The wedding of Walter E. Jarrett, of Abilene, and Miss Myrtle Elizabeth Allen of Eastland, in the lovely new Methodist church at 10 o'clock this morning, the first marriage to be solemnized in the new edifice, was a markedly beautiful ceremony. The church was filled with their friends.

The church, glowing with the lights from the tinted windows, was also brightly illumined by the electric lights, the beams, falling on the choir and chancel rails, massed in roses and ferns, making a most charming background for the frocks of the bridesmaids, which ranged in tones from the palest pink thru the rose shades to a deep orchid. To the strains of the Mendelssohn Wedding March, played by

TWO STARTS OVER OCEAN ARE FAILURES

Women in Trans-Atlantic Air Race Unable To Get Away From Starting Points.

By United Press. ST. JOHNS, N. F., June 7.—At 10 a. m., Eastern Standard time, Miss Amelia Earhart and her two companions, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon, boarded their plane, Friendship, in Trepassy Bay and prepared for an immediate start on their trans-Atlantic air race with Miss Mabel Boll.

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, June 7.—After three attempts to get their airplane, "Friendship" off the water for a trans-Atlantic air race with Miss Mabel Boll, Miss Amelia Earhart and her two companions took the ship back to its moorings at 10:30 a. m. Eastern Standard time, to await a stronger wind.

CURTIS FIELD, N. Y., June 7.—Six hours after Miss Mabel Boll started on what was to have been the first stage of a trans-Atlantic flight, she and three companions returned here today in the monoplane, "Columbia."

A thick fog which settled over the air route to Old Orchard, Me., prevented her from starting on a venture she hoped would bring her the distinction of being the first woman to fly the Atlantic.

Miss Boll said her plans for future flight could not be announced until she had conferred with Charles Levine who let her use the Columbia.

NEW TEACHERS IN EASTLAND TO MAKE HOME

Prof. and Mrs. D. H. Roof, From Chicago, Take Over Eastland Business College.

The Eastland Business College, upstairs at 405 South Seaman Street, has been bought by Prof. D. H. Roof, of Chicago, who will conduct it in company with his wife, who is yet teaching in Chicago, but is to join him here within a week or two. Professor Reddoch is retiring from commercial school work and expects to engage in farm or ranch work altogether, being forced to this in consideration of Mrs. Reddoch's health.

Professor Roof brings to the young men and women of Eastland and her trade territory an enviable record of success as a teacher and manager in several of the leading business schools of the country. He is a graduate of the Bowling Green Business University, at Bowling Green, Ky.; of the Western Kentucky State Normal, and the University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa. He did postgraduate work at New York University and the University of Chicago, at Chicago and has had experience, both varied and valuable, covering six years' work as instructor in Pennsylvania high schools, two years in Spencer Business College, Jersey City, N. J., three years in the Pan-American College at Miami, Fla., and four years in the McCormack School of Commerce at Chicago.

In addition to his teaching and managerial experience, Professor Roof brings to bear several years of practical experience as auditor and expert accountant in the service of such big companies as Gray's Coal Company, Reick McJunkin Dairy Co., Jones & McLaughlin Steel Corporation, and public accounting with the National Audit Co., Chicago. This is of much interest to those of us who desire accounting work leading to certified public accounting.

Professor Roof will be assisted in the work by his wife, Mrs. Roof is especially good in the stenographic and secretarial department. Being a teacher of several years' experience and a graduate of the State Normal and the Gregg Normal School, her co-operation in the work will go to make assurance doubly sure. Mrs. Roof is at present engaged in the stenographic department of the McCormack School of Commerce, Chicago, but is seeking relief, and Professor Roof is hopeful that she may possibly be able to join him in two weeks. His coming has awakened quite an interest and stirred up enthusiasm among those who are interested in Gregg shorthand and the higher phases of accountancy. The coming of Professor and Mrs. Roof mean a wonderful success for the school, not only because of the high character of the work offered by the new owners, and necessity of commercial and secretarial training.

Advocates Wetness Without Saloon

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Captain William H. Stayton, who guides the destinies of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, does not agree with Police Chief Jacob Graul of Cleveland, O., that the return of the saloon would be preferable to present conditions under the prohibition law.

Although he did not outline his plans definitely, Captain Stayton indicated that he favored some sort of compromise between the absolute prohibition of the dry law enthusiasts and the out-and-out wetness of the extremely moist contingent.

