MAON'S FATE WITH JURY

Dirigible At Bottom of Pacific; 81 Are Rescued

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13. (AP)—The giant dirigible Macon, destroyed by a sudden mysterious disaster, lay at the bottom of the Pacific ocean today.

Its 81 survivors were being brought here and two members of the crew were missing.

One or two of the craft's twelve gas cells suddenly burst last night as the Macon sped through the squally air and fog 110 miles south of San Francisco.

The commander of a cruiser in division number three transmitted a report from Lieut. Commander Wiley, commanding the Macon, saying: "Received word No. 1 cell under fire gone, stern crumbling, finally No. 2 cell gone. Tried land near cruisers off point Sur but could not see surface until shortly before landing."

RESCUE ALL BUT TWO CREW MEMBERS

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13. (AP)—The $4,000,000 dirigible Macon lurched out of control Tuesday night, plunged 2,500 feet, and sank in the Pacific, but 81 of the 83 navy men aboard her were saved.

The fate of two men who had remained aboard the dirigible is not known. Ernest Edwin Dailey and a mess attendant, Edward Quinday, had not been determined more than four hours after the crash.

A sudden unknown disaster—possibly an explosion or disabled gear—sent the pride of the navy's air forces into a sickening plunge into the fog-cloaked water.

Lieutenant Commander Herbert V. Wiley, skipper of the giant airship and only officer who survived the Akron disaster, was picked up by rescue ships which were on maneuvers with the dirigible.

The scene of the disaster was 13 miles southeast of Point Sur, rocky promontory 110 miles south of here.

Sixty-four survivors were picked up by the cruiser Richmond, the Concord took 17, and the Cincinnati saved six in thrilling rescues.

Admiral J. M. Reeves, commander in chief of the United States fleet, wireless naval radio headquarters here late last night.

"The Macon, due to an accident the details of which are at present not available, sank about 5:35 p. m., 13 miles southeast of Point Sur."

The commander-in-chief then confirmed that 81 of the 83 men aboard the airship had been picked up by nearby naval vessels. He added there were no serious injuries.

The Macon's crew, apparently calm in the face of disaster, aided the rescuers by giving their position in quick SOS calls and then shooting a red rocket.

The airship was observed cruising through the skies, its giant bulk outlined above lowering fog, by the light house at Point Sur.

When something went wrong and Commander Wiley flashed the first SOS at 5:15 p. m. (7:15 p. m. central standard time).

It called for immediate assistance, saying the big navy air cruiser "was falling" and adding ominously that there had been a "bad casualty."

Then came the one word, "Wait." But the navy vessels, over which the Macon had been flying on its return to its Sunnyvale base, already had thrown over their rudders and headed for the spot.

The last SOS call came from Commander Wiley as he stated: "Will abandon ship as soon as we land on the water somewhere 20 miles off Pt. Sur, probably ten miles at sea."

From all directions the gray navy ships sped to their fellow survivors on the Sunnyvale base messages that the Macon had gone under the waves.

The flagship of the fleet, the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, shortly sent a message saying: "Macon survivors located. Assistance no longer needed."

Boats went overboard from the rescuing ships and cruiser Richmond then messaged:

"Richmond has on board 64 survivors, Cincinnati six and Concord 17."

The rescue of Commander Wiley, only commissioned survivor in the 1933 pluck of the airship Akron, fatal to 73, was completed in a message approximately three hours after the mishap.

Lieut. Commander Jesse L. Kenworthy Jr., executive officer of the Macon, was rescued along with Wiley and nine others, the cruiser Concord reported. They were in the first of the rescuing lifeboats to reach the Concord.

The Macon was returning with surface craft from maneuvers off Southern California.

Huge searchlights aboard the many navy vessels in the vicinity cut through the dark as the warships added the stricken airship.

Tossing waters confronted the crews of the surface vessels as the survivors tossed about on the ocean. Some of the Macon's crew sent up red flares to guide the rescuers to the spot.

