B-1B bombers grounded after failure at Dyess

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Air Force temporarily grounded its fleet of B-1B bombers Tuesday after one of the planes suffered a wing malfunction just before a training flight, the Pentagon said.

Dan Howard, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, said the incident occurred Monday at Dyess Air Force Base, Texas, during a routine pre-flight check by the pilots.

The crew couldn't get the plane's wings to move back and forth in tandem and at one point, the left wing apparently moved too far forward and punctured a fuel tank inside the fuselage, he explained.

"The Strategic Air Command has placed a precautionary shutdown of training flights on its B-1B aircraft until further notice," he said.

The B-1B is the nation's newest long-range bomber. To improve its performance, the plane has wings that can be swept forward or backward in flight. The wings are normally swept back for high-speed attack runs and forward for takeoffs and landings.

Howard declined Tuesday to estimate how long the grounding would last, saying the Air Force had immediately launched an investigation. He also insisted there was "no current indication" that Monday's problem was linked to any of three previous B-1B crashes.

The Air Force now has 97 of the planes.

Howard said the grounding order was affecting only training flights and was not being applied to the few B-1B's on 24-hour nuclear alert.

Of the three B-1B's that have crashed, one loss has been blamed on a wing fire that was fed by fuel. That crash occurred Nov. 8 at Dyess; Air Force investigators have said it is doubtful they can ever determine with certainty what caused that fire.

Another bomber was lost in 1987 when it ran into pelicans on a low-level training flight; the third was lost Nov. 17 during a landing attempt at Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D.

The four-engine, swing-wing B-1B is the first new addition to America's manned bomber force in more than 25 years.

Senate committee approves regent pick

By DAWNA COWAN
The University Daily

The Texas Senate nomination committee voted 4-0 Tuesday to approve James L. "Rocky" Johnson as a Texas Tech regent, a spokesperson for the committee said.

The full Senate is expected to vote Thursday on Gov. Bill Clements' March 1 appointment of the chief executive officer of GTE Corp.

In opening remarks to the committee, Johnson said he was honored to have been nominated for the prestigious position on the board of regents.

"I am pleased and excited I have been honored with this appointment," he said. "I think I can make a significant contribution to the state of Texas in that capacity."

Johnson and his wife Helen live in New Canaan, Conn., but also maintain a residence and an office in Dallas, where he plans to spend more of his time. They have four children.

"I am anxious to serve. I believe I can bring a depth of knowledge and experience to the board," he said. "I am committed to improve and enhance the education process not only at Texas Tech but throughout the rest of the United States."

Johnson, 61, will replace Dallas banker Gerald Ford, whose term expired Jan. 31. The terms of two other regents — Amarillo businessman Wesley Masters and Houston developer Larry Johnson — also expired Jan. 31.

If confirmed, Johnson's term will extend to Jan. 31, 1995.

Jay Rosser, a press aide in Clements' office, said appointments for the two other expired regent positions could be made in the next few days.

The seven-member nominations committee is chaired by Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville. A spokesperson for the committee said Johnson more than likely will be confirmed by the Senate because the Senate rarely rejects the nomination committee's decisions.

Johnson received a bachelor's degree in business administration from Tech in 1969.

He was appointed by former President Ronald Reagan to the President's National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee in September 1988.

He serves on Tech's Business Administration National Development Board, the board of directors of Mutual of New York and the joint Council on Economic Education.

Others known to be under consideration for appointment include Alan White, chairman and chief executive officer of Plains National Bank in Lubbock; Doyle Bunch II, executive vice president of Southwestern Public Service Co. in Amarillo; Elizabeth Carter, a partner of J. Winston dress shop in Amarillo; Gen. Richard Cavazos; and Gary Compton, an Amarillo attorney.

Administration may take charge of oil spill cleanup

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush dispatched three high-ranking officials to Alaska on Tuesday to "take a hard look" at the nation's worst oil spill and judge whether the government should take over the massive cleanup job from Exxon.

With an oil slick spread across 100 square miles of Prince William Sound, Bush said the first priority is to protect the environment and "clean up this disaster." Then, he said, the government will decide on any penalties for the spill.

"This is a matter of tremendous concern to Alaskans and, indeed, to all of us," Bush said. "The conservation side is important. The energy side is important."

Bush was briefed on the disaster by Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner, Environmental Protection Agency chief William Reilly and Coast Guard Commandant Paul Yost. Immediately after the meeting in the Oval Office, they left for Alaska.

The oil spilled into the water after the 987-foot tanker Exxon Valdez, trying to avoid ice, rammed a reef and ran aground Friday. Fewer than 135,000 gallons of oil have been recovered from the 10.1 million-gallon spill.

The ship's captain, Joseph Hazelwood, was not on bridge when the accident occurred. Instead, the third mate, who did not have proper certification, was in charge, according to Exxon Shipping Co., which owns the tanker.

The harbor reopened Tuesday, tankers anchored offshore churned in to pick up oil, and winds which had been moving the oil died down. The port had been closed since the accident, reducing the flow of oil through the Alaska pipeline. Coast Guard Lt. Ed Wieliczkievicz said the oil slick spreading across the sound was clear of shipping lanes.

Commenting on reports that

Hazelwood had a drinking problem, National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Bill Woody said, "We look at all areas in an investigation and that's an area of concern."

Bush and Skinner hinted Exxon could face big civil penalties.

"There are a variety of legal options that are available. But right now the primary consideration is to make sure everything possible is being done," Skinner said.

"And the president has directed us to assess that, that oil is being contained and that the oil that remains on the tanker is being offloaded as quick as possible. That is our primary objective as mandated by the president. ... We'll then later on worry about who is going to pay for the damage."

"But there are significant penalties and provisions for reimbursement," Skinner said.

