

British flag raised over Falkland Islands' capital

By The Associated Press

With the Union Jack flying again over the Falkland Islands capital of Stanley, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Tuesday that Britain would hold some of its 15,000 prisoners until Argentina formally agrees to peace throughout the South Atlantic.

Angry crowds rioted in Buenos Aires — beginning in the central Plaza de Mayo, where 5,000 people gathered to curse President Leopoldo Galtieri at a scheduled speech from the balcony of Government House. The general, who was cheered from the same balcony two months ago, did not appear and riot police drove the crowds away.

Galtieri told the nation later Tuesday evening in a broadcast speech that his troops had fought well in a righteous war and that "sooner or later the Malvinas (Argentina's name for the Falklands) will be ours." He blamed the United States, which "surprisingly became the enemy," for the Argentine defeat. Raul Alfonsin, leader of Argentina's civilian Radical Party declared: "The government has got to go now. They must cease the usurpation of power and begin a transition to democracy today."

Thatcher, speaking on her day of triumph to the House of Commons, said Britain will not allow Argentina to have a say in the future of the windswept archipelago 250 miles east of the tip of South America.

"We went to recapture the islands, to restore British sovereignty, to restore British administration," she said. "I do not intend to negotiate on the sovereignty of the islands in any way except with the people who live there."

Britain will defend the Falklands "alone if necessary," she declared.

Thatcher said she had sent a message to the Buenos Aires government through the Swiss Embassy "seeking confirmation that Argentina, like Britain, considers all hostilities between us in the South Atlantic, and not just on the Falkland Islands themselves, at an end."

Until this is received, she said, Britain will hold some of the captured prisoners, including commanders and officers.

The news of a victory brought jubilation to the streets of London, where crowds greeted Thatcher with cheers and the singing of "Rule Britannia." Queen Elizabeth II and U.S. President Ronald Reagan were among those who said they were relieved the killing was at an end after the loss of an estimated 1,000 lives.

In Buenos Aires, there still was no official announcement of a surrender from the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The crowd in the Plaza de Mayo threw rocks and coins. Police chased them down sidestreets with, firing tear gas and rubber pellets. The mobs set fire to buses, broke streetlights and screamed "Treason!"

Galtieri, in his speech, said Britain must accept that the islands can never return to what they were before the invasion, and that it cannot re-establish a colonial government under which "there will never be serenity or peace."

Galtieri did not explain what happened in the Falklands, nor did he mention the terms under which Argentina would withdraw its troops.

Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez was the only official to mention defeat, telling reporters the "surrender was due to British materiel superiority and the advanced technology developed by NATO." He also blamed the United States, which supported Britain in the undeclared war that began when Argentina invaded the Falklands on April 2.

The British sent an estimated 9,000 men and 100 warships and merchant vessels to recapture the Falklands, a British colony that was home to 1,800 British-descended residents and 600,000 sheep. Most of the civilians fled inland and the fighting continued until British troops swarmed into Stanley.

Thatcher said Maj. Gen. Jeremy Moore, commander of the British ground forces, flew into Stanley through a snowstorm to receive the surrender of Argentine Brig. Gen. Mario Benjamin Menendez at 9 p.m. Falklands time (8 p.m. EDT) Monday.

Queen Elizabeth II, whose second-oldest son, Prince Andrew, 22, is a helicopter pilot with the Falklands task force, was "delighted and relieved" at the news, press secretary Michael Shea said.

The Argentines have listed more than 420 men as dead or missing and feared dead in the 74-day war, but the British claim to have killed at least 250 more.

Argentina sent troops ashore April 2 and defeated a contingent of 80 British marines, prompting Britain to dispatch a fleet that eventually numbered 100 warships and merchant vessels. Argentina claims Britain took the islands by force in 1833 from the Argentine administration.

Official casualty reports through Saturday said at least 228 British soldiers had died in land, sea and air battles for control of the Falklands, with at least another 244 wounded. Argentine losses were estimated at 775 dead or missing and more than a thousand captured.

Physicians needed in rural parts of state

By ALISON GOLIGHTLY
UD Reporter

Although members of the Governor's Task Force on Higher Education have recommended limiting enrollment at state medical schools to prevent a projected surplus of doctors in Texas, Tech President Lauro Cavazos said statistics show a need for primary care physicians in rural parts of the state.

Primary care medicine includes general practice, internal medicine, pediatrics and obstetrics and gynecology.

Cavazos is a member of the medical education subcommittee of the task force, which completed a study in April projecting goals for Texas universities for the year 2000.

Before he became president of Tech, Cavazos was the dean of Tufts Medical School.

During discussions of current data projecting an oversupply of physicians in Texas by the year 1990, committee members discussed possible solutions to combat the projected surplus if enrollment trends continue.

