Hispanic triumphs recognized

By STACY ALBRACHT
The University Daily

A three-day Hispanic State Conference titled "Hispanic Recognition on the Rise" will be hosted today through Saturday on the Texas Tech campus.

The conference, sponsored by the Mexican American Student Organizations (MASO), will focus on Hispanic achievements in education, business, politics and cultural awareness.

"All groups under MASO will be participating in some way — helping with transportation, registration or something along those lines," said Tim Garcia, chairman of publicity for the conference.

Tickets for the conference cost $35. Tickets for specific lectures and workshops will be available at a registration table from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. today in the UC courtyard.

An agenda will be posted at the registration table so students will have an opportunity to survey various activities presented during the conference.

"Our goal is to create awareness that Hispanics are being recognized more and more in many areas," Garcia said.

Guest speakers for the conference include Garry Mauro, Texas land commissioner; John Guerra, AT&T branch manager; and Ernesto Nieto, executive director of the National Hispanic Institute.

"Stand and Deliver," a film based on Garfield High School of East Los Angeles, will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Friday. Maria Tostado, principal of Garfield High School, will give the keynote address at the Saturday banquet.

A job fair for seniors will be offered from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday in the UC courtyard. A graduate fair will be presented from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday in the UC Coronado Room.

Students from many junior colleges as well as several Texas universities plan to attend the conference.

"We are hoping that through this we will get more Hispanic transfer students to come to Tech," Garcia said.

Haley lobbies for HSC faculty pay raise

By DAWNA COWAN
The University Daily

Interim President Elizabeth Haley will ask legislators today to increase Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center faculty and staff salaries.

A statement released by Haley's office stated Haley will request the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board's recommendation to increase faculty salaries 10.1 percent for each year of the biennium.

Funding for increased medical liability premiums will be Haley's second priority. The health sciences center provides medical care for patients who cannot pay for medical care, but financial support from the county and state is inadequate to cover indigent medical care, according to the statement.

Haley also will seek additional funding for the TTUHSC medical library. The statement indicated that although costs of library materials have increased, the library has received no additional funds.

Legislators also will be asked to prove funding for additional staffing for nursing and allied health programs that continue to grow.

TTUHSC enrollment has increased 36.7 percent since 1984, while the total operating funds and general revenue funds have declined 17.4 percent.

Legislators also will be asked to consider providing formula funding for the Office of Rural Health. The office was created when the Legislature charged Tech's health science centers with the responsibility of providing health care training and services to West Texas, which constitutes 48 percent of the state.

The Office of Rural Health was established to link community health care providers with faculty and staff experts in the health sciences center as well as regional academic health centers.

The TTUHSC was established in 1969 to reduce the shortage of health care professionals in West Texas. Haley said a majority of the graduates stay specifically in West Texas. The physician-to-population ratio in West Texas declined from 1 per 1,200 to 1 per 900 since 1974.

Tech medical, nursing and allied health graduates' success rates on state board exams are favorable compared to other Texas graduates, she said.

Haley said nursing graduates have a 92 percent success rate on state board exams. The state average is 85 percent.

Medical libraries in Lubbock and the four regional academic health care facilities provide library resources to rural community health care professions as well as students.

With nomination shaky Tower admits infidelity

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — John Tower, his nomination as defense secretary in grave trouble, made an extraordinary public admission of marital infidelity Wednesday but vowed to keep fighting for Senate confirmation. His prospects were dimmed further, however, by the Senate majority leader's opposition.

President Bush continued to court Democrats in a last-ditch effort to save the appointment, and spokesman Marlin Fitzwater asserted, "We'll just keep up the good fight."

But Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell further dampened Tower's chances by declaring his opposition, even as Vice President Dan Quayle conceded the administration still lacks the votes needed for Senate approval.

The president said his appeal to senators has been, "Look, do what you've got to do, but remember fair play, remember decency and honor and then remember also historically the concept of advise and consent where reasonable doubt is given historically to the president of the United States who after all is responsible for the executive branch of this government."

