PANHANDLE PUT IN CENTRAL TIME

House bill No 14490, introduced by Interstate Commerce Committee on January 11, was passed by the House in the closing hours of this session last Thursday evening. This action was only obtained through the most strenuous effort and clever generalship on the part of Marvin Jones, who battled all day Wednesday in an effort to get his bill before the House and failed, only to renew his effort on the final day with success. This bill is now on the regular calendar for the consideration of the Senate at a session which Mr. Harding is to call early in his administration.

Under the terms of the bill as passed by the House both the Panhandle of Oklahoma and the Panhandle of Texas will be placed in the standard central time zone, also west Texas to the Rio Grande including El Paso and its contributory territory. Mr. Jones in a brief but forceful speech told the House that the states of Texas and Oklahoma were now laboring under the handicap of being each located and divided in two time zones, the greater part of each state being under Central time and the western part under mountain time.

SPEARMAN HIGH SCHOOL AGAIN VICTORIOUS

The boys' basket ball team of the Panhandle A. and M. college of Goodwell came to Spearman Friday and played the home boys their first matched game. The locals went into the game expecting to lose, for they had quit basket ball and had begun baseball practice. But each member of the team went in to do or die. The end of the first quarter looked dark for the locals, but in the second quarter they snapped out of it and evened up the score. The third quarter Spearman hit got a lead of two goals. The fourth quarter was an exceptionally hard fight between the two teams; one to maintain the lead, the other to overcome the lead. The final score was: Spearman, 22; Goodwell, 18. Who said we wouldn't win?

The Goodwell boys are jolly good fellows and there was not the slightest ill feeling on either side. We hope to meet them soon in a return game.

Rev. Younger and Missionary Hand visited the school Monday, giving us some very enjoyable and interesting talks.

The seventh grade is planning to plant flowers and otherwise beautify the school grounds. Other grades should take notice and do their part.

John L. Bolin and wife and Mrs. Emil Hall came from Liberal, Monday and spent the night here.

Mrs. N. A. Morris arrived from Amarillo, Monday and will visit several weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Keer.

R. J. McCaslin, manager of the Panhandle Lumber Company's yard at Spearman, and Bob Wakefield and wife of Booker, visited Amarillo the front end of the week.

Prof. J. O. Haug was here from the Panhandle A. and M. College at Goodwell Saturday, with the basket ball team. Prof. Haug is in the engineering department of the college.

CABINET NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED BY SENATE

Breaking a precedent which has stood since the days of Washington and Jefferson, President Harding appeared on the way he was inaugurated president at an executive session of the senate to present nominations of his cabinet officers.

Within less than ten minutes after he had finished his address of five minutes, the senate had confirmed all ten nominations.

Senator Fall of New Mexico, named for Secretary of the Interior, was first on the list to be confirmed. He was given precedence because of his senate membership.

The other appointments were taken up in turn.

The chief executive was escorted into the senate chamber by Senators Lodge and Underwood, the Republican and Democratic leaders.

The new President submitted no other nominations besides his cabinet officers and in presenting those to the senate said he desired to "maintain close and amicable relations" with the legislative body during his administration, and had, therefore, presented the nominations in person.

Mr. Harding submitted the nominations orally, reading the names out of one from the list he held in his hand. They were referred immediately to committees, which had been appointed in advance, and as the names were read the chairman of each interested committee arose and gave the unanimous and favorable report of the committee for confirmation.

The cabinet officers as confirmed were:

Secretary of state, Charles Evans Hughes of New York.

Secretary of treasury, Andrew W. Mellon of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of war, John W. Weeks of Massachusetts.

Secretary of the navy, Edwin Denby of Michigan.

Secretary of the interior, Albert B. Fall of New Mexico.

Secretary of agriculture, Henry C. Wallace of Iowa.

Secretary of commerce, Herbert Hoover of California.

Attorney General, Harry M. Daugherty of Ohio.

Postmaster general, Will H. Hays of Indiana.

Secretary of labor, James J. Davis of Pennsylvania.

R. L. McClellan was in Amarillo Tuesday attending a special session of the secretary-treasurers of Farm Loan Associations for the Panhandle district. Following the recent decision of the supreme court in upholding the Farm Loan bank, the way for their development has been opened, and they will be of great help and benefit to the country.