According to the task force report, a projected 1,200 students will graduate from Texas medical schools in 1983.

The medical committee recommended allocating funds to aid the Coordinating Board in an in-depth study in physician manpower and cost-effectiveness of state medical programs.

The committee proposed eliminating funds from the state legislature to medical schools with increased enrollments until the study is completed.

Another committee recommendation proposed funding by the state legislature for additional graduate training in Texas hospitals. The funding would include intern and residency training.

Cavazos said he questions the possibility of reducing medical school enrollments by 10 to 20 percent.

The distribution of physicians in the state should be considered in evaluating the projected surplus, Cavazos said.

Most physicians are located in urban areas of the state. But ratio of the number of doctors per patient in West Texas shows a remaining need for rural physicians.

Texas Medical Association figures indicate only one physician per 1,026 people in the Permian Basin (Midland-Odessa area), where a new branch of Tech's Medical School will open.

The ratio drops to 1:654 in the South Plains because Tech's Medical School and Health Sciences Center is located in Lubbock, Cavazos said.

Other factors to be considered when projecting oversupplies of physicians are: the age of doctors, their positions, whether they currently are practicing, and if they are male or female, he said.

Recent medical studies have shown female doctors on the average practice fewer hours than their male counterparts, Cavazos said.

Since more women are practicing medicine, the number of hours they work has an affect on whether more hours of medical service are actually being provided, Cavazos said.

The impact of new technology also could affect the validity of the projections, Cavazos said.

Jack Strong, a task force member from Longview, said it would be "cost-efficient" to close one or two of the medical schools in Texas.

Strong cited the Texas A&M Medical School and the Tech Medical School as schools that possibly could be closed to prevent a surplus.

However, Cavazos said the chances of the Tech Medical School being closed were unlikely because Tech is filling a need for primary care physicians in West Texas.

"Seventy percent of our residents went into primary care medicine. The major thrust of our program is primary care," Cavazos said.

Court rules in favor of free education for illegal aliens

Compiled from staff and wire reports

States must provide free public education to children of illegal aliens, a divided Supreme Court said Tuesday in a decision that extended many of the constitutional rights enjoyed by American citizens to families that live illegally in the United States.

By the slimmest of margins, a 5-4 vote, the court ruled that a Texas law allowing "undocumented" children to attend public schools only if they paid tuition was unconstitutional.

The decision immediately was hailed as a civil rights victory for the millions of people who illegally live and work in this country.

"It is a tremendous victory and comes at a crucial time for the Hispanic community because of the numerous setbacks we have suffered under the Reagan administration," said Tony Bonilla, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

"The burden now shifts to the Congress and to the state legislatures to see that adequate funds are provided to meet the special educational needs of these youngsters," Bonilla said.

The Census Bureau estimates between 1 million and 6 million illegal aliens are in the United States. Others say the figure is closer to 10 million.

Gov. Bill Clements has estimated 11,000 illegal alien children attend Texas public schools.

However, Lubbock Independent School District Assistant Superintendent Ronald Gooch said, "At the present time there aren't that many people in this area that would be affected."

"On a local level, the ruling won't make that much of a difference. On a statewide level, it's going to make a whale of a difference," Gooch said.

In Texas and other states bordering Mexico, the presence of illegal aliens is a hot political issue. Tuesday's decision likely will intensify that political heat.

Writing for the court, Justice William J. Brennan first said all illegal aliens have constitutional rights.

Brennan then stressed the importance of obtaining an education.

Increase in local rape percentage sparks need for prevention education

By ALISON GOLIGHTLY
UD Reporter

The increased percentage of rapes in the Lubbock area has sparked a growing concern among law enforcement officials and other volunteer organizations for educating women about rape prevention.

"In the last six years rape has increased 103 percent in Lubbock," said Becky Cannon, director of the Lubbock Rape Crisis Center.

Cannon was one of three speakers at the free public seminar on rape Tuesday night at the University Center.

Cannon discussed the psychological aftereffects on and counseling of rape victims.

"The biggest response of rape victims (after being attacked) is the general fear of being alone," Cannon said.

Other victims feel embarrassed and unsure of themselves after an attack, she said.

Although volunteers at the Rape Crisis Center offer counseling to the victim and other family members as long necessary, Cannon said volunteers try to encourage the victim to "assume responsibility as soon as possible."

Cannon said 46 percent of the cases that occurred in Lubbock last year involved female victims from 17- to 24-years-old.

The Rape Crisis Center works directly with the police department and the district attorney's office on rape cases. Volunteers at the center will go with the victim to receive medical attention. Volunteers also will accompany the victim to police lineups and to the victim's trial.

