Prof. Branch gave a report of the club's boy scout troop.

A couple of exploding firecrackers enlivened the members as the club adjourned.

Cold Weather with Snow, Still Here

The weather man has given no relief from snow and cold weather the past week. The thermometer has flirted with zero most every night, with light snow flurries most every day this week, with a heavier snow Wednesday.

There has been little wind during snowfall this winter, and farmers are delighted with the moisture condition. Local cattlemen say that the cold weather has not caused much suffering among their herds as yet.

The freezing weather is delaying work on planting trees for the shelterbelt program, but the added moisture should insure almost 100% livability of the trees planted when the weather finally thaws out.

THUT FOR COUNTY CLERK

Charlie Thut has authorized the announcement of his candidacy for the office of county clerk, subject to the action of the Democratic primary of July 27.

In making his announcement, Charlie, as he is known to thousands in this county, said he was deeply appreciative of the friendship and support given him in the past and that he hoped his services and familiarity with the many duties of the office would merit such approval.

He added further that despite the duties of the office, which have never been neglected by him, he would try to see all the voters he could personally in Gray county between now and July 27.

The News is glad to present Mr. Thut's claims to the voters and bespeak careful consideration at the polls.

Bradshaw Says Conservation Aids Farmers

Many farmers of the Southern Great Plains are finding that land retired from cultivation and planted to grass or trees is producing more income than it did when in cultivation, according to Earl L. Bradshaw of the Soil Conservation Service, McClellan Creek Water Conservation Project, at McLean. Fence posts and firewood from trees, pasturage from grasses, and, in some instances, income from hunting privileges on areas retired to vegetation are adding to the cash receipts of the farms.

In most cases land being retired from cultivation and planted to trees or grass is land so severely eroded that it no longer could produce yields of crops sufficient to pay the cost of planting, tilling, and harvesting the crops.

"Land so severely eroded that it will not produce profitable yields of cultivated crops is land on which it may take several years to get good stands of grass or trees established, especially in the so-called Dust Bowl," Mr. Bradshaw said. "Disappointment is sure to come to the farmer who thinks he can plant grass on a badly gullied or severely blown field from which practically all of the top soil has been removed and expect to obtain good pasturage from it in a single season.

"Native grasses are slow to re-establish themselves on badly eroded areas. It takes years and years to make soil and the best grass is grown on good soil."

In encouraging the use of vegetation to control erosion, Soil Conservation Service workers recognize that some land now being cultivated soon will be practically worthless if continued as crop land. Placing such land in grass or trees will enable the remaining top soil to be preserved, it is pointed out.

On many farms severely eroded land taken out of cultivation and planted to trees or grass has been fenced to protect the vegetation from livestock. Keeping livestock off of grassed areas is recognized as one of the best ways of hastening the spread of grasses and insuring a solid cover of grass for protection against both wind and water erosion.

Another precaution being taken by many farmers who have retired eroding areas to grass is that of guarding their fields against fire. Burning grass destroys seeds, weakens existing grass plants, destroys organic materials which build up the soil, and leaves the soil bare during months when rainfall is likely to be intense.

Fenced areas are being found by many farmers to make ideal homes for wildlife. It is expected that as wildlife numbers increase more money will be obtained from the use of these areas as hunting grounds.

Congress May Out-Spree FDR In Boosting Defense Budget, Despite Election-Year Fears

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CONGRESS: On Guard (?)

Biggest item on the congressional agenda was Franklin Roosevelt's $8,242,000,000 budget, which the senate voted to investigate via a joint super-committee. But there was more talk than action. While congressmen fumed to bury their teeth in the $1,800,000,000 defense program, major budget item, they also hesitated, watching developments abroad. In an election year there must be economy talk, but 1940's congress may end up by spending more on defense than even the President asked.

There were probes aplenty. Even though the house might kill that unprecedented super-committee, four more groups were hard at it. The house naval affairs committee began by slapping newly appointed Navy Secretary Charles Edison. The slap: Pigeon-holing a proposal that the President be given peacetime power to commandeer factories, materials and ships. Next came Admiral Harold Stark, chief of naval operations, who opined (1) that the U. S. now has no two-ocean navy, and (2) that 52,000-ton battleships wouldn't be a bad idea. (Now building are two 45,000-tonners, with two more provided in the current bill.)

Chairman Carl Vinson stepped in at this point with the weak No. 1 surprise, a proposal to boost naval strength 25 per cent the next three years through a $1,300,000,000 added appropriation. With this suggestion Admiral Stark agreed in toto.

Another house committee, appropriations, showed neither spendthriftness nor laziness in okaying $267,137,000 for immediate emergency defense (army, navy, coast guard and FBI). The committee simply knew not where to turn. But if the senate approved this fund the current year's defense bill will be higher than next year's. Next day, when Carl Vinson learned the appropriation committee might okay another $4,000,000 to fortify Guam, he boiled over. That question, he insisted, should first come to his attention. Said he: "This committee (naval affairs) is jealous of its prerogatives."

Two senate committees meanwhile got up steam. Foreign affairs looked suspiciously at Guam, wondering how Japan would swallow

TREND

How the wind is blowing . . .

BANKING—At San Francisco L. M. Gianni threatened to withdraw his Bank of America from the federal banking system unless Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau halts "persecution" of its officers through the Securities Exchange commission, which has been examining records of Transamerica corporation, owner of 40 per cent of the bank's stock. Next day Henry Morgenthau struck back.

POLITICS—At Washington it was expected that Chicago can have a Republican and Democratic national conventions for the asking. The city posts a $150,000 guarantee for each.

FUTURE—Although 1940 marketing quotas were approved for 99 per cent of the farm products, it was estimated that the department of agriculture election had been won by 58 per cent of all voters (2,300,000).

Within the next year, the airline in the U. S. will be four-engine, 40-passenger, in substratosphere more than 50 miles above at present. The DC-4 and Boeing the fortification plan. (See ASIA.) Appropriations, under Colorado's Alva Adams, wanted to junk the emergency defense fund and probably would.

What would eventually happen, most observers were willing to guess. Investigations will probably string along several months until Europe's war gathers steam. Then, overnight, congress will shoot the works and forget that it's an election year.

Also in congress: The house passed Rep. Joseph Gavagan's (D. N. Y.) perennial anti-lynching bill imposing fines on county or state officials who fail, by negligence, to prevent mob killings. The bill went to the senate, which customarily defeats it, two years ago by a South-sponsored filibuster.

The house ways and means committee heard Secretary of State Cordell Hull defend his reciprocal trade act, which expires June 12 unless renewed. Score: Ten Republicans against it, most of 15 Democrats in favor. But on the floor it will face greater opposition, probably being renewed only on the condition that the senate shall ratify all pacts. Meanwhile doughty Sen. Bill Borah of Idaho inferred that the breakdown of trade talks with Argentina and Uruguay was a plot to win continuation of the act.

Adolph Sabath of Illinois, chairman of the house rules committee, said he opposed any more money for Martin Dies' un-Americanism committee. Reason: "After all, Mr. Dies has had enough publicity for any and all purposes and perhaps he will be still in demand for public speeches and writing magazine articles."

ASIA: Naughty U. S.