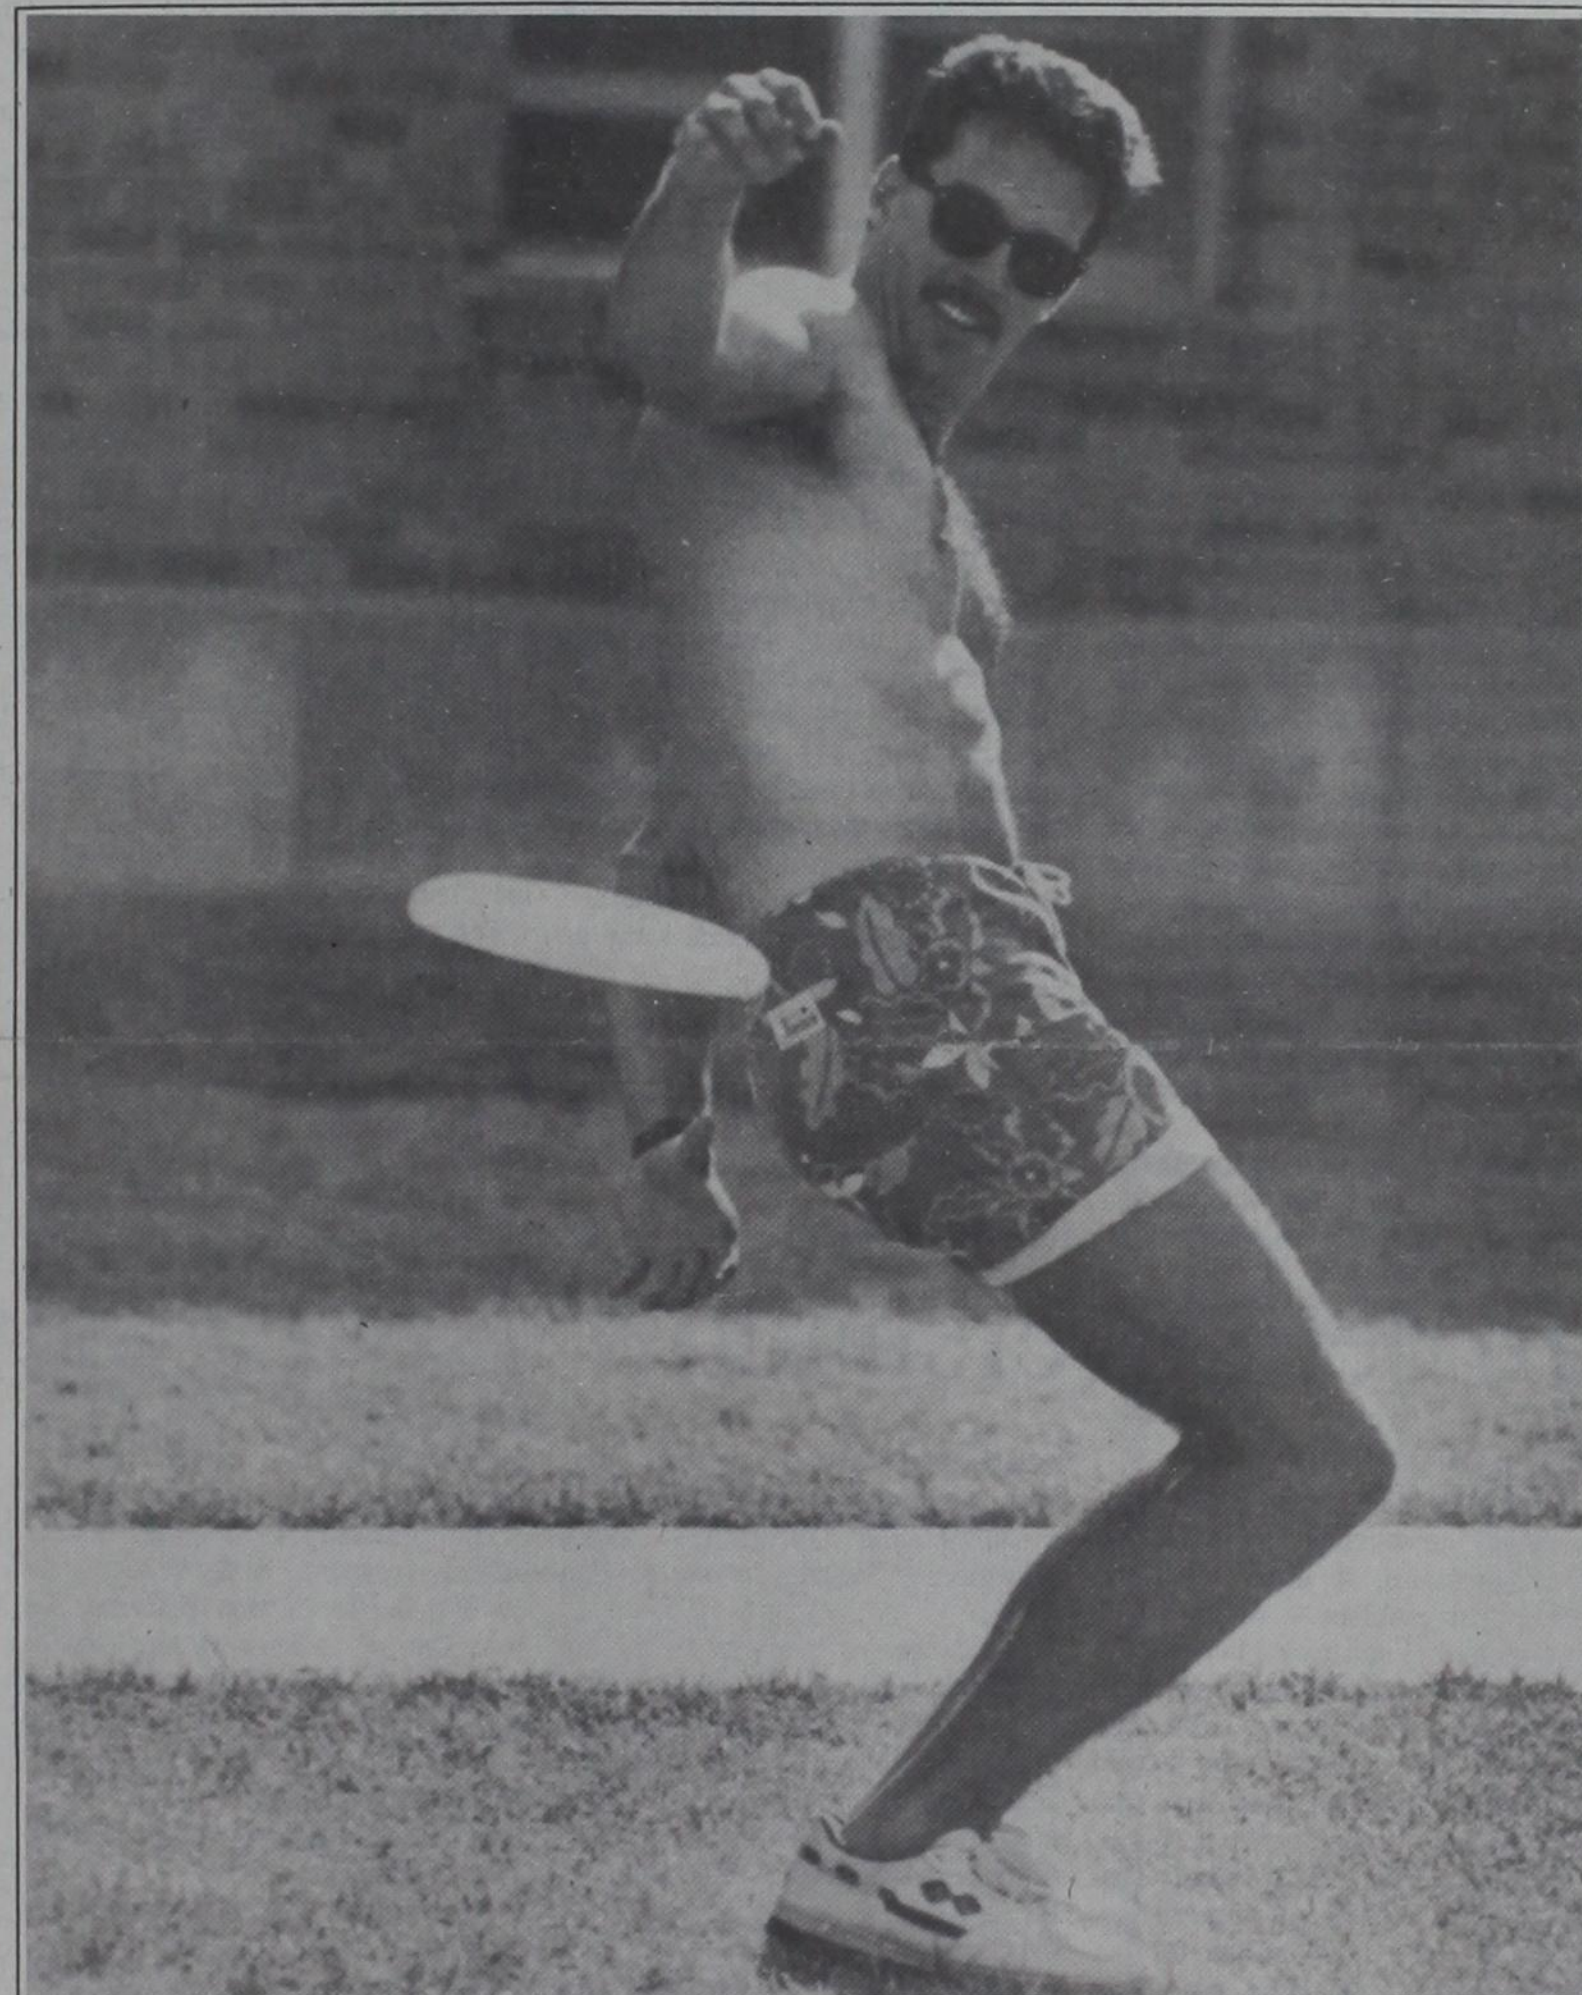

Bush said, "the thing is to get it cleaned up, to protect the very precious environment out there, to make sure everything is being done to clean up this disaster. And then we'll have all these penalties and all that later on."

At this point, Exxon is in charge of the cleanup in one of the world's most environmentally sensitive and biologically rich marine waters. Bush said that 14 federal agencies also were involved, and that much of the equipment has been furnished by the Coast Guard.

Asked whether Exxon was doing enough, Bush said, "I've just had a report that they're certainly making a good beginning here, but there's been some conflict reports on that and I don't want to prejudge that. I think one of the things we're interested in hearing is exactly how our top officials feel the cleanup is going."

Bush said, "There is an option for federalization (of the cleanup) and then the question is, is that the most prudent way to go?"

By some estimates, the cleanup will require several months.

Minimum wage increase unnecessary, Combest says

By LEANNA EFIRD
The University Daily

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, addressed the concerns of Lubbock citizens Tuesday at a townhall meeting at Mackenzie Junior High School.

Combest answered questions on such issues as the minimum wage and the 65 mph speed limit.

Combest said he opposes an increase in the minimum wage, which he said would create more problems than it would solve.

"If the minimum wage was increased, employers would have to compensate by decreasing the number of jobs available. Less people would be able to get part-time jobs," Combest said. "Thus, raising the minimum wage would not solve any problems, but only add to the ones we have now."

Combest also is working on a bill to change the speed limit from 55 mph to 65 mph on rural four-lane highways.

"There is not as much support for this proposal as there was for the bill changing the speed limit on the interstate highways," he said.

Combest said opinions of legislators are mixed concerning the change in the speed limit.

"Statistics show that in some states where the speed limit went up, the number of accidents decreased. In other states, accidents substantially increased," he said.

"But in an area like Texas, I feel that a 65 mph speed limit would really make a big difference."

In addition, Combest expressed his views on balancing the budget.

Combest said he favors a proposed constitutional amendment that would give the government the requirement to balance the budget.

"We're spending more money now than in the history of this country. I feel that if we just participate in a freeze program, we could balance the budget in three years without cutting any programs or raising any taxes," he said.

Combest said some programs, aid to Central America, for example, could not be frozen.

"I am a strong supporter of foreign aid to Central America. At some point, we're going to have to stop communism and Marxism being spread throughout Central America," he said. "Communists have set their goal to spread communism up through Mexico. We need to decide where we're going to stop the problem."

