

Television network to connect universities

By DEBBIE CHRISTIAN
Copy Editor

Eighteen institutions of higher learning in the West Texas area including Tech have joined in a co-operative effort to provide the institutions, business and industry, with an effective system for communication and information transfer.

This effort is known as the Western Information Network Association (WIN). It is a closed circuit television network connecting the eighteen colleges and universities.

The potential of this system is vast. The benefits to the institutions, their faculties, students and students associations and facilities such as the library as well as various departments are many.

Some benefits are connection of computers as information retrieval and teletype systems. This could simplify such things as student transfers. Connection of telephone lines through the WIN system could facilitate teacher communication between schools.

Libraries, classroom teaching and individual faculty could reap other benefits from WIN. The students could benefit through their student governments working in co-operative efforts to stop unpopular legislation such as that of a tuition rise bill. Free speech between campuses could be a possibility of WIN.

ANOTHER BENEFIT of the system is it would be a lure in recruiting teachers because of the chance for a teacher to work on a doctor's degree over the network while teaching at one of the member schools.

The primary operations of WIN will be through a multi-channel, two-way communication system including closed circuit TV. This system will link classrooms, libraries, computer facilities and information retrieval systems at the 18 points.

WIN is an established state agency of Texas. It came into being in 1967 in the 60th legislative session, House Bill 692. Its beginning was funded by the state, but as yet no construction funds have been appropriated. The approximate cost for the installation of a studio at each of the 18 schools will be $9 million.

Dr. John Bradford, dean of the college of electrical engineering and executive director of WIN, said the organization hoped to receive appropriations for a segment of the planned construction at the next convening of the legislature.

The studios at the 18 schools will have cameras and monitors and facilities to both transmit and receive. Therefore, if a class at one school is hearing a guest lecture from a professor at another school, the students can hear and see the professor and the professor can hear and see the students. This allows for any questions or discussion by the class.

Bradford said, "WIN will allow for transporting students and teachers electronically." This is safer and cheaper than the present systems of transporting teachers by airplane, or car or having students have to travel to a teacher.

WIN WILL BE A carrier, not an originator of the programs it carries. All originating will come from the schools themselves. WIN will also serve as a clearing house for tuition and faculty costs between the schools. For example if a student at Tech signs up for a course taught at Amarillo College, a junior college in Amarillo and another member of WIN, a portion of his tuition paid to Tech would be transferred to Amarillo College by WIN to cover the costs of transmission. A guest lecture by a teacher at another school would be forwarded a fee from the sponsoring school by WIN.

The board of directors of WIN is made up of each of the 18 presidents of the member institutions. The present chairman is the president of South Plains College in Levelland.

Closed circuit TV has not been a successful teaching tool on a large class level. However, in small classes, high motivation groups or classes with no discipline problems, such as found often on the graduate level, WIN transmission will be very valuable.

At present there is no live transmission on the network. However a computer science course at Tech is taught at six other schools through the use of video tapes and monitors. The tapes are shown and kept at each institution for further reference.

The present use suggests another use for WIN. Classes could be taped and used for some lecture time leaving teachers free for other duties and at the same time making a rerun of any lecture readily available to any student with a question.

THE PRESENT growth in population will make it impossible for educational improvements to keep pace with the number of students in the next 25 years, simply because not enough tax money will be available to maintain present building and expansion programs. Some more efficient way of improving and upgrading education in Texas is needed, according to Bradford. WIN is comparatively minimum cost solution to the problem.

Ultimate plans for the closed circuit TV teaching aids include opening a total four networks in Texas with interconnections between potentially every college and university in the state. WIN is the first network in Texas, and the idea did originate in this area.

Bradford also said he felt this was an opportunity to get in at the beginning of a valuable program for Tech students. He has presented the program to the Senate and will give a practical demonstration this afternoon to Jay Thompson.

Attorneys to announce soon

Lach recommendation pending

By LYNN WILLIAMS
News Editor
and
BILL MOORE

Rusk State Hospital officials Wednesday would give no information on the pending recommendation for the release of Benjamin Lach.

