THOUSANDS HOMELESS IN NATION'S FLOOD ZONE ALONG GREAT RIVERS

News pictures of flood scenes, Pittsburg to New Orleans, down the Ohio and Mississippi river basins, all tell the same story of record flood peaks, loss of lives and great property damage. Fires, started from toppling and bursting oil tanks in Cincinnati added new horrors and losses. Top left photo shows raging fires, caused by oil and gas spreading over the flood water from bursting tanks there. Lower left shows a crew of a Coast Guard unit leaving Chicago for flood duty. 800 Coast guards, 200 boats, 12 airplanes, and 24 portable communication outfits were sent into flood territories, the biggest mobilization of Coast Guard for flood relief in history. Top right, a thrilling rescue of a critically ill citizen from flooded home. Lower left photo is a scene as in all flooded towns as citizens flee to the hills for safety.

HIGHWAY SAFETY

Following closely on the announcement of the appointment of the Governor's Safety Committee of 100, Governor Alford made highway safety one of the principal objectives of his second administration when, in his annual message to the legislature, he stressed the need of a more rigid driver's license law and more effective regulation of trucks and busses, whether common carrier or privately owned. At the same time the governor recommended that the present force of less than 150 highway patrolmen be doubled and that the patrol be equipped with automobiles rather than motorcycles.

Characterizing the present driver's license law as "weak and ineffective," the governor told the joint session of senate and house that he thought the sentiment of the people had been misjudged when that measure was passed. Far from being resentful of rigid state regulation, he asserted, the people want something effective done about the annual death toll of 2,000 persons on the highways of the state.

"I think they want the highways made safer for all of us. I know they want to do away with the anguish and tragedy of little children slaughtered and maimed on their way to school," he said.

Success of a more strict driver's license law, and more effective truck and bus regulation depends to a tremendous extent on public education and public opinion, the governor pointed out.

The Governor's Safety Committee, recently named, will assist the Public Safety Department and safety councils throughout the state in better carrying out this program of public education and stimulation of public opinion.

In his message the governor emphasized that the State Highway Patrol, "a magnificent organization," is "woefully undermanned. Today we have less than 150 of these fine young men to patrol thousands of miles of highways." The force should be doubled at least, he said, and "they should be equipped for the most part with light speedy cars instead of motorcycles as at present."

Cost of the increased personnel and additional equipment, said the governor, "can and should be paid for out of the State Highway Fund since this organization is primarily charged with patrolling the highways and enforcement of safety measures."

Concluding his safety recommendations to the legislature, the governor said: "No single accomplishment could be greater than intelligent, effective legislation to curb and diminish the astounding appalling and for the most part, avoidable daily tragedies resulting from our indifference."

At more or less regular intervals criticism is heard of the G-Men and their tactics. But they have been getting their men.

ion rose full height with a jerk. Lefty gave an ejaculation. Dan's jaw sagged; he was speechless. His eyes like agates followed the sharp swoop of the aircraft, nose foremost but slipping badly.

There was a splintering crash. It was the undercarriage and the tip. Yet the monoplane like a winged bird bumped and floundered long with diminishing speed. It was by her momentum. Another from Quillen—trees looming up before the ship—and a louder bang of metal and wood and fabric.

It did not come. In the dying light of the flare which had struck ground somewhere, Colwell saw a form crawl out. "Stick 'em up!" he shouted.

The man did—but with a gun in his hand. It lanced fire. Colwell's hat left his head as though wiped off by some invisible hand. The next

His stubble of hair felt hard as the bristles of a brush to Dan's hand. They mauled and punched and grappled for the guns. Colwell's twirled from his grasp. It hit wing fabric with a ping. Otto Graber got in a murderous left hook that grazed Dan's jaw. Had it landed all would have been over.