By mid-January the U. S. was giving Japan so much trouble that the cabinet of Gen. Nobuyuki Abe was ready to fall. It was not enough that Tokyo's emissaries had been unable to win a new trade treaty replacing the pact being abrogated this month by Washington. Japanese also learned:

(1) That the senate foreign affairs committee was talking again of imposing an embargo on war material shipments to Japan. Leader of the move is Nevada's Sen. Key Pittman, committee chairman. Such a step would sound the death knell of Japan's war in China.

(2) That Washington was again talking about a big navy (See CONGRESS). The Guam fortification plan, pigeon-holed last year, when Japan objected, was making news again. Tokyo papers were warning that the U. S. would soon be No. 1 offensive-defensive power in the Pacific. But the public, suffering from an internal stomach ache, was unexcited.

It seemed likely, meanwhile, that the Abe cabinet's sole accomplishment and last act would be to launch the puppet government of Wang Ching-wei over Japanese-dominated sections of China (see map). But if the U. S. embargo falls, lack of military supplies will make it hard to preserve what Japan has already won.

PEOPLE:

Outstanding Stassen At Chicago, the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce chose Minnesota's G. O. P. Gov. Harold Stassen as 1939's most outstanding young man.

Off to Australia from Shanghai went Clarence E. Gauss, U. S. consul general, just named the first American minister to Canberra.

At Washington, chief G-Man, J. Edgar Hoover, told a house committee why he needed a special $1,475,000 fund to fight saboteurs and spies. Revelation: Plans for an army bomber were stolen from an aircraft plant, but recovered by FBI.

At Baltimore, dethroned gangster Al Capone left the hospital where he has been treated for a brain ailment, taking up residence in a quiet, fashionable section of that city.

Introduced by Tennessee's Democratic Rep. Kenneth McKellar was a measure to cancel the rest (about $8,000,000) of Finland's war debt.

NEWS QUIZ

Test your nose for news. Answer all these questions and your score is 100. Deduct 20 points for each question you miss. If you miss more than three, better not tell anybody!

1. Bartley, W. Va., is a coal-mining community. Why was it in the news?

2. The man at the right, now British lord of the admiralty, may become supreme defense chief. What's his name?

3. According to the treasury, the average American had how much money in his pocket on January 1: (a) $57.71; (b) $10.13; (c) $126.34; (d) $1.401.

4. True or false: Thousands of workers at the Binghamton, N. Y., plant of the Edicott-Johnson Shoe company made news by voting for affiliation with the C. I. O.

5. Both Republican and Democratic national committees will meet in February to pick their 1940 convention date. Which committee will meet first?

News Quiz Answers

1. Ninety miners were trapped two miles underground.
2. Winston Churchill.
3. (A) is correct. This is the highest per capita circulation since March, 1933.
4. False. They made news by thumbing-down both C. I. O. and A. F. of L.
5. Democrats on February 5; Republicans, February 13. This is important because the Republicans can now delay planning their candidate and platform until the opposition has committed itself.

THE WARS:

In the West

Germany and the allies seemed to be fighting everything else but each other as mid-winter arrived. There was sporadic sea warfare, a "great battle" over Sylt, German air base, and a Nazi raid over 500 miles of English coast. But despite those threats of heightened conflict, public attention was focused elsewhere:

Germany. Nazi soldiers were reported massed along the Baltic shores as the Reich eyed Scandinavia's neutrality, taking a more positive pro-Russian stand in the Soviet-Finnish war and threatening to invade Sweden and Denmark. But Germans were more worried about internal developments. Supplies from Russia and Rumania were held up by disputes, poor rail facilities and frozen river routes. The greatest cold wave in 11 years struck hard in Berlin, where there were shortages of both coal and food. At this unstrategic time, it was rumored workers would soon be paid IOU's instead of cash.

Allies. France was rumored about to shake up her cabinet, something Britain had already done. While the London press still railed at Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain for dismissing War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha, Chamberlain turned about and rallied the empire to "more vigorous prosecution of the war." Both Hore-Belisha and Chamberlain were soon scheduled to unburden themselves in a secret session of commons. By general consensus, Chamberlain's position was none too secure.

In the North

Catching their breath during a temporary lull in fighting, the Finns estimated they had destroyed three, and possibly four Russian divisions in one month. Still undetermined was a battle raging on the Salla front, where correspondents heard that Soviet relief troops were being encircled. Counting $10,000,000 worth of booty seized when the forty-fourth Russian division was annihilated, the Finns forecast a several weeks' lull.

THE BALKANS:

Carol's Choice

Back to Budapest from Venice went Hungary's Foreign Minister Stefan Csaky. In his pocket was a Plan: Italy would safeguard the Balkans from either Russian or German aggression provided that stubborn Rumanian, King Carol, could be whipped into line. All Rumania must do is guarantee territorial revision with Hungary and Bulgaria, in which case Italy and her neighbors will help Rumania if Russia tries to recapture Bessarabia. But should Rumania refuse, her neighbors will not only let Russia come in, but will invade King Carol's precinct themselves.

Actually this Italo-Hungarian agreement constituted an important step in breaking Italy away from Germany. Details of the pact were not published, for fear of "giving offense" to the Reich and Russia.

Lovely New Wash Prints Make It Fun to Sew for Children

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DOTING mothers that take pride in decking out little daughters at first hint of spring in refreshingly colorful prints, hurry up and take a look at the lovely materials just out. We'll wager that at very first peep at the new wash fabric showings you will be convinced that there's nothing in the world you so long to do this very minute as to set the spring sewing program in motion.

Time was when buying cotton and other washable weaves was more or less a gamble. In those days the shrink and fade bugaboo was forever taking the joy out of life. Now in these modern times, because of scientific processing that carries with it a guarantee of non-fade and non-shrink, the "will it wash" query no longer challenges the patient's salesperson.

It certainly is a grand and glorious feeling for mothers to know that the dress they have so painstakingly made will not prove a case of "love's labor lost" in that hems won't have to be frantically let down nor sleeve lengths altered, neither will buttons have to be set over after the dress comes back from the wash. It's a wise mother that asks for guaranteed wash materials to make up for her child.

Then, too, little daughters come in for a share of good fortune in that no longer will they have to be submitted to the humiliating ordeal of wearing a dress bought, or made, that is a size too large in order to allow for shrinking.

This year attractive broadcloths with floral overprinting are catching the eye. Add wearableness to their prettiness and you will readily see why this fabric is so popular. Tailored printed shantung broadcloths and charming striped cottons in fast colors all preshrunk to keep their original fit permanently are selling fast as they can be measured off in dress lengths.

If you are looking for wash materials that carry a promise of wearability, washability, dependability and likability consider the dainty little frocks pictured. Each is fashioned of sanforized-shrunk fabric. The merry little three-year-old pictured to the right wearing a broadcloth dress with floral overprinting is laughing at the thought of the cunning patch pockets that draw up and tie with pique cording. She is proud, too, that her dress ties in the back with a big bow of self-fabric. The dress is trimmed with a pleating of pique around the neck and sleeves. Though the closing is in the back, there are three small red buttons down the front of the bodice.

Sister Ann who sits in the window (centered in the group) wears a tailored shantung broadcloth dress trimmed with hand-fagotted pique collar and cuffs.

The dress for the "between" age, shown to the left, takes on somewhat of a party air. The soft blue and pink colorings of the floral striped broadcloth (so fine it has a sheen like silk) is delicate and becoming to blonde or brunette. There is a fashionable inset corselet belt, thus raising the waistline so that the skirt will swing gracefully if or when she dances.