Dr. J. A. Hunter, physician to the self-confessed slayer of a Tech custodian, said, "I am not at liberty at the moment to disclose what the situation is."

"Attorneys at Lubbock will have the information fairly soon and should make an announcement then."

BLAIR CHERRY, district attorney, said

'Good News in Media'

Ad Week ends with seminar

Nationally prominent speakers from the areas of radio, television, newspaper and magazine advertising will be featured today in conjunction with Advertising Recognition Week.

Wednesday he did not know when an announcement would be made.

"I have no information about the recommendation at this time and have not been in communication with Hunter recently. I don't have any word on Lach's being certified."

Cherry said Monday he felt chances were good that a recommendation for release would be made to Rusk Hospital superintendent, Dr. Arch Connolly. The statement was made by Cherry after he and Bill Gillespie, Lach's defense attorney, made a trip last week to Rusk to check on the "status of the Lach situation."

Hunter said last Wednesday that Lach was being reviewed and evaluated and that a recommendation would probably be made at the end of last week or early this week.

Dr. Murray Kovnar, Tech psychology professor who treated Lach prior to his arrest in March of 1968, made a class trip to Rusk Tuesday.

"THE CLASS AND I saw Lach but I did not talk to him privately," Kovnar said.

"This was my first trip to Rusk and I did not see much therapy down there."

Kovnar testified at the hearing in 1968 that after interviewing Lach he found him to have serious personality problems and other problems which needed hospitalization.

Also testifying at the sanity hearing was Dr. Richard K. O'Loughlin, Lubbock psychiatrist. O'Loughlin said then Lach was mentally ill and should undergo extensive long-term treatment.

Lach has been at Rusk for approximately 14 months.

"Lach is pushing to be released," Kovnar said. "According to a hospital newspaper, Lach is an outstanding patient."

He explained that patients are graded on a point system and Lach ranked high.

Jackson indicates mistake

By DONNY RICHARDS
Editorial Assistant

Traffic Security Officer Henry Jackson released a statement Wednesday saying he made an error when he identified TCU coach John Swaim as the man who slapped him at the Tech-TCU basketball game.

Johnny Roy Phillips, attorney representing Jackson, gave the statement, signed by Jackson, to newsmen at a press conference Wednesday afternoon. Jackson was present at the conference.

"The University Daily quoted me as having stated 'All the time I was trying to hold him (Evans Royal), the TCU coach (John Swaim) kept slapping me, but I never passed a blow,'" the statement read.

"I WISH TO state that I have learned since the incident that two or more other persons were present at the scene of the incident who were dressed very nearly identical to the manner in which Coach Swaim was dressed. Because of that fact and because of the general confusion surrounding the incident, and due to the fact that Coach Swaim has denied any of the actions I have attributed to him, I am now convinced that I did make an error in identifying Coach Swaim as the person or persons who struck me. For those reasons, I now issue this statement in order to clarify the record," it stated.

"This statement is the result of extensive negotiations between attorneys representing Officer Jackson and attorneys for Johnny Swaim, TCU Basketball Coach," Phillips said.

"Coach Swaim has released any possibility he might have had of any law suit," Phillips added. "There will be no law suit by either side."

Candidates announced

Jay Thompson, student association president, announced Wednesday the eight candidates for student association executive offices.

Candidates are: president, Mike Anderson, Elata Ely and Gravi R. Foreman; vice president, Robin Cash, Larry Meyers and Roger Settler; secretary, Bonnie Craddock, and treasurer, Sam Stennis.

The deadline for filing was 6 p.m. Wednesday. The deadline will not be extended unless an applicant can give a valid reason why he did not meet the filing date.

The deadline for filing for senate seats is 6 p.m. next Wednesday.

Students speak out on dangers of drugs

By JAN HORN
Staff Writer

Wednesday's "Speakout" in front of the Union was marred by conversations among students at the edges of the crowd and inadequate speaker facilities.

The discussion centered around marijuana and concerned such aspects as legalization of its use, dangers of using it and other drugs, and programs now underway in Lubbock dealing with narcotics.

Most of the discussion was quiet with questions and answers being given. There were several emotional outbreaks between participants with opposing views toward the end.