"I don't believe that we have to return to the old saloon, but some method is certainly preferable to a continuance of the conditions we have now," he said in an interview.

"For a thousand years the civilized world has been trying to decrease the evils of the liquor traffic. Many methods have been tried, some with a little success, some with no success and some working positive harm. No method has been a really great success, because human nature can't be reformed overnight by law. The reformation must be gradual and educative."

Very Little Difference Between Older And Younger Generations, Though Both Think It Says University President

AUSTIN, June 7.—"You cannot get away from the influence of the University upon you nor can the University get away from your influence upon it," President H. Y. Benedict told nearly six hundred candidates for degrees in the June commencement exercises at the University of Texas Monday night.

President Benedict further stressed the fact that mankind is the same yesterday, today and forever, pointing out that the young people of today are not much different from older generations.

His address in part follows: "Graduates of 1928: From the eyes of Texas you can never get away, nor from your eyes ought Texas ever to get away."

"You who are about to receive degrees, you and the University of Texas are forever bound in an inseparable union. In and about this institution, plans for which had begun almost before the smoke of the Battle of San Jacinto cleared away, a most significant part of your life upon this earth has been passed beyond recall, for weal or woe, leaving a deep and eternal imprint upon your souls.

Cannot Get Away.

"You cannot get away from the influences of the University upon you nor can the University get away. Henceforth your successes will be its successes and your failures will be its failures. For much that you are and will be the University will deserve neither praise nor blame, but to the world you are forever henceforth graduates of the University of Texas and through you, will the University be measured. Some praise or blame the University will of course deserve, doubtless claiming the praise more than it is entitled to mention if one of you should hereafter be sent to jail, that Mr. X. Y. Z. was once a prominent member of the Class of 1928 at the University of Texas.

"The University is a part of you and you are a part of the Summer White House Will Be in Heart of Wilderness Paradise in Wisconsin

Here is the island lodge where President Coolidge will spend his summer vacation—the main building of the estate of the late Henry Clay Pierce on Cedar Island, in the Bruie river, 40 miles from Superior, Wis. The lodge is located along the most beautiful section of the river, in a pine covered forest a short distance inland from Lake Superior, and is in the center of a 400-acre estate. It is near the fabled site of Hiawatha's wigwam, and the country-side is rich in Indian lore and tradition. Wild life is abundant, deer and bear being common in the woods nearby, while the cold waters of Bruie river are filled with all varieties of trout. The living quarters are in the building shown above on the mainland, reached by a rustic bridge, are the dining hall, kitchen, servants' quarters, stables and a boathouse containing 20 canoes. It will be easy to maintain absolute privacy on the estate; only one road leads to it, and guards an unobtrusive stop canoeists from coming up the river. The city of Superior, of 47,000 inhabitants, is expected to provide offices and accommodations for the president's staff and for the host of newspapermen that will accompany him.

LENS ON CARS WILL NOT SAVE FROM SEIZURE

Massachusetts Governor Says Lender Should Know Borrower's Character.

The Massachusetts Senate has sustained the veto of Alvan T. Fuller, Governor, regarding liens on seized automobiles which the Governor declared would prove a handicap in enforcement of the prohibition laws. The bill proposed to protect financing companies and others by permitting any liens to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of cars found used in transporting liquor.

"Offhand, this may seem a very reasonable provision," Mr. Fuller wrote, "it may seem unjust to have an individual holding a lien on a motor vehicle lose his property because the owner employs the automobile for the illegal transportation of liquor. This bill, however, would in the opinion of the commissioner of public safety, result in making him an agent to sell motor cars for convicted law breakers."

"With this law on the books, no violator of the prohibition law would probably be so unwise as to drive an automobile not amply covered by liens held by his

Furthermore, the flexible belt goes three-quarters of the way around you—everywhere there's any bending or twisting. Two features to look for and insist on.

So demand "HANES SAMSONBAK Union Suit"—you can't get this patented belt in any other. Ask the dealer to give you the tug-of-war demonstration. It's a wow! And the price is another $1.