Combest also said he violently opposes a bill banning assault weapons.

"I don't think that the problems with crime will be solved by regulating law-abiding citizens. Banning the sale of assault weapons is the not answer to the crime problem," he said. "This will affect the innocent law-abiding citizens."

RHA to elect new officers

By AMY LAWSON
The University Daily

Texas Tech students living in the residence halls can vote Thursday for candidates running in the 1989-90 Residence Halls Association (RHA) elections.

Seven students are applying for the five RHA positions.

"Any person who is residing in a dorm is officially a member of the Residence Halls Association," said Dana Dick, RHA secretary.

RHA, the governing body of the residence halls, works in conjunction with individual hall councils to improve residence hall life.

Candidates vying for RHA president are Bill Mahoney, a freshman mechanical engineering major, and Dennis Jaglinski, a senior management information systems and management major.

Students applying for vice president for administration are Nilesh Patel, a senior cell and molecular biology major, and Dana Dick, a junior arts and sciences undecided major.

The only candidate for vice president for operations is Catherine Maki, a freshman audiology major.

The candidate for the treasurer position is LaDonna Burton, a freshman pre-med major.

Applying for the position of secretary is Gretchen Barks, a sophomore mass communications major.

Voting booths will be located at each dining hall. They will be open 15 minutes before the dinner hour and will remain open until 30 minutes after the dinner hour.

Students must present a valid student identification card to be eligible to vote.

Open records battle brews as journalists decry new proposal

The winds of change sweep through the Texas Senate quickly, or so it seems, now that a bill has passed on to the Texas House of Representatives that would prohibit releasing the names, among others, of state university presidential candidates.

At issue is the public's right to know who ultimately could be directing a state-funded university. However, the struggle more fundamentally pits the media against politicians.

Members of the media, who should be highly interested in the public's right to know and defense of the First Amendment, don't want to see any compromise or loophole added to the Texas Open Records Act.

Politicians don't want to see any compromise to the "good ol' boy" network.

Already in 1989, state government has been challenged by the media to produce pertinent information for would-be university presidents, board of regents members and potential school board members. In each case, the affected state institutions — at the behest of a publicly conscientious state Attorney General's Office — begrudgingly followed the letter of the law and made public the candidates for their particular state posts.

Now state legislators are saying "enough is enough." The Open Records Act is too open, they say, giving the public too much access to too much information. Perhaps their ability to repay favors in the form of a lucrative state position, otherwise known as cronyism, is being threatened too often.