But it didn't land, and Colwell put new savagery into his attack. Graber's gun exploded upward—and again. In the darkness they could scarcely see each other; there was only feeble light from the wing lamps. They stumbled back against the metal stirrup at the open cabin door. Dan's lucky right flattened Graber's big German nose. Blood spurted from it as water from a fire hydrant.

Otto howled. Colwell tried to wrap both arms around him to bend him back out of control on the floor of the cabin. Graber side-stepped, and his terrific blow to the temple stunned Dan. He was aware of shots a distance off and of Lefty Quillen's scream. And that he himself was weakening, that Graber was more powerful than he ever had estimated.

He punched again with both fists and suddenly grabbed for the gun as it swung nearer a line with his face. Their hands struck; the weapon slipped; it was gone. Graber, panting, jammed Colwell back. His head instant he realized that this chap was not the first to alight. The first fellow was hidden behind the crumpled wing and had opened fire.

Lefty Quillen's forty-four roared. He was closing in as fast as he could. As he struck ground Dan realized that Irita Doran was on the floor of the partially demolished cabin of the monoplane—helpless though she squirmed and battled her bonds.

Dan groped on his knees, shooting. The second man to alight gave a yell and toppled. Dan saw Quillen locked with the other chap; Vael. He rushed for his own quarry. The fellow lay still—but when Colwell got within ten feet, his figure dim in the half-covered ship's ground lights still burning.

Graber! They struck. Both heavy, the terrific impact merely jarred them. Neither gave way. Graber's square face was contorted into hate and rage. That Dan never had seen there a fore. Perhaps also there was desperation at knowing they had out-guessed him to arrive here first and that now he battled the last time, to win or lose.

hit an iron support just inside the cabin. Things got foggy. . . . Something cold came into his hand—"Dan! Dan!"

It was a scream uttered close to his ear. Venomously he swung that cold thing, swung it at Graber's skull. And it landed with a low, hollow sound that thrilled one clear to the pit of the stomach.

Otto crumpled. He twisted and wriggled on the ground while Colwell slowly collected himself and stood swaying groggily, forced to cling to the open cabin door or fall. Graber's writhing hand paused there on the dark ground. He raised his arm suddenly—"Look out!"

Graber grasped it just as Lefty Quillen limped up. Dan reached out and with a kick at Graber's arm tried to dislodge the gun. And the first shot did go wild. But the second took effect.

Lefty Quillen, knife of two men fore. Dan knew about, gave way at the knees. A dot blackened his forehead and an expression of bitter surprise stamped his face. He uttered a low moan—then folded in a heap. Dead.

Dan straddled Otto Graber. He clouted him with his own automatic until Graber slumped unconscious. Then Colwell, very unsteady and with warm blood trickling down his shoulder went uncertainly to the fellow Lefty had tussled with. Horace Vael was badly mauled and weeping drunkenly with the rage that was in his helpless body.

Dan lurched back to the cabin. He had Irita free in a matter of seconds. "We've got to tie them!"

He nodded. "Their belts—will do. Until we—can get rope from the cabin. You—all right?" he panted.

"Yes. Oh Dan, Dan, I—" Shuddering, she shook her head. "How did you know? How did you guess they'd fly here? How did you come so fast? We were stalled—motor trouble."

"He meant to kill me. Vael was a little afraid, but he was for it, too. Graber said he'd do it because you—"

"What?" he asked wearily. Colwell folded the girl in his arms and inhaled the fragrance of her hair. "The snow's in there, eh? All of it? Good. Graber said he'll kill you because I—what?"

She nestled closer to him. "Loved me."

Colwell considered a moment. He was growing faint and weaker. "Sure," he said, and with a great effort chuckled. "I do. You know that! I—there hasn't been much—chance to say it. But—" He struggled for breath to go on. "There will be, lots of chance. From now on!"