Prof. Alfred Black, principal of the Ochiltree school, brought his boys to Spearman last Saturday to play a game of baseball with the High school boys here. The school boys are not organized for playing matched games yet, but a team composed of real ball players was rounded up and, by giving Ochiltree a pitcher and other players, a real interesting game was played. The Ochiltree boys should come back at some future time and play a game with the younger set. They didn't have a chance to show what they could do in this game.

TWIN CALVES QUITE A CURIOSITY

W. A. Jordan, manager for W. T. Coble at the Steele ranch north of Spearman, brought to town Wednesday quite a curiosity in the way of calves. They are twin calves, perfectly developed in every way; two heads, eight feet and two tails, but are grown together along the side, as in the Siamese twins, a space of six or eight inches. The mother of the calves died at their birth and the calves lived only a few moments. Mr. Jordan took them down to the Turkey Track ranch where Mr. Coble took charge of them and will send the bodies to Denver to be mounted and kept as souvenirs. Mr. Jordan brought the heart of the calves to the Reporter office Thursday. They were fastened together by a sort of cartilage but seemed to be perfectly developed in every way, as did also the livers.

The trial of Clara Smith Hamon, for the murder of Jake L. Hamon, republican national committeeman and rich oil man, began at Ardmore, Oklahoma, yesterday. The Reporter's guess is that she will be acquitted.

Judge James H. Cator and son James F., were in from the Diamond C ranch up the Palo Duro Monday, looking after business matters. Judge Cator has been suffering with something akin to rheumatism of late, which ailment his many friends sincerely hope is only temporary.

That man Hatton W. Summers, of Dallas, assisted by about fifteen of his fellow congressmen, have surely put one Thos. W. Blanton on the toboggan. Blanton would have the people believe that he is the only safe proposition extant; that he has saved the tax payers millions of dollars by his watchfulness. Nobody believes Blanton's story, anyway, and we are glad that our own congressman, Marvin Jones, has given the matter no attention whatever. Blanton is a joke.

Bensonhurst—"What's that?"

The Sutor—"Well, I've got a bull terrier and a fighting cat and a parrot and if that won't do it I know where I can get a chimpanzee."

Dora—"Did you see the way that man smiled at me?"
Doris—"Yes, dear. Let me have a look at your face. Perhaps you've got a smut on your nose!"

EQUITY BOUGHT 6480 EGGS LAST SATURDAY

The Spearman Equity Exchange bought five hundred and forty dozen eggs last Saturday. This meant quite a nice little sum of pin money for the farmers, as other Spearman merchants doubtless made large purchases on that day. The hen and the milk cow are the sure money makers. They are the farmers' best friends. Dry spells, high winds and pestilence affect them not. A wheat crop is destroyed in an hour by hail or high wind, but when the speckled old hen passes on, it is hardly noticed because there is a dozen others coming on to take her place. And old Bossy is there every morning and night with several cents worth of cream. She only asks a few weeks each year, or maybe every two years, to bring another Bossy into the world. More faithful, loyal helpers cannot be found than the hen and the milk cow. May their tribes increase.

GOD SPEED YOU, WOODROW WILSON

I have called quite unofficially this evening, Mr. Wilson, to say to you that if the American people knew of any way in which to bid you a courteous farewell and Godspeed without pretending that they were sorry for what they did to you in November, they would like to do it.

They welcome the coming guest and have been known to speed the parting occupant of the Executive Mansion by metaphorically kicking him down the steps.

They grinned behind the broad back of William Howard Taft as he disappeared down the White House walk on the day you entered, eight years ago, and he was a good loser, and has shown himself these eight years a man and a gentleman.

You will have to excuse the American people, Mr. Wilson, for a certain brusqueness in such matters. We shall learn better manners some day.

I have not come to apologize for the election, nor to say that the American people are sorry you are leaving. They think you have made some grave mistakes; I have not come to discuss them.

But the American people, including those who voted against you, are not oblivious to the pathetic aspects of your departure from the White House and you are leaving with their sincere desire for your comfort in your remaining years.

You are planning to write a history of your administration. I want to subscribe for a copy of it, and to wish you joy in its preparation. Do not, if I may advise you, spend too much ink in trying to explain. Just tell us the story of it as you know it. You will tell it in good English, pounding it out on your typewriter, and I hope you can use both hands.

You went down from Jerusalem to Versailles, and fell among thieves. Tell us the true story of it, the American people will believe you, and will appreciate a little better the difficulties of your situation.

