Strawn Gas Taking Hearing Set For June 28

POOL IS SAID TO INCLUDE ALL GAS WELLS

Claim Companies Are Draining Gas From Property of Others.

AUSTIN, June 12.—Complaints of discrimination in taking gas from producers in the Strawn gas field in Palo Pinto county, was filed with the state railroad commission here today by W. E. Hawkins of Breckenridge, representing 15 producers in the field.

The complaints say that the field supplies gas from a common pool and that the Lone Star Gas company and Texas Pacific Oil company, by taking gas only from certain wells, are draining the supply that should go to others.

Baptists Have Two Interesting Services Sunday

Two interesting services were held at the Eastland Baptist church Sunday. The number in attendance at Sunday school was 254. Appealing messages were delivered by Pastor O. B. Darby at both the morning and evening services.

LEAVES FOR KERRVILLE

Mrs. Phillip G. Russell left this morning for the sanitarium in Kerrville, where she will spend a greater part of the summer recuperating from a severe and serious illness of several months duration.

Good Will Trip Tonight Depends On the Weather

Whether the Eastland delegation of good-will trippers will go to Okra for a program tonight as heretofore planned will depend entirely on the weather, those in charge stated this morning.

THREE GUESSES

BARROWS ARE SOUGHT NEAR WELLINGTON

AMARILLO, Texas, June 12.—Belief that Clyde and Ivy Barrow, widely sought Dallas bad men, still were in the Texas Panhandle after their appearance near Wellington, was expressed by officers today.

Armed officials patrolled highways leading to Amarillo with a view to capturing the outlaws.

WELLINGTON, Texas, June 12. Texas Panhandle and Southern Oklahoma officers today sought the two men believed to be the notorious Clyde and Ivy Barrow who put in an appearance near here and captured the Wellington town marshal and the Collinsworth county sheriff and later released them.

The kidnaped officers, Sheriff George Corry and Marshal Paul Hardy, identified their abductors as the West Dallas bad men sought for murder and robbery in Texas, Missouri and Oklahoma, and told of a harrowing ride with them during which a confederate joined the party near Erick, Okla.

When Corry and Hardy arrived at the Pritchard home they were captured by the outlaws, handcuffed and forced into Corry's car and all drove away.

Three hours later the officers were put out of the car at Erick. A hastily formed posse lost the outlaws' trail on the highway to Pampa, Texas.

Dry Weather Has Cut Grain Yield

AUSTIN, June 12.—Dry weather and dust storms in Texas have combined to reduce crops of oats and winter wheat below last year's production, the U. S. Department of Agriculture reported today.

Prices of agricultural products have increased, however. During the month of May the farm price index advanced from 53 to 62 per cent of its pre-war level.

The country's chief product is wheat. Another product playing an important part in exports is oil; production has been rising constantly in recent years from 4,800,000 tons in 1929 to 7,350,000 tons in 1932, and exports showed a similar increase from 2,800,000 to 5,160,000 tons, respectively.

The slump in wheat prices upset economic life. Its effects were the more devastating as the country could not defend itself by keeping domestic prices artificially above world market level.

Oil declined in price, last year's price being only about 40 per cent of that in 1928.

While Rumania's export articles were thus depreciated, the finished goods imported by the country cheapened to a much lesser extent. Thus, the average price of goods imported in 1929 was 86.8 per cent of those imported in 1928. This disproportion upset the equilibrium of Rumania's foreign trade and precipitated a critical currency situation.

MISSOURI PACIFIC FILES FINANCIAL STATEMENT ST. LOUIS, Mo.—A statement of the financial condition of the Missouri Pacific Railroad company on March 31, when it filed its petition for reorganization under the new bankruptcy law, has been filed. Current liabilities, it shows, exceeded current assets by $90,481,214. The report listed liabilities at $39,636,249 and assets at $19,155,035.

"Brightest Boy" Is College Graduate

"America's Brightest Boy" of four years ago—Wilber B. Huston, of Seattle, Wash.—has become a college graduate with new scholastic honors to his credit. Below you see him as the 16-year-old high school boy who won an Edison scholarship and the "brightest boy" distinction in 1928, and above, in cap and gown, as he was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at Boston with the degree of Bachelor of Science. Huston has been a high ranking student through his course.