In Washington, the navy's commander-in-chief, President Roosevelt, telephoned the navy command in the nation headquarters for first hand information. Members of congress, long interested in a controversy over the worthiness of dirigibles as fighting craft, also sought information.

Wives of the Macon's crew members waited for news with stolid courage in their California homes. "We don't have our tragics, don't we?" commented the wife of Lieut. Commander Edwin P. Cochran, with a grin.

The Lakehurst, N. J., air base was cast into gloom. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, in charge there, early expressed fear the Macon might be lost forever.

The U. S. S. Relief, hospital ship, was ordered under speed from San Diego to Point Sur to aid the survivors. (See DIRIGIBLE, page 4)

MOISTURE HERE EXCEEDS 1½ INCHES, WETTING FIELDS MORE THAN 2 FEET; GRASS AND WEEDS RECEIVE IMPETUS

Rainfall and snow at Midland over a week's period had reached a total Tuesday night of 1.54 inches.

The heavy snow Tuesday amounted to 64 of an inch, melting rapidly throughout the day, although lower temperatures through the night and early this morning kept a white blanket over the ground.

Farmers who had broken some of their land said the ground was wet down two or three inches. They said the land was in fine shape for plowing now and a good season had been started.

Ranchmen said the moisture was well below the roots of the grass and that both weeds and grass would be stimulated as a result of the soaking snow.

Due to the fact that it went directly into the ground, rather than to run over the gentle slopes and courses of the South Plains, ranchmen said the inch and a half of moisture would do as much good as three inches of rain.

With the exception of the north plains, the snow and rain apparently was general.

The prolonged drought of the Trans-Pecos region was broken, as it was on much of the South Plains. Lamesa, where the 1934 precipitation was 6.72 inches and where the last rain recorded fell last September, had the worst drought in its history broken when rain and snow put over an inch of moisture in the ground. Snow still was falling last night.

Both snow and rain brought moisture to the South Plains. Lubbock reported 4 inch precipitation and practically the entire region was benefitting from snow and rain Tuesday night.

Thirty-four towns in the San Angelo territory reported the best winter rainfall in two years, and a day rain followed a week's weather. The precipitation averaged from 25 inch to over one inch.

RECOMMENDATIONS FROM HEARING GO TO RR COMMISSION

With general accordance from the 200 operators of West Texas attending the meeting, hearings on the Railroad Commission's proposed re-arranging of rates on all roads of the area were closed yesterday afternoon.

Testimony taken during the hearing, which was spirited throughout both the morning and afternoon sessions, will be submitted to the Commission officials along with recommendations of Gordon Griffin, chief engineer, H. C. Shipp, local engineer, and District Manager W. R. Bowden, who conducted the meeting here.

After discussing each field separately as to cost and procedure of taking the new potentials, it appeared likely that 24-hour open flow or less gauges would be taken on each and every well except those of Yates and Hendricks pools. No date has as yet been set for starting the testing, by which the commission seeks to determine more fair distribution of the allowable set for West Texas.

"Bleeder" for Oil Wells Shown By Its Inventor

W. K. Edwards of Big Spring, inventor of a number of mechanical devices, was demonstrating his new "bleeder" for oil wells today at the Hydrostatic Water Bleeder. Patent had just been issued at Washington.

The device is for the use of oil operators in the testing of wells. It is a tank through which the fluid flows before going into the stock tanks and thence to the pipe lines.

Edwards is testing by continuously eliminating the present-day system, wherein a worker has to conduct the draining process at intervals of about 24 hours for each producing well.

Edwards does not include the tanks in his equipment, merely installing the device which operates on principle of physics, in the tanks already used. It is not necessary to drain the tanks while the "bleeder" is being installed, he said.

The device is adjustable, to take care of tanks of different heights. As it is inside the tank and always in operation, it cannot be affected by freezing, he said.

Prevention of loss of oil is one of its purposes. Selling at a nominal figure, Edwards said he hoped to have the device in operation at 25,000 to 50,000 wells soon.

Although interested chiefly in showing the device to oil men attending the hearing yesterday, it was understood Edwards was investigating a plant location.