Det. J.R. Ashmore of the Lubbock Police Department discussed protective measures women should take in order to prevent rape.

Women should avoid walking in unlit areas after dark, check behind the seats of a car even if it has been locked, and avoid going to a bar alone, Ashmore said.

Mace usually is not an effective precaution against rape because "things usually happen so sudden that unless the mace is in the victim's hand, she would not have time to use it," Ashmore said.

"I think any city that has a college with a large enrollment is vulnerable to a large number of rapes," Ashmore said.

The Texas Penal Code classifies rape as a second degree felony punishable by two to 20 years in prison and-or a fine of up to $10,000.

Texas Penal Codes identify aggravated rape (when the rapist threatens or attempts to kill the victim) as a first-degree felony punishable by five to 99 years in jail and-or a fine of up to $10,000.

School-necktie amendment to increase serious studying

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — I have been viciously abused for supporting the school-necktie amendment. I don't know why. It seems obvious the decline of American education began when the Supreme Court, or somebody in authority, maybe gym teachers, said you couldn't stop a child from going to school dressed like a slob.

My amendment would be a first step toward reversing the trend. It doesn't go all the way. It doesn't say you can't go to school with your hair uncombed or your fingernails dirty. It doesn't even forbid wearing jeans to school. All it says is everybody who goes to school has to wear a necktie.

The aim of putting school children in neckties isn't spiritual. It's cultural. Removing your necktie is the traditional cultural signal that a man is about to turn off his brain and take it easy and play games.

That's why baseball owners don't let baseball players wear neckties on the field. They want to make the customers think the players are out there having a good time instead of working at million-dollar-a-year jobs. Actually, if the New York Yankees wore neckties on the diamond they'd probably play better than they have been lately. Wearing a necktie makes a man take himself seriously.

The same principle holds for school children. A kid who walks into school without a necktie is a kid who can't help thinking he's out on a lark. Why should he care about the difference between antecedents and dangling participles?