Novel Knit Items

The idea of a sweater with a hood carries big appeal. This gay cardigan is knit of a heavy yet soft yarn, and on large needles so that the fetching checked pattern develops magically fast. Such pretty combinations as red with white, black with green, wine with postman blue are suggested. The solid colored hood is knitted separately. It may be worn either as a hood or a collar. The little headpiece below is a streamlined version of the close-fitting knitted hood. However, it eliminates all superfluous bulk, and is very attractive.

Costume Sweaters

Spring Into Style

A new type of sweater, which is neither a tailored sports style nor an elaborate evening affair, has sprung into fashion. These are the sweaters that combine with separate skirts to make smart street frocks. They are most attractive when chosen in a color to match that of the skirt.

Made of novelty knits and ribbed yarns, they are notable for their unusual shoulder and yoke detail. Some of them have flapped pockets in the Schiaparelli manner with buttons of gold nuggets or shiny flat gold circles on the pocket flaps and down the front. Some of them fasten with bright enameled or gold colored slide fasteners.

Skating Ensemble

Is Very Fetching

A skating ensemble is made of soft white yarn hand-embroidered with bright wool. There's a snug white cardigan sweater with peasant figures embroidered on panels on either side of the front opening, and matching white mittens with a single design on their back. The close-fitting hood ties under the chin and has embroidered wings like a Dutch cap standing out on either side of the face.

Picturesque Wraps

Inspired by the picturesque fashions of the South in Civil war days is the group of evening wraps shown by an American designer.

Gray for Day and Evening

From soft dove shades to dark gunmetal tones gray is an important color for every sort of daytime and evening outfit.

Suede Sports Jacket

Fine stitching is the blouse-like detail borrowed by a fitted suede sports jacket to give it a dressy appearance.

Duty Called Constable To Go the Utter Limit

The special constable was being shown his first night beat.

"See that red light in the distance?" said the sergeant. "That's the limit of your beat in that direction. Now go on with it."

The new constable started off. When three o'clock rolled around, he did not come in to report, nor did he show up for duty the following night. Then, along about 4:30 that next morning, he turned up again, weary and limping.

"Where in thunder have you been," demanded the sergeant.

A feeble response: "That red light was a long-distance moving van. I came upon it 43 miles out when it stopped because of a flat tire."

Unhurried Nature Nature never spoils its work by being in a hurry.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Waste Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—all to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by graded hospitals the country over. Ask your neighbor!

What Will Your Diploma Be Worth? The question that faces the high school students of today is: "What will your diploma be worth?"

There are a great many advantages to be had if one finishes in the upper half of his class. Many universities will not allow students to enter their door unless they have finished high school with a high average.

If you are a freshman, strive for a high place in your class for it is not too late after you reach the rank of a senior. If you are a sophomore or a junior you can still raise your average if you only try hard enough.

SENIORS PRESENT TROPHY CASE TO SCHOOL

Now our trophies can be placed in a trophy case that will hold all of them and still have plenty of room for those that are yet to be won.

This was made possible by the 39 seniors who, during the Christmas holidays, held a reunion banquet and voted to purchase it as a gift to the school.

A picture of this group of seniors will be placed in the case; on the top will be a bronze plate with raised lettering stating that the case is the gift of the class of '39.

MEET THE SENIORS

Floy Jo Brown

Floy Jo Brown, known as "Jo," is 17 years old, and was born in Shamrock. She has been enrolled in the schools of Shamrock, Brawley, Calif., Anteca, Calif.; and McLean.

Her ambition is to be a nurse, and she graduates, she plans to attend the University of Southern California.

Football and horse racing are Jo's favorite sports, and what is more, she is a football player and football captain. Tennis and dancing are her hobbies.

Jackie Cooper is Miss Brown's favorite movie star. "Dark Victory" is her favorite motion picture.

Billie Bert Sanders, known as Billie Bert, was born in McLean in the year 1921. The only schools he has attended are those of McLean, and he has played in the McLean band for three years.

At the present time Sanders plans to become a mechanic, but he does not know what college he will attend.

Since Billie Bert has a bicycle, bicycling is his hobby. Bowling, he says, is his favorite sport.

"The Arkansawyer," Bob Burns, is his favorite movie star. He has enjoyed "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" as the best motion picture.

Billie Bert's pet peeve is to "park," especially on a bicycle.

SENIORS HEAR MR. CRYER

Last Thursday Mr. Cryer went before the senior class and gave them much interesting as well as essential information about the nature of the trip the seniors plan to take this year.

"Romance is going to the dogs these days," say three senior stooges. Monroe Combs is "off" girls again; at least until another one comes along.

Evonne Floyd, better known as Betty, takes her car to play practice every night. She is taking leap year seriously.

Where did Opal Tedder get a 1940 senior ring so quickly, and she only a junior?

Emma Rneau is reading an etiquette book on how to make bashful boys talk.

I guess a grocery store is as romantic a spot as any.

Why does everybody go to Shamrock? Ruth Bond, Mary Ledgerwood and the Bailey brothers are the latest visitors.

Iona Batson seems to have fallen for the black-eyed Puetz guy at Shamrock.

Why does the fourth period study hall keep all the shades down? My, my, how romantic!

We hear that some people were "stood up" by some Shamrock people. John, Junior and Randy, could you enlighten us any?

My, my, Perry! Such literature! (Shoot-em-up Johnny).

Well, such is the life in the tropics until next week.

BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

The Pampa Harvester basketball team won the Shamrock invitation tournament for the second year, Saturday night in the finals, by defeating Thalia 27 to 13.

The McLean Tigers gave the Harvesters the closest battle in a 31 to 30 game Friday morning. Joe Cooke was high point scorer with 18 points.

The McLean boys defeated Briscoe Thursday evening, 35 to 24. Cooke was high point scorer with 11 points, followed closely by John Bond, co-captain, with 10 points.

The McBeetle girls defeated Briscoe 41 to 23 for the girls' title. The McLean Tigerettes defeated Alnreed 33 to 17 Thursday evening, but lost to Briscoe Friday in a hard fought game, 31 to 25. Opal Tedder, co-captain of the Tigerettes, was named on the all-tournament team.

FASHION DISPLAY

Bernice McClellan, the senior who is in the height of fashion this week, is wearing a black crepe dress with a crystal bubble necklace. She wears hose and black alligator grain shoes on the Dutch boy style. She wears her hair in page boy roll with curls on top.

The senior girls seem to be the only ones who do not go in strongly for skirts and sweaters. Maybe it's just that grown-up feeling. Oh, well, don't weep, little ones, we'll be seniors some day.

Maxine Little, the model for the junior class, styles a gold skirt of wool with a gold satin blouse under a barrel sweater of white. Maxine, better known as Mickey, wears white cowboy boots, which seem to be the hit of the campus during this season of much snow and wind. She wears her golden locks in curls; often she has flat curls on top of her head.

The sophomore girl who seems to head the fashion list this week is Joyce Dowell. Joyce is clad in what seems to be the hit of the high school fashion: brown skirt with printed wine blouse. She wears brown crepe-sole shoes, which seem to be her favorites, with brown anklets. Joyce wears her hair in plain curls. She often ties them back with a ribbon.