WORLD PARLEY IS OPENED AT LONDON TODAY

LONDON, June 12.—The nations of the earth were invited by King George V today to bury their economic hatred and get together for a common effort to restore prosperity.

The bearded monarch, ruler of one-fourth of the world's population, officially opened the world economic conference, a gathering of statesmen from 66 nations, convened to debate the economic crisis.

The entire assemblage of 800 persons in the London geological museum, listened in silence as the king gave them a cordial welcome, wishing them God speed in their efforts.

The United States is prepared to consider any method to reduce tariff barriers, secretary of State Cordell Hull, head of the American delegation, said today in his final pre-conference meeting with the press.

Financial experts of France, Great Britain and the United States at a meeting tomorrow will consider a creation of an equalization fund for the temporary stabilization of the dollar and the pound, sterling.

Plans for the economical salvation of the world that will be offered at the London conference, were almost as numerous as delegates. In brief, the major nations wish:

The United States: settlement of war debts. Stabilization of currency. Reduction of trade barriers. Increase in commodity prices.

France and Italy: Universal return to the gold standard. Settlement of war debts.

Germany: Reduction of debt charges. Japan: Outlawing of the economic boycott.

LEADERS HOPE CONGRESS MAY ADJOURN SOON

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The administration today won a test vote on an early adjournment of congress when senate democrats shouted down a motion by Senator Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, to discharge the judiciary committee from further consideration of a bill to relieve bankrupt cities.

A drive to enforce this measure opened today in the senate as administration leaders struggled to obtain enactment of President Roosevelt remaining three emergency bills and immediate adjournment.

At the same time house majority leader Byrns predicted the bill supplying funds for the $3,300,000,000 public works program and the veterans economy compromise.

The three major bills awaiting senate action are the industrial control measure, an appropriation bill and a bill to increase the number of public works projects.

Martha Dorcas Class Had Good Attendance

The Martha Dorcas class of the Methodist Sunday school had a splendid program Sunday. Rev. Sam G. Thompson visited the class and urged the members to attend the evening church services.

The class is engaged in a campaign to increase attendance at the regular church services.

Next Sunday is Father's Day and this class is arranging a special program for that occasion when the members of the Men's 9-49 Bible class will be their guests in the main auditorium of the church.

All members of the class are urged to be present and if possible bring someone with them.

Mrs. W. R. Carlisle of Farmersville, formerly of Eastland, and who taught the Martha Dorcas class 11 years ago, visited the class Sunday and was given a warm welcome.

Mrs. W. B. Collier, who recently returned from Austin where she has been for some months, was also welcomed back.

Mrs. Charles C. Robey gave an inspirational talk on "The Power of the Resurrection."

Visitors to the class included Mrs. Weldon Stansell of East Texas, and Mrs. J. L. Nichols of Texas.

Those present were J. Atchley, O. D. Stover, W. E. Coleman, E. T. Cox Jr., Clyde McBee, P. R. Cook, L. A. Cook, Robert Sanford, G. W. White, Ed Graham, Fred D. Hale, M. C. Richest Heiress Shops for Trousseau

A wedding gown and a hundred costumes from Paris' most famous couturiers were on the shopping list of Miss Barbara Hutton (left), "America's richest heiress," when this picture caught her hurrying on her buying excursion in Paris with a friend. Heiress to the Woolworth millions, Miss Hutton will wed Prince Alexis Mdivani in Paris June 20.

The case was banked deep with beautiful floral offerings, silent testimonials of the last efforts friends could make in expressing their sympathy for the bereaved widow.

These beautiful emblems were sent to the hospitals, to the churches and to the Mexican, after the funeral, at the expressed desire of Mrs. Blatt.

Pallbearers were those the closest to him in his Eastland life, with whom he had golfed and spent many a pleasant evening: L. V. Wither now of Fort Worth, John M. Mouser, J. B. Leonard, William L. Gupton, now of Fort Worth, Walter L. Clark, Lonnie King now of Thurber, Bryan Brelsford and J. M. Armstrong.

The brief address was made by Judge J. E. Hickman and the 9:49 Men's quartet, sang, "Have Thine Own Way, Lord," and "Prayer Perfect." Personnel, Elbert R. Trimble, A. E. Herring, B. M. Collier, and John M. Knox.