Bush dispatched Quayle to Capitol Hill to lobby for the nomination.

"We hope the prospects improve. We don't have 50 votes yet. But we're moving in that direction," Quayle told reporters at a White House photo session.

Tower showed flashes of grit and humor as he fielded questions at the National Press Club about allegations concerning excessive drinking, womanizing and lucrative consulting fees he received from defense contractors.

Asked whether he would ask that his name be withdrawn, he replied by quoting from the last letter written by Col. William Barrett Travis, the leader of the Texans who fought and died at the Alamo: "I shall never surrender or retreat."

The former Texas senator paused briefly and said, "I am a little sorry I brought up the Alamo analogy. It just occurred to me what happened at the Alamo just 10 days after Travis wrote that letter." Texas defenders were wiped out by the Mexicans.

Tower said he regards his weekend vow to quit drinking if he wins confirmation as "sacred ... and I can assure you I will abide by it."

Asked whether he has ever broken his wedding vows, the twice-divorced Tower said, "As a matter of fact, I have broken wedding vows. I think I am probably not alone in that connection."

Tower's second wife, Lilla Burt Cummings, alleged "marital misconduct" in court papers in the couple's divorce case.

There was no letup, meanwhile, in the political storm surrounding the nomination.

Republicans were trying to decide whether to seek a delay in the beginning of the debate on the nomination, which has drawn widespread opposition from Democrats.

The administration is trying to hold all 45 Republicans and sway five of the Senate's 55 Democrats to get a tie vote that Quayle could break in favor of Tower.

Mitchell, D-Maine, the Democratic leader, announced his opposition to the nomination in a midday speech on the Senate floor, citing Tower's ties to defense consultants and his drinking.

Mitchell said he read the FBI report on Tower and met with Bush at the White House, where he expressed his concerns about the nomination.

"It is only after careful study of this record that I have concluded that John Tower is not the man to provide leadership by example to the military and civilian employees of the Department of Defense, especially in the difficult job of reforming the Pentagon's administration and procurement practices in a period of budget stringency," Mitchell said.

Student Association positions attract 93 candidates

By STACY ALBRACHT
The University Daily

The names of 93 candidates who applied for 50 available positions within the Student Association will appear on a ballot Wednesday when Tech students vote for 1989-90 student leaders.

Candidates vying for the position of Student Association president are Amy Boyd, a junior home economics business and merchandising major from Devine; Bruce Cobb, an agricultural education major from Lubbock; and Doug English, a senior finance major from Lubbock.

Students who applied for the position of SA external vice president include Malcolm Smith, a junior marketing major from San Antonio; and Tim Weinheimer, a junior political science major from Groom.

The two candidates for the position of internal vice president are Kendra McKenzie, a junior telecommunications major from Arlington; and Brian Simmons, a senior chemistry major from Lubbock.

Three senator-at-large positions selected from a cross section of the campus also will be filled.

Candidates for senator-at-large place one are Lionel Herrera from the College of Arts and Sciences; Jamey Laney from the College of Agricultural Sciences; Anthony Rugiero from the College of Architect-ture; and Tiffany Hamilton from the College of Home Economics.

Four students — John Hynes, Stacey Sandberg, Howard Hubbard and Jeanne Pinkerton — all from the College of Arts and Sciences — applied for senator-at-large place two.

Candidates for senator-at-large place three include David Frazier and Rhett Stokes, both from the College of Agricultural Sciences; David Zook and Ross Crabtree, both from the College of Arts and Sciences; Scot Mayfield from the College of Business Administration; and Christie Fryatt from the College of Architecture.

Tommy Cathey applied for one position but did not specify for which senator-at-large position he applied.

Three candidates — Russell Laird, Tricia Davis and Craig Albin — applied for two senatorial positions for the College of Agricultural Sciences.