Bobbie Crisp, standing in the spotlight for freshman style this week, wears a yellow angora sweater with green crocheted collar and cuffs, and a brown skirt. Bobbie wears tan shoes trimmed in brown, with brown and white striped anklets. She wears her hair in page boy style with flat curls pulled upward and pinned on top.

COSTLY FIASCO

"In sharp contrast with the stringent regulations laid down for private utilities," observes the New York Times, "the recently issued report of the Loup River Public Power District in Nebraska, known as a unit in the 'Little TVA,' is of particular interest."

For the last four months of 1938, the report shows, the public power project, which up to the end of 1938 had cost $9,732,003, had operating revenues of $20,013, operating expenses of $61,384, and interest on bonded indebtedness of $110,053. Total expenses were thus $171,437, which means that during that brief period the project suffered a net cash loss of more than $150,000.

And this isn't all of the story by a long shot. The public project pays nothing in taxes. The report lists no provision for depreciation of equipment or for amortization of its bond obligations—provision which the law insists be made by any private, regulated utility. So, the loss to the taxpayers is actually far greater than shown.

To quote the Times once more: "From the figures, it is obvious that Nebraska's incursion into the public power field is proving to be a costly experiment to taxpayers and the showing would be poorer if more complete accounting was used."

What is true of this "Little TVA" is true to a greater or lesser extent of all the other tax-subsidized government projects, large and small. None of them pay more than nominal taxes. None of them use the standard, clear accounting methods required by law of private utilities. All of them can run to a public treasury for money when they incur losses. They are not subject to state regulation. All of them are given valuable special privileges and services "free" by government.

There, in all its naked inadequacy, is that much vaunted "power yardstick." These government projects are costing the taxpayers billions, directly. They are costing many millions more in loss of taxes—and many millions more in the operating deficits we all must help pay. What a costly fiasco this policy of state socialism has proven to be!—Industrial News Review.

Here vessels take up positions in an area suspected of having mines hidden below the surface. The mine cables are cut, causing them to rise to the surface. Sharpshooters then explode them. Inset: A sailor prepares to throw marking buoys overboard to indicate to vessels that the area has been swept clean of mines and is safe for shipping.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—When Oliver Stanley left the British ministry of transport in July, 1934, he was succeeded by 36-year-old Leslie Hore-Belisha, a Simonite liberal. Then and thereafter, they engaged in many brisk parries and sharp ripostes, masters of the foil rather than the quarterstaff, brisk and finished swordsmen both. Now it is the ultra-conservative Mr. Stanley who replaces Mr. Hore-Belisha as war secretary, against a confused background, requiring more details for full understanding—at least at this distance.

On October 8 of last year, Mr. Stanley offered his resignation as president of the British board of trade. At the time, it was indicated that Mr. Stanley had not found Prime Minister Chamberlain's prosecution of the war sufficiently aggressive, but later reports were that he had revolted against the control of the government by an inner cabinet of four members. He was persuaded to withdraw his resignation.

His political alliances have been with the conservative section of the army, who vehemently opposed the appointment of Mr. Hore-Belisha to the war office, early in 1937. Some of the "appeasement" wing of the Chamberlain government were bitter critics of Mr. Hore-Belisha's subsequent army shakeup, in which he sent many oldsters back to their club chairs. It is possibly this circumstance which has led to conjecture that Mr. Stanley's appointment foreshadows a new rapprochement between extreme right elements in England and Germany, the elimination of Adolf Hitler and a new basis for peace.

Mr. Stanley's activities since Munich haven't indicated that he is out for appeasement. However, it is clear that the colonel blimps of the army don't like Mr. Hore-Belisha and do like Mr. Stanley.

He is the secretive, tight-lipped son of the genial, talkative seventh earl of Derby. He gathered some shining medals in the World war and was parliamentary under-secretary in the war office, minister of transport, minister of labor and president of the board of education, before becoming president of the British board of trade. As indicated above, he is a fence rather than a hard-bitter. He is fifty-four years of age.

KING IBN SAUD of Saudi Arabia has 250 wives, 29 sons, 22 daughters and a palace with 200 rooms.

Britain Ponders As King Ibn Saud Widens Alliances. That's a lot of upkeep and it is understandable that he may be widening his economic alliances, as reported in recent dispatches. He is also said to be reorganizing and enlarging his air force.

The first Arab to wrest an autonomous state from Britain, he has co-operated with the empire, but Palestine has disturbed him and in various quarters there is speculation as to whether he intends to use his augmented military resources for or against England. He has preached the unification of Islam throughout the world, and his influence, as leader of the mystic and powerful Wahabi sect, has penetrated among the desert tribes from Iran to West Africa.

His synthetic state, carved out in the Arabian coastal territory, in a post-war deal, is a complex of allergy guarded empire interests. With its proximity to the Suez canal, with the threat of Russian, as well as Italian, aggression and conspiracy in the Moslem bloc, on the road to India, Saudi Arabia is goal-keeping territory, and Ibn Saud's allegiance is an urgently important British asset.

Since the start of the desert battle of the loud-speakers several years ago, along with the Palestine impasse, there have been indications that Ibn Saud was losing interest as an empire partner.

Last January, he wrote President Roosevelt an appeal for support of the Arabs against the Jews in Palestine, with an implication that the Balfour mandate was working against Islam.

Bull-necked, bull-voiced King Ibn Saud is six feet, four inches tall and weighs 250 pounds. On the palm of his hand is a mole, the mystic stigmata of a master swordsman, in the lore of the desert. He was once an obscure tribesman, fighting his way to power in his middle years. He likes to hold court in the open air, sitting cross-legged.

JESUS DRAMATICALLY PROCLAIMS HIS MESSIAHSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 21:1-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, thy King cometh unto thee.—Matthew 21:5.

The official presentation of Himself to the Jewish people as their King, their rejection of Him, and what was even more solemnly meaningful, His rejection of the Hebrew nation because of unbelief—such are the stirring events which face us as we enter with our Lord into the last week of His earthly life. The first event in that sequence is the one we study in our lesson for today, namely, the coming of the King to Jerusalem. Jesus on this occasion did a very dramatic and unusual thing, a fact which indicates that here is an incident of extraordinary import to which we do well to give careful study.

I. Preparation and Presentation (vv. 1-7).

The King comes, but even in His hour of royal triumph He gives to His followers the unexplainable but inestimable joy of meeting His need.

1. "The Lord Hath Need" (vv. 1-4). He had need of disciples who would do His bidding without question or hesitation—"and the disciples went, and did even as Jesus had appointed them" (v. 6). How precious is such obedience! Let us also go and do what He commands.

He needed the colt and the ass. How simple and lowly was that need, and yet how glorious that a man was ready to meet at God's plans are worked out in the little things as well as the great. Prophecy was being fulfilled here (see v. 5) by a little thing. Is God waiting to carry out some great purpose through some little thing which you are withholding from Him? Why hinder Him any longer?

2. "Behold Thy King Cometh" (vv. 5-7). Though He did not come with the pomp and trappings of an earthly potentate, the King of Glory came to His people to offer them for the last time the opportunity to receive Him. He asks you to yield your life to His kingship. What will your answer be?