A wonderful voice solo, without accompaniment, by Mrs. Imogene Ferrell Pierce of Cisco, who offered the tender hymn, from the Christian Science hymnal, "O Dreamer, Leave Thy Dream, For Joyful Waking," was very beautiful.

Mrs. Blatt and her sister, Mrs. Guy of Denver, Colo., were accompanied to the depot, following the funeral services and the great number of friends who assembled on the platform, stood with bared heads as the casket was gently placed on the train, en route to Spearfish, S. D., where interment will be held Tuesday afternoon.

Those present from a distance for the funeral included the Gupton and Witcher families of Fort Worth; Mr. and Mrs. John M. Knox Jr., of Woodson; Miss Frances Hefley of Dallas, and Clifford Wilson.

Mrs. Guy Gay of Denver, the sister of Mrs. Blatt, arrived by plane in time for the services, and then remained with her sister for their sad destination.

Frank Bida Is Again On Trial

Both the state and defense announced ready in the case of the State of Texas vs. Frank Bida when it was called for trial in the 88th district court this morning.

Because of the failure of three or four juriesmen who had been summoned to appear, there was some delay in the procedure until the sheriff's department could pick up men to fill the panel. The selection of a jury was still under way at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Bida is under indictment for arson, having been charged with the burning of the building at the corner of South Mulberry and West Commerce streets in Eastland in which he was operating a filling station and general automobile repair business. The building burned in March of last year and at the same time a residence on South Seaman street was burning.

WATER SHIPMENTS GROW

ASTORIA, Ore.—Shipments by water out of the port of Astoria were 46 per cent higher in March, 1933, than for the same month last year.

YOUTH ADMITS TO KILLING OF HIS MOTHER

FLINT, Mich., June 12.—Balfe MacDonald, a 17-year-old high school student, whose mother was found dead in her home here more than two weeks ago, confessed to the slaying of his widowed parent today, Flint police said.

The youth was apprehended last week in Nashville, Tenn., where he had fled with a companion.

Police Inspector Twohey said Balfe implicated himself alone. He asserted Balfe said he and his mother had quarreled over vacation plans. As she lay in bed, according to Twohey, Balfe struck her on the head with a pair of heavy book ends.

Taking $45 from her purse, the boy fled to the basement, where his companion awaited him. Together they left the city in Balfe's machine, a recent gift of his mother.

Important telegrams often are delayed 20 to 30 hours. Officials believe he has taken off because nearly 36 hours had elapsed since he landed in Khabarovsk.

MATTER MAY BE ON WAY TO NOME TODAY

MOSCOW, June 12.—Jimmy Mattern, American aviator, was believed to have hopped off today from Khabarovsk, Siberia, on his long flight to Nome, Alaska.

No news from the flier came in on the single telegraph line connecting the capital and the remote eastern Siberian town.

Important telegrams often are delayed 20 to 30 hours. Officials believe he has taken off because nearly 36 hours had elapsed since he landed in Khabarovsk.

Veterans May Now Enroll For Work

On June 12 the veterans' administration at Dallas will begin to select 655 men for enrollment in the emergency conservation corps. This work, insofar as the veterans' administration is concerned, is to be completed on or before June 22. Ninety-three per cent of the 655 selected will be World War veterans. The remaining 7 per cent will be veterans of other wars.

The 655 men will be selected from 150 counties which includes all the counties assigned to the Dallas regional office and those 26 counties composing the Panhandle, which are for other veterans' administration purposes under the jurisdiction of the Oklahoma City office.

The number of applicants selected from each of the counties will be based on the 1930 census. In other words, a county with a population of 10,000 will be in position to secure enrollment for two veterans' administration purposes under the jurisdiction of the Oklahoma City office.

Mrs. Montgomery sang the offertory solo, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Saying," with Mrs. D. L. Kinnaird as piano accompanist.

The soloist was heard to fine advantage in the church; her singing brings a direct appeal and the sympathetic quality of her tones is a marked feature of her work.

RANGER MAN IS KIDNAPPED AND ROBBED

RANGER, Texas, June 12.—Lloyd Bailey, employe of Swaney's Pharmacy of Ranger, was kidnaped and robbed Saturday night as he was going home from work.