KENNAMER TESTIMONY BEGINS

PAWNEE, Okla., Feb. 13. (AP)—Ted Bell, fourth state witness today named Phil Kennamer on trial for the fatal shooting of a John Gorrell, as the originator of a plot to take legal pictures of two Tulsa society girls.

Floyd J. Huff of Kansas City testified that Kennamer threatened to kill Gorrell.

PAWNEE, Okla., Feb. 13. (AP)—After a stirring day that saw completion of a jury and the state's exposition of how and why John Gorrell was killed, Judge Thurman Hurst resumed court Tuesday night, to resume this morning with the first testimony in the Phil Kennamer murder trial.

Dr. J. F. Gorrell, father of the slain 23-year-old student dentist, will be the first witness, Holly Anderson, chief of the prosecution staff, announced.

The chief events Tuesday were:

1. An hour's secret conference of the attorneys with all the attorneys over "insinuations" of jury tampering.
2. Completion of the jury.
3. Disclosure of the motive for the slaying, as construed by the state.
4. Revelation that Mrs. O. L. Harrell was killed, Judge Thurman Hurst announced positively.

There had been no information divulged in the secret conference that would justify declaring a mistrial.

Reveal Motive

The state's motive, jealously guarded for two and one-half months by Holly Anderson, Tulsa county attorney in charge of the prosecution, was revealed in Judge Anderson's statement.

It was simply that Gorrell was killed because he had tried to "pull out" of a kidnaping plot aimed at pretty Virginia Wilcox, 16-year-old daughter of a wealthy Tulsa oil man, H. F. Wilcox.

This motive was disclosed exclusively by the Associated Press last Dec. 5, six days after Gorrell was found slain.

Anderson had called it "plausible" but refused to say that it had been reached as the trial motive.

Mrs. Harmon, owner of an apartment building in Tulsa, was quoted by Wallace as having overheard Kennamer say of Gorrell:

"He has run out of me. I am going to Kansas and put the kids under him."

Young Kennamer, 19-year-old son of Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer of the northern Oklahoma district, himself braided the story Mrs. Harmon will tell as "untrue" three hours before Wallace disclosed its nature.

Kennamer Denies It

As he was lurching in the old two-story sandstone jail Kennamer said:

"I can tell you what this 'mystery' witness probably will say. She either will say I once rented or tried to rent an apartment from her, or that she saw me there or heard me say something, and all that would be untrue."

Wallace had said that Mrs. Harmon rented an apartment to Kennamer and another young man, whose name the prosecutor did not reveal.

As the jury finally was completed at 2:43 p. m., Tuesday it was composed of five farmers, four filling station operators, a stock buyer, a lumberman and a bank clerk.

Step by step Wallace traced his view of how Kennamer allegedly conceived kidnaping a girl and extortion plans against Barbara Boyle, daughter of a wealthy Tulsa gasoline dealer, J. H. Boyle, and then slew his victim when he refused to continue with the conspiracy.

Kennamer proposed to Gorrell that they either kidnap Barbara Boyle or take compromising pictures. (See TRIAL, page 4)

Archaeological Museum Outgrows Its Quarters at Texas U; Space Enlarged

By LORENA DRUMMOND

AUSTIN, Feb. 13.—"Twice as much space as is now available would be required to display properly all of the material found thus far has been relics of the Caddos, and of the tribes friendly to them, according to A. T. Jackson, university field foreman in archeology.

Basket culture was evidenced among the early pre-historic tribes, while modeling in clay to make pottery was a pursuit of a later civilization. By this criterion archeologists are able to ascertain the relative antiquity of certain tribes. By the presence or absence of colored beads, metal arrowheads, etc., they are able to determine whether or not the tribes had come in contact with the white man.

For a long time Texas has been considered a mine of archaeological materials, and due to the fact that Texas has had no State museum, and indeed has had no stimulus to retain her own archaeological finds, many valuable materials have been carried away by scientists from other states. In recent years, there has been carried on under the university department of anthropology and archeology, headed by Prof. J. E. Pearce, a somewhat extensive search for archaeological sites. Field trips have been made by parties of university students, supervised by faculty members, and a wealth of worthwhile material has been acquired.