II. Acceptance and Rejection (vv. 8-11, 15, 16).

1. "The Multitude . . . Cried . . . Hosanna" (vv. 8-11). The fact that before the week was over many of the same voices cried, "Crucify Him!" should not obscure the fact that there were childlike believers (v. 16) who really had faith in Christ. There is something inspiring about that picture of enthusiasm and devotion. Real faith in Christ ought to result in a fervor of spirit which will stir our hearts and our cities. Are we not altogether too dead and formal in much of our worship today? Do we not need more holy enthusiasm for Christ and for His Church?

2. "The Chief Priests and Scribes . . . Were Sore Displeased" (vv. 15, 16). Small wonder, for not only had the children put them to open shame by recognizing the Christ whom they had ignored, but He had in turn ruined their polite religious racket which produced for them such a lovely profit. Mark this—when anyone is displeased with Jesus or with His true children or with His work on earth, you can be sure that there is a reason, and not a holy, upright or good reason either!

III. Judgment and Compassion (vv. 12-14).

What a remarkable picture! In the midst of flaming judgment and destruction we find loving compassion upon the blind and the lame. Folk who think that Christ has no message but love need to look on Him as He cleanses the temple. On the other hand, those who think that He has no word but judgment need to behold Him as He stands in the midst of the overturned tables and debris and heals the needy. Inconsistent? Not at all. God is love, but He is also absolute holiness.

1. "Jesus Cast Out . . . and Overthrew" (vv. 12, 13). He knew where to begin to cleanse the city. He started in the temple. Absolutely right is the man who suggested that the place to start to clean up a city is not in the slums but in the churches. You will be ready to clean out the tavern or that other low place where the gang hangs out in your town after you have cleaned out the church. The same is true of the individual. A regenerated heart will bring a reformed life, not vice versa.

2. "He Healed Them" (v. 14). The very hands which had just overthrown the tables and cast out the money-changers now gently touched the lame and the blind with healing. The eyes which had blazed with holy indignation now shone with love and compassion. The scene of judgment and chaos became the house of prayer and of answered prayer. On the very spot where one man had received condemnation, another received healing. Each one received that which he sought by his action. How will you, my dear reader, meet Jesus—as your Judge or as your Saviour? You must make the choice.

THE SCHOOLROOM

Next to the home, the schoolroom is the powerhouse where American ideals are generated. I know it would sound pious to give that place to the church—and I know that as a preacher I would be expected to do so.

A preacher goes to a country neighborhood and holds a summer evangelistic meeting. A gratifying group of young people are converted and join his church. He comes home talking volubly of the number of people he "led to Christ" in this meeting.

Next to father and mother, the teacher, because her work is so elemental and widespread, is the most potent factor in American life. Teaching, therefore, whether in church or school, whether by "professor" or "parson," or both, is the most respectable business, the most honorable occupation, the biggest dividend-paying investment known among men.

I should count myself recreant if I did not boast and encourage the teacher, whether in school or church. He (more often it is she) has chosen the highest and makes the most vital contribution to our national well-being.

One word more. The proposition of course does not lend itself to statistical demonstration but I wonder if I am right in my opinion that among teachers there are fewer crooks, imposters, criminals, than in any other profession—bar none.—Jeff D. Ray, in Star-Telegram.

A DESIRE to advance in scoutmastership by making use of training offered and material available on the subject.

A READINESS to work hand in hand with home, church, sponsoring institution, school, local council, national council, for the good of the individual by and the community as a whole.

A LOVE of the outdoors in all its phases and a vision of the hand that created it.

IF I SHOULD DIE TONIGHT

If I should die tonight And you should come to my cold corpse and say, Weeping and heartsick o'er my lifeless clay—

If I should die tonight And you should come in deepest grief and woe— And say, "Here's that ten dollars that I owe."

I might arise in my large white cravat And say, "What's that?"

If I should die tonight And you should come to my cold corpse and kneel, Clasp my bier to show the grief you feel,

I say, if I should die tonight And you should come to me and there and then Just hint 'bout paying me that ten, I might arise a while, But I'd drop dead again.

SHELTERBELT FACTS

The shelterbelt planting program being carried on by the U. S. Forest Service in the Central Great Plains area has now been in progress for a period of five years. The Forest Service reports that 125 million trees have been planted in about 11,000 miles of field shelterbelts on 17,000 farms in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Western Texas.

1. Prevention of wind erosion which robs farm lands of fertile top soil and causes "dusting" of the surface soil.

2. Protection of newly seeded fields and young crops from abrasion and blowing out.

3. Reduction of soil moisture evaporation and excessive transpiration from crops, thus reducing the liability of damage to crops during periods of critical hot winds.

4. Retention of snow on fields instead of allowing it to blow off into gullies, roadside ditches, and other water courses, where the resulting moisture is lost.

5. Protection of livestock from winter winds, thus preventing losses and reducing feed requirements.

6. Providing suitable conditions for the growing of farm gardens and small fruits and other crops requiring protection from the wind and hot summer sun.

7. Production of wood products such as fuel, fence posts, and rough lumber for use on the farm.

8. Providing a suitable environment for wildlife, particularly insectivorous and game birds.

Summary of planting accomplishments in the Plains States:

North Dakota—1214 miles, 17,786 acres, 1748 farms, 19,482,731 trees.

South Dakota—1645 miles, 24,063 acres, 3003 farms, 22,904,428 trees.

Nebraska—2526 miles, 33,022 acres, 4068 farms, 24,320,143 trees.

Kansas—1920 miles, 26,440 acres, 2969 farms, 21,445,958 trees.

Oklahoma—2050 miles, 28,461 acres, 3422 farms, 20,126,780 trees.

Texas—1560 miles, 21,731 acres, 1964 farms, 16,877,159 trees.

Twenty-three states since 1921 have passed acts levying taxes on cigarettes.

BANKS AND NEWSPAPERS

Newspapers and banks have at least one thing in common, in the opinion of the Ouachita Citizen of West Monroe, La. Both of them get plenty of criticism.

"The most difficult task that we can think of at the moment is to run a bank or a newspaper to please everyone," says the Citizen. "If he banker is conservative he is charged with not being helpful to the community. If he lends the depositor's money too freely he is criticized when the borrowers can't repay and the bank closes.

It would be an interesting experiment if "self-starting" critics were given charge of the nation's banks and newspapers for a period. It's a safe bet that they'd rapidly learn a sad lesson—and an equally safe bet that the public which depends on banks to safeguard its money and newspapers to give the news of the world would take a terrific beating.

Amateur banking and amateur journalism would be a far cry from the real professional articles. Banking has given the American people and American business unparalleled service — it furnished the financial life blood that built this nation in world record time. The American newspaper gives the people better, more complete and more accurate coverage of what is happening a mile away or ten thousand miles away than the press of any other country.

curate coverage of what is happening a mile away or ten thousand miles away than the press of any other country. The bankers and the editors will go on doing these vital jobs while "the critics criticize."—Clarion News.