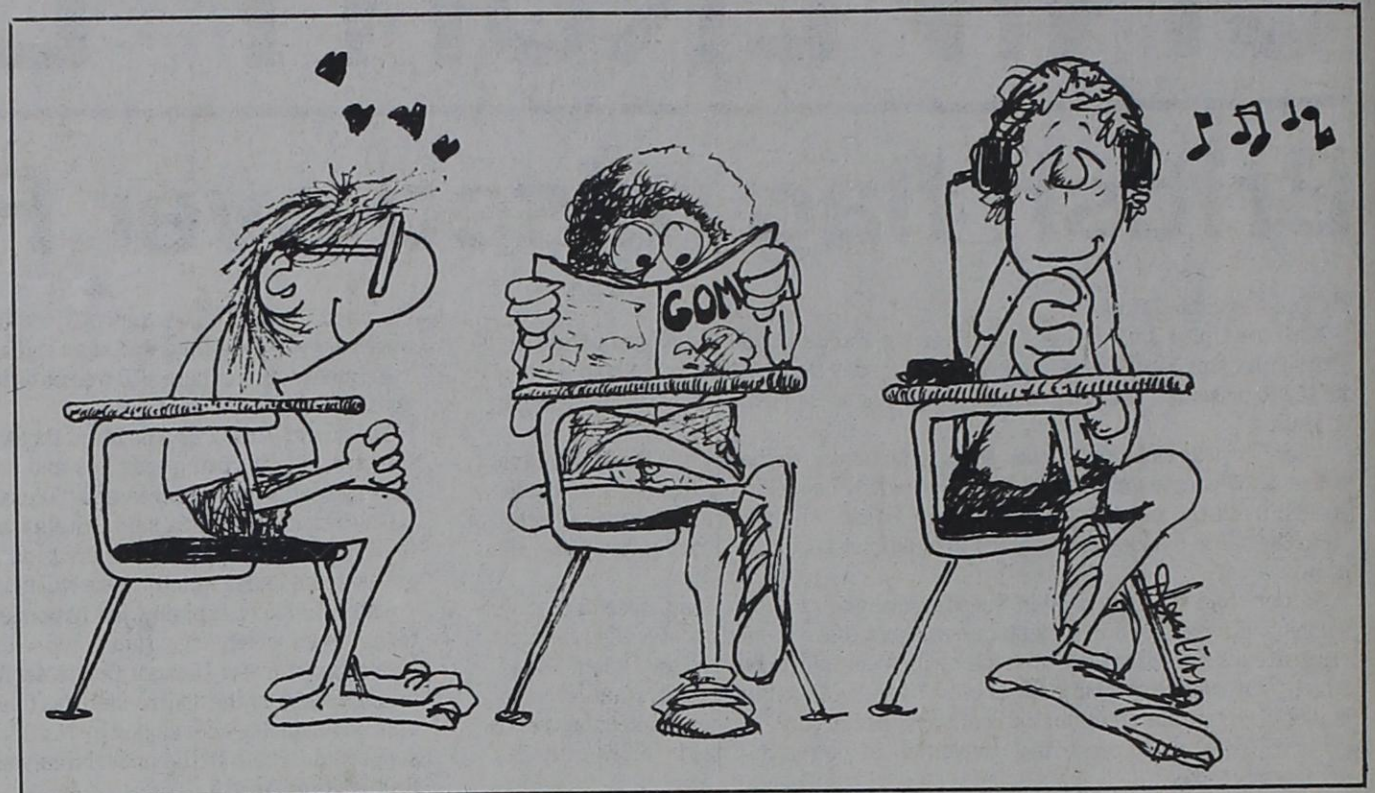

He can't help falling into a slobbish state of mind. Put a necktie on that kid and you change his outlook. No longer does he look at you with contempt and say, "Why do I have to know what an antecedent is?" He feels engaged in serious business with a necktie on. What's more he knows if he asks, "Why do I have to know —?" you can easily grab him by the necktie, pull it like a noose until his cheeks turn purple and say, "Because I say so, that's why."

Great corporations and quality restaurants understand the elevating effect of neckties. Do you ever see the executives of Exxon getting out of work, piling on the subway, elbowing the other passengers in the stomach and spray-painting graffiti on the seats? Of course not. Exxon executives wear neckties.

You go into an elegant restaurant. Meals at $60 per plate. Everybody's wearing a necktie, right? That's why nobody in that restaurant is blowing beer suds in his wife's face or grinding out his cigarette butt in the Persian tapestry.

Opponents of the school-necktie amendment raise the usual tired objections. What about kids who can't afford neckties? No problem. Elegant restaurants deal with this every day by keeping a supply of clip-on necktie at the door. If you don't want to wear one, too bad; you can't pay $60 for dinner.

But the school-necktie amendment does not apply only to males. Girls also would be required to wear neckties. Not shirts, mind you, though many female private schools do require shirts. The school-necktie amendment is not oppressive however. If girls don't want to wear shirts they could satisfy the Constitutional requirement by wearing their neckties around bared necks, much as women commonly wear necklaces, though the neckties would have to be knotted firmly under the chin.

It's my conviction this simple gesture toward the restoration of neatness in the schools will do even more than school prayer to restore the educational serenity which the elderly believe prevailed in the good old days. Accordingly, I have formed a new group known as the Neat Majority to create an irresistible public demand for putting the necktie back in school. At present the Neat Majority has one member, but that is often the way with majorities these days. I urge everyone interested in the movement send a necktie to the President. I will soon be selling a special necktie embroidered with the slogan "Neatness Now!" It will be ideal for mailing to the White House and can be yours for only $50.

Organizations aid creation of quality Tech programs

Keely Coghlan

Quality. The word has an air of excellence, of desirability and careful craftsmanship.

To create quality in anything requires more effort, time or money. Tech support organizations are beginning to realize more time, effort or money is needed to create an institution that provides quality education to its students.

Traditionally, alumni and support organizations support Tech's athletic programs.

But now Tech support organizations are becoming more aware of the need for quality in the university's academic programs, an awareness Tech needs to survive in the current economic hard times.

Enrollment at Tech has stabilized, leaving the university time and resources to improve its academic programs.

Many of Tech's academic programs already are recognized as excellent. For example, the College of Engineering has an international reputation.

But outside of career circles, Tech often is not perceived as an academic powerhouse. One of the ways this image among the general public can be changed is through the creation of outstanding programs or guest lecturers.

Another way to upgrade Tech's image is to recruit leading professionals by endowed professorships and increased merit-pay salaries for professors.

Tech President Lauro Cavazos said he has been emphasizing the creation of endowed professorships and endowed scholarships to compete academically with other schools.

More endowed scholarships for outstanding high school students will not only attract more students to Tech but also will demonstrate Tech's commitment to academic excellence.

An increased cohesiveness among alumni and greater alumni support also can change public perception of Tech.

The Dads Association is just one example of how Tech support groups are helping Tech improve the quality of its educational opportunities.

The Dads Association is helping to change the general public perception of Tech as "that university out in West Texas somewhere" by creating a distinguished visiting professor endowment.

The association has begun a fund-raising campaign to create a $500,000 endowment. Houston Endowment Inc. recently awarded the association with a $25,000 gift for the program.

The endowment will fund one or more visits to Tech a year by scholars of Nobel Prize stature.

Dr. Melvin Calvin, the 1961 recipient of the Nobel Prize in Chemistry, was the first guest in the association's visiting professor program.