The university first turned its attention to East Texas, where burial and kitchen midden mounds were discovered in profusion. Many of these yielded skeletons, earthen-

CASE REACHED THE JURY AT 11:12 AM

FLEMINGTON, Feb. 13. (AP)—No word from the jury in the Hauptmann case had been received at 1:40 p. m.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 13. (AP)—The case of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, charged with murder in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping, was given to the jury at 11:12 o'clock this morning.

Judge Thomas W. Trenchard began instructions to the jury at 10:02 a. m.

He said the jury may conclude from the evidence that the baby was stolen by someone who entered the nursery of the Lindbergh home through a window by means of a ladder.

The defense had contended that the baby was carried down the stairs of the home by someone on the "inside" and that the ladder was a "prop."

The court charged the jury that it may conclude that the baby's sleeping suit was stripped from it at the point where the nurse, Betty Gowd, said she found its thumb-guards.

The jury was instructed that it could return three possible verdicts: murder in the first degree, the same with recommendation of life imprisonment, or acquittal.

The court paid particular attention to the disputed reliability of Dr. John F. Condon and Amandus Hochmuth and the defense theory that a gang perpetrated the crime and that the dead leader Fisch gave Hauptmann the ransom money.

"Do you believe that?" were the court's closing words about each defense contention.

On the state's ladder evidence, the court asked: "Does not evidence satisfy you that at least a part of the wood from which the ladder was built came from the flooring of the attic of the defendant?"

He said: "If you find that the murder was committed by the defendant, it is murder in the first degree."

Judge Trenchard said of Hauptmann's testimony: "His interest in the result may be taken into consideration on the question of whether he is telling the truth."

The defense took general exception to the whole charge.

CUMMINGS WELL IN SAYRE AREA IS A PRODUCER

By PAUL OSBORNE

Another completed producer was scored for the Sayre area of northern Winkler county yesterday when production gauge of Sinclair Prairie No. 2 Cummings gave the well a potential of 425 barrels daily.

The new producer, which is the fifth to date in the recently discovered sand production pool, is located 330 feet from the north and east lines of section 11, block 26, public school land, about 5 miles east of Dawson county wildcat, and with derrick, engine and equipment overhauled, Harry Adams and Fred Turner, who have taken over the well, will probably start running casing on the test tomorrow. The Dawson well, having topped Yates said high, has been the cause of an extensive lease playing during the past three months.

Two other Dawson wildcat operations are scheduled if deals now in the mill can be completed. One is reported to be a 100-acre block, E. Ellison and others of Midland are proposing a 4,500 foot test near the center of labor 11, league 270, Moore county school land, in the southwest part of the county, and Marvin Croom, formerly of the Shell Company, is reported working on a test to be located on a 10,250 acre block in the Dawson county wildcat, east of section 12, block 2, T & P Railway Survey, east central part of the county.

Plug was to have been drilled yesterday on the Monument well, American No. 1-D State, Lea county, but no reports have come here today.

Lewis Gernhard, Granger farm hand, is looked upon as an oil well by many at its present depth of 3,885 feet, and with six inch casing set at 3,760 feet, operators plan to clean the hole and run tubing to test shows.

York and Harper's wildcat north-east of the Means area of Andrews county was reported to be drilling at 1,840 feet in red rock.

HELP FOR HISTORY

The new national Archives Building in Washington is going to be the last word in preserving the records of the republic.