One position for the College of Architecture senator is being contested by Laura Cooper, Grady Whitaker Jr., Jenna Saya and Philip Paratore.

The 23 students who applied for 15 College of Arts and Sciences senatorial positions include Rod Bowman, Angela Tilley, Elena Perales, Minal Mehta, Shalini Yallabhan, Robin DeMuth, Michelle Elliot, Robert Guimbellot, Adam Brown, Denise Laird and Lori Collins.

Other Arts and Sciences candidates include Frankie Bailey, Javier Flores, Cyndi Evans, Nick

New Rider

Tonya Tinnin, a junior agricultural communications major from Bell Ranch, N.M., receives the Masked Rider mask from former Masked Rider Lee Whitehead during the Transfer of Reins ceremony Wednesday at Jones Stadium. The Masked Rider tradition dates to Tech's early years when the Red Raiders were called the Matadors and a few students, realizing the school had no mascot, decided to take on the task themselves. They began a tradition of circling the football field before home games and then vanishing. Today, the Masked Rider gallops around Jones Stadium atop Midnight Raider in celebration of a Raider touchdown. As the 1989-90 Masked Rider, Tinnin will represent Tech at a variety of functions including rodeos, parades, pep rallies and football games.

Election Commission prepares for last stretch

By STACY ALBRACHT
The University Daily

With the Student Association election less than a week away, the Texas Tech Election Commission has shifted into high gear.

Seven Tech students — chairman Tim Reiter, Pat DaGroote, Carolina Galdean, Cindy Faulkner, Julie Moulton, Joe Handley and Mark Corwin — selected from one of three campus organizations and one adviser assigned by the Dean of Students Office serve on the commission. Graduate assistant Liz Toombs serves as election adviser.

"Members of the committee are recommended by the president of respective organizations and then approved by the Student Senate," Toombs said. "The committee must do a lot of background work, planning, seminar work and ballot preparation — that's before the election."

In addition to the preparation stages of the election, the Election Commission is responsible for hand-counting votes on election day to ensure that no student votes twice, Toombs said.

In the event of election disputes, the Election Commission will judge complaints. Complaints not resolved will be taken before the SA Supreme Court for a final decision, Toombs said.

"Appeals are explained in the election code, which is 23 pages long and is, in some cases, technical and complex," Toombs said. "Some things must be interpreted by the commission."

Students vying for graduate and senatorial positions must win the election by a plurality — obtaining more votes than any other candidate.

Ties for the last position on any one ticket will force a runoff election between candidates for that position.

Executive candidates must win a majority of the vote. If no candidate receives a majority, a runoff will consist of the candidates whose percentages comprise a majority.

GOP puts up its Duke

Election of ex-Klansman smears Republicans

Cortchie Welch
News Writer

Reagan, renowned for his tolerance of racial discrimination, has turned his back on Duke, along with President George Bush.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson lamented that the Duke election is what the Republican Party is all about.

It is safe to argue that that statement could be true. Duke entered the 1988 presidential election on the Democratic ticket. Fortunately, he got few, if any, votes.

He switched to the Republican side and won his bid for the house by a small margin. That small margin has wreaked havoc upon the Republicans.

The Republican leaders undervalued Duke's influence. Instead of coming out against the former Klan master in the first inning of his campaign, leaders of the Republican Party waited until the game was over to play hardball.

On the other side of the picture, the Democrats have made a commitment to the black vote by electing Ron Brown as party chairman.

Duke has paved the way for persons with the same intentions to bring about a racist set of ideas to legislation.

The ex-Klansman has laid the groundwork for what could lead to a wave of such happenings, as predominant white communities (such as Metairie) are becoming fed up with hard times, blaming their turmoil on blacks and electing racist-minded individuals as lawmakers.

This could be an isolated breakthrough. On the other hand, this could be the tip of the iceberg.

In the midst of economic problems due to a downturn in the oil industry, blended with a high unemployment rate that has many people on the edge of an anxious seat, the citizens of Louisiana hope they have solved the mystery to their confusion: David Duke.