MISS ALLEN BECOMES BRIDE OF MR. JARRETT

Miss Doris Taylor of Oklahoma City, the brother of the bride, Leroy Allen, entered, followed by the groomsmen, W. W. Phillips and Sterling Holloway, walking ahead, then Miss Daphne Grisham in pale pink chiffon, with picture hat carrying a bouquet of pale pink carnations; Miss Minnie Lee McDaniel of Abilene and Miss Vera Hearn of Eastland, in rose pink, with rose picture hat, each carrying bouquets of carnations and roses. Mrs. Harold Durham of Ranger, the mother of honor, was in deep red of roses with touches of gold and wide picture hat, carrying a deep-toned carnation bouquet. Miss Helen Keyes of Wynnewood, Oklahoma, maid of honor, was in delicate chiffon, with gaineborough hat, and a beautiful bouquet of roses, carnations and sweet peas, with two clear little flower girls in fluffy pink frocks, Elizabeth Ann Harwell and Caroline Doss, with rose silk bandeaus in their hair, who scattered rose petals from gilded baskets, in the path of the bride:

The bride, arrayed in white tulle with lace, a charming complexion, covered by the tulle veil, held with a bandeau of orange blossoms, wore a necklace of pearls and crystal, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried an immense bouquet of white carnations and orange blossoms, with graceful showers of fragrant buds.

The bridegroom wore the conventional black morning suit. He was attended by Wayne Jones. They met the bride and her party at the altar, which was outlined in tall heart-shaped baskets, massed with gladiolas, sweet peas and roses, similar baskets being stationed at the corners of the aisle, leading to the altar, and at the ends of the chancel rails.

Previous to the ceremony, "Oh Promise Me," was sung charmingly by Mrs. Grady Pipkin, who was gowned in rose chiffon, with white lace picture hat.

The solemn words of the marriage ceremony were made doubly impressive by the beautiful song ceremony, performed by the Rev. Frank E. Singleton, pastor of the Methodist church.

The bride was given away by her father, Russell V. Allen.

The recessional, "Lohengrin Chorus," was played as the wedding party made their exit.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Allen of this city and has a host of friends, who are sincerely interested in her happiness. She has been prominent in work in the Methodist church for a number of years and a gifted and highly educated girl.

Mr. Jarrett was one of the active men in the Methodist church work during his residence in Eastland, and was connected with all the worth while organizations of the city, including that of the advisory board of the Salvation Army. He is now a leading business man in Abilene.

The young couple will make their home in Abilene. Following the ceremony the bride changed into a going-away frock of navy blue georgette, and a coat ensemble.

They will spend several days of festiveness in their honeymoon and stop in Houston, enroute to Abilene.

The good wishes of a host of friends follow them.

When A Girl Loves

© 1928 by NEA Service

FICTION

by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED
NATHANIEL DANN, struggling artist, gives a party at his studio in honor of his fiancée, VIRGINIA, beautiful daughter of RICHARD BREWSTER, Wall Street financier.

NEIL'S model, CHIRL, is jealous of VIRGINIA and tells him he will spoil his career if he marries the wealthy girl who cannot appreciate his art. During the party NEIL hears that VIRGINIA's father has died of heart failure. He hurries her home, where she is prostrated with grief. Noting the peculiarly tortured expression on the dead man's face, NEIL involuntarily asks the doctor, "Do you think it was a natural death?" The doctor advises that death was caused by worry and shock, and it is later revealed that BREWSTER had lost his fortune in reckless speculation. VIRGINIA bears up bravely under the double loss and NEIL urges an immediate marriage but his pleading is interrupted by FREDERICK DEAN, an old family friend.

Now go on with the story—

CHAPTER III

"Virginia, I wish you hadn't consented to see anyone just now," Nathaniel protested when the maid had gone to admit the caller. "There is something I want to talk to you about."

"But Niel, I couldn't send Mr. Dean away."

"No, I suppose not. He's been a great help," Nathaniel spoke a trifle acidly.

"He and Clarissa both, Niel. She's been an angel, missing things to be here with me."

Nathaniel held his tongue in reply to that. He happened to know that Clarissa Dean had kept some of her engagements. One of them was a dance. But so long as Virginia was happier in the belief that Clarissa had sacrificed her social pleasures altogether during her friend's black days, let her think so.

