traffic areas. Level Loop High: Tight construction; generally the same as level loop low, but the higher pile has greater luxury, longer wear and comfort underfoot. Good for average to heavy traffic areas.

Multilevel Loop: Combination of several heights of loop-pile construction, this texture falls into popularpriced carpet. A very practical texture that is in wide use for living rooms, dining rooms and bedrooms. Good for light to average traffic areas. Hi-Lo Loop, Random-Sheared: Most acceptable pattern or construction in use today because of the great variety of patterns, pile heights and densities. Used in living, dining and bedroom areas. Good for medium to heavy traffic areas.

Level Loop, Tip-Sheared: This texture is often considered more formal. Good for average to heavy traffic where high styling is desired. Plush Pile: Most accepted style for formal interiors. While its luxurious and delicate texture has a tendency to show indention, this is an indication of the deep and lush construction. Good for light, medium or heavy traffc greas Shags: A casual effect with good possibilities for styling contrast. Good for average traffic areas, particularly in family rooms, bathrooms and bedrooms.

Twist: Has a formal tailored effect, though it is the least popular texture today, it is suitable for use throughout the house. Good for medium to heavy traffic areas.

The fiber contents found arpet are as follows Acrylic: Man-made fiber that closely resembles wool. Has good resiliency and soil resistance. Wearability is go od to excellent. Nylon: Man-made fiber that resists water-borne stains. Has excellent abrasion resistance. It is the strongest man-made fiber. Polyester: Has good crush resistance, resists soiling and has good to excellent wearability. Polypropylene Olefin: Has low moisture absorption and high resistance to soiling and staining. Good stong fiber with good abrasion resistance. Wool: Natural made fiber with resiliency, soil resistance, cleanability. Wearability is fair to good, depending on price.

Padding increases the life of the carpet and therefore it is a necessity. Padding comes in several types such as all hair, combination of hair and jute, rubberized hair or all rubber. All-hair padding has fine resiliency. It comes in plain or waffle pattern. The cost of padding is determined by the weight and type chosen. Normally the average weight used for padding is 40 oz. type. No matter what pile surface or fiber content you have chosen, remember this important basic rule. The rule is "the deeper, the dense, the better," which means that the most carpet fiber, the longer the wear and the more durable.
