney for the Great Southern Life Insurance Co. of Dallas. The commencement sermon will be preached by Rev. R. C. Snodgrass, minister of the First Christian Church of Amarillo. Both speakers come to us highly recommended and we feel fortunate in securing their services.

"OH SUSAN!"

The play, "Oh Susan!" directed by Miss Elizabeth Kennedy, was presented to a very appreciative audience last Friday night. Each character was especially fitted to his or her part and showed both acting ability and good training. This was termed one of the best high school plays presented, to date.

Songs by high school girls, arranged by Miss Kennedy, and tap dances were between act features.
Proceeds will be used to buy furniture for the stage, and to finance the interscholastic league expenses.

SPORTS REPORT

The Tigerettes do not yet have a game for this week, but are trying to get the Allison sextette to come to the Tigerette lair Friday night. The Tigerettes continued practice Monday night and seeking competition until the state tournament at Plainview on March 5 and 6. The Tigerettes plan to attend this tournament.

Mr. Rush's girls' groundball team defeated the grade school team in a hair raiser Monday evening, 16 to 15. Mr. Rush is diligently coaching his team for the county meet. He has prospects for a winning team.

Miss McCarty began volleyball practice last Wednesday afternoon. Having almost all of last year's team back, and a host of other stars coming out, we are sure she will develop another championship team. She will continue practice on the high school court this week.

Household Hints

By Betty Webster

A charming way to celebrate Washington's birthday is with a progressive dinner. As many couples as wanted may take part in it, and the courses may be as few and simple or as many and elaborate as desired.

At the first stop appetizers are served. Stuffed olives rolled in sliced bacon and toasted, and roasted salt wafers spread with caviar are simple and delicious.

The cocktail course follows, and soup, fish, meat, salad, dessert and coffee come in proper order.

Serve It Attractively
It is not necessary to have an abundance of food for each course although, of course, it must be sufficient and beautifully served.
A nice menu consists of fruit cocktail, consommé, filet of sole, baked ham with sweet and mashed potatoes, beets and peas, cinnamon apple salad.

strawberry parfait and demi-tasse.
Each hostess may provide paper favors if she wishes and the last one may provide a place for playing games.

DO YOU KNOW THAT

1. Nothing is ever served at an afternoon tea in the way of food that cannot come under the head of beverage, bread or cake, or confectionery?

3. Hot dishes and salads and ices are often, although not necessarily, included for supper at a party?
4. Scrambled eggs and thin sausages make a popular hot dish for parties?
5. Plain or chocolate peppermints and fancy chocolates are the candies most generally served at affairs?

RESOURCES

By A. T. Wilson

When you say resources you make a tremendous suggestion. A bank can't make a good bank without plenty of resources, a nation can't make much progress without resources, and an individual can't do any good without resources. The best resources of a bank are the honesty and ability of its borrowers. You can talk about honesty, but honesty is not complete without ability, for good intentions don't keep a bank from going broke. Our banks paid a high tuition in the school of experience to find it out, and did they learn their lesson well? Just go around and try to borrow some money and you will understand just how well they have learned their lesson, and don't get mad and fly off at a tangent if they turn you down, but if you are inherently honest try to develop or increase your ability and then the banker will look pleasant instead of being so cool and distant.

Some nations are endowed with natural resources, but some have to build their resources by hard work, aggressiveness, ingenuity and diplomacy. The late German Empire was a good example of the latter type and if they had concentrated their efforts on industrial methods instead of on militarism they would not have had to be shown that "They that take up the sword shall die by the sword." England has developed her resources to a remarkable degree and used more diplomacy than Germany, hence is in a far better condition. Russia has had great natural resources but has been a sleeping giant, but has shown some aggressive tendencies of late and would indeed make her mark if a nation without religion could do so; and a person can't help but think she has more faith in religion from the way she comes to Uncle Sam for lots of her industrial patterns.