Make an Heirloom Crazypatch Quilt

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS
THE oldest of quilt designs is the crazypatch, yet there is something amazingly modern in its angular lines. A variety of embroidery stitches join the pieces, of plain and figured silks. Several colors of silk embroidery thread are generally used. When a number of patches have been basted in place; sew them down to the foundation with the embroidery stitches and then remove the bastings. The backing is tied to the front with silk embroidery thread as comforters are tied. Little or no padding may be used and a plain band around the edge is effective.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears has prepared patterns and directions for making three of her favorite Early American Quilt Blocks which she will mail upon receipt of name and address and 10 cents coin to cover cost. Her Sewing Booklet No. 2 contains illustrations for 42 embroidery stitches suitable for patch work quilts; also pattern with directions for making the framed picture embroidery sketched on the wall in illustration above. Also numerous gift items: mittens, neck ties; bags; table decorations; and 5 ways to repair fabrics. To get this book, send 10 cents in coin to Mrs. Spears, Drawer 10, Bedford Hills, New York.

The Bengali backed away from Norwood. He looked three shades paler. He was trembling. The Maharajah's right hand seized the drumstick of the golden gong. He raised it.
"No," said Norwood. "Not yet, please, Your Highness."
The Maharajah stared. He seemed uncertain whether to feel flattered or offended. He laid down the drumstick and resumed the tapping on the desk with his fingernails:
"I become nervous," he said, "without my tonic. This is very bad for my nerves. Captain Norwood, how did you know about this?"
Norwood answered without looking at him. He was watching the Bengali and the white-clad servant:
"I didn't know. I guessed it. Both of you, go and stand over in that corner, with your backs to the wall!"
The servant obeyed promptly. He went down on his knees in the corner. He put his hands together and held them in front of his face. The Bengali backed away slowly, watching Norwood's eyes. He backed until he reached a bookcase. Suddenly he snatched a stamp album and hurried it at the goblet. Norwood caught the album in his right hand, by one leaf of the cover. He set the goblet on the desk, without spilling more than two or three drops. Then he closed the album carefully and gave it to the Maharajah. The Maharajah petted it, stroked it:
"My collection of Cape of Good Hope! My triangular goblet!" He glared at the Bengali. "You vandals! Now I know you are guilty! Why did you throw it?"
The Bengali had recovered some of his presence of mind: "It was at him I threw it. By his touch he has defiled your drinking goblet! He is a bribe-taker! I suspect him of having tampered with your tonic. What has he put into it? I advise Your Highness not to taste it!"
The door behind the screen opened, closed again, and the Maharajah appeared. Norwood bowed to her, but she took no notice of him. She went straight to the Maharajah, knelt beside his chair, and whispered. He grumbled at her, sotto voce. She continued whispering. At last he nodded. She stroked his right hand, murmured traditional phrases of respect and left the room. She didn't even glance at the Bengali.
"I need my tonic," said the Maharajah. "I am becoming more nervous each minute."
"Whiskey and soda should be a good prescription for that," said Norwood. "I'd have brought a flask if I had any sense. I didn't think of it."
"I have never defiled myself with whiskey," said the Maharajah.
Norwood kept his eye on the Bengali: "If you had never drunk anything worse than a scotch and soda, they wouldn't be betting in Kadur bazaar that you'll be dead by midnight. Any money on it, doctor? What odds did you get?"
The door behind the screen opened again. The Maharajah reappeared, veiled. She was followed by Lynn, and then Rundhia. Rundhia looked startled. He shot one penetrating glance at the Bengali, then at Norwood, then at the Maharajah. He made a very obvious effort to recover self-possession.
"Captain Norwood," said the Maharajah, "why did you wish to see me?"
"About this," said Norwood. He hadn't time to reply decently. He had noticed that Rundhia was trying to signal the Bengali through the opening under the desk, so he got in the way. As soon as Rundhia had stood up again, Norwood spoke:
"Rundhia, here's something for your bruised face. Come and drink it."
Lynn stared with parted lips from one man to the other. Rundhia glanced at her; he looked stung, scared, sullen. Norwood hadn't looked at Lynn once since she entered the room.
The Maharajah pointed the gong drumstick at the Bengali: "Stand still," he commanded. "If you are unable to stand, you may sit—on the floor—where you are."
"Rundhia," said Norwood, "how about a trial by ordeal? You have accused me, behind my back. I accuse you, to your face, of an attempt to poison His Highness. What do you say? Shall we share this drink together? You drink half. I'll drink what's left."
"You are the last man I would drink with," Rundhia retorted.
Norwood laughed. He thrust his right hand into his tunic. "Steady, Rundhia! Keep your hand away from your pocket. I have you covered.—Lynn! Reach into Rundhia's hip-pocket and put his pistol on the desk!"
Lynn stared—resentful, alarmed, puzzled. Parted lips. Wide blue eyes. Frowning.
Norwood repeated the order: "Lynn, do as I tell you!"

Lynn felt in his pocket. She laid an automatic on the table:
"Rundhia," she said, "I didn't think that of you."
"Rundhia!" said the Maharajah. She had unveiled her face.
Lynn spoke again: "Rundhia, you came to offer Captain Norwood something else than that, didn't you. Where is it?"
Rundhia snarled: "Tell him to put his own pistol on the desk."
"I haven't one," said Norwood. He reached for Rundhia's pistol, jerked it open and broke it.
There came a knock at the door. The Maharajah rearranged her veil. Norwood stepped aside, keeping his eyes on Rundhia, who was biting his lip. The Maharajah tapped the gong with his fingers. The door opened. The attendant attendant spoke rapidly in his native tongue. The Maharajah looked like a frightened sheep. He nodded, speechless. The attendant bowed in the Resident and closed the door behind him. Norwood, still holding the goblet in his left hand, reopened the door and jerked his head at the Bengali:
"Get out!" he commanded.
The Resident stared. He almost forgot to bow to the Maharajah. He watched the Bengali leave the room. Then he looked at Norwood again and raised his eyebrows.

"I have never defiled myself with whiskey," said the Maharajah.

Norwood spoke sotto voce: "Did my man follow you?"
"Yes," said the Resident.
"All right then. The doctor won't get far."
"You surprise us," said the Maharajah. "We are overburdened with joy by this visit. But what does it mean?"
The Resident looked comfortless: "I am at a loss for an answer! Captain Norwood sent me a sort of SOS. He—"
"May I speak?" asked Norwood.
The Resident answered: "I think you'd better, if His Highness—"
"Yes, please," said the Maharajah.
"Rundhia," said Norwood. He held up the blue goblet in his left hand, almost as if he were going to drink a toast: "Let's hear your accusation. What have you against me?"
Rundhia eyed him sullenly: "Nothing," he answered. "I don't know you."
Norwood smiled: "Very cautious of you, Rundhia. I am really alive."
The Resident also smiled. He startled everyone by saying:
"Rundhia, there is a conversation on record. Of course, only my version of it. But I refused, you remember, to treat it as confidential. I made a memorandum of it."
Rundhia swallowed what was left of his dignity. He was looking beaten. He spoke as if the insolence had all oozed out of him:
"I forget what I said. I withdraw it anyhow. I have already written this."
He groped in his inside pocket, avoiding Lynn's eyes, although Lynn looked sympathetic. He produced an envelope, strode past Lynn and offered it to Norwood. Norwood waved it aside and jerked his head toward the Resident.
The Resident accepted the envelope, and bowed to the Maharajah: "You permit me?"
"By all means. I am fascinated."
Lynn was watching the Resident. He had opened the envelope. He read the letter. He passed it to Norwood:
"Is this satisfactory to you, Norwood?"
"It's entirely up to you, sir. I accept it if you do."
The Resident stepped forward and laid the letter in front of the Maharajah: "Will your Highness please read that and, if you see fit, witness it? I have a gallant officer here in need of a rebuttal of some secret accusations that might ruin his career."