Bailey, who works the late shift, had closed up the store and had gone home for the night. As he drove up to his home in Cooper addition two men jumped on the running board of the car. One drew a gun and held it on Bailey and the two forced him to drive out the Desdemona road about three miles.

When they got out of town the two men forced Bailey to get out of his car, robbed him of several dollars he had in his pocket, tied him to a fence post and drove off in his car.

After some time the robbery victim managed to work loose from his bonds and returned to Ranger, where the kidnaping and robbery was reported.

No trace of the robbers or the stolen car had been discovered Monday morning.

Last Rites For Fred Blatt Said Sunday Morning

The Eastland Methodist church auditorium was filled at 9 o'clock Sunday morning by friends of the late Fred W. Blatt, for whom the last services were spoken by the president of the laymen's class of which he was a valuable member, the 9:49 Bible class.

The case was banked deep with beautiful floral offerings, silent testimonials of the last efforts friends could make in expressing their sympathy for the bereaved widow.

These beautiful emblems were sent to the hospitals, to the churches and to the Mexican, after the funeral, at the expressed desire of Mrs. Blatt.

Pallbearers were those the closest to him in his Eastland life, with whom he had golfed and spent many a pleasant evening: L. V. Wither now of Fort Worth, John M. Mouser, J. B. Leonard, William L. FAMOUS TEXAS EDITOR PASSES ON Death claimed James H. Lowry at his home in Honey Grove. For more than 50 years he had been identified with the "fourth estate." For more than 40 years he had been the editor and publisher of The Honey Grove Signal, one of the best edited and best illuminated of all the country weeklies that have flourished in Texas since the close of the war between the states.

Away back in World War days he offered as a candidate for congressman-at-large. He received a very large vote but Dan Garrett and Cyclone Davis were the winners of the two plums in that memorable contest.

BARGAIN BRIDIE

by KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

Barrett Colvin, bronzed by a hundred miles of sand, sat in a window of the Fifth Avenue. It was a bit earlier than mid-afternoon but the yellow glow that is a glare by night. The skies were sullenly low and there was a drizzle in the chilly air. The English, Barrett reflected, would call it "a dirty day." To the average New Yorker it was "rotten weather." Those folks upon whom he had recently turned his broad back would call it "the will of Allah." Well, the faith of the East was the most comfortable but Barrett didn't share it.

He moved uneasily and lit a cigarette. It was always unsatisfactory to come back. Memories that seared his mind would leap from embers. A corner of an uptown street or old building would brush away 10 years to make him see Marcia, his tempestuous little sister, the daughter of his father's second wife, Marcia, violent in her trap, Marcia, crying, "Barry, you must help me; I've no one else!" He had intended to help her, but with the passing of years he had been less and less certain about what he had done by putting himself between her and the storm. He had made it easy, without meaning to, for her to evade her responsibility and to live a lie.

And now Marcia was married. She had written Barrett, "Of course Dick doesn't know." And there, from her evasion, was another problem and one of the oldest ones—a problem discussed often in "Advice to the Lovelorn" columns in answers to letters usually beginning, "Shall I tell the man I am going to marry, etc." Almost always the description of the unfortunate affair ended with a wistful, "I was so young."

Barrett Colvin tossed his half-smoked cigarette from the lowered taxicab window to lean back, already wearied of civilization which is not always so ordered as it seems. He hoped Dick Radnor reserved the devotion he had won from Marcia. The facts might so easily come out some time, Barrett reflected, and unless Dick was the man Marcia thought him to be there would be the devil to pay. He must go up to see the boy, Marcia's boy, Barrett decided, as soon as he could manage to get away from town. Marcia did not care for him as she should and it wasn't fair to the youngster. He must have grown a good deal, Barrett reflected. It was four years—a broad four years—since he had seen the child whom Marcia had implored him to "adopt" and whom he had adopted.

Barrett Colvin felt a little tingle when the taxicab turned into a seclude old street where brown-stone-fronted houses told of other times and other manners. This was getting home. No matter how far one wandered or how insistent the call of distant countries, for every man some one house or some one woman meant "home."