Calvin visited Tech in April and spent three days lecturing and meeting Tech students and faculty.

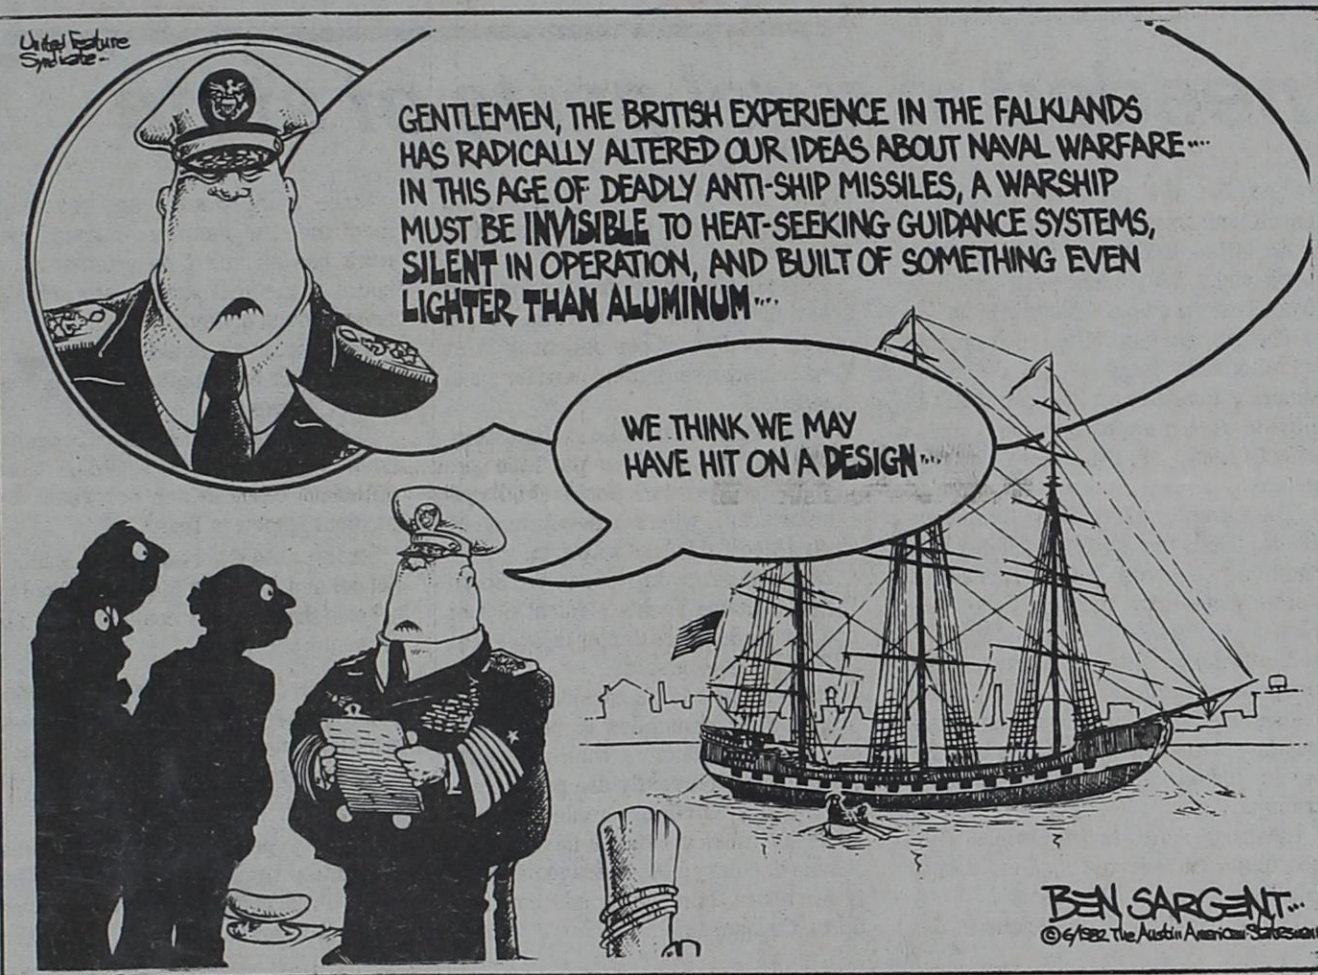

The chance for students to meet minds of this caliber is an opportunity that should not be missed.

Learning from professionals in all walks of life should be an integral part of college life.

Programs like the Dads' Association visiting professor program show a commitment to quality education that should be saluted and imitated.

For, after all, who wants their alma mater remembered as the university that spawned John W. Hinckley?

