PRICE TEN CENTS

Brent and Kim Campbell, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bundy Hal Campbell were top steer exhibitors Monday, at the 36th annual Motley County Junior Livestock Show, sponsored by the Motley County Livestock Association. Brent's 1936 lb. Hereford was judged Grand Champion, and Kim exhibited the Reserve Champion steer, a 933 lb. Hereford. Both animals were bred by L. B. Campbell.

Brent literally "took it all" with his exhibits. In addition to being judged Grand Champion, his steer was 1st in the heavy steer class and also 1st in the rate-of-gain contest with a daily gain of 2.50 lbs. per day. The steer sold for a premium of $200 to Caprock Gin Inc., of Flomot. Brent was also the beef showmanship winner and also exhibited the 1st place medium steer. He and Kim also had the 3rd place light steer.

Kim's Reserve Champion was second in the heavy steer class. This animal sold for a premium of $180 to S. C. Bureson of Floyd County. Kim also exhibited the 3rd place heavy steer.

TRAIL DUST

When we ship our dreams on a train of thoughts it is important to consign them to a destination close to an abundance of work.

Truth is the most convincing excuse our shortcomings can engineer; the most forceful alibi ever fostered by our transgressions.

Work continues to be the most effective therapy known to the troubled heart. Its popularity, however, is limited to patients willing to pay a little more than they expected.

Circumstances beyond our control are often the result of poor navigation while at the helm of our personal affairs.

Wind whipped the crying cottonwood as lightning barges attacked the spring night in repeated onslaughts. Rain pelted the window near my bed and ran away in fury, and the eaves splattered as waves of storm clouds passed. At dawn the world was washed sweet and clean, and perfumed with the fragrance of sage and wet grass. Soft rolls of purple clouds turned to flaming gold as the sun climbed from the hills and a blue quail called remotely from the creek. Cool mud oozed between my toes like a weld that bound my spirit to the earth. A broken limb with green leaves partly buried lay at my feet and near it was the young sparrow, sodden and stiff. Life had left the little body during the storm and the closed eyes had not witnessed the purple and gold clouds at dawn. I dug a shallow grave with my hands and looked on the lifeless form for an instant, pondering. A few weeks before it had not existed; it had not been anyone in the world. It was a pattern of all life, to be a while in the world, then return to that unremembered realm from whence it came. I packed the soil reverently, then went to a tub of rainwater by the side of the house and washed my grimy small-boy hands.

Good Nutrition Habits Formed In Early Years

COLLEGE STATION — Children can learn good nutrition habits early with some of their favorite foods, Mrs. Mary Sweeten, a foods and nutrition specialist, says. "That old standby peanut butter can be turned into a balanced meal — a peanut butter sandwich with whole milk and an orange provides a nutritionally balanced meal that children like," she said.

Mrs. Sweeten is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"One essential for good nutrition is protein, and meat isn't the only protein source. Peanuts, peas and beans, grains and nuts are all nutritionally important sources of protein.

"After protein foods are eaten and digested, amino acids are freed and used to build, repair and maintain body tissues. Of the 20 known amino acids, our bodies cannot make eight — known as the 'essential amino acids' — so these must be provided by food," the specialist said.

Proteins such as fish, poultry and meat contain enough of all of the essential amino acids, but in other foods such as peanuts, dried beans or wheat, the amount of one or more of the essential amino acids is low, she said.

"But all the essential nutrients can be provided by combining plant protein foods. For example, peanut butter is incomplete by itself — but the protein from the wheat in the bread complements it," she said.

Texas Democratic Party Slates Workshop Seminar

A Democratic Party workshop seminar will be held Saturday, April 3, in Plainview according to an announcement by Charles W. Stenholm of Stamford, Co-Chairperson of the Region 8 Affirmative Action and Voter Participation Committee of the Texas Democratic Party of Texas.

The meeting will be held in Plainview at the Hale County State Bank's Centennial Room, at 2:00 p.m. Stenholm stated that all Democrats will be welcome, and that there will be no charge for the seminar.

The Texas Democratic Party Participation Program Workshop is a major aspect of the Affirmative Action Program to teach the traditionally under-represented groups, how to effectively participate in the Democratic Party delegate selection process, so that their viewpoints can be heard in selecting the Democratic presidential candidate. This group includes women, young people and ethnic groups, as well as others unfamiliar with the voting processes.

"It is an expanded program to bring all participating Democrats up-to-date as to the new rules and techniques to be utilized in the political process this year," Stenholm explained. "As a consequence, all County Chairmen and Precinct Chairmen are invited to attend."

The topics will be the new presidential primary; new rules as related to precinct and county conventions; precinct organization; the new voter registration law; and the use of campaign volunteers.

Stenholm pointed out that this is the first program of its type in the history of the Democratic Party of Texas, and is a massive program to encourage participation by the grass roots Democrats and the traditionally under-represented minorities to train them to be effective political participants.

All persons interested should contact Motley County Democratic Chairman Charlie Long, Roaring Springs, Mrs. James Snyder, Baird, Texas 79504 or Charles W. Stenholm, Box 888, Stamford, Texas 79553.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Barnhill of Lubbock spent the week end here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Barnhill. They were en route to Dallas to make arrangements for their move there after his graduation from Tech.