Arthur Yarish, chairman of the campus free speech committee, concluded the debate with a proposal asking students to vote only for candidates in senate elections who include in their platforms a provision for a lawyer-in-residence to serve Tech students.

Yarish's plan provides for $1 to be taken from each student fee and held in trusteeship to pay the retainer fee and any additional fees. A student screening board would hear all complaints and refer them to the lawyer, but would have no discretionary power.

Under Yarish's plan, if it were found that there would be a surplus of money, a scholarship fund could be set up to offer aid to needy students.

Yarish said a lawyer was needed to protect the rights of students listed in the first ten amendments. He cited the banning of The Catalyst as an example.

Conner McCaslin, graduate sociology major, was the first to speak about marijuana. He said, "Marijuana is not a problem — it is a reflection of social problems by the youth in our society."

Dr. Tom Richardson, psychology professor and president of the Lubbock Council of Mental Health, told students about "Hot Line." This program is designed to aid the person who may be on a bad trip or having problems as a result of drugs. People can call a number and graduate students who volunteer to help will refer the caller to trained individuals who can help.

Yoder joins dorm system

Extensive revamping of the dormitory system may be forthcoming.

Wednesday, the administration announced, "Clifford Yoder, former director of residence halls for University of Colorado, will join the Tech staff... June 1, 1970, and will be charged with the responsibility of assisting University officials in solving the ever increasing problems involved with on-campus dormitory housing.

"Yoder, who has been director of housing at Colorado since 1953, is past president of the National Association of College and University Housing Officers.

"Initially, Yoder's efforts will be directed toward making the dormitory system at Texas Tech fiscally sound and more attractive to students.

Noticeably absent from the statement were remarks about the status of present housing director Guy Moore. Moore is out of town attending a conference and will not return until Monday.

Administrators did not cite Yoder as "new director of residence halls" and therefore, may involve the new man in more extensive operations once the dorms have reached acceptable standards.

Editorial They do spend your money

Like it or not, there's one good reason why you must concern yourself with the proceedings of the Student Senate.

People, they do spend a lot of our money. Tuesday night, the Senate agreed to allocate over $28,000 to three campus units. About 70 per cent of the money to be allocated from student fees went to the areas of University Theatre, Forensics, and KTXT-FM. As Senator John Hughes of the Graduate School pointed out, something is wrong when so much of the money is allotted to activities which directly involve so few students.

The Senate Allocations Committee bragged that they had spent 25 whole hours in considering budget requests totalling almost $69,000. No one expects the job to be easy. The requests for allocations should be due earlier in order to facilitate full consideration of the requests, rather than wait until the last minute to meet 25 hours one week to make all the decisions necessary.

The Senate is now recommending a raise in student fees (from $23 to $30) and a raise of building use fees (from $25 to $30.) We recognize the need for more money to be spent by students on areas that are expressly for student use, such as intramural facilities, the Union, and the health center. But it is disconcerting to think the Senate will be the body who determines how the fees are to be distributed. (Subject to Board approval, of course.)

Students could make their money account for more good if they would cast a discerning vote in Senate elections. Tuesday night two senators were removed from office because of excessive absence. More Senators probably should have been removed long ago. This is an indication of the kind of people Tech students elect to hold the purse strings on part of the student fees.

Yes, there are some extremely conscientious senators, but apparently they were in the minority on the Allocations Committee. If students at Tech were any degree of rational human, they would take more interest in who is elected to the Senate.

How many of you lazy, indifferent robots know that Senate meetings are open to the public? How many of you people know the Senate could be a highly functional body if the student body at large cared who wins elections?

Maybe several of the students know these things. If so, the indictment is even more stern. To know what could and should be done, but to prefer to do nothing is the supreme error.

'Hamlet' troupe presents comedy

A highlight of the local theatrical season unfolds tonight as the national touring company of "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead" presents the multiple-award-winning international smash hit at Lubbock's Municipal Auditorium.

The 8:15 p.m. presentation is sponsored by the Tech Artists Course, and Tech students will be admitted free to unreserved seats upon presentation of their IDs at the door.