He did not feel so tolerant of the girl's father however, for he did not like Mr. Dean. There was something about the man, intangible, indefinable, that made Nathaniel want to refuse to shake hands with him. He could not tell what it was that caused him to distrust the man, but the distrust was there and whenever he saw Dean with Virginia, his hands patting hers as his custom, Nathaniel wanted to kick him. It was a crude instinct, he knew, and as far as he could judge an ungrounded one, for certainly Frederick Dean appeared worthy to pat Virginia's hand. And he had been one of her father's oldest friends; a man who belonged to the same clubs for which the names of both had been put up at birth.

But still Nathaniel did not like him, and when he appeared in the doorway, wearing a sympathetic smile, Nathaniel nodded curtly, murmured a vague greeting and stood with his hands behind him.

Dean appeared to take no notice of him beyond a quick "howdy do." Doubtless he did not regret that he was not compelled to take his hand. But whether or not Nathaniel was to him important enough to shake hands with, he seemed to find Virginia's hands fully satisfying. For he was patting them as usual, and Nathaniel's skin began to creep as he watched. The man needn't be so confoundingly paternal, he thought. He couldn't stand much of that, he decided, and took his departure.

"I'll come back in half an hour," he said to Virginia, hoping Dean would take the hint. "You know there is something I want to talk about."

Virginia kissed him goodbye, but her fingers seemed to cling a little to him as she let him go.

"My dear," Dean began in a sad voice when she was again seated beside him. "I won't get into trouble upon you at this moment, but I don't feel that it might comfort you to know I was your father's confidant and that I am aware of the blow you have suffered today. I promised Richard I would see you through it."

"Is it really as bad as Mr. Gardner says?" Virginia asked him, her voice rising a little.

"Richard gave me to understand that matters were in a very bad state—but of course I do not know what Mr. Gardner said."

"He said there was nothing left—that even the furniture in this apartment must be sold. Suddenly Virginia's hands were withdrawn from Dean's grasp and she was covering her face. Her body shook with the emotion she had until now been gallantly suppressing.

Dean's arms went around her; he drew her head to his shoulder, and if there was a touch of greediness in his movements Virginia was not aware of it.

"I can't understand it, Uncle Frederick,"—she called Mr. Dean that on occasion—"what shall I do?"

"That's what I've come to talk to you about, my dear. Naturally you will come to us. And perhaps, when the estate is settled, there will be more for you than we think there is."

"I wouldn't mind losing the money if father had lived," Virginia said. "And I don't mind so much for myself—but there's Niel."

"You fear it will make a difference to him?" he asked in surprise. Such an idea had not crossed his own mind, though he well

Virginia smiled wanly at his misinterpretation of her words. "Niel regretted that he was going to marry a girl with money," she explained hastily. "He would not have taken any of it for himself but it would have made it possible for him to devote himself to his work without worrying about supporting a wife."

"Ah, I see; you're quite right to think of him, Virginia. When a man knows he is neglecting to provide properly for the woman he loves he is sure to be distracted from his work. Especially if he knows that that very work is the cause of the neglect."

"I think Niel wants me to marry him right away. He hasn't said so yet, but I've seen he made up his mind to do it when he heard Gerald say I must give up this—"

"That would be disastrous," Dean snapped. "You must think of it, Virginia. You have said yourself that it would be detrimental to his career; besides, you cannot think of marrying so soon after—after—It wouldn't be respectful to your father's memory."

"I think father would wish it," Virginia said softly. "But I don't want to begin my life with Niel under a shadow."

"Then will you come to us?" "I must talk to Niel first, but please don't think I am not grateful to you and Clarissa. It would be so much harder to bear without you two, and Niel."

"Well, I hope you won't let him cloud your judgment. I'm sure you don't realize what a change has come to you, Virginia. Poverty's a rather terrible thing to one brought up as you have been. It will require some time for you to adjust yourself to it. Much better that you should do it alone and not as a hindrance to a young man who is still at the feet of the ladder."

"I know you are right," Virginia agreed miserably.

"Of course I am, but you must not expect a young man in love to agree with me. Be careful, my dear, that he doesn't confuse you and make you forget to think of consequences."

"I'll try to make him understand," Virginia promised.

Very soon afterwards Mr. Dean planted a fatherly kiss upon her forehead and left her. In the lobby of the building he met Nathaniel and the two men exchanged brief, unsmiling nods.

Virginia had gone into her dressing room to bathe her eyes in cold water when the maid opened the door to Nathaniel. He had a few moments of fretful waiting before she came in.