Now Uncle Sam is the nation that is highest in natural resources such as lands, minerals and location, and as he is yet young he has all of ancient, medieval and modern history as a background to paint his wonderful picture of achievement on. In his cosmopolitan population he has a part of the best and some of the worst of almost every nation on the globe, from the most cultured Frenchman to the most uncultured Zulu or Hottentot. Uncle Sam is a five-talented man and all he has to do is to go to work and make five talents more. He has sown some wild oats in destroying his virgin forests, depleting a wonderful soil of its fertility, and plowing up too much grass in a wind-swept country, but he shows signs of repenting in sackcloth and in ashes and bids fair to correct these evils, and probably will not have to suffer like China is at present from alternate floods and droughts. Just a word in regard to our immediate resources. The oil and gas are temporary resources. Our soils, highways and public health are our permanent resources, and if it is unwise to run through with our temporary resources, it is doubly unwise and indiscrete to let our permanent resources slip through our fingers and leave the coming generation with exhausted oil and gas wells, impoverished soils, unhealthy bodies, with great pyramids of bonded indebtedness and extravagant habits of living, and only deplorable, depleted resources to meet those conditions with.

MUSIC

Charles Darwin a short time before his death made this statement: "If I had my life to live over again, I would make it a rule to read some poetry and to listen to some music every day of my life. Perhaps then the parts of my brain now atrophied would have been kept alive through use. Loss of these parts means a loss of happiness and may perhaps be injurious to the intellect, but more probably will it be injurious to the moral character of man."

Physicians see the healing power in music. They tell us that since the days of Egyptian civilization the healing powers of music have been recognized and used to good effect. We are told by statesmen that ballads are more potent than laws in the life of a nation; by preachers that worship grows cold when deprived of music; by mothers that a baby's life is impoverished without the lullaby.—Mrs. R. L. Barclay, Temple, in The Texas Outlook.

HOUSE OF THE PEOPLE

The American common school is the expression of a mighty faith. It has grown out of need and aspiration. It is the bulwark of those democratic ideals and rights for which mankind has sacrificed and suffered throughout the ages. It is the hope of a better tomorrow. Bert Rogers of Duncan, Okla., was in McLean the latter part of the week.

"PEAK LOADS" AND "SAGS"

Nearly all weekly newspapers maintain commercial printing departments, for two reasons: First, they are a convenience for the public, as they provide convenient printing service in communities too small to attract such establishments as individual ventures; and, second, the physical work of publishing a weekly newspaper is such that it cannot be distributed evenly over the week, and equipment and personnel sufficient for the peak-load days becomes an expensive burden if employment is not found for the remainder of the week.

It is one of the ambitions of every town while town to have a good newspaper—for that matter, how many towns of any real importance can you name that have no newspaper?

The weekly newspapers need the cooperation of their communities in combating the burden of partial idleness. They should have your orders for commercial printing and, quality considered, they usually can save you money and do more satisfactory work for you than the printer in a distant city.

Many country printshops are better equipped than are the average city printshops, many of which consist of a single rack of type and one press, and are located in attics or cellars; we refer to the type of city shop most inclined to circularize and solicit the smaller users of printing in country towns.

Enough out-of-town printing comes into the average small town each year to keep another employee busy in the local printshop if it were purchased at home. And what would happen if all of those printing orders remained at home? First, another family would be paying local rent or taxes and buying from local stores and local farmers; second, a maneuvering of the local printshop work could be effected that would make possible a much better home newspaper at the same cost of production; and, third, the buyers of printing would be better served, as a rule, due to the local printer's more intimate knowledge of names and needs.

To illustrate, we know of a local business house that for three years has been using letterheads on which the firm name is incorrectly spelled, and from which an important item was omitted from the copy; the letterheads came from a mail-order printer presumably of the so-called "bedroom" variety, in a distant state, and the purchaser could have saved the postage and COD charges, and could have avoided the errors, by buying in Naples. On another job of printing, on which a certain party "saved" fifty cents, we saw in large letters an error in date, which was marked over with an ordinary lead pencil; on the same piece of work the printer had omitted a letter in the middle of the signature where it would be less apt to be noticed, so as to get the signature into the line. In another recent case to come to our notice, a word was omitted from an important documentary blank, and the user was writing the missing word—this being easier than securing, at long distance, the replacement of the work, to which he was entitled.

Yes, all, from the municipality itself to the farmer at the end of the road, will find it mutually beneficial to themselves and to the local printer to buy their printing at home.—Naples (N. Y.) Record.

HONEST ADVERTISING PAYS

The merchant who does not advertise hurts himself far more than he does the newspaper, declares the Weston (Mo.) Chronicle. Quoting a recent editorial:

"Honest advertising intelligently done always pays, sometimes double and even triple, for the effort necessary to put it over. The local newspaper is the servant of the alert business man. Its pages are read by everybody. Live displays of merchandise telling of quality and price will attract the people who need things. To avoid the advertising columns of a newspaper does not hurt the paper nearly so much as the merchant who persistently refuses to advertise."