When your country went to war you were able to define her purpose in terms of conscience and duty. You did it superbly, Mr. Wilson; no other man on this side of the ocean could have done so well, and no man on the other side could have done it at all.

Your country is proud of the way you did it, and will be still more proud of it a hundred years hence.

This is your last night in the White House, Mr. Wilson, and you have some packing to do, and I will not prolong this call.

You are likely to rest better tonight than Mr. Harding; and in the next four years there will be nights when you will stop writing and go to bed at 10 o'clock, when he will be awake and considerably worried. May God help him, and give him the guidance of wise and good men.

And may you have quiet and happy years ahead.

The American people bid you a friendly Good Night—William E. Barton.

METHODIST CHURCH

The people of the Alpha community gave a pie social at the school house last Saturday night. The proceeds, which amounted to $50.70, are to go towards buying a new car for the charge. Lieb gave a pie social the week before, raising about $16 for the same purpose. These were very enjoyable occasions. It is quite pleasant for a community to come together occasionally in a social function like the above mentioned.

We understand that Grand Pajamas also gave a pie social last Saturday night in connection with the literary, the proceeds of which will go toward paying their part on the parsonage improvements.

The attendance at Lieb last Sunday was splendid, people coming from quite a distance. The services were enjoyed by all and there was one splendid accession to the church.

There was a good crowd at the Methodist church at Spearman last Sunday night, to hear the pastor preach.

On the second Sunday the pastor will preach at Spearman at 11 a. m. and 7:00 p. m., and at the Lacey school house at 3 p. m. Everyone is cordially invited to attend Sunday school and church and enjoy the day with us.

The preacher and wife and little Miss Nell went out to the Holt school on the fourth Sunday in last month and ate one of the finest dinners ever enjoyed by any preacher, with Brother and Sister Ben Holt and their splendid children. After dinner the preacher had the pleasure of preaching to a nice audience of the most splendid people on these broad plains at the old school house, which they have fitted up for a community auditorium. They have one of the most modern up-to-date, well equipped school buildings to be found in the country. The people there have arranged with the Spearman preacher to preach at Holt on the fourth Sunday afternoon the remainder of the year.

We wish to thank our kind friends for the sympathy shown us because of the loss of our dear little one. Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Haines, Mrs. G. L. Hayes.

MATCHMAKING

"NOW that Miss Favorite is coming to spend a few days with us, I think I'll invite Charles Augustus Terwilliger to dinner," said Mrs. Jamesworthy. "I have always thought they were intended for each other, and they should be better acquainted."

"I never could understand why married women are always matching up the young people of their acquaintance," remarked Jamesworthy. "Most wives insist—at least to their husbands—that matrimony is a pronounced failure."

Every time you see an old maid you turn green with envy, and you have told me a million times that a woman sacrifices her liberty and independence the minute she inveigles a man to the altar, and vows to love, cherish and protect him. You have said in my presence that the spinster is the only woman who is her own boss.

"It doesn't take the ingenuity of a Sherlock Holmes to deduce from your remarks that you consider matrimony a total loss. Why, then, Mrs. Jamesworthy, are you forever trying to beguile your friends into that condition of misery? Of course, you can't explain; neither can any woman explain. Matchmaking just comes natural to all of you."

"When I am looking for all kinds of plain and fancy trouble, I'll begin matching up the young men and women of my acquaintance. But not until I am suffering from an invoice of grief. I might persuade my friends to invest in a western silver mine, or buy patent rights in a revolving churn, but you'll never see Elijah Jamesworthy boosting matrimony in your indiscriminate way. If two young people got married through your ring generalship, and they found that each had drawn a gold brick, they would hate you as long as they lived, and would always speak of you as an old busybody with a nose too long for legitimate purposes, and they'd make faces at you whenever you met them on the street."

"Do you ever think of your responsibility when you try to boom the orange blossom market? Does it ever occur to you, at such times, that you are rushing in where angels fear to tread?"

"Now, just consider Sarah Jane Favorite and Charles Augustus Terwilliger, who will be railroaded to the altar if you have your way. I admit that they make a handsome pair. Sarah is a blonde with a pug nose, and Charles Augustus is a brunette with a nose like a Roman senator. They afford a pleasing contrast. But appearances count for little, Mrs. Jamesworthy, when the real business of married life begins."

"Sarah has basked in the lap of luxury all her days, and she has the idea

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

ANTELOPES.

"We've never told our stories," said the Common Dulkan Antelope, or deer, to the Four-Horned Antelope.

