Wanted! A PLACE TO LIVE

We do not have in our town, sufficient residence accommodations to take care of the men and their families who will be employed on the new road construction work east.

If you have some furnished rooms to rent, with cooking facilities, insert an adv. in this paper or list them with C. R. Weatherly, secretary of the Board of City Development. We should provide a place for these people to live, otherwise they will locate in adjoining towns, and their patronage will be lost to our merchants.

A wedding of much interest to Wheeler people occurred Thursday evening, May 3, the contracting par-K. Bolton, both of this city. The young people motored to Sayre, Okla., where they were united in marriage by the Rev. Spencer Austin, pastor of the Church of Christ.

Although Mrs. Bolton has lived in Wheeler only a comparatively short time, she has made many friends here. Her former home was at Clarendon, where she graduated with honors from the high school in 1928. After graduating, she took a business course in Fort Worth. For the past two years she has been engaged in beauty work.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bolton, and for the past 18 years has made his home in Wheeler, where he received his education, graduating with the class of 1930. He has been in the grocery business with his father for the past four years and present plans are to continue in that occupation.

The newly-weds will make their home in Wheeler.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bolton were host and hostess at a wedding dinner Friday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis K. Bolton.

Other guests were Messrs, and Mesdames Clint Johnson and daughter, Cecil Richerson and children, Troy Burgess and daughter, S. H. Murphy. and Mrs. Oliver Tucker, Lloyd Bolton, Weldon Lewis and Marie Bowers.

County Makes Plans For Rehabilitation

Home Sought in Selfhelp Project

In conformity with suggestions and concessions offered by the federal government, a rehabilitation scheme has been launched in Wheeler county for relief of needy farm folks and other eligibles. Under deties being Jewell Sewell and Lewis tails of the project, the federal government will rent vacant farm houses from the owners, repair them where needed, and turn them over free to persons who will agree to plant from 5 to 20 acres of land in truck and garden crop for two years. The repair feature is expected to appeal to owners of such properties, offering as it does, to put the homes n livable condition without cost to the owner.

The government will furnish free seed for all crops. One limitation is that only such crops be grown as may be consumed by the tenant and his family. Neither can any crop be grown for sale. It is a requirement in renting a house and land that the acreage must be a part of the land retired in one of the agricultural adiustment acts.

Purpose of the project is to rehabilitate farmers and other eligibles who are in need of help. The plan is intended to permit a person to earn practically his entire living on the small acreage provided and at the same time provide an opportunity to earn a little extra money in spare time.

In connection with this project, it is expected that community canneries will be set up at convenient points throughout the county, where assistance will be afforded in taking care of surplus products and storing them for future family use. A perentage will be exacted to meet the expense of labor, containers, etc.

One of the difficulties encountered s the lack of houses. Jake Tarter, county agent, stated Wednesday, that 21 written applications had been received for houses and acreage. He expressed the belief that 50 such setups could be used if available.

A TESTING TIME

The NRA is at the crossroads.

That is the opinion of almost all qualified Washington observers now. It is likewise the opinion of many high up in government. General Johnson recently said that a reaction against the blue eagle has set in, that it must be met by a new re-adjustment.

There is a growing feeling on the part of many business men that the NRA is tending to delay, rather than accelerate, the work of recovery. They feel that it has laid down rules of business procedure that are unnecessary, unjust and inimical to industry; that it has made its talons felt in fields that should be of no interest to government. When the blue eagle controlled wages and working hours, and was of social significance primarily, they were with it; when it soared into the realm of management and said what-was-what concerning routine matters, they started flying the other way.

The attitude of business didn' cause a great deal of concern on the part of NRA officials. They thought it was unavoidable that certain toes be stepped on. Now, however, other government bureaus, set up by the president for the most part, are be coming NRA's severest critics. The Federal Trade commission, for example, has protested against what it calls monopolistic practices in the steel industry-made possible by the steel code and the abrogation of the anti-trust laws. The National Recovery Review board has reported back to the president that the codes put small business at a disadvantage, give big business all the breaks. The Consumer's Advisory board which is a part of the NRA set up has made an exhaustive report on the operation of the oil code, says that motorists are getting stuck to the tune of hundreds of millions a year as the rise in oil prices has been out of line with wage increases in the

OUR MOTHERS

This Sunday is Mether's Day, the ime for commemoration of the one who has done more for us than any one else in the world. She sacrifices everything for her loved ones, whether bad or good. Her love is he greatest treasure.

What is home without a mother? What are all the joys we meet? When her loving smile no longer Greets the coming of our feet? The days seem long, the nights seem

Things we prize are first to vanish, Hearts we love to pass away; And how soon, e'en in our childhood, We behold her turning gray;

Her joys of earth are past; her.

Older hearts may have their sorrows. Griefs may quickly die away, But a mother lost in childhood, Grieves the heart from day to day; We miss her kind, her willing hand, Her fond and honest dare; And, oh, how dark is life around us! What is home without her care?"