The former Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan recently was elected to the state's House of Representatives, which has inspired much apprehension among political dignitaries, especially from his own family, the Republicans.

The unhooded Klansman cleverly engrained his message deep into the inner nature of the citizens of Metairie, an almost entirely white town near New Orleans.

Duke lectured to the Louisianans, telling them that he opposes any new taxes, affirmative action and welfare.

Duke founded the National Association for the Advancement of White People in the early 1980s, claiming that his people also were being denied the right to jobs, equal pay and liberty.

Although Duke was given a warm reception by members of the House, former President Ronald

Muslim justifications

To the editor:

A Muslim's faith is based on the belief in one God, the prophet Muhammed, and the Holy Book — the Quran (Koran). Therefore, we also believe and respect the prophets from Adam, the father of mankind, down to the patriarch prophet Abraham, Jesus and his miracles more than our parents, kin and elders.

We also cherish scholarship whether it favors us religiously or not. Thousands of "intellectual" works are being published all over the world which take less-than-favorable views of Islam. We Muslims do not throw such work in the incinerator.

In fact, we buy them for our libraries and universities, and often invite their authors to give a lecture or a seminar of their studies.

However, the book The Satanic Verses is highly offensive. It depicts the prophet Abraham, Islam, and the prophet Muhammed and his family in a highly defamatory, obscene and derogatory manner. (Author Salman Rushdie describes the patriarch prophet Abraham common to Judaism, Christianity, and Islam as "the b..." (page 95). Throughout the book he humiliates the prophet Muhammed by calling him, his companions and his family members names.

It is clear that this book is neither "intellectual" nor "scholarship" and prefixing the book as fiction does not absolve it from being scandalous and malicious toward Islam. Even in Great Britain, the book was strongly criticized by Muslims and non-Muslims alike.

In the free world, namely the United States and Europe, the media and publishing industry do exercise self-restraint in the interest of social order, moral, ethical norms, social and religious sensitivities of the society. That is why Penguin or any other mainstream publisher does not publish the neo-Nazi literature. Why then did Penguin illogically decide to publish Rushdie's book when Penguin's own editorial adviser, Khuswant Singh (the editor of Hindustan Times, a member of the Upper House of the Indian Parliament, a Sikh and a fellow countryman), an eminent writer, had said, "The prophet had been made to be small-time imposter in the novel," and strongly advised Penguin not to publish the book?

It is not civilized to insult the sanctities of any people. That is why Muslims were in the protest march against the movie "The Last Temptation of Christ."

We have presented the facts about the current controversy. Now you can see who is on the side of fairness.

No parking...anytime

To the editor:

Fact: One evening last week I drove to the library to study.

Fact: An event open to the public was taking place at the University Center.

Fact: I spent half an hour driving around campus, making a clockwise sweep from the UC parking lot to the parking lots of the music building, library, foreign language building and biology building without ever finding a place to park. The dorm lots, of course, were packed.

Fact: I ended up walking to the library from the north side of Tech Terrace park.

The fact that this type parking problem is a recurring one for many students demonstrates our administration's occasional inability to organize and plan well, illustrates the obvious place parking problems take in their list of priorities and emphasizes the age-old Tech campus parking problem in general.

Assumption: As fully-paid, full-time students with commuter parking stickers, we should be able to come to campus at any time of the day or evening and be able to park within a half-mile of the building we need to be in, regardless of what particular event might be taking place at the UC or anywhere else.

The argument that Tech needs and enjoys the community's support in such events and should provide places for people to park while in attendance is a valid one. But it is not valid enough to keep students spending more time and energy (having already spent money) trying to find a way to park their cars within the Lubbock city limits while they study on campus.

Conclusion: It is a ridiculous situation, and one we're most likely stuck with. Yet on the brighter side, we'll need neither condoms, a new president, nor even a good relationship with our regents, because no one will be able to get on campus to use any of them. Thanks, administration, for being such swell sports and such capable decision-makers.