Clean System Clear Skin
You must be free from constipation to have a good, clear complexion. If not eliminated, the wastes of digestion produce poisons and the skin must do more than its share in helping to get rid of them.
So for a clear, healthy skin, remember the importance of bowel regularity. At the first sign of constipation, take Black-Draught—the purely vegetable laxative. It brings such refreshing relief, and tends to have the bowels acting regularly until some future disturbance interferes.

Home Demonstration Notes

A Simple Hat Rack.

"How can I make hat racks of card board?" asked Jewell Gibson, clothing demonstrator for the Littlefield 4-H Club.

Jewell plans to build a long shelf above the rod in her clothes closet and supply it with hat racks to accommodate her and her mother's hats. These racks will be made in the shape of a cone of pliable paste board and sewed down the side to hold them permanently in shape.

They will be made different heights so that the shelf will hold more hats.

Does Your Clothes Closet Serve Your Present Needs?

"I could certainly use some more shelves in my clothes closet," states Jimmie Burke, clothing demonstrator for the Hart Camp 4-H Club.

A low rod that was made for Jimmie when she was small, will be removed now that she uses the higher rod, and shelves for flat articles and hats will be built in. Jimmie wants shelves from top to bottom in one end of her closet so that she will not only have room for her linen and hat but will have a shelf to store odds and ends that she needs "some place to put" which will make it much easier to keep her room orderly.

FINAL INSTALMENT

"You get the snow, I want the girl—alive. But there's to be no killing of Graber, understand? Not unless it's self defense."

Worriedly, Dan watched the repetition of farms. He berated himself for bungling back there in his office. Over-confidence had ruined the whole game. A swelled head! Otto had certainly been swept off his feet by the news that Irita, known to him as Helen Fane, and Colwell, were Customs Special Agency operatives! It naturally had never occurred to Graber that a Graber-Vael Agency sleuth might also be a representative of Uncle Sam.

Admiration rose in Colwell's blue-grey eyes. Irita had taken chances, insinuating herself with those fellows! It was like walking a tight-rope over Niagara Falls. By astute means known only to her clever, resourceful self, she had prevented the rascals quarreling over her. Yet she had won and maintained their confidence.

That hectic ride lasted five minutes less than an hour. But Ewing, Pennsylvania, a country town of perhaps a thousand souls, was not their goal. As they careened down the main street Dan turned to Lefty.

"Now which way? It's up to you to find the camp!"

Quillen nodded. "Straight ahead, buddy," he told the driver. "The second road outside town, turn left. Hit it up!"

Another thirty minutes dragged past. Despite his efforts at calm, Colwell's tension heightened. They turned off the main road, went two miles down a muddy country lane, and halted when Quillen ordered the driver to do so. The two men piled out. "Guess Dan's arm. It's up there. See that cabin?" Colwell could not at first make it you earned the ten-spot." Dan paid the fare and handed it to him. "Suppose you roll back in three hours?" They waited until the rattly cab was gone. "Come on," Quillen snapped, and led the way into the towering forest. It was rapidly growing dark; in fifteen minutes it would be like night. But the killer of McDonald and Catterby seemed to know the way.

out. Going nearer, they found it dark. The two men exchanged questioning looks at this. Dan left his heartbeat slow, then go faster. Suppose their guess was wrong? Suppose Graber still was back in the city?

Cautiously they approached the square log structure with the slanting roof extended over a front porch. There was no light in it, no car nearby, no sign of habitation. Quillen seemed concerned. He walked to a side window and peered in. Then both men went to the front door which they found locked. Again they peered at each other—it was dark now—and again were in wordless agreement. They put their shoulders to the door and after several efforts of their combined power, burst the cheap hinge lock.

Dan struck a match. "We won't light that lamp—we don't need it. Just want to see if their things are gone."

Several matches flickered and died before they convinced themselves that the hunting party had not abandoned the shack for good. Two deer rifles were there, one of them identified as Graber's. A supply of canned food, coffee, and bacon, was found. "They're coming back," Colwell stated.