She says that her hobby is flirting, but surely this reporter misunderstood her statement. Her ambition is to go to Europe before the end of the world. She enjoys basketball very much, but she says because she does not like to eat spinach. She was required to help the rest of the bunch warm the bench. She is proud of the fact that this was her first year to play high school basketball and she was among those that lettered this time.

While she attended school in Missouri she was queen of high school when she was a sophomore besides the other offices that she has held. This year she was one of the pep squad leaders. She is also a member of the Home Economics club, took part in the senior play, and won third place in extemporaneous speech.

"Yes, I'm one of the Ficke girls that answers to the name of 'Midget,' Mutt,' 'Shorty,' 'Margie.' and sometimes Marguerite." "Yes, I'm the one that is a senior and not very tall." She says that her hobby is reading although she is fond of all kinds of sports and parties. ### Transgressors Fate Is Certain

We live in a world in which our actions are controlled to a great extent by man-made laws. This is not only true concerning offenses made penal by our criminal statutes, but also as to our economic and business world where certain rules and regulations are set out in our laws to control civil conduct and action.

Without the civil laws and courts for their proper interpretation and adjudication of the rights involved, relations between men would be come chaotic and our business world would crumble.

Without penal laws and proper courts for the punishment of those who violate them, our government would become merely a figure-head, if it could exist at all, and all respect for law, and for individual rights would vanish. No man nor his property would be safe-terror would reign supreme.

The real force of our penal laws, enacted by our legislatures, depends upon their proper en-Jara forcement, without which they will lie supinely upon our statutes without serving the purpose for which they were intended, and the persons violating them will continue in their unlawful ca-WH reers unrestrained.

For the proper enforcement of any law the citizen must give his assistance and co-operation to the law-enforcing agencies of our government. It is the duty of all citizens to be interested in the apprehension and conviction of those who f launtingly disregard all laws in our state and rage rampant over the entire land, with an utter heedlessness to life or property. The prosperity and progress of this nation depends upon a successful restraint of such outrageous lawlessness. The attitude of the citizen, his assistance when possible his open and courageous condemnation of such outlawry will help much in remedying a situation of crime that has reached gigantic proportions and costs governmental agencies enormous amounts of money each year.

Sympathy for criminals, harboring law-violators, a disinclination to inform authorities of violations, makes the task of enforcement officers indeed a hard one. Articles and writings which eulogize criminals have been instrumental in launching many youths upon a life of crime. A life, which sometimes, but rarely, then only f or a short time, proves profitable.

The way of the transgressor is truly hard because a history of the most glamorous, daring and bold criminal ends in the sordidness of a felon's cell or an inglorious death from a peace officer's gun. None survived! Each existed for a short while, usually without friends, most of the time without money, always a thing hunted like a wild beast, unwelcome everywhere, unnerved and cowering except under the artificial stimulus of opiates or whiskey, blubbering and whimpering when caught by the strong hand of the law, begging for mercy, double-crossing another criminal to save his own neck from the electric chair -- this is the true light of the criminals painted so gaudily by some writers whom we read after today.

None survive! Their short career of crime ends and they are buried with nothing but poverty, misery and disgrace for their companions.

A true picture of the criminal, shorn of the tinsel popular sentiment has shrouded him with, will eliminate the last vestige of sympathy for him and place him where he belongs in our civilization-a thing to be placed behind prison walls, where he can not murder, rob, and kidnap-a menace to society.

weathered like dark leather, his patient face as native to the land as Lone Mesa itself, and there was about him a simple dignity, as there was about the poorest of these Indians. He wore a blue flannel shirt, corduroy pants held by a silver-studded belt, and his hair was long and bound in two neat doubled flares on the back of his head. Though he spoke fair English and ha a sizable hand of sheep, this manner of wearing his bair stamped him as a "wild buck," one of those who had not yet become entirely civilized. For one thing. Two Fingers did not drink. and for another, he still worshiped his ancient gods. Sonya liked him. Now she said, "Hello, Two Fingers.

save the patient brown woman in there with what weapons she had at her command, with unrelenting vigflance, with instant combat of every adverse change, then she would do it or know the reason for her failure.

She looked up at the high blue sky with its sailing, full white clouds, her mind an attitude of prayer, and turning, lifted the blanket which was the door, and went in.

Two Fingers gathered the bables and made ready to depart, according to her request made a moment back. She wanted the day alone, clear visloned for the crisis, nothing within sight to distract her. The man looked down at the woman on the low bed, holding one child, leading the other, and the woman looked up. They said nothing.

It might be their last look on earth, their eternal parting, for all they knew, yet there was no outcry, no sign of sorrow, nothing but that deep look. Perhaps nothing more was needed. Then Two Fingers went away, and the women were alone in the hogan.

"We meet the enemy," said Sonya, still in Navajo-there was a comfort In it, a strength, it seemed -- "but we meet him together. I hold your hand. Hold tight to mine. We must both fight, very hard. The medicine will fight, too. It is a good fighter. But not for a moment must we fail or sink or stop fighting. You understand?" The other nodded.