The Maharajah read, stared at the Resident, stared at Rundhia, stared at Norwood, reached for his fountain pen and signed.
Rundhia recovered a bit of his insolence. "Are you satisfied?" he demanded.
"No," said Norwood. "Not yet." He reached for the goblet—raised it, sniffed it, smiled at Rundhia. Then he looked straight at Lynn.
Lynn was watching the Maharajah, but she seemed conscious of Norwood's stare. Rundhia whispered to her, but she took no notice.
"Rundhia," said Norwood, "I will ask you two questions. Answer whichever you please. What is in this goblet?"
The Maharajah pulled herself to her feet, picked up her cushion and went and knelt at the Maharajah's left hand, so that she could watch Rundhia:
"Rundhia," she said, "answer!"
Rundhia said nothing; he glared at Norwood. Lynn turned in her chair to watch Rundhia's face. Norwood spoke again:
"You don't answer the first one? Very well, here's the other: why did you sign that retraction? I didn't ask you for it. Who did?"
Rundhia was silent.
"Speak!" said the Maharajah. She had unveiled her face. She was looking at Lynn.
Rundhia glanced at Lynn. Lynn looked suddenly straight at Norwood and spoke with such constrained emotion that her voice sounded fiercely angry:
"Captain Norwood, I asked Rundhia to write that. If it isn't what you wanted, you may blame me."
Norwood's lips moved toward a smile, but he saw her embarrassment, so he checked it. He looked straight in her eyes for several seconds before he looked at Rundhia again:
"Substitute question, Rundhia! You didn't answer that one. How much did you charge for this retraction of your accusation against me?"
Rundhia had had time to consider. He sneered: "I wrote that as an act of magnanimity. Was it wasted on you?"
Norwood glanced quickly at Lynn. "No, no, Rundhia, it wasn't wasted. But tell us all what is in this goblet. I could have it analyzed. Perhaps you would prefer to consult that Bengali doctor before you answer? Question a bit awkward? Your trouble is that you can't guess how much I know, can you? Can you guess why I let the Bengali leave the room? Any chance that he betrayed you? Rather drop the question? Very well, answer the other: how much or what did you charge, and to whom, for the magnanimous retraction of your accusation against me? I insist on an answer."

Rundhia spoke sullenly: "Nothing. No one. I don't even know what you mean."
Norwood looked at Lynn. Her lips moved. He was in time to check her:
"Please say nothing! I want Rundhia to tell it—Rundhia, choose. I won't wait all night. Account for the contents of this goblet—or else answer: what promise have you exacted—from whom?"
The Maharajah spoke in a strained voice: "Answer him, Rundhia."
Rundhia was silent. Lynn stared. He avoided her eyes.
"If I should have to mention this goblet again," said Norwood, "I will ask His Highness the Maharajah to summon the guard. What promise have you exacted from whom as the price of your signing that retraction?"
"There was no price."
The Maharajah was looking at Lynn. She spoke suddenly: "Run-dhia, speak like a man! There was a promise!"

Rundhia stared at his feet. He had the grace to speak as if he were ashamed. He almost mumbled: "I release her from the promise."
Norwood looked at Lynn steadily: "Do you accept that?"
"No I refuse. Is this your vengeance? It's cruel. Doesn't the retraction satisfy you?"
Norwood smiled at Lynn and made a reassuring gesture. Rundhia stared; he looked astonished. The Maharajah stood up. Norwood spoke:
"Lynn, did Rundhia tell you that I tore up your letter? He lied. Your aunt gave it to me less than an hour ago. It reached her by mistake in the wrong envelope."
"I confirm that," said the Resident.
Lynn stood up and waited for Rundhia to speak. He didn't.
"Rundhia," she said, "did you hear that?" Then, turning: "Thank you, Captain Norwood."
"Just a misunderstanding," Norwood answered. "I will explain it later."
Lynn shook her head. Her eyes met his but she made no reply. She left the room by the door behind the screen. The Maharajah followed her. Silence.
The Resident wiped his face with the handkerchief: "Steady, Norwood," he said. "Steady." He spoke aloud to the Maharajah:
"Does Your Highness wish—"
"I wish for tranquillity! I do not care to know any more!"
"Carry on!" said the Resident. "Careful!"
Norwood raised the goblet, this time in his right hand: "You don't deserve this, Rundhia. You're a blackguard." He glanced at the Resident: "You agree, sir?"
The Resident nodded. The Maharajah stared, fascinated. Norwood spilled the contents of the goblet on the floor.
The Maharajah turned to Rundhia:
"Leave the room. Never return." Rundhia moved toward the door behind the screen, but the Resident jumped out of his chair. Rundhia began to hurry. Norwood was too quick. He shoved the screen in Rundhia's way. It banged against the door and the noise almost made the Maharajah scream.
"Your Highness," said the Resident, "in Prince Rundhia's presence, I take this opportunity to inform you that I have written to His Majesty's advisers, strongly recommending them to exercise their veto in the matter of Prince Rundhia's succession to the throne of Kadur."
"You have already written?"
"I have mailed the letter."
"I resign," said Rundhia sullenly. "You and your veto may go to the devil."
"May I speak to Your Highness alone?" asked the Resident.
The Maharajah scowled at Rundhia: "Go out that way!" He pointed to the door into the anteroom.
Rundhia walked out. Norwood followed. He overtook Rundhia at the head of the stairs, and Rundhia turned about and faced him:
"I sincerely regret," he remarked, looking straight into Norwood's eyes, "that the men who fired at you, missed."
"Yes, you had rotten luck, Rundhia. What will you do—go to Europe? The Riviera? That's crowded with might-have-beens who insisted on hitting below the belt. D'you know, Rundhia, if I had even suspected you of having put one over on Lynn Harding, I would have let you hang. You know, they hang even princes who play at your game." He laughed. "No, Rundhia, no. You will walk ahead of me down the stairs. I know that trick."

English Abbey Built 800 Years Ago Now Up for Sale

Rufford Abbey, 800-year-old English estate, is being put up for sale, London papers report. The estate contains 18,700 acres and includes the abbey, founded in the reign of King Stephen, partly rebuilt in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries and an ancient deer park of more than 500 acres.
It also includes the whole or greater part of the villages and parishes of Old Ollerton, Eakring, Wellow, Bilthorpe and Ormpton, as well as parts of Walesby, Eglington, Edwinstowe, Farnsfield, Kirton, Blidworth and Tuxford.
The estate comprises about 70 farms, 38 small holdings, four licensed houses, including the famous Hop Pole at Ollerton, many private residences and shops, nearly 2,000 acres of woods and plantations, and hundreds of cottages.
One of the most famous estates in the dukeries, Rufford abbey never has been in the market before, and its forthcoming sale will be one of the outstanding transactions of recent years in real estate. Lands at Rufford were recorded long before Domesday, but its history as an abbey began in 1148, when Gilbert de Gaunt, Earl of Lincoln, founded an abbey there, dedicated it to the honor of the Blessed Virgin Mary and colonized it with Cistercian monks from Rievaulx abbey.