But the Open Records Act has only performed within the spirit it was intended. It has kept unqualified people out of powerful positions and avoided disastrous situations involving employment of inept candidates through a secret "you-scratch-my-back, I'll-scratch-yours" scenario.

The law was intended to force the government to operate in the sunshine rather than in back rooms behind board rooms.

Witness, for example, the furor surrounding the State Board of Insurance. Much of that board's business has been conducted in secrecy in the past. But behind an investigative push to shed light on the board's inadequacies spearheaded by state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, the state has moved to put its insurance regulatory house back in order.

The Open Records Act is designed to protect Texas citizens from closed-door politics. Any constricting amendment threatens the entire wording of the law and hinders the public's access not only to information about presidential candidates of state universities, but to all state business as well.

The open records laws were not created for the benefit of the of the journalism industry, but as a body of law that is accessible to the public.

It should be remembered that making state operation a secretive, hush-hush matter is a valuable tool in conducting the affairs of an authoritarian government.

Shoot down liberal tripe

To the editor:

Once again I am besieged by the anti-gun sentiment expressed by the liberal media, in essence your paper. Why must you print such blatant tripe as the Ben Sargent cartoon?

The man is obviously seeking the confiscation of all semi-automatic weapons, of which sporting arms must be included, i.e. shotguns, rifles and pistols. The fact is that Mr. Purdy, who I assume we are in reference to in the cartoon, had seven felony arrests on his record and a psychological evaluation as extremely dangerous to others, yet he was never convicted.

Mr. Purdy also passed the 15-day background check for weapons in California with flying colors, no thanks to his lack of convictions. It is therefore unduly biased to put such one-sided attacks on our Second Amendment rights as Mr. Sargent's in The UD.

The fact is many Americans enjoy the sporting use of semi-automatic weapons, and all of them have never committed any crime — nor does the fact that they own semi-automatic weapons make them prone to. If we wish to deny the rights of a great many at the expense of a few then I have a list of things I don't like either and most people would find some of them very distasteful.

Exercise sense before sex

To the editor:

This is an open letter to the female students at Texas Tech.

After having worked at the Sexually Transmitted Disease Clinic here in Lubbock for almost a year I have grown tired of seeing young ladies come in only to be told that they have herpes, venereal warts, gonorrhea or even syphilis. Most of them have a single sexual partner and it becomes quickly apparent that they not only have become a statistic they never thought they would, but that they in all likelihood have an unfaithful (or at least less than truthful) boyfriend.

For many of these young women this is the first sexual partner they have ever had. Tears are shed and a rather crestfallen look appears on their faces. To be sure, the sadness may be secondary to the realization that they have some explaining to do to a given partner or partners, but usually they feel betrayed, used and foolish.

Ladies, if you wish to be sexually active at college let me tell you about this amazing device known as the condom. Not only are they cheap, effective, disposable and available in a variety of eye-catching colors, they are also very easy to obtain. Get some and keep them in your purse. You can be assured that the young men will not be as eager to keep them readily available, principally because they don't care much for them and they are unlikely to be the recipients of any dividends to sexual activity such as nine months of swollen ankles.

My guess is that in the heat of the moment you will be able to exercise enormous powers of persuasion over your gentlemen friends. Use that influence and require them to wear a condom.

Ozone, Latin American debt overshadow Tower, Eastern flaps

Tom Wicker Columnist

The world will little note nor long remember that John Tower did not become secretary of defense. Nor, in the long run — perhaps even in the short — will it much matter whether Eastern Airlines lives or dies.

But as these questions dominated the headlines and broadcasts of a journalism that thrives on today:

— More than 100 nations met in London to pursue a challenge set them by the European Community and the Bush administration to eliminate by the end of the century industrial chemicals threatening the vital ozone layer.

— In the backwash of anti-austerity rioting that left about 300 dead and 2,000 injured in Venezuela, President Carlos Andres Perez said (though he later tried to retract it) that his country might have to suspend all debt payments to foreign nations, significantly including the United States.

There's a pair of stories that really matter, and will for years to come — one a sign of international cooperation on an imminent environmental problem, the other a warning signal about the clear and present danger of Third World debt.

When Baker was Treasury secretary, he developed a plan, largely unsuccessful, to ease the Third World debt problem — which hasn't gone away but has grown in severity.

Now, instead of tackling it anew, he asks Congress for more aid to the Contras. That's a slap in the face to the Central American presidents who recently signed a new peace proposal.

Perez probably won't actually suspend — not yet — all Venezuela's payments on its $33 billion foreign debt, although principal payments already have been halted.

Default would too critically damage his nation's international credit standing. But the rioting that followed his imposition of relatively mild anti-inflation measures suggests that Latin populations — Venezuela's is one of the most democratic — cannot be squeezed forever to pay foreign debts.

The danger is twofold. Tightening austerity measures to enable Latin governments to make huge payments — inflated by high interest rates set a decade ago — to gringo and European bankers ultimately will produce so much popular unrest that default may be forced and democracy could be overthrown.

For the United States, Latin default might threaten the banking system, and the overthrow of democracy obviously would damage stability even if neither happens, forced austerity in Latin America prevents its nations form importing U.S. goods, a heavy burden on the U.S. trade imbalance.

The necessary response, the only effective response, is debt relief — including the stretchout of terms, the reduction of interest rates, even in some cases the forgiveness of loans the Latin nations were pressured into accepting, together with the necessary legislation to make it possible for U.S. commercial banks to take these steps.

If any of that is to happen, Bush and Baker will have to take the lead.

They already provide such leadership on important environmental questions.