Bring back Tech Trivia

To the editor:

Whatever happened to the not-so-trivial Tech Trivia column? It has been almost a year since the last one was published. Now the column contains only general trivia. I don't know, maybe it's just me, but knowing that the chairman and chief executive officer of GTE is Rocky Johnson, a Tech graduate, is a little more important than knowing that Harry Truman was left-handed or that Charlie Chaplin's last father-in-law was Eugene O'Neil.

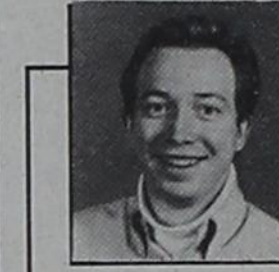

Both of the latter examples appeared in The University Daily's Trivia column Feb. 17.

My intention is not to rag on the UD as so many others have done. I would just like to see time and effort spent on researching and publishing trivia about Tech that enhances its image. I like to think of Tech Trivia as a set of braggin' rights.

The more good things that students, employers and others know about Tech, the better our chances are of finding a good job. It's that simple.

Tower faces Texas-sized dilemma in Washington

Scott Brumley
Editor

When in Washington, don't do as the Texans do.

This is a hard lesson, and it's being learned in a particularly painful way by Defense secretary-designate John Tower. Hailing from the Lone Star State doesn't mean an automatic bye into the upper echelons of government — as Tower is discovering — even when the president claims deep ties to Texans in an effort to woo the state's considerable political clout.

The hubbub surrounding the Tower nomination cuts much deeper than state loyalties, though. The Tower tussle, as it could be called, is a study in the very nature of political wrangling.

When Tower's nomination was announced by President Bush, initial opposition centered around the former senator's earnings as a consultant to defense contractors after leaving government to ply his wares in the private sector.

The effect of the clamor about Tower's consulting income primarily was that of a catalyst. Unfortunately for the fledgling administration, the furor over Tower's business affairs set the wheels in motion for a White House-Capitol Hill showdown of Bork proportions.

Bush remains steadfast in his determination to see Tower occupy the top DOD post, but the dust kicked up by partisan struggles over the nomination may choke the machinery of the new president's efforts to begin his agenda promotion on an even keel.

The matter turned ugly when Tower went before the Senate Armed Services Committee, the nominee's old congressional stomping grounds, for approval hearings. The committee hearings were the incubator for the now-profuse charges leveled against Tower of excessive drinking and womanizing.

Push came to shove, the committee — split along party lines — voted down Tower's nomination, and the forlorn, not-so-probable future Pentagon chief swore he would quit drinking if confirmed and admitted he had broken marital vows.

The most interesting aspect of the battle to date has been Bush's acrid criticism of the partisan split over the Tower nomination, both in committee and the full Senate. The president has decreed the conflict as little more than a game of partisan politics.

One cannot be sure of what Bush thinks goes on in Washington, but the consensus is that partisan politics forms the core of policy-making decisions in the capital. That is how it is and how it always will be under the American system of government.

Ironically, it was Tower who headed the commission that castigated the Reagan administration for its handling of the Iran-Contra affair. What comes around has gone around for Tower, as the man who now occupies Tower's old seat as Armed Services Committee chairman, Sen. Sam Nunn, is leading the Democratic forces against the nominee on grounds of alleged improprieties.

Washington is a tough place for the average Texan to make a living — if Tower could be considered an average Texan.

Recycling project to benefit Raider fund

By STACY ALBRACHT
The University Daily

Students will have the opportunity to win a microwave oven today as Texas Tech brings recycling closer to home.

The Dean of Students Office in conjunction with Alcoa Recycling will begin a program to benefit the Tech community as well as the Lubbock community and the world.

"The idea for the project originated in an advanced leadership class sponsored by the Dean of Students Office in cooperation with the speech communication department," said Julie Landgraf, an Alcoa intern in charge of public relations.