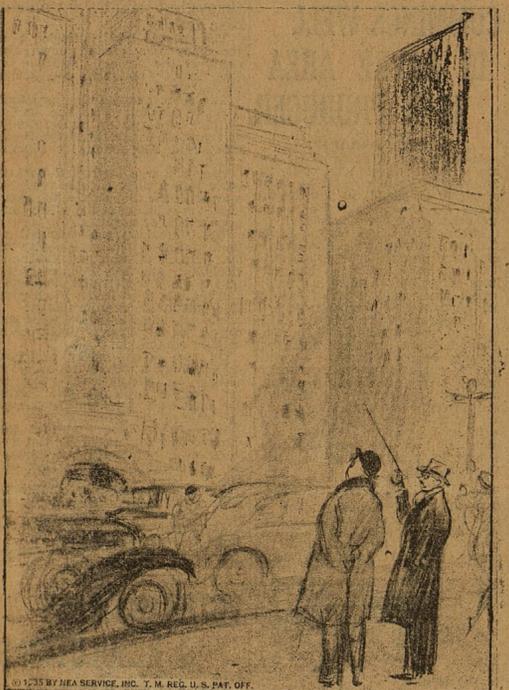

It will even include eight fireproof vaults for storing motion picture films, sound recordings of news events, and speeches by high officials.

Things are being made easier for the future historians all the time. What would we not give today for a sound film of Patrick Henry's great "Treason" speech before the Virginia House of Burgesses? Or of Washington's first inaugural address? Or of gaunt Lincoln speaking those few immortal lines on the field of Gettysburg?

Future historians will have such records, and they should help greatly to hold more accurate the story of history, which cynical Napoleon once called, with all too much truth, "a fable agreed upon."

Russia now is making 57 varieties of sausage, but is sticking to only one line of boloney.

Nervousness Mars Beauty; So Must Relax for Poise

By ALICIA HART
NEA Service Staff Writer

The calm, relaxed woman generally is much more beautiful than one who is tense and who constantly makes nervous gestures with face and hands. Vivacity—a grand quality in anyone—is not synonymous with nervousness and it's quite possible to be alert and enthusiastic, yet not flustered.

For the sake of beauty and health, everyone should learn to relax. If you possibly can, get into a peaceful frame of mind while you're eating breakfast and try to maintain that serene outlook on life the rest of the day.

Naturally this isn't as easy as it sounds. We all have worries, of course, and to control ourselves so that our troubles won't put lines on our faces is something we have to learn to do. The best first step, probably, is to get a bit philosophical about daily duties and unavoidable minor troubles. It is possible to be efficient in your work above reproach as far as social obligations are concerned, without getting into a state of nervous excitement ten times a day.

Remember that the right amount of sleep is about the best tonic in the world. Try to sleep eight hours each night and be sure it's the kind of sleep that makes you feel rested and in a cheerful mood in the morning.

If day after day, you get up as tired as you were when you went to bed, start a sweeping investigation. Maybe the bed is uncomfortable. Perhaps the room is improperly ventilated. If conditions are right and reached a harmonious working agreement is being conceded in legislative halls. Alfred supported Rep. R. W. Calvert of Illinois for Speaker.

Gov'r., Speaker Apparently Have Solved Battles

AUSTIN, Feb. 13. (AP)—That Governor James V. Allred and Speaker of the House Coke Stevenson have amicably adjusted their differences that climaxed in the speakership race and reached a harmonious working agreement is being conceded in legislative halls.

Many observers feared the rebound would crystallize opposition in the house to some of the administration's major legislative proposals. It was generally agreed the race was the hottest in recent years.

The first overtone reportedly was made by Governor Allred soon after the race and before he took office. He invited Stevenson to a conference to see if they couldn't get together. It was held in Allred's downtown office.

Reports of the conference, about which little could be learned at the time, state they greeted each other cordially and agreed the hatchet ought to be buried in the interest of harmony. Both supposedly laid their cards on the table and made no "bones" about their previous attitude.

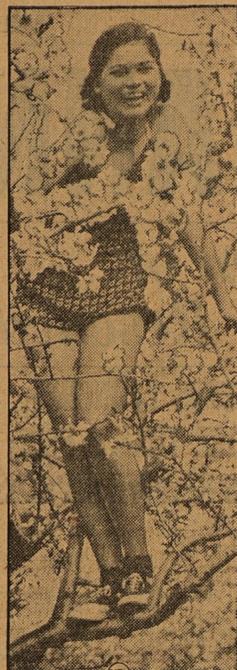

"You got out and campaigned against me last summer and I beat the daylight out of you," Allred is reported to have remarked to Stevenson. "You trimmed me this time, so let's call it quits."