"Sweetheart," he cried, and Virginia thought he acted as if he had not seen her for weeks. "I was a fool to get out," he chided himself openly. "What did Dean have to say to you?"

"He has offered me a home," Virginia said, limp in his arms. Nathaniel sometimes forgot his strength when he held her.

"The nerve! What does he think I am? I hope you told him you're going to marry me without delay."

Virginia smiled up at him, but the smile chilled Nathaniel's hope. He could see it was meant to soften the refusal that was to follow.

"Let me get my breath," she pleaded, and Nathaniel released her.

"Now tell me what you said to him," he urged.

"I promised to talk it over with you."

want you living here alone. I'll get a little place of our own; 'frail you wouldn't care to live in the studio. What do you say, dear?"

"I can't say anything but no, Niel. Please try to understand; I'm too unhappy to think of getting married. It wouldn't be fair to you either."

"But I want to look after you," Nathaniel protested pleadingly. "You said you told Mr. Dean you would talk it over with me, but it seems you had your mind already made up."

He paused as if a significant thought came to him. "Or else you don't believe in me," he rushed on. "I've failed you in some way."

"Oh, no," Virginia cried and put a hand to his lips. "I love you more dearly than anything in the world. . . . Niel, but I must be wise for both of us. I'm sure you haven't thought this out as I have. No one but you, dear, would fail to realize what a burden I would be to you if we were to marry immediately."

"No, I haven't thought far enough to reach such a crazy conclusion as that," Niel told her, "but my thinking doesn't have to be very profound to convince me that you've had help in making your wise decision." He spoke bitterly and Virginia stared at him in astonishment.

"Dean's been advising you," he accused shortly.

AN ORDINANCE

An ordinance providing traffic rules and regulations for the operation of vehicles within the corporate limits: Requiring the police force to be uniformed and to enforce such rules; requiring the public to comply with the directions given by the members of the police force; prescribing what vehicles have the right of way; prohibiting the use of sirens; prescribing a speed limit; forbidding the reckless operation of motor vehicles; forbidding the operation of motor vehicles with defective brakes and steering gears; providing for the erection of stop signals; prohibiting the malicious driving over of said signals; requiring all traffic to come to a full stop at said signals; fixing an age limit for drivers of vehicles prohibiting double parking; prohibiting parking in reserved and restricted space; prohibiting the driving over fire hose; prohibiting the driving through blocked or closed street; prohibiting parking near fire plugs; prohibiting the parking of a car with motor left running; prohibiting the obstruction of side walks; defining the manner of parking; prohibiting the holding on to moving vehicles; providing that this ordinance shall be cumulative with all other traffic ordinances except where in direct conflict with the provisions hereof, and providing that in the event of such conflict, that all prior conflicting sections or portions of ordinances shall be and are hereby repealed in so far as such conflict exists; and providing a penalty for violation hereof; and providing that the holding of any portion hereof to be invalid shall not affect the validity of any other portion or provisions; and creating an emergency.

WHEREAS, the constant increase of vehicular and pedestrian traffic in the City of Eastland has made traffic conditions so congested that it has become imperative as a police regulation to protect the life, safety and convenience of its citizens to enact rules and regulations for the operation of vehicles within the corporate limits, according to the terms and provisions of the following ordinances:

Now, therefore, be it ordained by the City Commission of Eastland, Texas:

Section I. Definitions—Unless it appears from the context that a different meaning is intended, the following words shall have the meaning attached and applied to them by this section:

(a) The term "curb" shall mean the edge of a roadway or street, marked, designated or otherwise commonly understood to be such.

(b) The term "vehicle" shall mean and include any automobile, truck, wagon, cart, buggy or conveyance of any kind or character, motorcycle or motor vehicle, and shall also include a horse.

(c) The term "to park" as herein used, means to stop, stand, remain or occupy a certain position on any portion of the street designated.

Section II. Each member of the City police force shall be furnished with a distinctive uniform and a traffic whistle, said uniform to be worn while on duty, and each member of said police force shall at all times be charged with the duty of enforcing these regulations while on duty.

Section III. Drivers of all vehicles at all times must comply with any directions by voice or hand of any member of the police force as to stopping, starting, approaching or departing from any place, the manner of taking up or setting down passengers, the loading or unloading of goods in any place, and the failure to comply with any of such directions upon the part of any driver of any vehicle shall be a violation of this ordinance.