He walked to the door and stared at the black sky. Suddenly, almost a mile of the countryside flared alight, and at the same time he became conscious of the whine of a motor. "Lefty! There's a plane!" Quillen followed at his heels onto the porch. It was a flare the ship had dropped, used when a pilot seeks an emergency landing field. The motor roared loudly now and in the slow-burning three hundred candle power magnesium they found the ship itself circling. It was quite low. A cabin job of the Monogram make with a powerful whirlwind motor.

By mutual consent when the flare died at the end of its appointed three minutes, Quillen and Colwell rushed to the fringe of woods. They judged that Graber—if it was he—intended landing somewhere to the south. Both men ran fast as they could over hard, uneven ground. Until, two minutes later, they burst suddenly from the copse of trees onto a wide, flat clearing.

"Sure! I remember this. But I never thought Otto could use it for landin'!" Lefty panted.

Colwell determined the direction of the wind and knew which way Graber must face to land. As the ship banked, coming lower, he started at a dead run for the spot it was due to touch. But he had forgotten Graber's second flare.

It burst alive suddenly, illuminating the two men who raced across the cleared space. "Down"! Colwell yelled, and hurled himself flat. With a searing curse Quillen followed suit.

But they had been seen — The motor, which had been cut out, picked up with a roar. The ship's nose lifted as Graber put her into a climb. Dan's heart stuttered and seemed leaden in his breast. They had given themselves away!

Vengefully, Quillen raised his automatic. He, too, could utilize the still burning flare that swung lower on its small parachute. He fired twice, three times. Foolish, of course. It seemed useless.

Or was it? The monoplane was only two hundred feet up. Suddenly the motor sputtered. It died and the plane rode without a sound. The white magnesium still made the field almost bright enough to read a newspaper. The motor picked Graber increased his revs and it sputtered, choked — went utterly dead. "He's got to come down!" The words were scarcely Colwell's mouth before he an

VISITING EVANGELIST SPEAKS TO STUDENT ASSEMBLAGE

W. Y. Pond of Breckenridge, who was assisting Rev. W. J. Ray in a revival meeting at the First Baptist church here, spoke to the student assemblage.
 "Live Off of Jokes and you Become a Joke," the Evangelist alleged. He further stated that every person needs religion to make him a well-rounded individual.
 "Three things important in making a success from life are, planning, purposing and pushing," the speaker asserted.

Design, plan, pattern—life is more important than clothing and brick and mortar, yet we find it necessary to design that which we make from brick and mortar, and that which we make from cloth. The speaker further admonished the students to have a care in cutting in on God-given life so that the entirety might not be spoiled.

COMPLETE UNIT ON STUDY OF WATER

The High Fourth and Fifth grades have completed a unit on the study of water.
 We learned three methods of purifying water by using lamp chimneys and making sand filters; another lamp chimney with lime as a chemical, and discovered that muddy water could be made clear and pure. Then the water was boiled and the boiling point of water was found in this process as well as the water purified. After these findings the fifth grade made an excursion to the water tank and power house in our city for further study and some proof and evidence of our findings in the room. This work was the result of Natural Science study which includes arithmetic, health and science.

Local Resident Returns After Auto Accident

R. E. McCaskill returned home Thursday from a few days trip to Sweetwater, Mineral Wells and other points, while Mrs. McCaskill remained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Garrett, Mineral Wells, where she is recuperating from a fractured ankle and nervousness as a result of an auto crash about two weeks ago.

The accident occurred 8 1-2 miles west of Palo Pinto, Friday afternoon, January 22, at 2:30 o'clock, when the 1936 light sedan, driven by Mr. McCaskill and a 1937 coupe driven by Harry DeScheppa of New York City, collided, causing more or less injury to all parties, and completely demolishing the cars. Mr. DeScheppa, who is 70 years of age, was seriously injured; Mrs. McCaskill fractured ankle, and Mr. McCaskill injury to his right arm, but which is quickly recovering.