"Rosencrantz" won awards in its native England for author Tom Stoppard before it became the surprise hit of Broadway in 1967, winning Tony and Drama Critics awards.

It ran a solid year in New York, and was a triumphant hit both in Britain and on the continent.

"R&G" is a hilarious modern re-interpretation of "Hamlet" which Lubbock audiences viewed last night. "R&G" is a semi-absurdist comment on the Shakespearean tragedy as seen by the two spies who become victim themselves.

The switched order of importance of some of the roles from play to play accounts for the switching of some of the actors in their roles.

For example, Robert Burr, who enacted the role of Hamlet last night, will be seen in today's performance as the worldly-wise chief of the vagabond players. And the hesitant Hamlet, lurking backgrounded in Stoppard's play, will be played by Harvey Solin, last night's Laertes.

John Church plays Rosencrantz while Margo Ann Berdeshevsky, Frederic Warriner, Edwin Owens and Mary Hara will play, respectively, Ophelia, Polonius, Claudius and Gertrude.

Clebert Ford enacts the role of the second of the title pair, Guildenstern.

Even the stage direction is different... Jacqueline Britton is director of "R&G," while Peter Levin did "Hamlet."

Tech faculty will be admitted for $1.50 while admission for the general public is $2.50.

The Lubbock Symphony Orchestra, conducted by William A. Harrod, will present in concert James Tocco, world-renowned American pianist, in the orchestra's third concert of the season.

Scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Monday in Municipal Auditorium, the highlight of the concert will be Tocco's interpretation of Tchaikovsky's "First Piano Concerto in B Flat Minor."

Tocco has generated tremendous enthusiasm in audiences throughout Europe and the United States and has acquired the polish of many cultural heritages.

He has studied in some of the finest music schools here and abroad and with such masters as Carlo Zecchi, Paul Badura-Skoda and Mme. Magda Tagliaferro. He has studied chamber music with Enrico Mainardi.

In 1967, Tocco won distinction as a semi-finalist in the Leeds International Competition, as the only American from over 100 contestants to reach that stage.

Since his most recent prize at a piano competition in Montreal, he has been awarded a senior fellowship at the University of Wisconsin and will be performing this season as a recitalist and guest soloist with major orchestras on both sides of the Atlantic. He has also been invited to appear in the Soviet Union.

Extension, correspondence courses play important role

Presently averaging 10,000 correspondence and 200-500 extension courses a year, the Division of Continuing Education at Tech has processed approximately one-half million students through its educational channels since its inception in 1929.

Director of the division is D. M. McElroy, who also heads the Tech TV station, KTXT-TV. Charles Williams serves as assistant director and is responsible for keeping a tight rein on the fast moving program.

"Our organization here at Tech," said Williams, "offers college level extension courses and correspondence work to both high school and college students.

The extension classes are offered to anyone who desires them, student or non-student."

Williams said there are 5,500 students enrolled in correspondence courses, half of them high school students. "At the present time," he said, "our program is offering 200 extension and correspondence courses."

"The number of correspondence courses offered by our organization coincides with the number presently offered on campus," said Williams.

At the request of a sufficient number of students, extension classes may be organized in a convenient center. "The number of students required to justify a class," said Williams, "increases with distance from the Tech campus."

"After I am contacted by an individual or individuals," he said, "and they have the sufficient number wishing to enroll, I contact the department head for the desired course. The department head in turn provides a professor to teach the class. We have a number of extremely dedicated faculty members who sacrifice their spare time to teach others."

Both graduate and undergraduate work may be made unavailable to students desiring extension classes.

"In correspondence study," he said, "our main contact is with local and state individuals. We presently have 600 enrolled from all over the world, 95 per cent of whom are servicemen.

Courses may be taken for either credit or non-credit, stated Williams. Credit is transferrable to any institution.

IS SALES MANAGEMENT YOUR CAREER?

The Army is a good place to start. It takes the same qualities to be successful sales manager as it takes to be a good Army Officer. Confidence in yourself. Ability to lead others. Authority that demands respect.

In the Army's Officer Candidate Schools and, later, serving as an officer, you'll develop and sharpen these qualities into an important, lifelong asset.