Section IV. Police, fire department, emergency repair vehicles of the public service companies, United States mail vehicles and ambulances shall have the right-of-way on any street and through any procession when in the regular course of their proper duty.

South Texas Turns Out For Col. Owsley

DALLAS, June 6.—Alvin M. Owsley, candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator Earle B. Mayfield, rested in Dallas Tuesday in his campaign. For three weeks he had been in Central and West Texas and in the Rio Grande Valley, meeting the people face to face, learning at first hand their problems and talking over with them the remedies that may be obtained by proper representation in the Senate at Washington. "In the Rio Grande Valley," he said, "I found onion growers suffering from the effects of our tariff schedules which allow Egyptian onions to be shipped into American ports, there to compete in prices with the product of Texas growers. This influx of foreign commodities, produced with cheap labor, has caused prices in the larger markets to sag below the profit line. I shall make it my purpose to have the tariff schedule amended to place a tariff on foreign onions and other commodities that will keep them out of competition in America with American commodities. That is one of the things for which I am making this campaign and I found the people of Texas intensely interested in my discussions of tariff revision along these lines. It means dollars and cents to them. "Webb county Democrats in their recent convention endorsed me for the United States Senate, and I went to Laredo to thank them for this action." Owsley said. "I found the citizens interested in my platform and candidacy in Hebronville, McAllen, Mission, Mercedes and Brownsville. At Rio Grande City in Starr County, I spoke to the largest crowd ever assembled there and I was the first candidate for the

"Kid" Leon, Clever Wrestler, Signs To Grapple Stracener

Kid Leon Dallas, grappler, has been sending in challenges to tackle Tom Stracener, for quite a while, and Promoter L. L. (Ted) Hinton, has decided to give Leon the chance at Stracener next Tuesday night at the Silks Club. Leon is a fast, rough grappler, with five years experience on the mat. He has 53 consecutive wins to his credit and is rated as one of the corners in the division. Leon weighs 160 pounds, is a blonde, and is the rough, brawny type of wrestler that sets the fans standing in their seats yelling with excitement and going home buzzing for the rest of the season. To get such a grappler as Leon on a card is quite an accomplishment to any promoter, because of the remarkable records that Leon has been making for the last year. Leon has gone up against some of the toughest and most capable middleweights in the game, and has always brought in a victory. The Dallas grappler has heard of Stracener for quite a while and says that he has been anxious to meet him and see which of them is the best. A match between these two stars, should be one of the fastest and most exciting bouts ever witnessed in Eastland. The match will be for the best two out of three falls to a finish. Leon never to speak in Starr county. They gave me rousing receptions in Harlingen, Gonzales and Schulenberg. We had an old fashioned Democratic rally at La Grange where the district judge introduced me as their candidate for the senate."

Corinth News

CORINTH, June 7.—Our farmers are rejoicing over the wonderful outpour of rain we received Sunday night and are waiting anxiously to get back to plowing the little field stuff that is growing so nicely. The Sunday School at this place is doing wonderfully well, having had to order more literature to supply the needs. You that do not attend are missing something good. So we urge you to come. The church will meet on the third Sunday, the 17th of the month, in special conference session for the purpose of calling a pastor. Every member of the church is requested to be present. Miss Delza White of Abilene was a welcome visitor of Miss Katie Hart Sunday. There will be an ice cream supper at Bedford school Saturday night, June 9. The proceeds are for church purposes at Bedford. Candidates of all kinds and descriptions are especially invited. There will be a crowd present and that will be a time for all to speak. Mrs. Johan Evans will entertain her Sunday School class with a party at her home Friday night. All class members are urged to be present and visitors are invited. Mangum News

Special to the Telegram. MANGUM, June 7.—We had a big rain Sunday night which was greatly needed among the farmers. Miss Verlie Slaughter of Eastland visited Miss Lela Garrett Sunday. Bro. B. T. Wooley and family took dinner with Mrs. Sam Matthews Sunday. Burl Turner, who has been going to college at Lubbock, has returned home. There were only seven of the Mangum 4-H Club members who attended the encampment Friday and Saturday. These were Frank and Blanch Payne, Delbert Hagar, Tina Mae Wooley, Prentice, Verna Belle and Bertha Dunn. All reported a fine time. Miss Tina Mae Wooley spent Saturday night with Miss Verna Belle Dunn. SUNDOWN—Cotton gin will be constructed here.