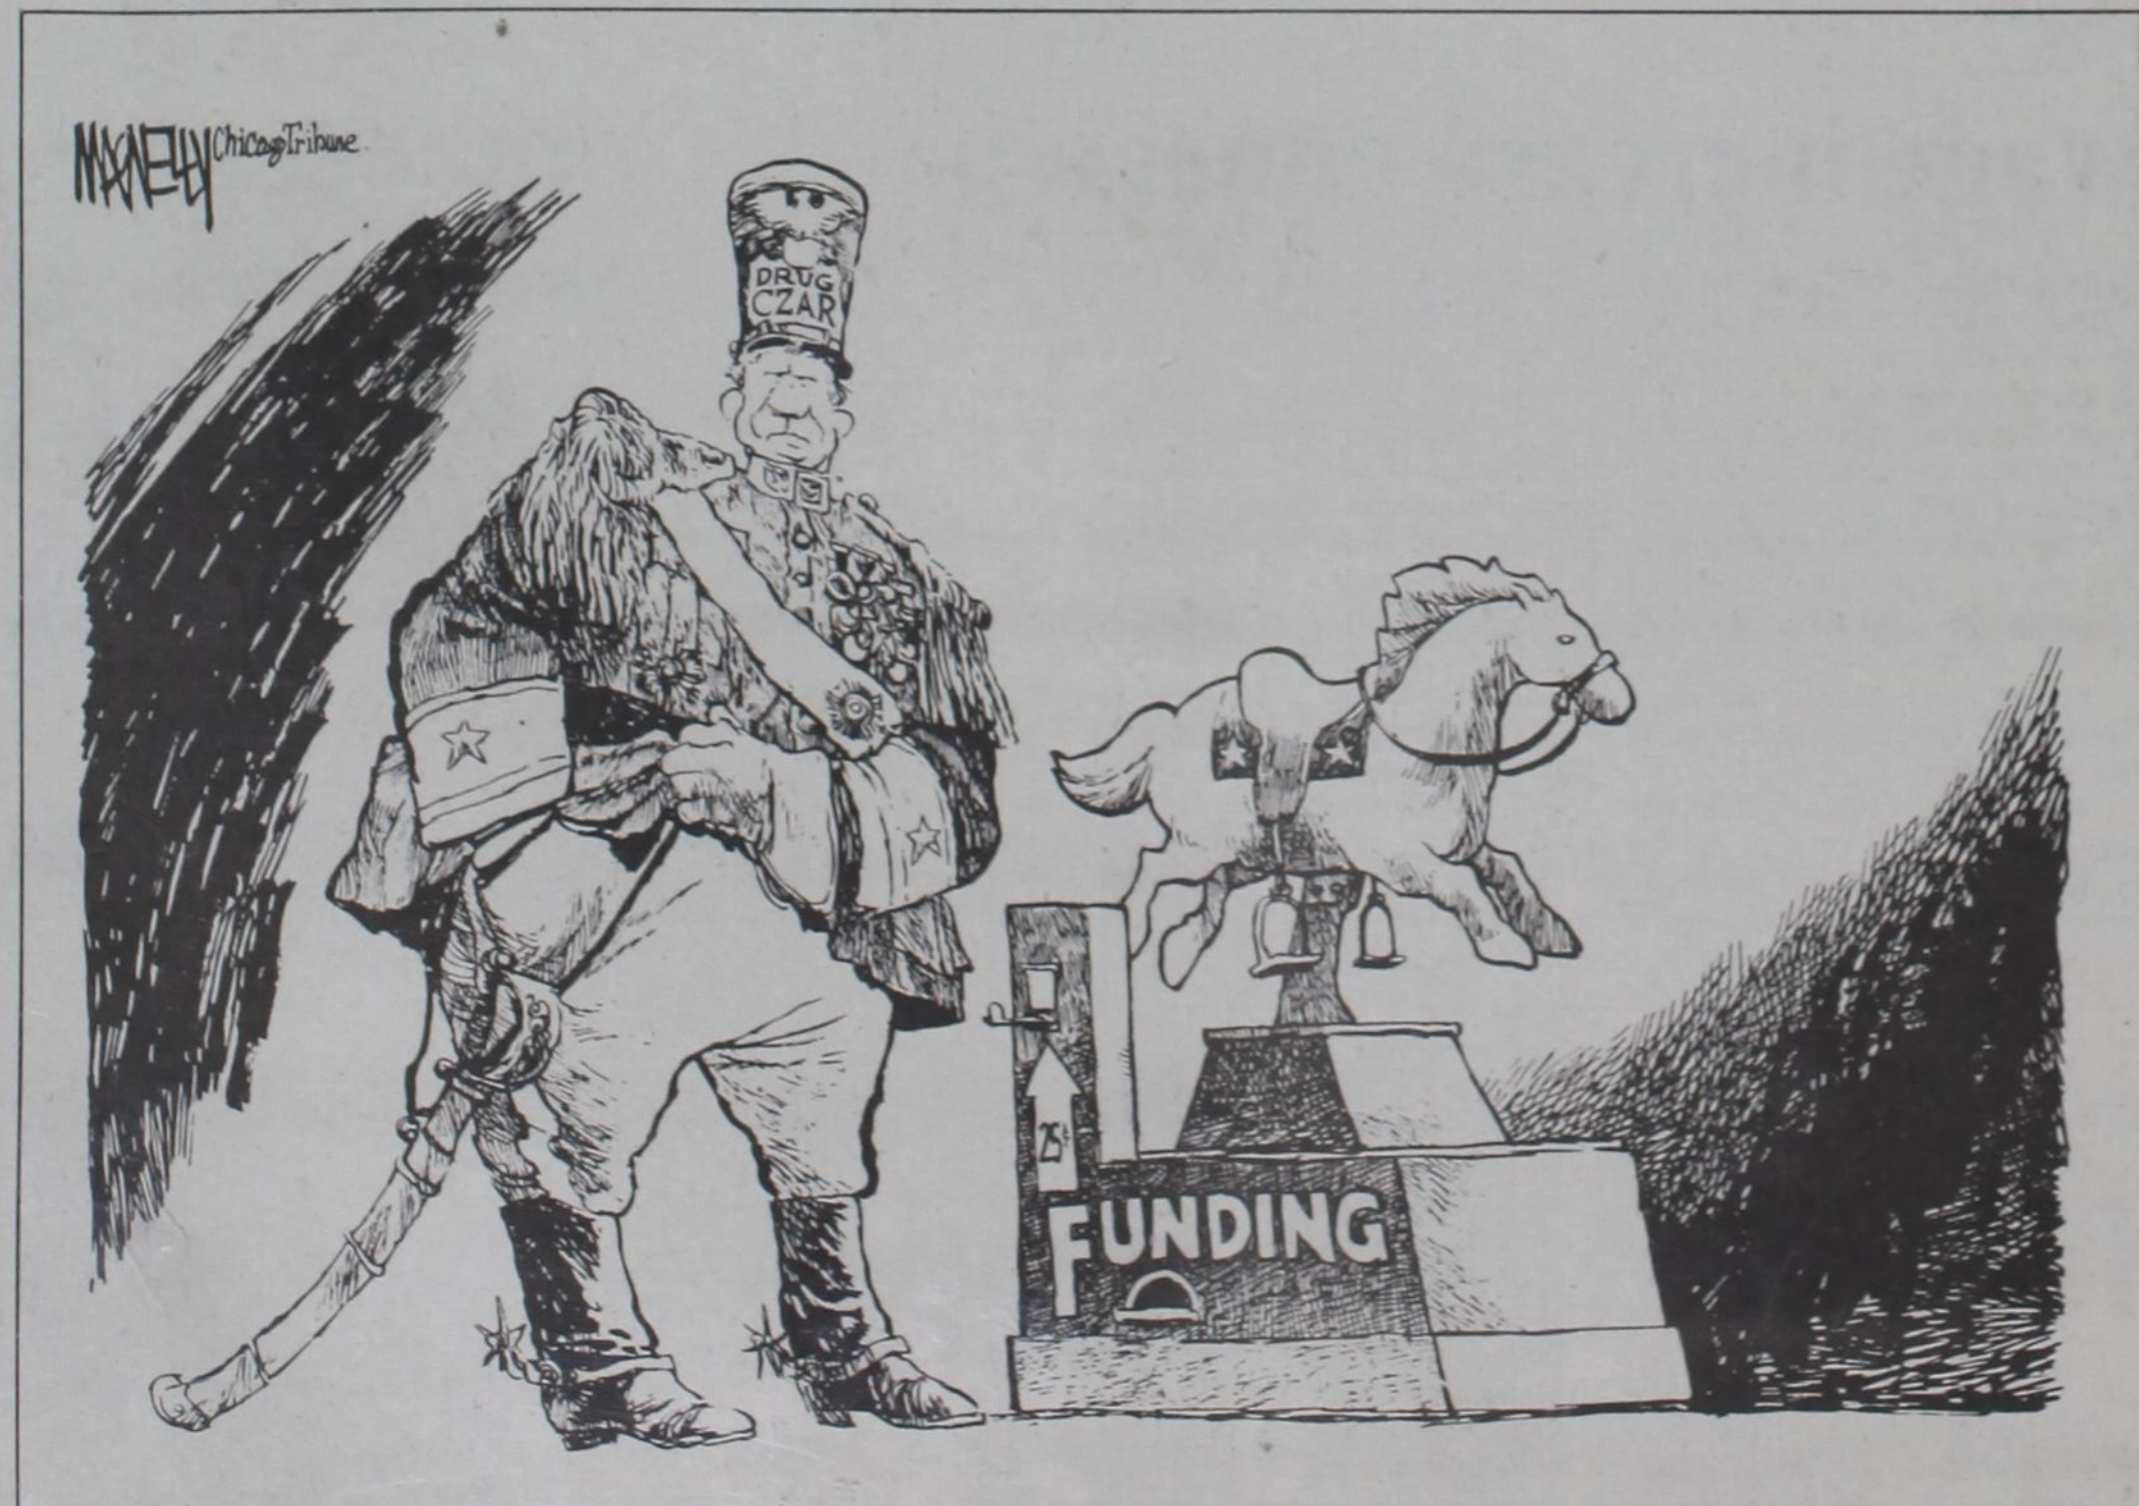

Acid rain prevention is high on Bush's agenda and Baker's first official pronouncement was a commitment to act against global warming.

Ozone depletion allows more ultraviolet radiation from the sun to reach the Earth's surface. That increases the risk of skin cancer and eye cataracts, causes ill effects in crops and aquatic life and may contribute to global warming.

The Bush administration has moved strongly and none too soon against these dangers. A similarly alert response to the debt crisis would make more sense than another dreary round of battle for the Contras — or even for poor old battered John Tower.

Tech professor, program coordinator differ on worth of TASP

By AUDRA SPARY
The University Daily

A Texas Tech professor and an administrator express differing opinions about the Texas Academic Skills Program (TASP) test.

"I have a belief that the university shouldn't be in the business of remediation," said anthropology professor James Goss. "If there are a lot of college students needing remediation, the public schools aren't succeeding in what they should be doing."

Implementing the TASP involved wasted time and effort, he said. Goss said he thinks more communication should have taken place between the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board and the Texas Education Agency, which supervises the state public school system.

Goss suggested that high school graduation standards be raised to correspond with college entrance requirements, and he suggested an alternative to TASP.

"A more reasonable plan is to set up the TASP so high school seniors could pass it at one level to graduate and at another level for college entrance," he said. "If they don't pass the second level, they can stay in high school for remediation."

Goss said buying the test was stupid.

"It's ridiculous to test people again and again," he said. "If the TEAMS test was applied properly, we wouldn't need TASP."

"A more reasonable plan is to set up the TASP so high school seniors could pass it at one level to graduate and at another level for college entrance."

— James Goss

Establishing college remedial classes is expected to be costly, Goss said.

"An estimated $75 (million) to $80 million will be needed to institute remediation in the first year," he said. "Wouldn't it be better to give the money to the public schools to help them prepare students for college?"

TASP probably will be especially difficult for minorities, Goss said. He said about 90 percent of minorities are expected to fail TASP on the first attempt.

Students who purchase an optional 400-page study manual for $15 probably will have a better chance of passing the test, he said.

Goss said the projected failure rate will occur because public schools do not prepare minorities for college entry.

"This is where I'd like to see that $75 (million) to $80 million go," he said.

Funding TASP also will complicate tight university budgets, Goss said. TASP will result in additional book-keeping for universities and new staffs to monitor remedial students.

"The Legislature has mandated TASP but hasn't come up with adequate funds, so universities must take capital from other programs," he said. "It doesn't help the university to divert resources to remedial education."