The abbey lands increased, and from the earliest times the monks enjoyed special privileges in the surrounding Forest of Sherwood. The abbots became rich enough to entertain royalty, and September 18, 1290, Rufford received the first of many subsequent royal visitors; Edward I passed a night there and sealed a variety of documents.
The rich abbey attracted the attention of Henry VIII's commissioners when he was considering the dissolution of the monasteries and in 1537 he annexed the abbey and gave it and all its lands to George, earl of Shrewsbury, with whose descendants it ever since has remained. Thus began Rufford abbey's 400-year existence as a country house.
The chapel of the abbey was the scene of the wedding in 1574 of Charles Stuart, younger brother of Darnley, and Elizabeth Cavendish.

Two coats of thin shellac give a hardwood floor a much better finish than one thick one. First coat must be thoroughly dried before second is applied.

Save Christmas Cards.—Little folks can spend many a happy hour cutting out figures from Christmas cards. Instruct them to leave a small flap on the bottom of each figure, flap to be folded over, permitting figure to stand up.

For a breakfast treat, mix cinnamon and sugar and spread on hot buttered toast.

Sift the Flour.—Flour has a tendency to pack down, especially fine wheat flour. One may easily put as much as an extra cup of flour in a recipe if it is not sifted before measuring.

A porous pot allows water to evaporate and this is a bad feature in warm dry houses. Plants in clay pots tend to develop a root system between the soil and the pot with very few roots in the soil itself.

Safety Quips

The two greatest errors in driving are taking a blind curve too fast and taking a curve that isn't there.

Better 10 minutes too late in this world than 30 years too soon in the next.

Keep your hands on the wheel—soft shoulders are dangerous. Some motorists can make 60 miles an hour a lot easier than they can make 12 payments on the car.

The dullest drivers have the brightest headlights. After you get to the office, do you tear into your work as fast as you speeded there in your automobile?

LET US TELL YOU MORE ABOUT IT

OLD AGE PENSIONS

By Richard C. Bush, in the Waco Record
The pathetic effort of the state department of public welfare to explain why some pensions have been raised and others lowered appears in the adjoining column.

The statement, which The Record is glad to print in full, confirms our belief that somebody is dealing in human misery in this state.

One of Waco's former contributions to public service in Texas, Former Lieutenant Governor Edgar E. Witt, writes us that he "cut from recent issues of your paper certain statements and information in regard to the payments being made to pensioners, and the inference that uniform reductions of $6 were not being made, and sent this information to Adam R. Johnson for explanation."

Mr. Witt passed Mr. Johnson's "explanation" on to The Record.

Let us assure Mr. Witt however, that we indulged in much more than INFERENCE. We definitely stated that the pension racket is a disgrace. When anything sinks to the level of the present political-pension dispensation in the state of Texas, you must do more than INFER.

The explanation offered by the state department of public welfare, of course, is that its very hard-working investigators actually found that certain persons on the pension roll suddenly were plunged into a changed condition of greater need, despite the department's decision to pay off the Dallas banks at the rate of $200,000 per month.

So, in spite of the department's Oct. 14 statement that everybody was to be cut $6, and that "THE INVESTIGATOR CANNOT INCREASE YOUR GRANT to take care of the cut," the belated explanation is now made that INVESTIGATORS DID CAUSE SOME GRANTS TO BE INCREASED, and they WERE increased.

But the department says those who were fortunate enough to get raises were actually CUT $6 "after" the raises had been figured in.

We are to assure, then, that in the case of No. 2466, Mr. Henry C. Butler, whom we listed as receiving a raise to $24, the board must have first increased Mr. Butler's allowance to $30, then cut it back $6 to $24. (He got $18 in September).

Perhaps the board, in the case of No. 3284, Mr. Tracy E. Williams, whom we listed as getting $21, actually was first raised to $27, then cut back to $21. (He got $16 in the previous month).

Our facts and figures, names and numbers, are not based on the authorizations, specifications or juggling of amounts by the state department of public welfare—the names and amounts we have listed in our editorials are based on ACTUAL warrants issued by Comptroller Sheppard, showing liberal increases to some and pitiful reductions to others—which cannot be explained away by directors, assistant directors, investigators, case workers, traveling joy riders or anybody else, from the Governor down to the janitor of the capitol.

We call upon the three gentlemen heading the state department of public welfare, and we call upon Governor W. Lee O'Daniel to clean out the Augean stables.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S ADVICE

Benjamin Franklin states in his autobiography that he gave the following advice to a preacher desiring to raise money to build a church:

"In the first place, I advise you to apply to all those whom you know will give something; next, to those whom you are uncertain whether they will give anything or not, and show them the list of those who have given; and, lastly, do not neglect those who you are sure will give nothing; for in some of them you may be mistaken."

Franklin adds in his autobiography: "He laugh'd and thank'd me, and said he would take my advice. He did so, for he ask'd of everybody, and he obtained a much larger sum than he expected, and with which he erected the capacious and very elegant meetinghouse that stands on Arch Street."

A Yankee was on a Christmas walking tour in Scotland. Snow had fallen and he was struggling along a narrow road when he met a Highlander.

"I guess, my friend, I sure am lost!" he said, plaintively.

Sheep—What is it your father sees me to object to, darling?
Charles—He doesn't see anything in Charles. That's why he objects.

SAVE US FROM BOOSTERS

By George A. Kyes (guest editorial in Phoenix, Ariz., Gazette)

Deeper and deeper, the mystery grows: Why do so many people work for others? Why do they not get into business for themselves?

Fortunate, indeed, is today's business man. In the old days, when a storekeeper asked, "What can I do for you?" it was only a polite way of saying, "What do you wish to buy?" But now he means just that—"What can I do?"

A potential customer is more apt to be seeking a donation for some cause, local or loco, than to want to make a purchase. "The Business Men Should Help" is the motto of all boosters, professional or amateur.

Brave, indeed, is the merchant who refuses a request from a booster. He may be boycotted and run out of town. Or, worse still, he may be classed as not "civic minded."

Red eyes staring from behind a counter no longer indicate that the proprietor was out all night trying to empty a jug and fill a straight. Probably he lay awake wondering which tax to pay first. Poor pickle king, with his 57 varieties, thought he had something. He should see today's list of taxes. Or should he?

A business man, recently asked to make a list of the taxes he paid, replied: "Not me, I've already had one stroke."

God save us, if it's not too late, from the boosters. Their number, already legion, is increasing with amazing rapidity. And they've boosted 97% of the cities and towns in the country into a state of hopeless indebtedness. And are they slowing down?

My heart bleeds for a little business that I can call my own. I know a lawyer I'd like to give it to.

We Are Well Pleased with the number of new subscribers to the News at the beginning of this year. We have been compelled to increase our press run four different times since the fall season began.

Renewal subscriptions have made almost 100%—only a few who were moving away failed to have their expiration figures set up another year.

While this is very gratifying to the publisher, there are yet some people in the community who do not have their names on the subscription list. We are told that most of these borrow from their neighbors, and it is to these few people that we direct this advertisement.

The News costs less than a package of chewing gum each week and is packed with interesting items of the neighborhood. We have never heard of anyone anywhere who did not like to see what was in the home paper each week, which is natural, as we all like to know what is going on in the community, and have a healthy interest in our neighbors.

There is nothing that can be bought for as little money as the weekly visits of the News that will bring as much pleasure and satisfaction. Why not drop in the next time you are in town and have your name added to those of your neighbors who read their own copy of the News each week?