G'DONNELL IS IN DIRE NEED OF DENTIST AND LAUNDRY

O'DONNELL.—When any of O'Donnell's 2,000 citizens have aching teeth or find their last shirts and blouses soiled, there is none to whom these troubles may be carried. The rapidly growing town is in dire need of a modern steam laundry and a dentist, as it is at present without either of these. O'Donnell is one of the fastest growing little cities on the South Plains, having just recently acquired natural gas as fuel, and having underway a project for a new and modern water supply system. The town holds high affiliation with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and has called upon that organization to assist in securing its needed enterprises.

(Continued from page 1) the young people. The truth of the matter is that you of the younger generation are not very different from us of the older generation. You are probably not much worse than and certainly not much smarter than your elders.

Know It To Be True. In your more thoughtful moments you know this to be true. You know that the progress to be made by your generation is to be made possible by what previous generations have bequeathed to you. You know that the ancient virtues are still virtues. You have no expectation of desire to make ingratitude less hideous or holiness less beautiful, lying less base and faithfulness less noble. You know that a burglar cannot be successful nor a good life be a failure. Therefore, I feel that the future of our nation, of our state, of our university is fairly safe, in your hands. You will in part succeed and make life better and in part fail, leaving some good work to be done by your successors. In short you will carry on and produce your share of splendid Texas Exes; of this there is no doubt. Out of the class of 1928 will come some brilliant successes and some dismal failures and a large group of in-betweeners.

"What is your duty as Texas Exes following this, your so-called commencement?" "Remember that to fail in duty is to be in some sort a thief. MRS. JOHN F. SIPPEL ELECTED PRESIDENT OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

Faith in Girls "Cigaret smoking and the cocktail drinking that we hear and read so much about is only one phase of the modern boy or girl's life," Mrs. Poole said. "Some smoke and some do not; but I have found that in nine cases out of ten the so-called 'flapper'—I don't like that name—makes an excellent wife and a conscientious mother. Youth has always demanded its freedom. But I sincerely believe that when both sides of the case have been presented to the modern young man or woman, they can be trusted to think straight."

In Massachusetts especially, Mrs. Poole said, she has noticed with surprise the grasp of club, social and civic work shown by girls whose ages range from 11 years to 24. Youth should be given a free rein when it wants to do big, serious things, Mrs. Poole declared, and though mistakes may be made the material of the future world is being shaped and patterned on a safe and trustworthy mould.

Mrs. C. F. Smith of Amarillo, contralto soloist, had a prominent part in the Oklahoma and Texas fine arts recitals at several afternoon sessions and evening dinners. Mrs. Smith is well known here, having resided several years in Eastland.

ly selfish. In other words, civilization, our nation, our state, our university exist today not because some men in the past merely did their plain duty but because some men delighted to do more than plain duty. These men, when of great power, are the real heroes both of peace and war. This institution itself, in the words of Governor Oran M. Roberts, one of its principal founders, 'is not due to any one man nor even to any one hundred men. It is due to a great number of citizens who, during a period of more than forty years, contributed their efforts for it—each one at the time acting according to the opportunity afforded him.

Service Above Self. "If men worked only for pay and self, there would not now be a University of Texas. It required a Roberts, an Ashbel Smith, a Thomas D. Wooten, a William L. Prather, and to mention one living man, a T. W. Gregory, to put Texas University on the map.

"Therefore, without undue neglect of your personal interests, it is your plain duty to do some work in the public interest. As a personal beneficiary of such work done in the past, you fail to pay a most just debt to become a public-spirited citizen.

"This University is a part of the state and when you serve the state faithfully, you also serve the University faithfully. Hence, your first duty is to be a good citizen. This means (a) to be personally honest and generous and clean, kind and reverent and truth-loving, (b) to be vocationally efficient and industrious and zealous, (c) to be patriotically active and intelligent in making better your neighborhood and state and nation. In each of these ways you can repay your debt to your country. If you become good citizens, you will not fail to become good Texas Exes. The University is an essential agent in the upbuilding of a greater Texas. It is really that agency of the State by which the State attempts to change itself into something better. To a large extent, the lower schools are preservers of the good already found. The University ought both to preserve the old good and to discover new.