"That's so," the Four-Horned Antelope remarked.

"Well, don't just agree with me; suggest something," the Common Dulkan Antelope said.

"What will I suggest?" asked the Four-Horned Antelope.

"Dear me, dear me," said the Common Dulkan Antelope. "I thought I gave you enough of a hint."

"Oh, I know," said the Four-Horned Antelope. "You mean you would like to tell me your story now."

"That's what I mean," said the Common Dulkan Antelope, "or rather, that is what I meant. Though, for that matter, I still mean the same thing."

"But I would also like to have you tell your story, too," he added.

"Then, you see, we'll be all ready, when anyone wants to know us, to tell in clear and simple language who we are."

"But we can't use clear and simple language that they'll understand," said the Four-Horned Antelope.

"Ah, but it will be interpreted for us."

"What?" asked the Four-Horned Antelope.

"It will be interpreted for us, or in other words someone will tell in the language people do understand what our story is."

"If anyone interprets French they tell in the English language (if they happen to be English or American or Canadian or Australian or Scotch or Irish or Welsh) what the French means."

"If anyone interprets English into French they tell in French what the English means that they're interpreting. In other words, they interpret or explain or translate from another language so they'll understand in their own language what they wouldn't in another."

"I see," said the Four-Horned Antelope. "And you mean that our animal stories will be interpreted or translated into the language people understand."

"Just what I mean," said the Common Dulkan Antelope.

"Well," the Four-Horned Antelope said, "you tell your story first, and then I'll tell mine. I'll be thinking mine up while I listen to yours."

"Suggest Something."

"You mustn't do two things at once like that," the Common Dulkan Antelope said. "It isn't polite not to pay attention, and besides it is hard to talk to creatures who don't listen."

"I'll listen, then," said the Four-Horned Antelope. "For I think, after all, I know my story."

"I belong to a large family of African antelopes and I'm small, just as my special family are all small. We wear simple clothes of quiet colors, though we have touches of red to our gray-brown coats. All of the different families of Dulkans have many things in common."

"Most of us have straight horns which look like spikes, about three inches or so in length. There are only a few members of the family who have coats with much color to them. And we're very, very small."

"That's so," the Four-Horned Antelope answered.

"Well, I am a small antelope, too, and I look something like you, too, though I'm not a near relative by any manner of means."

"I came from India and that is where all of my family come from."

"There I used to live on the great plains, and what fun I did have!"

"But I enjoy it here, too, for folks come and look at me, because I have four horns. I have a pair of larger ones and a pair of smaller ones and I wear them all, all the time."

"They say they've never seen any others like me and they admire me, so I'm glad really that you asked me to tell my name and from where I came so that I could tell folks the name of the antelope with the four horns."

"And when they hear my name I feel sure they will think the family chose well when they picked it out."

His First Million.

A millionaire, as he got out of his limousine, was approached by a newsboy. "No, I don't want a paper. Get out!" he snarled. "Well, keep your shirt on, boss," replied the newsboy. "The only difference between you and me is that you are making your second million and I'm still working on my first."

Good Highways

BUILD UP CHEAP HIGHWAYS

Better Plan Than to Construct Most Expensive Highway and Let It Deteriorate.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is better to build a cheap road and keep it in good condition by adequate maintenance than to build the most expensive highway and permit it to deteriorate for want of care, say officials of the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Maryland, which has one of the finest systems of improved highways in the United States, if not the best, has consistently followed this practice. The originally improved roads in Maryland were comparatively inexpensive, costing only what the taxpayers were willing to pay for. The first few years the average cost was less than $10,000 a mile. In some cases the work entailed considerable grading and drainage, but in others it amounted simply to resurfacing the old turnpikes, which had already been graded and drained.

Generally the roads built at that time were macadam, 12 feet wide and 6 inches thick. Soon the width was increased to 14 feet. Later many were widened still farther, some very successfully, by adding concrete shoulders on each side of the existing macadam. This method of improving roads makes it possible for traffic to continue unimpeded on the road while the work is going on.

The macadam roads in Maryland have given very good satisfaction, but continuous care has been largely responsible for their success. The roads are constantly patrolled and no hole of any size is allowed to go unrepaid. Material for patching is kept at convenient points along the roads for the use of the patrol man. From a relatively small investment in admittedly low-type road it builds up a better one from year to year, always conserving the bulk of the previous investment.