The company that formulated TASP, National Evaluation Systems Inc., was motivated by profit, Goss said.

"They published it, copyrighted it, prepared a study guide and they control evaluation," he said. "As I understand it, they earn a profit each time the test is taken."

Currently, effects of TASP are unknown, Goss said.

"The test will have to be in place for a while before we can see if students have improved or if they're just studying for the test," he said.

Despite negative opinions about the test, Tech TASP coordinator Don Garnett said TASP has several potential advantages.

TASP is the academic equivalent of redshirting in football — preventing an athlete from playing until his skills are more developed, he said. Garnett said he believes TASP will work because the test will motivate students to be more serious about academic programs.

"TASP permits a starting base for us to work with students," he said. "It clears up any ambiguities students might have and don't want to admit. Also, once students pass the test, their confidence is increased."

TASP is capable of creating dramatic changes in Texas higher education, Garnett said.

"TASP could create a revolution in undergraduate education if students, parents, faculty and administrators take this seriously."

— Don Garnett

"TASP could create a revolution in undergraduate education if students, parents, faculty and administrators take this seriously," he said.

Garnett said Texas has not spent funds on TASP yet but that estimates indicate the state may spend $36 million to implement the test. Currently, no projections on the annual cost of remedial programs exist, he said.

"It depends on how we deliver the services and the number of students," he said.

Garnett said that to his knowledge, the Legislature has not budgeted the remedial programs TASP requires.

NES Inc., headquartered in Amherst, Mass., formulated and published TASP. Garnett said Texas has not been billed by NES for formulating and publishing TASP but that the company will regain the money through the test fee, which is $24.

The subject material covered in TASP is not as important as possessing skills needed to succeed in college, Garnett said. He said sociological research indicates college students change careers four or five times during their lifetime.

"What matters is that you can learn how to learn, and can you learn to be flexible," he said.

Job market has grown, director says

By CORTCHIE WELCH
The University Daily

Thanks to an economy that is veering back to an upswing, this academic year is proving to be one of the busiest in job recruitment in recent years, a Texas Tech official said.

David Kraus, director of the Career Planning and Placement Center, said that because of a favorable economy, the availability of jobs has increased and good opportunities are abundant for Tech students who are graduating this spring.

"This is probably the busiest recruiting we have had in five or six years," Kraus said.

Although a significant demand for accountants and engineers exists, Kraus said students whose majors are not in great demand should fine-tune their skills and experience in preparation for the job market.

Kraus said students who are seeking jobs can be naive by assuming that all jobs are advertised in the same way, such as bulletin boards, placement offices and newspapers.