Israeli forces battle guerrillas

By The Associated Press
Israeli tanks and artillery battled guerrillas near Sidon in southern Lebanon today and tightened the ring around Beirut. The PLO claimed Yasser Arafat and his aides were directing "stubborn resistance" from west Beirut, but Israeli newspapers said Arafat was believed hiding in the Soviet Embassy.

of Damascus. The PLO denied these rumors, apparently to dispel them.

Armed civilians belonging to various Palestinian and Lebanese Moslem factions were in control of west Beirut and its 600,000 inhabitants. Shops were closed and the city was rocked occasionally by explosions as rival factions set off car bombs and rockets against each other.

There was no shooting between the Israelis and the guerrillas, however, and the Israelis said they wanted to avoid bloody street fighting and had no intention of entering west Beirut.

Israel radio said other guerrillas, expecting an Israeli assault, took 75 lecturers hostage at the American University in Beirut.

At a refugee camp, near Sidon 20 miles south of Beirut, Israeli press reports said Israeli tanks and artillery were battling 250 to 800 guerrillas holed up in two mosques for the fourth day.

The reports, subject to Israeli military censorship, said attempts to persuade the Sidon guerrillas to surrender at the Ein Hilwa refugee camp failed when the guerrillas either killed the Arab emissaries sent to talk to them or kept them hostage.

They said the guerrillas were led by Haj Ibrahim Hawim, a fanatic Lebanese Shiite follower of Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, and that Hawim ordered his men to resist to the death.

In west Beirut, the Palestine Liberation Organization said the only top guerrilla leader not in the PLO enclave was Farouk Kaddoumi, and that he was at the United Nations in New York.

In Israel, Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan said Arafat took refuge in a foreign embassy in Beirut and "we know which one."

The Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow said it had "no information" on reports that Arafat had taken refuge in its mission in Beirut.

As the Israelis and their Lebanese Christian allies began surrounding west Beirut Monday, rumors swept the city that the PLO leaders had fled to the Syrian capital Winkler County sheriff's officials said the warrant resulted from information supplied by the woman's 14-year-old daughter.

Soviets commit to first-use ban

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko announced Tuesday that his country "assumes an obligation not to be the first to use nuclear weapons." Soviet sources said it the first Kremlin commitment not to initiate nuclear war.

Gromyko's statement, a message from President Leonid I. Brezhnev to the U.N. General Assembly's special session on disarmament, was greeted by applause.

The foreign minister said the world had the right to expect that the other nuclear powers take reciprocal steps.

Soviet sources said Tuesday's announcement was the first time Brezhnev had made a commitment to a unilateral first-use ban — as opposed to merely proposing such a ban.

The U.S. administration has reacted negatively to past proposals, which President Reagan said would not serve any useful purpose.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said two months ago that such a proposal was "tantamount to making Europe safe for conventional aggression."

Gromyko said the unilateral decision was taken with the realization that "should a nuclear war start, it could mean the destruction of human civilization and perhaps the end of life itself on earth."

"If the other nuclear powers assume an equally precise and clear obligation not to be the first to use nuclear weapons that would be tantamount in practice to a ban on the use of nuclear weapons altogether, which is espoused by the overwhelming majority of the countries of the world," he declared.

The Soviet Union, he said, would "naturally continue to take into account how the other nuclear powers act, whether they heed the voice of reason and follow our good example or push the world downhill."

With U.S.-Soviet talks on strategic disarmament set to start in Geneva June 29, Brezhnev's message was intended to raise the level of trust between the nuclear powers, according to Gromyko.

Obviously criticizing the Reagan administration, the message said mutual trust had been "gravely crippled by the efforts of those who are trying to upset the balance of forces to gain military superiority over the Soviet Union and its allies and to wreck all of the positive which the policy of detente brings."

President Reagan is to address the assembly on Thursday.

Blue Cross loses UT account

DALLAS (AP) — Blue Cross-Blue Shield faces another major setback this fall — the loss of its second largest account, the University of Texas System.

The UT System Board of Regents voted unanimously Friday to drop Blue Cross Sept. 1 in favor of Aetna Life Insurance Co.

"It came down to who could offer us the lowest bid," said Claude Hempel, UT System personnel director.

Blue Cross held the UT policy for 41 years and was insuring 42,000 employees. But its bid to UT would have increased rates 17.6 percent. Aetna will raise the current Blue Cross rates by 15.5 percent.

Blue Cross also provides health coverage for Tech employees.

The UT decision is the latest defeat for the insurer, which has lost $81 million in the last two years.

Last October, the Texas Farm Bureau ended its 37-year-old relationship with Blue Cross and withdrew 50,000 health contracts.

Blue Cross, the sixth largest insurer in the nation with $45 million in annual premiums, also handles Medicare claims for the state.