One that will serve you well in any career you choose.

In the Army the emphasis is on men, not equipment. So, in the fullest sense, Army officers lead men. They lead in communications centers, intelligence work, computer programming, guided missile sites, military training, administrative services.

And, most important of all, they lead in combat.

Since obligatory military service is a fact of life, shouldn't you invest your time as wisely and rewarding as possible?

Raiders to face Tulane in 70

By JERRY TEAGUE
Assistant Sports Editor

Tulane University in New Orleans will face the Red Raiders in 1970 as their 11th game opponent, according to J. T. King, athletic director.

Stadium. The Raiders will play in New Orleans on Sept. 11, 1971. It will be the first football match for the two schools since 1960.

"I'm delighted to renew the football rivalry between Tech and Tulane," King said. "We are looking forward to a close association with Tulane athletic officials."

THE NEW CONTRACT ends the hunt for both teams since the NCAA approved the 11th game in June 1969.

Dr. Rix N. Yard, Tulane athletic director said, "We are pleased to fill the 11th game with such a fine opponent as Tech. We are happy to have the chance to compete with a Southwest Conference team."

Tech defeated Tulane 35-21 in 1960 in a game played in Lubbock.

TULANE'S SCHEDULE this fall includes Georgia, Illinois, Air Force, Miami, Georgia Tech and LSU. Jim Carlen, Raider coach, is no stranger to the Green Wave. His West Virginia Mountaineers met and defeated Tulane last year in New Orleans.

Tulane posted a 3-7 record in the past season winning over Pittsburg, Georgia Tech and Virginia. The Wave fell before Georgia, West Virginia, Boston College, Florida (Tampa), Notre Dame, Vanderbilt, and LSU. In 1968, Tulane registered a 2-8 record.

KING IS a former assistant coach at Tulane, having served under Coach Henry Frnka. It was King's first college job after having coached high school teams at Kenedy, Tex. and Enid, Okla.

Tulane coach Jim Pittman was a former assistant coach at Texas.

The Wave's home games are played in the Sugar Bowl, home of the New Orleans Saints of the National Football league.

Coaches All-America tilt planned

By TOMMY LOVE
Sports Editor

Frank Broyles, head coach of the Arkansas Razorbacks and Bill Murray, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, reported that plans are now being finalized for the All-American Football Game to be held here on June 27.

Broyles, who is also president of the AFCA, and Murray spoke before the Lubbock press at a noon luncheon at the Lubbock Country Club yesterday.

The Razorback mentor combined business with pleasure as he later signed Monterey offensive tackle Art Wiebush to play at Arkansas next year.

With coaches for both teams already named, player invitations are now being sent out. Sixty players in all will be named, 30 on each team, with 24 of the players automatic choices.

"All players picked to the American Football Coaches All-American team are also named to play in the All-American game," Murray said.

Each coach in the Southwest Conference and the other major conferences will be contacted in the search for players. J. T. King, Athletic Director for Tech, said that defensive halfback Denton Fox and end Charles Evans were the top two Raider candidates for the game.

The actual selection of the remaining gridgers rests with the coaches of both squads.

Murray said there has been a slight delay in the naming of additional players because Bo Schembelcher, head coach at Michigan, was to have coached the East squad and had to be replaced by Charlie McClendon of Louisiana State University.

Schembelcher was earlier named Coach of the Year by the AFCA but was advised by his doctors to pass up the game due to his heart condition.

Dan Devine, coach of Missouri, will head the West team.

The country is divided in half by the Mississippi River in order to decide which states will participate in which zone. Since the river cuts through two states, Minnesota will play on the west and Louisiana on the east.

Last year, when the game was held in Atlanta, several key players, including number one draft choice O. J. Simpson and Leroy Keys, failed to appear after being selected to the squad.

A coach's clinic is also scheduled during the week of the game with top college and professional mentors expected to attend.

"Lubbock will be the football capital of the United States during the time of the contest," Murray said. "At no other college all-star game will you find an array of talent that will be represented at Lubbock June 27."

"The game is played with a definite set of defensive rules," Murray said. "Since we have 60 players and only a few days to work out, a set defense is decided on by both coaches before the game is played. This is generally done in all-star games and sometimes leads to an offensive battle."