Life in Matador

Wacoan's Hometown Part of Film

By ALAN HUNT
Staff Writer

March winds send tumbleweeds rolling down the streets of Matador, a town of 1,200 people in the heart of the West Texas cowboy country.

Over at Billy's grocery store on main street, customers still talk with affection about one of the town's favorite sons, James Meador, who left eight years ago to take a job 350 miles away in Waco.

Tonight, it will be Meador's turn to shed a tear of nostalgia. He will be in the audience at the 25th Street Theater watching the new Roy Rogers film, "Mackintosh & T. J.," which was filmed in and around Matador.

"I expect to see a lot of old friends in the film and no doubt I will recognize many of the locations," says Meador, who is ranch manager for Lacy Feed Co.

One of those familiar faces in the crowd will be his half-brother John Briscoe, who is a livestock inspector for the Texas Animal Health Commission.

He landed a part in the film because his weekly rounds include the big Four Sixes ranch at Guthrey, near Matador, where Rogers and the film crew spent most of their time on location.

Meador lives at 407 Vance on the TSTI campus with his wife June, who is a consultant on drug and crime for the Education Service Center, and daughter Tanya, 20, a student at TSTI.

They have two sons, Joey, an insurance agent in Dalhart, and Charles, who is farming in Floydada, near Matador.

Meador says he enjoys living and working in Waco, but he misses his home town. "My family roots go way back there," he says. "My dad and uncles helped organize the county."

His father, the late Doug Meador, was county commissioner of Motley County, and a cowboy in the "old tradition," as his son puts it.

"Calf dragging was his speciality," says Meador. "At one competition he threw 100 loops without a miss, and then they stopped counting."

Meador's mother used to sit around the camp fire at one of Matador's big ranches with Comanche Chief Quannah Parker, son of Cynthia Ann Parker, who was captured as a girl by the Indians during an attack on Fort Parker near Groesbeck.

"My mother was only about 15 at the time," Meador says. "She said Quannah Parker told her not to be afraid of him because after he found out he was half white he made a vow never to harm a white woman."

Meador's cousin, Douglas Meador, was a former Mayor of Matador and owner and editor of the town's weekly newspaper the Matador Tribune, for many years until his death in September, 1974.

He wrote a weekly column called "Trail Dust," spiced with anecdotes about the cattle and ranching country in which he lived.

Meador, too, is proud of his background on the sprawling cattle ranches of West Texas. He started work as a "hoodlum" at the age of 15 on a ranch, "doing things the cowboys didn't want to do," he says.

"I used to fetch the mules, cut the wood, fetch the water and stay with the chuck wagon," he recalls. "I took the hard route to find what ranching was all about, doing things the way the old cowboys used to do them. Many of these customs are being lost today and I think that's a great shame. In the old days they used to live by these methods."

Meador's only break in his ranching career occurred during World War II when he turned infantry soldier with the 65th Infantry Division in Europe.

His service earned him the Purple Heart, the Bronze Star and the Combat Infantry Badge. The Germans, too, presented him with what he calls a "little souvenir" — a piece of shrapnel in the knee from an 88mm shell.

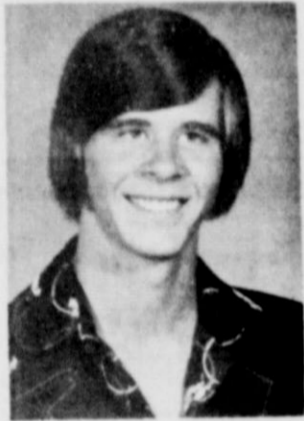

"I sure was glad to get back to the peace and quiet of Matador," he said.

PHOTOGRAPHERS ARE almost as difficult to rope as calves, but James Meador, ranch manager for Lacy Feed Co., tries his hand. He admits he can never match the roping skill of his father, an old cowboy from the West Texas town of Matador. The new Roy Rogers film was shot on location there and Meador says he hopes to catch a glimpse of some of his relatives and friends.

Ricky Turner with Reserve Champion Hog.

SOME QUESTIONS TO ASK THE PRINTING AND OFFICE SUPPLIES PEDDLER

When the person selling printing, office supplies and advertising solicits your business, here are some questions he should be willing to answer to YOUR SATISFACTION:

1. Is he a taxpayer in your community or county?
2. Does he donate space in the newspaper to local and county projects and enterprises?
3. Does he pay wages to employees who live and do business in your community?
4. Does he grant favors that you would ask of your local newspaper?
5. Does he donate newspaper space to promote you and your neighbor's business?
6. Does his price include freight, postage and insurance?
7. Does he support your civic organizations, schools and churches with free publicity?

We sincerely believe that these questions should be considered when you purchase printing and office supplies—a question of whether you should support those who help support you!

TEXAS TALK

The price of eggs in China is one old saying on the way out. Used to indicate absolute irrelevance to practically anything, the cliché seemed destined to hang around forever. With the continual emphasis on world trade, the price of eggs in China might mean a great deal... to many American farmers. With all this trading going on, special attention is now being given to ways of watching just who buys what. There is now weekly publication of export agreements covering all major buyers and commodities. Also of increasing significance is the future requirement of commodities by foreign customers. Although helping make these predictions is the newest innovation, satellite technology, a mainstay of the information system continues to be the agricultural attaches who make regular reports from more than 60 foreign countries.