The project will allow Tech students to bring aluminum cans to a central campus location for recycling. Alcoa will give a microwave oven to the group that brings in the most cans.

T-shirts and koozie can holders with the recycling logo also will be awarded.

A 28-foot white trailer complete with the Raider Red recycling logo will be parked by the University Center today.

"We encourage organizations and students to bring cans to the trailer," Landgraf said. "During the ongoing drive, bag-in-the-boxes will be located across campus for students to drop their cans in."

Bag-in-the-boxes, collection boxes for aluminum cans, also will bear the Raider Red recycling logo.

Proceeds from the drive will benefit the Red Raider Endowment Fund and will ensure that a live Tech mascot never will be in jeopardy of extinction due to lack of funds.

After securing the Red Raider fund, proceeds will promote campus activities such as the Dean of Students leadership class and the renovation of the campus dairy barn.

A fringe benefit of the project is the possibility of gaining nationwide exposure and prestige for Tech, Landgraf said.

"No other university to our knowledge has ever done a project like this," she said. "This may become a kind of pilot program for other universities."

Brian Meng, Texas area manager for Alcoa Recycling, said the project will benefit not only Tech but Lubbock.

The project will help clean up the community's environment while also relieving the problem of overcrowded landfills that other states are facing, Meng said.

Recycling also increases the amount of aluminum imported and exported in Texas, Meng said. Recycling closes the recycling/production loop by bringing aluminum back into use without using energy required to make the aluminum can the first time.

"One recycled can creates enough energy to keep a light bulb lit for three hours," Meng said.

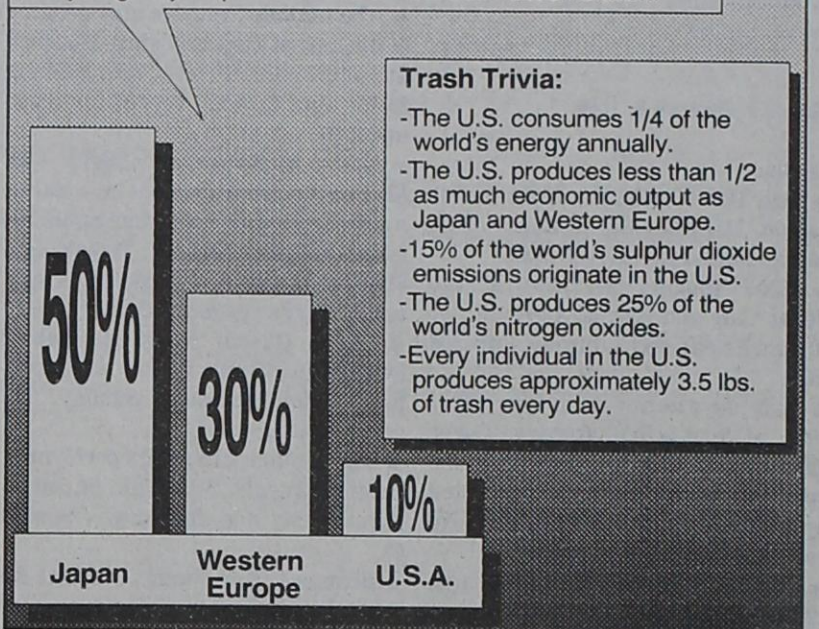

Time magazine named Earth 1988 planet of the year in an article titled "What on Earth are We Doing." According to the article, the United States recycles only 10 percent of all trash produced each year while the remainder ends up in landfills throughout the country.

Time reported that about 50 percent of all aluminum cans shipped in 1986 were recycled. The energy produced by recycling saved enough energy to provide electricity to a city the size of Pittsburgh for about six years, according to Time.

Texas and California report even higher rates, with about 70 percent of all shipped aluminum cans recycled in some cases, the magazine reported.