Nutrients: key to liquid diet

Editor's Note: This is the first story of a two-part series on the Cambridge diet, a new liquid diet which is becoming the latest in a series of popular diet crazes on campus. Today reporter Jerri McCrary will explain the diet and its claims. Part II on Friday will examine local doctors' and nutritionists' views of the diet and their reactions to diets that promise sudden weight losses.

By JERRI McCRARY
UD Staff

Anyone who has tried to diet has experienced the frustrated feelings of weighing nude without any weight loss after a week of near-starvation.

After trying Weight Watchers, the Pritikin diet, the Drinking Man's diet, the carbohydrate diet, the bran diet, the high protein diet and others, more than a million Americans have turned to the Cambridge diet, a liquid drink which has been on the market 16 months.

The diet, approved by the Food and Drug Administration, contains 100 percent of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) of vitamins and minerals. The drink also contains 75 percent of the U.S. RDA protein plus trace elements and electrolytes (sodium, potassium and calcium).

According to literature with the diet, the Cambridge plan contains a nitrogen balance from the precise ration of carbohydrates to protein to fat so primarily the fatty tissue, not the essential lean body mass, is eliminated.

The diet was developed after eight and one-half years of research by Dr. Alan Howard and associates at the University of Cambridge in England.

The Cambridge diet contains 110 calories per drink and should be drunk three times a day with nine ounces of water or a diet drink.

Persons on the Cambridge diet should not eat any food. However, other liquids including coffee, tea, water and diet drinks may be drunk daily.

The length of time a person stays on the diet varies with a person's weight.

According to the Cambridge plan, the diet is designed as the sole source of nutrition for four weeks to be followed by a week of 800-calorie-a-day maintenance meals.

The average weight loss for persons on the Cambridge diet is 16 to 20 pounds in four weeks in clinical testing.

The diet contains no drugs or preservatives, and no harmful side effects except nausea, headaches and dizziness have been reported during the first three or four days of the diet, said Cambridge counselor Bill Engleman.

"If you took away the Cambridge, it (the diet) would be like a fast," Engleman said.

"You can stuff yourself at Thanksgiving and still be hungry because the body is craving a nutrient. Cambridge has over 50 nutrients," Engleman said.

"Cambridge is a pure food, not a medicine. It puts the body back into balance," he said.

Mike Carpenter, who has been on the diet for six weeks, has lost 25 pounds.

"You forget about eating after a week," Carpenter said.

Carpenter said he prefers the simplicity of the diet because he doesn't have to fix special low calorie meals.

"If a diet is inconvenient, it's very difficult to stay on it," Carpenter said.

The product, which sells for $17.50, can be purchased by Cambridge counselors only.

The counselors are responsible for explaining the program and checking up on people on the diet.

Nancy Matsumura, a counselor who has lost 18 pounds in three weeks, said she got in the program to help herself and others.

"It's so gratifying to watch someone be able to lose weight that hasn't been able to," Matsumura said the diet has become popular through "word of mouth."

Although several of the people interviewed by The University Daily are not under the supervision of a doctor, the counselors recommend all Cambridge dieters should consult their physician before starting the diet. Pregnant women and nursing mothers should not be on any weight loss program.

Joe Ely returns before going into studio for LP

Rockabilly star Joe Ely and his band return to Lubbock this week for his first performance in the city since his highly successful Tornado Jam May 2 in Buddy Holly Park. Ely and the Joe Ely Band will be performing at Fat Dawg's tonight and Thursday. Cover is $6.50. The Lubbock native has been gaining recognition for his work with The Clash on his import-available LP Live Shots and his latest album

Musta Notta Gotta Lotta. The Joe Ely Tornado Jam, an annual event held on the first Saturday in May, commemorates the tornado that almost destroyed Lubbock in 1970. This year's Jam, which was the third one held, was the biggest ever with more than 20,000 people attending despite the heavy rains. Ely is scheduled to go into the recording studio after his Lubbock performance to begin work on a new album.

Texans corner basketball sales

Rockets go for $11 million +

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets of the National Basketball Association were sold Tuesday to a pair of Texas businessmen.

The new owners are Charlie Thomas, owner of a Ford dealership and chairman of the board of directors of Great Southern Bank, and Sidney Schlenker, president of Chase Management and former president of the Houston Sports Association, which owns the Houston Astros baseball team.

The Rockets were bought for a sum "between $11-12 million," said Thomas, who now owns 90 percent of the organization.

"He cut right through the tape," Patterson said of the deal. "That's the kind of operation and the kind of commitment we need — the ability to make decisions," Patterson said.

Thomas, who described himself as an avid Rocket fan, said he planned to make no immediate changes and said he supported "100 percent" an offer made recently to keep all-star center Moses Malone with the team.