"Students look through want ads and newspapers for jobs; I think they should. They may find some good ones in there," Kraus said.

He said because an employer is not advertising jobs in some form does not mean that he is not hiring; thus he suggests that students go to employers with resumes and letters and prepared for an interview.

"I think students need to be aggressive; they need to be alert to things that are going on," Kraus said. "The more positive you go to going about it is, I would like to work for that company. If I want to work for them, I know they have hired people like me before with my kind of background. I am going to send them a resume and a letter and see what happens."

Though salary is an important aspect in the job market, Kraus said students should not view the dollar sign as the bottom line.

"I think students ought to look at a whole variety of factors," he said. "A $20,000 salary in Lubbock is probably a whole lot better than a $20,000 salary in Houston. Students ought to look at the quality of the work itself."

Kraus said students ought to look at the potential of a particular job, such as the opportunity for advancement and will the job seeker be making the same salary five or six years down the road.

Raiders snap skid with 5-4 win

By JOEL BROWN
The University Daily

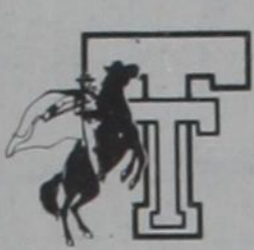

Texas Tech coach Larry Hays knew his team needed a win Tuesday to get back on its feet.

The Red Raiders did just that by rallying for three runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to defeat the College of the Southwest 5-4 at Dan Law Field.

The win snapped a six-game losing skid for Tech and moved its mark to 19-11 for the year. The Mustangs dropped to 24-14.

Raider Greg Kobza singled through Mustang pitcher Shaun Rohrwild's legs to bring home Donald Harris for the game-winning run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth.

Tech entered the inning down 4-2 before Harris doubled down the third base line scoring Matt Martin from second base while pinch hitter Chris Stegent advanced from first to third. Mike Gustafson then hit a sacrifice fly to center field scoring Stegent and tying the game.

"I don't care who they are. They've got a good pitching staff," Hays said. "We were lucky to win, but we earned it." Pitcher Kurt Shipley, 2-2, picked up the win for the Raiders. Tech will resume Southwest Conference action Friday with the opener of a three-game home series with Arkansas.

"If we would've lost the ballgame, it would have really been tough to get up," Hays said.

A boneless ham will be given away Friday on "Roast the Hogs Night" to the Tech fraternity or sorority with the most members in attendance.

Women netters thrash WTSU

The Texas Tech women's tennis team upped its season record to 13-7 by posting an 8-1 victory over West Texas State on Tuesday in Canyon.

Rebeca Nevarez, Amy Ryan, Karen Biggerstaff, Jamie McCaffery and Tanya Hamilton all won their singles matches. Hamilton blanked Brandi Conlee 6-0, 6-0 at No. 6.

Top seed Mallory Grantham lost to the Lady Buffaloes' No. 1 seed Andrea Kibler 6-2, 7-5.

Biggerstaff/Hamilton started the doubles sweep by defeating WTSU's top tandem of Kibler/Crissie Young 6-2, 1-6, 6-1.

Tech gets new head recruiter, assistant

Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones announced Tuesday the assignment of Jack Tayrien, a Tech football coach since 1986, as recruiting coordinator.

Jones also announced the hiring of John Young as an assistant to coach Spike Dykes. Young's official duties will be announced at a later date, according to Tech officials.

tion at both places.

The trick is to listen to the other stadium while looking at the one you're at. Luckily, baseball and track are two sports with a lot of free time in between the action. So know that if you hear a starter's gun go off at the same time you're being offended by a batter's obnoxious groin scratching, you'll have plenty of time to turn your attention to the race until a pitch is on the way.

You'll need to be sure the people sitting around you aren't too focused on either track or baseball, depending on where you are. You could look pretty foolish screaming alone for Tech's Ronnie Green as he wins the 200 meters at the same time a Raider pitcher serves up a three-run home run.

Since the stadiums share a parking lot, the Coliseum is your best bet, but remember this:
● Hot dogs and sunflower seeds won't cost much, but you have to bring your own sun screen.
● I'll see you there.

Fast break

Erin Hillary races up court during the women's All-University basketball game in the Rec Center before Spring Break. Hillary's team, Aud Balls, won the championship by a narrow margin of 45-43 over the Zoomba Warriors.

Women's, men's All-University basketball champs crowned

The Aud Balls and Rattle & Hum were crowned Intramural All-University women's and men's champions respectively March 14. Both teams gained the top spot with impressive second half performances; the Aud Balls finally defeating the Zoomba Warriors, 45-43 while Rattle & Hum upended the Far Siders, 57-49.

In the championship women's game the hot shooting of Lynn Bruce and the solid free throw performance of Melinda Davis gave the Zoomba Warriors a narrow four point lead with 10 minutes left in the game. The Aud Balls fought back with strong inside play of Carol Donovan and reclaimed the lead and withstood a last second Zoomba Warriors shot to claim the trophy. Donovan paced the Aud Balls with 14 points while Bruce hit five of seven 3-pointers to lead all scorers with 15 points.

Rattle & Hum used the inside play of post man, Mark Gossling, and the outside shooting of Brock Richards, to overcome a six point second half deficit in their championship tilt against the Far Siders. The first half was a see-saw battle with only three points separating the two teams at intermission. Using the inside game and some cool outside shooting, Rattle & Hum raced to a 50-40 lead with four minutes left in the game and were never threatened. Chris Gerber, with 21 points, led the Far Siders, while Gossling and Richards had 20 and 15 points respectively.

Town & Country has new name to compliment new face

It was only seven short years ago that Town and Country Apartments, located at 2717 3rd Street, across from Texas Tech University, was one of the most popular communities for Texas Tech students. In the early 1980's, those wanting to live at Town and Country found themselves on a lengthy waiting list. The one and two bedroom apartments were most desirable for those wanting a short walk to the University campus. The grounds of the community buzzed with youthful faces in search of an education-found just across the street. Occasional "warm-up" parties at Town and Country set the stage for exciting evenings of football at Jones Stadium, located just a block to the south.

In the past few years, the community has become run down, the parking lots virtually empty, and the steady flow of students crossing the railroad tracks to get to campus has ceased.

In the next several weeks however, the old Town and Country apartments will begin to shed the evidence of neglect and a struggling economy, and don a new name and a new face. The community has recently been acquired by Lubbock's own-McDougal properties.

McDougal Properties, headed by Delbert McDougal, has been a major force in property ownership management since the early 1970's. The company's most recent "rags to riches" project was the old Casa Linda Apartments (located at 4th St. and Slide Rd.), now known as Waterford Place. Last summer, Casa Linda was transformed into a more desirable apartment community complete with monitored alarm systems, a satellite television system, contemporary carpet colors, and a fully equipped workout center.

Texas Tech University's social sororities and fraternities were approached in February of this year to lend a helping hand in the search for a new name for Town and Country. The MCDUGAL PROPERTIES' NAME THAT APARTMENT CONTEST was conducted for 3 weeks, with over 180 names submitted.