THE UNATTAINABLE

THERE'S a spot on my back about the size of a postage stamp, that has been itching all day. The retired merchant, "and it has caused me more grief than the last attack of rheumatism. I can't reach it with either hand, and I have been backing up against every telephone pole and gatepost, rubbing like a horse with the mange. A man of my social and commercial standing doesn't look dignified while thus engaged, but when a man's back itches, he has to defy the conventions, and get relief the best way he can."

"I can understand just how it has worried you," said the hotelkeeper. "The fact that you couldn't reach around and claw the itching place with your fingers kept the matter fresh in your memory and got on your nerves. The pursuit of the unattainable always is more interesting to us than the easier work close to hand. You had your whole person to scratch, and might have bought a currycomb for a quarter, and had a good time, but you couldn't be happy until you had reached the one inaccessible spot. "A while ago I imagined I had heart disease, and went and saw the doctor. He knows I have money in the bank, and am considered good pay, so he confirmed my worst fears, and made up his mind to have me for his star patient, until one of us perished out. He threw an awful scare into me, so that I went home sweating ice cold citrus lemonade. "He gave me some medicines and a lot of instructions. Among them was one to the effect that when I went to bed I should always sleep on my right side. He cautioned me over and over again against laying on my left side, and left the impression that if I disobeyed him, I'd wake up some morning to find myself a candidate for a toral horseshoe. "That matter looked easy at the time, and I assured the doctor I'd follow his bylaws to the letter. When I went to bed that night, I stretched out on my right side, and in ten minutes I was just suffering to roll over. I don't believe I ever had such a yearning for anything. It seemed to me the height of human happiness would be in sleeping on one's left side. I followed instructions for two nights, and then I decided that life wasn't worth such sacrifices, and I rolled over and slept on my left side, and nothing happened. I was feeling better than usual next morning when I got up. "Of course this experience lessened my confidence in the doctor's instructions, and I concluded that if I was going to sidestep the instructions, I might as well sidestep the medicines, too. For they tasted like low life in a Chinese alley, and I threw the whole lot out of the window. Thus the sav-sones lost his most promising patient because he handed out a rule that wasn't strictly necessary. "Speaking of the unattainable, do you know what's the matter with Silas Furbelow? He has everything a man could ask, and his trouble is that he can't raise a good stand of whiskers. Nowadays, when whiskers are considered an infirmity, it seems strange that any man should grieve over such a matter. "He sends all over the United States for hair growers, and half the time his face is blistered or swollen, and still the whiskers won't grow on him. If some miracle happened, and he woke up some morning to find his countenance all covered with whiskers, he'd probably have them shaved off within a week; but because they won't grow, he won't be happy till he gets them."

NATURAL GAS IS BEING EXHAUSTED

Supply Will Last Only 20 Years, Warns Engineering Expert.

SITUATION REALLY ACUTE

Imperative That Exhaustive Investigations Be Started to Determine the Most Practical Solution of Industrial Problems So Vitally Dependent on Our Natural Gas Supply.—By-product Producer Gas Seen as Possible Remedy—Low Temperature Distillation Processes Receive Attention.

America's natural gas supply is being exhausted by criminal negligence and reckless extravagance, according to Prof. Robert H. Fernald, head of the department of mechanical engineering in the University of Pennsylvania, who in a survey for the American Society of Mechanical Engineers urges the use of by-product producer gas to relieve an acute national situation.

"The rapid exhaustion of our natural gas supply through criminal negligence and reckless extravagance resulting in drastic restrictions in order to conserve what little we have left brings us abruptly to a realization of the situation and leads us seriously to query regarding possible substitutions for this remarkable natural fuel," says Dr. Fernald, formerly engineer in investigations upon gas producers for the United States geological survey and the bureau of mines.

Situation is Acute.

"The situation is acute. It is therefore imperative that we begin exhaustive investigations to determine the most practical solution of the industrial problems that have been for many years past so vitally dependent upon our natural gas supply. The results reached through such investigations may lead into channels quite different from those under consideration at the present time, as the necessity of the situation may develop unthought of possibilities.

"With the limited amount of study that has been given to this problem to date, the most conspicuous source of relief seems to be through the development of by-product producer gas. This, of course, is practically an unknown field in the United States. Spasmodic attempts to develop interest have come to the attention of engineers from time to time, but no serious study of the situation in its relation to the larger commercial developments of the country has as yet been undertaken.