The Maloof family, under the direction of the late George J. Maloof, took over the Rockets in May 1979. They were the sixth owners of the franchise, which started in 1969 at San Diego.

The Rockets finished last season with a 46-36 record — third best in the franchise's history. They were eliminated from the NBA playoffs by Seattle in the first round. In 1981 they stunned the NBA by advancing to the championship series before losing to the Boston Celtics.

Thomas acknowledged he had no experience in running a sports organization.

"That's where I'm looking to get expertise from Sidney. I know what I'm getting into and what it going to take to run the ball club the way it's supposed to be run," Thomas said.

"I have the resources to run the club properly and am prepared to use them. My first intention is to keep the club in Houston and secondly I'd like to have Moses Malone stay with the team. I think he's necessary to have to have a first-rate team and we'll do what we can to keep him here," he said.

Nuggets ask for less

DENVER (AP) — Texas businessman B.J. "Red" McCombs Tuesday signed a letter of intent to buy 100 percent of the Denver Nuggets of the National Basketball Association.

McCombs and Carl Scheer, Denver's president and general manager, announced at a news conference that the agreement was reached just hours earlier. Details of the reported $10 million sale were not immediately available.

The deal will be closed within a couple of weeks, probably by the first of July, Scheer said.

McCombs, a San Antonio businessman who has automobile and ranching interests in Colorado, said that he plans to be involved in "every major decision" involving the club. He also said he intends to keep Scheer on as general manager and Doug Moe as head coach.

McCombs is part owner of the NBA's San Antonio Spurs and helped establish that franchise after moving the team from Dallas in 1973.

McCombs will to sell his share of the Spurs to win NBA approval as the Denver franchise owner. "I don't bring any miracles here to Denver," McCombs said.

McCombs had offered to assume all of the debts from the 34 owners of the franchise, including a $4 million bank loan on the books since 1976 when the Nuggets of the American Basketball Association had to pay admission into the NBA when the two leagues merged.

The franchise also is behind in its paychecks to several players, including high-priced David Thompson and former player Charlie Scott.

A Nuggets owner said McCombs and his attorneys had been able to negotiate "a much better deal" with Denver city officials than had the current Nuggets management for base rent at McNichols Arena. McCombs has said that would be one of his requirements for buying the club.

Scheer said it is time for the Nuggets to move on.

"The foundation is laid," he said. "We have reached the point where we can re-establish ... as a viable product."

Women golfers vie for national honors

Golfers Mary DeLong and Robin Wohltman will represent Tech at the 1981-82 AIAW Division I National Tournament in Columbus, Ohio, today through Saturday.

Approximately 130 of the nation's premier women's inter-collegiate golfers will play four 18-hole rounds on the Scarlet Course of Ohio State University in hopes of earning team and individual honors.

DeLong and Wohltman have qualified as independent participants and will be eligible for individual awards only.

DeLong is making her fourth National appearance. She qualified for this year's tournament with a 73.5 scoring average. Her low round 69 tied a course record on the par-73, 6,835-yard Stanford University course last November. DeLong won first-place individual honors at the Stanford Tournament with a three-day total of 218.

Coach Jay McClure has high aspirations for the senior business major from Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

"Experience means a great deal and confidence is a big key to performing well in this type of tournament. Mary is a veteran of national competition and has proven to herself that she is capable of beating the best. I wouldn't be at all surprised if Mary won the thing," McClure said.

Wohltman, a junior from Independence, Kansas, will make her debut at Nationals with a 75.8 scoring average. She shot a 71, her low round of the year, at the 20th Annual Arizona Ladies' Golf Tournament last March.

"Robin lacks the national experience, but you can't just tell," McClure said. "She is a strong, consistent golfer." Of the nation's 476 players, DeLong is ranked 14th and Wohltman, 55th.

The field of competitors will be cut after the second round on Thursday.

Sign-ups due

Today is the deadline to sign-up for intramural frisbee golf and individual badminton singles for men and women.

All leagues are open to students with an official Group II Summer enrollment card or a Group IV Spring enrollment card, faculty-staff and spouses.

Those wanting to participate should sign-up in the Recreational Sports Office, 202 Student Recreation Center, by 5 p.m.

SOPHOMORES, JUNIOR, SENIORS, EARN OVER $1000 A MONTH JUST TO FINISH COLLEGE! IF YOU'RE MAJORING IN MATH, PHYSICS OR ENGINEERING, THE NAVY HAS A PROGRAM YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate Program (NUPOC for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $1000 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands of $$$ in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you.

During that year of training, you'll receive a $27,000 salary. It isn't easy. There are fewer than $400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training job program with unequalled hands-on responsibility, a $40,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualification for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later.

(But we don't think you'll want to.)