"That's the way it ought to be and it's all right with me," Stevenson is said to have responded.

Since the conference feeling over the race has disappeared from the surface. There may be hard feelings left but they have not cropped out. The ease with which the first of the administration bills was pushed through the house suggests that the agreement is effective.

The governor's recommendation for increased court facilities in East Texas was jammed through almost without opposition; both factions united to apply the steam roller to opponents of Governor Allred's bill to establish a state planning board to co-operate in federal recovery efforts.

Udden Experiment Becomes Universal

AUSTIN—The late Dr. J. A. Udden, formerly the director of the University of Texas Bureau of Economic Geology, was the first man in America, and perhaps anywhere, to realize the importance of studying by means of the microscope the more or less pulverized rocks brought out of a drill hole by the bailer or washed up by the constant stream of fluid used in rotary drilling, according to C. L. Baker, geologist in the bureau. He established the bureau at Austin the first laboratory for the study of well cuttings.

Today all large petroleum and gas companies the world over have their own Udden laboratories and most every driller of a deep well preserves them for study and determination. Mr. Baker said, "By this means very much has been learned concerning the rocks buried beneath the surface and the knowledge acquired leads very often to valuable discoveries of oil, gas, water or mineral deposits."

In Texas by this means much has been found out about the old Texas of late Paleozoic time and many facts have become known which it would have been impossible to find by the study of the geology of the surface.

The Bureau of Economic Geology during the 25 years of its existence has acquired a large collection of well cuttings which have already proved very valuable in the study of the sub-surface geology. When new wells are drilled the geologic conditions found in them can be compared to great advantage and profit with those known from studies of drilling samples procured from the older wells.

NEW BILL WOULD NOT OBLITERATE RANGERS, PATROL

AUSTIN, Feb. 13. (AP)—Fears of the Texas Rangers and the State Highway Patrol that they would lose their identities as a result of the reorganization of state law enforcement agencies proposed by a Senate crime investigating committee apparently have been set at rest. A bill sponsored by members of the committee and introduced in both Houses of the Legislature would create a state Department of Public Safety and lift both Rangers and the patrol into the department as two of the three principal divisions. The divisions would be known as "The Texas Rangers," "The Texas Highway Patrol," and "The Headquarters Division." In the third group would be bureaus of identification and records, communications, intelligence and education. The active head of the department would be a "Public Safety Director," who would be appointed by a three-member commission appointed by the governor for six-year terms. Members of the historic Ranger Force of Texas admittedly have been uneasy lest their traditional organization might lose its separate identity in the merger. They have been especially desirous of retaining the name of Rangers. The Highway patrol, although established only a few years ago, has felt it has set a fine record for efficiency and should not be subordinated in any re-organization. Under the reorganization bill the Rangers merely would be transferred to the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Safety with its personnel, property, equipment and records. There would be provision as now for a maximum of one headquarters company and "four companies of mounted men," except in emergencies when the commission with the consent of the governor, could increase the force to meet extraordinary conditions. The headquarters company would consist of one captain, designated Senior Captain of the Texas Rangers, one sergeant and not more than four privates. The Senior Captain would be in direct command of all the Texas Rangers.

Veteran Lobbyist Back on the Job Fighting for Claim

AUSTIN, Feb. 13. (AP)—The most persistent lobbyist of them all, Senator Annie Cook is back on the job with all her ardor and spirit. "Senator" Cook, by the way, wears the title by courtesy. She has been in and about legislative halls so long that most persons have all but forgotten her last name and refer to her as "senator."

Texas Economist Says Cotton in Greater Crisis

AUSTIN—The American cotton crisis is deepening, according to Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas and internationally recognized cotton authority. He said that Secretary Wallace, in announcing the Government restriction program, in reality has notified foreign competitors to proceed full steam ahead for at least one year with their increased cotton production program.