"In Europe we find by-product producer gas somewhat extensively used and the large central station near the mines recovering the by-products from the fuel and distributing the gas under pressure for several miles through the industrial districts, has become a dependable source of supply.

"Through the abundance of our fuel supply and our indifference to the needs of future generations we have been ruthlessly extravagant and wasteful of our fuel resources during the past decades. An appreciation of the necessity of recovering by-products has but recently received thoughtful consideration from those agencies that are most seriously interested in the problems of fuel conservation.

Study and Research.

"At the present moment low temperature distillation processes are attracting more than casual attention. Investigation may show a combination of low temperature distillation and the manufacture of by-product producer gas to be a distinctly economical and commercial solution of our natural gas problems, as these processes, on the one hand, lead to the maximum by-product recovery, and, on the other, to a supply of gas commercially adaptable to heating and general industrial processes.

"Our natural gas situation is a serious one. The solution requires more than the casual financial interest of the private dividend seeker. It requires systematic study and research involving the expenditure of large sums of money. It is a problem of national importance and must be attacked on a broad basis. It calls for the best thought and most serious consideration of the ablest experts available, financially supported from sources that will guarantee the results of the investigation to be free from industrial and commercial bias. "It has been estimated that two decades will see the total exhaustion of the natural gas supply. We cannot afford to wait longer."

VARIETIES OF COURAGE

"KERSMITH is an awful coward," said the retired merchant. "He hasn't as much spunk as a chipmunk. This morning I saw a man half his size twist his nose, and he never offered to defend himself. He trembled all over and was covered with a cold sweat."

"And yet, under other circumstances, Kersmith might show all kinds of courage," said the hotel-keeper. "It isn't safe to jump to conclusions about such things. A woman will climb a tree, and shriek for the police if she sees a mouse, and if a real peril comes along, she'll exhibit more courage in five minutes than the average man could dig up in a hundred years."

"There are scores of different kinds of courage in this world, and you can't expect one man to have them all. A man may tremble and cringe when threatened with physical violence, and yet stand up serene and magnificent when the assessor comes to the door, and there's nothing finer than that sort of moral courage."

"There used to be a blacksmith in this town who had a wide reputation as a fire eater. He wasn't afraid of anything, people said. If he heard of a promising bluff anywhere in the countryside, he couldn't rest until he had mixed things with him. And he didn't ask for purses or other inducements. He engaged in combat just because he loved it, and was happiest when his nose was knocked to one side, and his eyes were bugged up so that he couldn't see whether he was going or coming. He acted the hero on several occasions, rescuing people from burning buildings, and saving gents who were drowning and his nerve became a byword.

"Well, in the fullness of time his teeth went wrong and his head swelled up until it looked like a squash. He bought about a million things at the drug store, and they wouldn't relieve the pain. The doctor told him he could have his sufferings ended in five minutes by going to the dentist's, but that idea turned him faint. At last he had to go, and the dentist told me he never saw such a doggone coward. That invincible blacksmith just had to be lifted into the operating chair, and as often as he could get his breath, he yelled.

"The dentist's chair takes the starch out of many a brave man. I used to have to frequent it a good deal before I bought these hand-made tortoiseshell teeth, and I saw some moving sights when I was seated in the waiting room. Women would come in there as calm and cool as though they had just stepped in for a dish of ice cream. I have seen a girl graduate sitting comfortably until her turn came, and then she'd step into the chamber of horrors without turning a hair; and then some big policeman, who'd think nothing of fighting a revolver duel in the dark with a burglar, would come into the waiting room as limp as a dishrag, sweating ice tea and groaning every time he drew a breath.

"A man might easily get a lot of false ideas about courage in the dentist's waiting room.

"That man Kersmith, who stood and permitted a smaller man to twist his nose, has a sort of courage I'd give a lot to own. I've always wished I could make public speeches. I've a lot of pent-up eloquence inside of me that ought to be turned loose for the edification and instruction of the people. But every time I'm called upon for a few timely remarks, I'm scared stiff, and can't say a blasted word. I just gurgle and splutter like a sunstruck lunatic, and hate myself for three weeks after it.

"But when Kersmith is called, he rises without a tremor, and smiles sweetly upon the audience, and goes ahead saying what he has to say as though in his own arm chair by his bedside. I'd be willing to have my nose and ears twisted several times to have his courage."