MAYBE THE HOSS HAD TB

The tenderfoot thought he could ride, and mounted a pony in front of a lot of cowboys. The pony soon threw him. A cowboy, helping him up, said: "Well! What threw you?" "What threw me? Why she bucked something fearful! Didn't you see her buck?" cried the tenderfoot.

"Buck!" said the cowboy. "Thunder! She only coughed!"

Arthur—"So your new job makes you independent?"

Albert—"Absolutely. I get here any time I want to before eight, and leave just when I please after five."

Judge—"What possible excuse did you have for acquitting that murderer?"

Foreman of the Jury—"Insanity."

Judge—"What, all twelve of you?"

LEGAL ADVERTISING NEEDED TO SHOW USE OF TAXES

Legal advertising is the spotlight of publicity focused upon the tax spending of local government. When tax spending totals the sum of two billion dollars in one year—three times the money spent for clothes—then legal advertising becomes more and more a necessity in the functioning of democratic government.

C. A. Jay, executive vice president of the Industrial, Commercial and Agricultural Conference, Dallas, said in part, as follows in a recent issue of the Texas Press Messenger: "In 1933 the people of the United States paid two billion dollars more for taxes than they paid for food; they paid three times as much for taxes as they paid for clothes. If you take our own state government, you find that in 1933 it would have required 2 1/2 million bales of cotton to have paid the cost of state government, and the support of our state institutions. It would have required 156 million bushels of wheat to have liquidated the account."

"It may be good politics and it may be somewhat popular to go ahead increasing public expenditures on the theory that the money to meet these expenditures may be secured through a process of taxing the rich and exempting the poor; but the fact is, of course, that while such plans may sound inviting, they simply do not work out. After all, taxes are a part of business expense, and no matter where they are levied, they are passed on to the consumer to pay."

"Every consumer is, therefore, a taxpayer; and whether he knows it or not, he has a vital interest in holding expenditures of all units of government within reasonable bounds. If we are through any reasonable period of time to secure economy in the operation of state and local government, the taxpayer had as well realize that to do this will require the same activity on the part of the taxpayer as for years has been exercised by the taxpayer. The taxpayer cannot serve on all committees set up in the community to secure more and larger appropriations from state and local government, and at the same time forget that there is a payday, and expect a reduction in taxes."

HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

"The petunia has been chosen as the Gray county flower," said Mrs. W. A. Breining, McLean beautification chairman, who addressed the Home Demonstration Club last Friday at the home of Mrs. C. E. Hunt.

"Filling stations will be asked to plant petunias," said Mrs. Breining. "Petunias reseed and grow well in this climate. There are about one hundred kinds of wild flowers in the state of Texas, and there is a law against picking these flowers growing along the highways," the speaker continued.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Mrs. J. H. Wade. The members answered roll call and each contributed a nickel to the educational fund. The Club Collect was read and the club song, "Little Hammer," was sung. Following Mrs. Breining's talk, Mrs. Thurman Adkins gave a reading, "I Lives Here."

Refreshments of chicken sandwiches, white cake and cocoa were served to two guests, Mrs. Breining and Mrs. Adkins; and the following members: Mesdames C. M. Eudey, C. W. Cupell, C. E. Hunt, J. W. ALANREED 4-H CLUB MEETS

By Mildred Blakney

"It is better to make a single design well," said Miss Ruby M. Adams, county home demonstration agent, to the Alanreed-4-H Club Friday, "than to make a decorative design in a haphazard manner." Miss Adams talked to the girls on the subject of dresser scarfs. Some of the points that were stressed were: (1) Have the color of the scarfs to harmonize with the furniture. Do not use white scarfs on black or dark furniture. (2) If you cannot paint on paper, you cannot paint on material. (3) Scarfs should not hang off the edge of the dresser. (4) Have the same amount of the dresser showing all around the scarf. (5) Use a mitered corner on all scarfs to make them look neat. (6) Do not use too much decoration on a scarf. (7) Use a good grade of material for good service.

Those present at the meeting were Maxola Hugg, Edith Gibson, Mildred Blakney, Faye Pettit, Mary Oakley, Wilsie Blakney, Euline Sherrod, Pauline Crisp, Marguerite Crisp, Lila Mas Dunkle, Velma Davis, Edna Gibson, and Lila Massey.