"It is good," said Sonya.

And the day of battle began. Somewhere out in the sand and rocks of Chee wash Two Fingers would be praying to his ancient gods, sitting quietly, perhaps, watching the tudes, the way of death, all chance, all waiting. Sonya in the hogan worked tireless ly. The cold of the night had given place to the heat of day, and sweat dripped from her temples. Regularly she fed the woman the thin warm gruel. Regularly, monotonously, she bathed her from head to foot. Regularly she slipped her thermometer into the parched mouth, reading it anx. lously. As steadily she gave her medicines. At noon she saw no sign of hope, but rather her heart chilled in her at the rising figures in the tiny tube. The crisis was coming. It would be here by midafternoon. Her mouth set a little harder, ber black eyes were narrow between their dusky lashes. She squatted patiently by the heap of skins and blankets, her fingers on Little Moon's hot wrist, So the hours passed-and the crisis ame, a tense, panting hour, with the silver thread in the little tube running up a ghastly record, and the patient dark head rolling at last in unendurable suffering.

The big horse, hard as iron and perfect in training, leaned to the almost imperceptible motion of hand and rein on his neck, and trotted out of the patio. Once on the sandy stretch of level country he rolled away in a long and tireless lope, a harbinger of hope, a bringer of comfort to the lowly.

VINGIE

W.N.U. SERVICE

Far to the south and west Sonya could see Lone Mesa. She loved the great tableland. Times without number she had climbed its steep trail on Darkness, to ride its three-by-five-mile top, to sit in the sun beside its ancient pueblo walls with their rotting ladders, to stand on its sharp-cut rim and scan the lone world below. Until yes terday nothing had ever disturbed her. nothing disputed her right of wayuntil yesterday.

At the thought her face flushed red with anger at the man who had ridden her down to the mesa's edge and pulled her from her saddle, his handsome face aflame with rapine. She felt the blood burn along her cheeks. It was resentment she felt, the fierce rage of indignation that anyone or anything should interfere with her freedom and her right to it. Her dark eves were hot with it, her soft mouth set in a prim line. But the look she gave the mesa as she rode along beneath it was neither fearful nor resigned. It was a look of promise, as If some stubborn thing within her would take her to its lonely heights more often than usual now. The sun came up as she and Darkness entered the broad mouth of Chee wash with its red sandstone walls, and a little later they came in sight of the hogan of Two Fingers. A round, low habitation of a single room, laid up of that stones one above another, like flakes of prehistoric dough, it faced the east, as all bogans must. From its central rise a thin thread of smoke ascended. Something caught at Sonya's heart-It was so stark and poor a home, its people so helpless. Two Fingers met her beside the water hole. He was a man of around thirty,

How is she this morning?" "Bad." he said briefly and reached for Durkness' rein. Sonya swung down and took off her saddlebags. As she entered the hogan her lips set themselves in a sharp, unconscious line. Bad was right, she thought. There was the smell of death here. She would need to gird her loins today in all truth.

At first the dusky shadows hid the Interior from her sight. Then, as her eyes adjusted themselves, she set down her bays and knelt beside the first heap of skins and blankets which lay on the sandy floor.

There were three of these flat beds In the farther one the two children still slept heavily. In this one Little Moon lay parting with fever, her blg black eyes beautiful in the dim light. "Courage, little mother," Sonya said in Navajo, "I am with you."

The Indian woman smiled, touched ber hand with timid fingers.

She took the draught which the other gave her presently, and watched her as she set about cooking some oatmeal over the coals of the tiny fire.

This it was which had made Sonys the idol of these poor and silent people, this service of heart and hand which had saved them. literally, from death in many cases. She fought for what sanitation she could produce among them, taught them the importance of proper feeding in fevers, the superiority of mustard plasters over singsongs in pneumonia, and labored generally like a mother with her children.

Now she bathed the hot brown body under the blankets, gave Little Moon the thinned cereal as a drink, waked and washed the children, fed them the rest of the outment, ate two pleces of fried mutton and some crackers with Two Fingers, and stood for a while outside the hogan in the morning sunlight.

She felt wonderful herself, strong and high within, as if she set her body against a wall and could not be backed down. This was the gauge of battle in her, that she knew, the deep determination to win in what she set herself to do, the passionate sympathy and pity which were like a steel blade in her, If it were possible to | W. E. Jackson, and friends.

THE FUTURE THE REPAIRS

Sonya held the moving hands, bathed the drawn face.

"Hold tight-hold-tight-steady-steady," she kept saying in Navajo, 'hold tight, little mother."

And after a timeless space when she neither moved nor took her eyes from the other's features, there came a creeping stillness, a hush, a cessation of movement. The weary head dropped sidewise, the thin hands became quiet. Sonya loosed them and reached for her stethoscope, her hypodermic filled and ready with its needle in a cup of sterile water. This was the crux, and she must not fail-for Two Fingers and the babies out in Chee wash some where.

She did not fail.