The top four best names submitted were awarded cash prizes. First place and winner of $1,000 was Delta Sigma Phi fraternity for their name, Sierra Crossing, the name the community now carries. Second place and winner of $500 was Delta Sigma Theta sorority for their entry, Stratford Place. Third place and winner of $300 was Theta Chi fraternity for The Crossing, and 4th place and winner of $100 was Kappa Delta sorority for their entry, The Crossties.

The face-life at Sierra Crossing is already underway. The community will be involved in a rehabilitation exceeding $1 million. The apartments will be totally up-dated inside and out, complete with contemporary color schemes and extensive landscaping.

Whatever your lifestyle, Sierra Crossing will offer affordability, convenience and the excellent management found at all McDougal Properties.

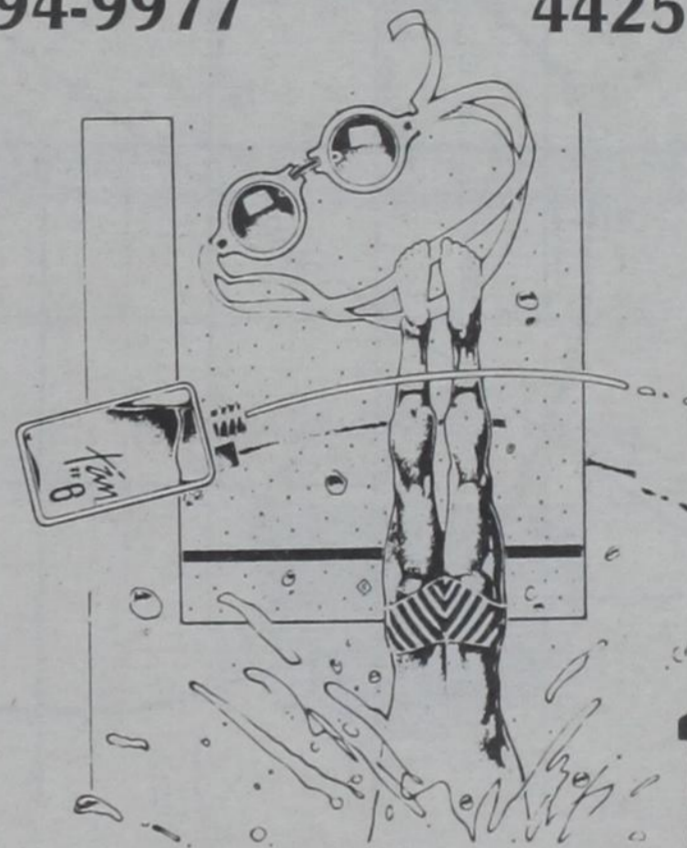

When the new fall term is underway and the lights of Jones Stadium shine brightly in North Lubbock, so will the new face of the Sierra Crossing Apartments.

Innsbruck West offers unique flexibility, convenience & fun

Innsbruck West at 2302 West Loop 289, is an apartment community that likes to do things differently, according to manager Sheri Pierce.

One of the nice but different things you can find at Innsbruck is a summer and fall pre-lease special for students. If students want to go home for the summer, but keep their apartment, they can do so for half the regular rent. Also, they will reduce the two bedroom rate to that of a one bedroom if one roommate will be staying through the summer and the other goes home.

Innsbruck residents who stay in Lubbock for the summer can look forward to several parties, because management believes in get-togethers so everyone can meet.

Innsbruck West is an extraordinary name for an apartment community nestled on the wide open plains of West Texas, when the name conjures up visions of the Alps. However, this is an unusual residential community, built for extraordinary people.

Unique, distinctive floorplans create in both one and two bedroom apartments homes a desirable lifestyle with the utmost in flexibility. On site staff members are resident oriented and tuned in to their needs.

Vaulted ceilings, wall to wall carpeting, ceiling fans and decorator wall coverings bring an aura of prestige to your home. Private balconies, patios, outside storage areas, and roomy walk-in closets make a total package that is hard to beat.

Innsbruck offers the only free laundry program especially for their residents. Clubroom facilities are an added attraction to the community. Residents can get a tan or maintain one in the on-site tanning bed, spend lazy afternoons sunning by the pool or relaxing in the Jacuzzi, which is heated year round.

Further amenities include covered postal center, covered entryways, exterior security lighting, bat and blown insulation, wood burning fireplaces, pass through bars, mini blinds, and more. An added attraction is that Innsbruck pays your hot water.

Energy efficient appliances share a kitchen large enough to entertain, but compact schemes found in all six floorplans create a special place for its special residents.

Texas Tech University is a mere eight minutes away from Innsbruck West. Shopping, entertainment, restaurants, and night life are all nearby, so whether you're working or playing, home at Innsbruck is only a short distance away.

To share in the exciting, lively lifestyle at Innsbruck West, call Sheri, Shawn, or Mary at 797-7617, or visit this affordable apartment community at 2302 W. Loop 289, just off the access road south of 19th. And don't forget to ask about the special surprise prelease.

University Plaza has coed off-campus life

Fun, friends, fantastic food and fair prices is what they stand for at University Plaza, aka the U.P. Located directly across the street from Texas Tech on University Avenue, they cater to students looking for an adult atmosphere.

Don't have a car/ Don't worry. Their seven-story building is situated in the midst of several walking distance restaurants, record stores, and clubs. Night life is just across the street at the local hot spots on Main Street.

What sets the U.P. apart from campus dorms as well as apartments is their staff. To them, you're not just another number occupying space and paying bills. The bottom line is the "U.P. cares." says Renee Smith, "as general manager of the property, I try to get to know our residents and make myself available to talk to anytime I'm needed. But it's not just me, it is also my office staff, maintenance staff, and my housekeeping and food service staff. They are all here for you."

assistants are highly motivated and eager to assist in meeting the needs and requests of University Plaza residents. One thing that sets them apart from other R.A's is that because of U.P.'s adult atmosphere, their job does not center around floor discipline. They're available for you, to answer questions, organize events, and to relay your opinions and attitudes to food service and the management.

If you like sports, the U.P. has 'em. Seasonal tournaments in flag football, basketball, softball, and volleyball are just one of the many areas of fun the U.P. has to offer. Frequent theme parties, including their recent Casino Night are always a big hit for residents and their friends. Every season brings holiday fun to the U.P., with outdoor offerings of two pools and frequent get togethers they like to call "attitude adjustment" time.

University Plaza offers suites with connecting baths, and the option of single or double room accommodations. Their summer plans include the completion of room renovations prior to opening of Fall '89. Their "Dine Anytime" meal concept has been a huge success and will be a continued feature at University Plaza. The concept considers the busy schedule of students and allows residents the flexibility of choosing meal times.

The philosophy of University Plaza is very simple and basic, but it is the core of all they do. Mutual respect and consideration between staff and management promotes "U.P. INDIVIDUALITY!"