Mr. DeScheppa was taken to the Breckenridge hospital. At the time of the accident he was enroute from New York to Los Angeles on a fishing trip, and had considerable fishing tackle and equipment in his car. He stated he had no known relatives.
 According to Mr. McCaskill, DeScheppa made and signed a statement to the insurance representative concerned to the effect that he lost control of the car and then lost his head, and that he was wholly at fault.

Mrs. McCaskill was taken to the home of friends, Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Garrett, at Mineral Wells. Mrs. Garrett was formerly county nurse of Lamb county, about nine years ago, and will be remembered by a number in this section as Miss Grace Kelly.

Mr. and Mrs. McCaskill had been to visit Mrs. McCaskill's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Cress, at Sweetwater, and were on their way to purchase some stone with which to trim their new home, which they are planning to build on East Ninth street, when the accident happened.

Mr. McCaskill left Littlefield again Saturday to visit DeScheppa at the Breckenridge hospital, and his wife at Mineral Wells. Mr. DeScheppa is suffering from several broken ribs and other injuries, and due to his age, is not expected to survive.

Dr. Woods was in receipt Tuesday of the following report from Red Cross Headquarters:

"The following statement, summarizing conditions in the flooded area, is for the information of chapters and for support of the flood relief fundapp erl Reports summarized at noon Friday, January 29th, show eleven states involved with 805,000 persons affected in 177 counties. Refugees are being cared for in 250 concentration camps operating in the flood zone and 106 field hospitals.

"During the last twenty four hours, there has been some relief to workers handling the refugees coming out of evacuated areas. This is due to more complete organization of transportation facilities and the fact that no additional centers of population have been forced to evacuate. The army engineers reported that the Ohio and its tributaries, are falling at Louisville, but rising at Evansville, Paducah and Cairo.

"The problem of sanitation in the affected cities, where the population has not been completely evacuated, is fast becoming a major problem. The inoculation of the population in the affected areas is proceeding rapidly under the direction of the United States Public Health Service and state and local public health officials operating with the Red Cross.

"The response of chapters in the Midwestern Area to the Fund Appeal is a convincing demonstration of the ability of the American people to meet a great need through their National Relief Organization. Reports received from chapters up to 6 p. m. January 29, indicate that 308 chapters in the Midwestern Area now report collections in excess of the minimum goal of five times the original quotas assigned to chapters on January 22nd. The reports of destruction created by the flood will inevitably be increased from day to day and present information clearly indicates that only the maximum possible response by Red Cross chapters everywhere will enable the National Organization to discharge the responsibility which it has assumed."

STRIKERS IN GENERAL MOTORS ORDERED TO EVACUATE PREMISES

Strikers in two Fisher Body company plants at Flint, Mich. heard Tuesday the order of a circuit Court Judge to the effect that they evacuate by 3 p. m. Wednesday. Sheriff Thomas Wolcott read its terms to the strikers.

Sheriff Thomas Wolcott, carrying a copy of the injunction issued on petition of General Motors corporation by Judge Paul V. Gadola, went first to plant No. 2 and then to No. 1, reading its terms to the "sit-down strikers who listened in orderly silence.

Good natured boogie accompanied the sheriff's departure from the No 1 plant, where he had been shouted down January 2, when he tried to read a previous injunction.

Union headquarters in Flint announced the strikers in plant No. 2 telegraphed Governor Frank Murphy that "we have decided to stay in the plant. We have no delusions about the sacrifices which this decision will entail. We fully expect that if a violent effort is made to oust us many of us will be killed."

John Brophy, director of the Committee for Industrial organization, said he was assured by Gov. Murphy that "under no circumstances will the military be used to eject or assist in the ejection of sit-in employes of General Motors at Flint by force or violence.

Statements looking toward negotiations to settle the nation-wide strikes that have slashed deeply into General Motors production came from both sides Tuesday.