Recycling America

Japan recycles 50 percent of its trash annually while Western Europe recycles 30 percent and the U.S. comes in last by recycling only 10 percent of its annual trash accumulation.

Trash Trivia:

- The U.S. consumes 1/4 of the world's energy annually.
- The U.S. produces less than 1/2 as much economic output as Japan and Western Europe.
- 15% of the world's sulphur dioxide emissions originate in the U.S.
- The U.S. produces 25% of the world's nitrogen oxides.
- Every individual in the U.S. produces approximately 3.5 lbs. of trash every day.

Raiders, Aggies now tied for fifth

Tech repeats second half fade, falls 71-60

By JOEL WEST
The University Daily

Texas A&M could be making a name for itself by taking over Texas Tech's favorite play of starting slow and finishing strong for the Southwest Conference Post-Season Classic.

The Aggies downed the Red Raiders 71-60 Wednesday as 5,486 onlookers saw A&M turn a second-half surge into a Tech tranquilizer, sending the Raiders to their fourth loss in five games.

Aggies center Donald Thompson, who scored a game-high 25 points, hit a five-foot jump shot for the go-ahead bucket with 3:20 left to end the Tech threat as A&M reeled off nine unanswered points on a 15-4 game-ending run.

A&M has won six of its last seven contests and appears to be jelling in time for the SWC tournament. The Raiders, on the other hand, appear in a tailspin.

The loss dropped Tech to 12-14 overall and 7-8 in league play, while A&M improved to 14-13 and 7-8.

The game leaves Tech, A&M and SMU, which lost to Texas on Tuesday, in a three-way tie for fifth place in the SWC. The Aggies host Texas on Saturday, while the Raiders host Baylor to end all four team's regular season. SMU closes with TCU.

The turn of the Tech tide occurred midway through the second half when the Aggies, trailing 47-39, scored an 11-0 run capped by guard Tony Milton's three-point bucket with 7:53 left.

The run was sparked by the Aggies' switching from a three-forward to a three-guard offense with Lynn Suber and Milton leading the way.

"That's when they made their charge and they just kept coming, and I don't think we could've stopped them after that," Tech coach Gerald Myers said. "They came out there and played well with that three-guard lineup."

"A&M just came out there in the last 10 minutes and took over the game," Myers said.

Tech answered with a 7-2 run to reclaim the lead 54-52 with 5½ minutes left, but two minutes later Thompson hit a shot to put the Aggies, who hit a blazing 76 percent from the field in the second half, in the lead for good.

"We held our composure more tonight than we did early in the year," said Thompson, who also led all rebounders with nine boards. "I think we might have folded earlier in the season, but maybe we are maturing a little bit."

Todd Duncan and Wes Lowe started over Jerry Mason and Steve Miles, a

Jago to direct Sidekicks' front office

DALLAS (AP) — Sidekicks general manager Kent Russell is on his way out and coach Gordon Jago will move into the team's front office to become the president-general manager of the Major Indoor Soccer League team, according to a published report.

Assistant coach Billy Phillips has already assumed head coaching duties and will continue through the remainder of the season, a source within the team's front office told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"I expect something to be announced Thursday," said Phillips, 2-1 while filling in for Jago last week.

"There are a lot of decisions to be made, but everybody is keeping quiet. (Being offered the coaching job) would be a big challenge for me. But it's also something I couldn't say no to."

Jago, the only coach the Sidekicks have had in their five-year history, is scheduled to return from England Wednesday, where he went to attend his sister's funeral.

The Sidekicks, league champions in 1987, are in third place in the seven-team league at 16-16.

"I have no comment, but Gordon will have some announcements when he returns," Sidekicks majority owner Stan Finney said. A news conference has been scheduled for today.

result of team rules violations by the players, Myers said.

Tech watched a 29-17 lead evaporate in the first half's final two minutes as A&M closed the gap to 29-26 at intermission behind a combined nine-point effort by Doug Dennis and Thompson.

Sean Gay led the Tech effort with 15 points.
