Statement of Condition

(The following is an excerpt from an article by Jerry Mason in the July 10 edition of The Sporting News.)

In the season of his thirty eighth year, Ty Cobb compounded what has since been considered a baseball epic: Drove in 102 runs with a 0.378 batting average and played in 121 ball games.

In the season of his thirtyeighth year, Ted Williams was batting 0.355 through July 3 and he has stroked more home runs in 67 games than Cobb (12) did for all of the 1925 season.

There has never been a 38year-old hitter like Cobb - - unbat placement hitter - not a long-ball man like Ted. There's more than a subtle difference. Williams, in his decline, is hitting with 38-year-old power that Cobb never had.