William S. Knulsen, executive vice president of the corporation, said that as soon as the plants have been restored to our possession" General Motors will negotiate with the United Automobile Workers of America on the eight union demands made January 4 and added:

"We will do all that lies in our power to make a prompt and honorable settlement."

At Baltimore, enroute to Detroit to assume personal command of the strikers which his committee for industrial organization has supported, John L. Lewis said:

"Every moral and logical consideration indicates a conference between the contesting parties. After all, that is the only way to settle a controversy unless it is desirable to await the exhaustion of one of the contestants or until one adversary beats the other down."

Lewis declined comment on the injunction ordering evacuation of the plants. Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president at Detroit said that "we will not fight the government."

The injunction issued by Judge Gadola directed the strikers, whose occupancy of the Fisher plants has blocked every effort of conciliators so far, to cease occupying the factories, to vacate the premises by 3 p. m. February 3, and to refrain from picketing at the plant or loitering at any places where non-striking employes "enter or alight from conveyances enroute from or to said plants."

The corporation in its petition had stated the strikers were no longer in the company's employ. Tuesday's injunction ordered them to: "Absolutely desist and refrain from continuing or being in, on, upon or going upon the premises and plants aforesaid, or plaintiff."

The court commanded that Martin and 29 other defendants, as well as "all other persons to whom knowledge of such injunction shall come," obey its terms "under the penalty of fifteen million dollars to be levied upon their lands, goods and chattels."

Granting of the injunction climaxed a 24-hour period which saw disturbances injuring a dozen persons at the Chevrolet Motor company plants, and the first movement of National guardsmen into the actual strike zone. An order appended to the injunction, restraining General Motors from any acts of violence against union members, was eliminated from its final draft at the request of union attorneys who claimed its wording was "objectionable" and that it was "dictated by General Motors."

Who Pays For Texas Highways?

Houston, Tex., Feb. 3.—Propounding the query, "Who Pays for Texas Highways?", the Texas Railroads today answered the question with a series of figures, allocating the costs of the existing highway system and showing the sources of the three-quarter of a billion dollars to date.

Contrary to what is perhaps the popular impression, it is shown that the general taxpayer, whether he owns a car or not, is or should be as vitally interested in the highways as in any other of the public services for which he pays. His share in the cost of the highway system, paid through ad valorem taxes, has been to date $281,000,000 or 33 per cent of the total, while of course if he is a car owner, he has paid his share of the $202,000,000 in motor license fees and the $176,000,000 of gasoline tax, and finally, a part of the $91,000,000 of federal aid which Texas has received for its road program.

Big trucks, engaged in inter-city freight transport, are shown to have paid a relatively insignificant part of the total cost of the highway system, though their use of the roadways has tremendously enhanced the cost both of construction and maintenance. Actual count shows, according to the summary as issued, that there are but 36,000 trucks, each registered in the state for a gross weight, vehicle and load, of 8,000 pounds or more. Large trucks, representing 2 3-4 per cent of all vehicles on the state's highways, have paid toward the road system $14,500,000 in license fees and $11,200,000 in gasoline taxes, a total of $25,700,000, or 3 1-2 per cent of the total cost of the system.

Yet, the statement continues, these large trucks add tremendously to the cost of highway construction and maintenance. Two feet wider than passenger cars and small trucks, they require four feet of additional road width, representing about 25 per cent increase in pavement cost for this item alone. Their weight is such as to make it necessary to build thicker pavements, this factor adding from 35 per cent to 60 per cent to the cost. Wider and heavier bridges and increased maintenance costs are shown to swell the total highway cost requirements to almost double that required for trucks and passenger cars.

Any addition to the load or the size and speed of the larger trucks will, it is asserted, further increase the burden of the highway building, with the result of the small truck or passenger car and the payer of ad val taxes having to pay a proportionate share for the benefit of a small fraction of the total number of motor vehicles on the highways.