Since the game will be nationally televised over the ABC network, the Lubbock area will be blacked out in an attempt to boost ticket sales.

Polk Robison, athletic administrator of finances and development, proposed that a 125 mile perimeter from Lubbock be blacked out. Robison said he would take this up with ABC officials and ask for their approval at a later date.

Three of the referees for the contest will come from the Southwest Conference with the other two coming from the east.

Broyles, who has been a coach in the All-American game several times, said that in the first few years of the game all the officials came from the east. "After the first time I coached the West, we refused to come back unless we got some referees from our area," Broyles remarked jokingly.

Concerning the additional lighting that will be needed at Jones Stadium for the game to be televised in color, Robison said that he would be getting in touch with the game committee next week and that the lighting would be discussed at that time.

A promoter in Atlanta has allegedly filed suit against the Atlanta Braves baseball team because they allowed the All-American game site to be changed to Lubbock.

Robison said that first priority for tickets to the game would go to season tickets holders at Raider games and second priority to option seat holders. This group totals about 12-13,000 people.

Official ticket sales will begin April 15 with prices ranging from six dollars to one dollar.

Sports Comments

By Mike McMahan

The SWC fearless forecasters might as well start picking cotton instead of basketball teams as the conference race has developed to its usual non-predictable self.

As the race stands now, a team that was picked fourth (Rice, 8-2) is leading the conference, three teams picked eighth (TCU, 6-4), seventh (Tech, 4) and third (A&M, 6-4) are tied for second, a team picked first (Baylor, 5-5) is fifth, a team picked second (Texas, 4-6) is sixth, sixth (SMU, 3-7) is seventh, and last place Arkansas 2-8, who was picked fifth.

Just who is going to win the conference race? Right now one has to go along with Rice who is in the lead by two games with only four remaining. The Owls have the momentum going and they play Texas in Houston Saturday. There are three other possibilities, however. No one can rule out the three teams that are now tied for second and all three have another crack at Rice, in the final games of the season.

According to Head Raider Coach Bob Bass, the team who has the longest winning streak at the end of the season will be on top. This doesn't narrow things down though as there are still four teams that could win the title with a winning streak of four games.

Then there is the chance of a tie for the title. This also brings about complications. If there is a two way tie there is no problem, said Bass. "If there is a three way tie, then two teams will play on the flip of the coin and the winner would play the third team. A four way tie would result in the four teams being matched up and the winners of each game play to determine the champion."

"Tech has about as good a chance to win the race as anyone else with possibly the exception of Rice," Bass said. "Right now they are as loose as they can be, and they have the momentum going. We have got to win the rest of our games though, to have a chance."

Bass continued, "I think Rice will lose two more ballgames though, as they have to play us here and A&M in College Station. They also have to play TCU in Houston. The Frogs have turned out to be the most unpredictable team in the conference and if they (TCU) are on the stick, they could beat Rice in the middle of Houston."

"Tech does not have the easiest schedule of anyone either," said Bass. "We travel to Little Rock Saturday to face Arkansas who has turned out to be the big spoiler in the conference. We also have to play SMU in Dallas which won't be easy. When you get so far into the season every game is a hard one to win."

Another thing to think about is the National Invitational Tournament held annually at Madison Square Garden in New York City. This is the first year that a Southwest Conference team has been eligible to compete in the tournament since Texas went in the late 1940's.

In the 50's the SWC elected not to send anyone to the tournament because of a scandal that occurred there one year. Only last spring did the conference vote to allow a team to go if invited.

The NIT usually invites the best teams from different areas all over the United States. At the moment Tech has the best season record in the conference and being invited is a possibility.

Getting back to the conference race, its going to be a wild one. It's a good bet that the winner or winners will not be determined until about 10 p.m. March 3, when the last official game of the year will end.

Student refutes prof's criticism

A history teacher, during the course of a lecture, once asked a student who was Lincoln's vice president.

The student admitted he did not know.

The teacher rebutted, "You should have learned that in high school."

The student innocently replied, "I was absent that day."