THE DIFFERENCE

"I SAW you coming up the street and standing at the gate with Mr. Honeybug and Mr. Playfair," said Mrs. Jamesworthy. "All three of you were laughing so the whole neighborhood could hear you. I wonder why you do all the laughing with your friends, and do nothing but grumble and scowl at home. I haven't seen you laugh in the house in five years, as you laughed out there with those men."

"There's nothing in this house to laugh at," replied Jamesworthy. "Jim Honeybug is a good story-teller, and he was telling us a bully yarn, and for a brief season we forgot the burdens laid upon us, which are greater than we can bear. If you could tell a story as well as Honeybug does, I'd fill these ancestral halls with silvery laughter, but you never try to say anything amusing, Mrs. Jamesworthy. You do tell stories, but they are of a gloomy and tragic character.

"Last night, when I came home, you told a dramatic story to the effect that you had callers all afternoon, and hadn't a chance to cook anything for me, and so I had to eat canned salmon and soda crackers, and wash them down with water, and I insist that when a husband comes home from his arduous labors in the clanging mart, so empty that his watch chain makes a clanking sound when it flaps against his spine, he should have warm victuals, something he can consume with pleasure and pride. The fact that you had an invasion of callers is a cheap excuse.

"My sainted mother never would have permitted any callers to interfere with her management of the cook-stove. She realized that her old man

Mrs. Alice Gresham Dodd, mother of first American soldier killed in France, who gives entire credit for recovery of her health to the well-known medicine, Tanlac.

The following remarkable statement was made recently by Mrs. Alice Gresham Dodd, the mother of Corporal Jas. B. Gresham, who was the first American soldier killed in France. The statement was made at the Gresham Memorial Home, which was presented to her by the patriotic people of Indiana as an evidence of their appreciation of the services rendered to his country by her son.

The shock of her son's death resulted in a serious breakdown in Mrs. Dodd's health, but everyone will learn with interest and pleasure that she is now in splendid health again. Mrs. Dodd gives the entire credit for her recovery to the celebrated medicine, Tanlac.

She said: "After my dear boy's death I had a general breakdown in health. At first it was just indigestion. My food would upset me and I had to diet myself very carefully. I also had rheumatism with severe pains in my shoulders, back and arms and at times I would suffer greatly, and my joints would become swollen and stiff. I was hardly able to do but very little about the house and at times could not even cook a meal. I became very nervous and restless and at night would lie awake for hours.

"A friend of mine advised me to try Tanlac. I am glad I did, for it proved to be the best medicine I have ever taken. It soon gave me a splendid appetite and relieved me entirely of indigestion. My rheumatism also disappeared and I am now able to do my house-work with the greatest ease. My nerves are steady and strong. I sleep well at night and my health is better than in years. I shall always be grateful for what Tanlac has done for me."

kept the shebang going, and that he should have the right of way. If any old hens happened to be in the house when grub time approached, my mother would request them, firmly but respectfully, to chase themselves, and if they didn't like it they could lump it. (When my father came home from his work, the hay was always in the manger for him, and he never had to wait five minutes for a meal.

"The day before yesterday, when I came staggering home, faint and weary from my herculean efforts to make both ends meet, you told me another story. It was to the effect that you had been downtown sizing up a shipment of new spring hats, just received at the millinery foundry, and you were so interested you forgot the lapse of time, and didn't get home in time to cook anything. But you flashed a winning smile at me, and said it wouldn't take you ten minutes to warm up a can of beans, and there was some cold coffee left from breakfast, and you had plenty of smoked herrings on hand.

"Doubtless I should have burst forth into bolsterous laughter over this entertaining anecdote, but somehow it didn't appeal to my sense of humor. I was so busy that day I hadn't time to eat anything at noon, and all the way home I was hoping you would have a porterhouse steak about three inches thick, and a raft of boiled potatoes, and perhaps a slab of mince pie as an epilogue.

"The day before that, when I came home as hollow as a bass drum, and fairly gnashing my teeth with hunger, you related a humorous story to the effect that your club didn't adjourn on time that afternoon, and you didn't get home until late, so I would have to get along with a picked-up supper. If I would be patient a few minutes, you said, to make the story seem more spicy, you would boll an egg for me, and there was cold corn bread in the cupboard.

"Such stories, Mrs. Jamesworthy, may seem highly amusing to an innocent bystander, and I have no doubt they would make a great hit if written up and printed in London Punch, but there is something wrong with my sense of humor, or I am at the wrong end of the stories. Anyhow, I can't gurgle over them as I do over Honeybug's yarns."