The door was opened as the taxicab came to a sudden halt. Higgins, the butler, appeared, obviously excited to have "Mr. Barrett" home again. The chauffeur swung several scarred, bulging bags from the car to the walk. Higgins' eyes were fixed upon his master, his voice almost tremulous.

ELINOR STAFFORD

In a window across the street Barrett saw the imperious head of Miss Ella Sexton, saw her nod stiffly and wave a handkerchief so black-bordered as to suggest a death of yesterday.

Barrett, after bowing deeply, went up the brown-stone steps of his home. So little was changed. The glimpse of Miss Ella, the characteristic tilt of her aristocratic nose, told him that she still ruled sternly and coldly over all those who waited her death.

At the door, which Higgins held open, Barrett turned again and as he did so saw a girl hurrying up the steps of Miss Ella's house. A pretty picture she made with her young grace and energy.

"One of the Thropes?" he asked Higgins.

"No, Mr. Barrett. That is Miss Elinor Stafford. She's grown a deal these four years, sir."

Barrett nodded. His smile widened. He remembered Elinor Stafford dimly as a gawky youngster with a brace on her teeth, a youngster with an especial talent for stumbling. He had met her at Miss Ella's house—the golden shrine for all those relatives who felt they should be remembered in the Sexton will.

The hall and Higgins shutting the world away with a closed door. How good it was to be home! The same dimmed, lovely tapestry. The same ancient hat rack that Barrett kept because, looking at it, he could sometimes fancy he saw his father's hat on the black marble surface, his mother's small gloves and card case.

"It's good to be here again, Higgins." "And it's good to have you, sir!"

Barrett saw that Higgins' eyes held tears and he laid a strof hand on the old man's arm. With a gentleness that, combined with his strength, beckoned too many weak mortals his way, Barrett asked, "I hope you've been well, Higgins?"

"Yes, Mr. Barrett. Now and again a bit lonely—not that I mean to complain, sir! I think you'll find everything as you want it, Mr. Barrett."

"I'm certain everything's in fine shape." "The harbor was foggy, I presume, sir?" Higgins asked as he took Barrett's coat, weighted by the wet in the day's air.

"Pretty thick—" "Quite four hours late, you are, sir; I've been watching by the window."

"Lucky to get in at all." "I presume so. You've lunched, sir?"

"Yes; thought I'd better. By the way, are there any letters?" "A number, sir. On your desk—"

A FEW minutes later when Barrett was poking through his mail—frankly and naively surprised at its bulk—Marcia came hurrying in. "Darling!" she called from the doorway of the big, dark room. He turned, rose and she was in his arms, crying, laughing, clinging to him.

"The same huge thing," she exclaimed breathlessly, standing away, "and so famous, dear! You don't know what you're in for! I haven't been to a dinner this winter that someone hasn't said, 'So Barrett Colvin is your brother? How remarkable! I don't suppose I do look as though I could possibly be related to anyone so brainy. Oh, it is good to see you, dear!" She pressed close again and for a moment hid her face against the top button of his waistcoat. Then she drew away and raised her face to let him see her smile and her misted eyes.

"I'm so frightfully happy," she admitted. "Dick's such a perfect husband! And to think you haven't even met him! Darling—may I have a cocktail?"

Barrett rang for Higgins, at the same time studying Marcia. She had grown lean, hungry-looking, nervous. He hadn't remembered those sudden, angular mannerisms.

"You're pretty stringy, Marcia," he said perplexedly.

"Darling, everyone! You'll notice it. May I have a cigarette? Thank you so much. I've been tearing all day. Always so much to do—"

She dropped to a chair as Higgins appeared at the doorway. "Good afternoon, Higgins. Will you bring me a Manhattan?"

Higgins murmured greeting, bowed and departed. Marcia sat forward on her chair.

"I want to talk to you about a lot of things, Barrett. Are you too frightfully tired?"

"Not at all," he answered and tried valiantly to stifle the conviction that she would have gone on, no matter what his answer.

"Well, in the first place," she began, and then paused. She drew a deep, unsteady breath, sat forward and continued, "I've been—uncomfortable lately about—what happened before you went away. It's bothered me more than ever before. More even than when I realized—"

Again she paused. Barrett's eyes grew sympathetic. He knew what it must cost her to say all this.

Marcia went on again. "When I realized," she repeated, moistening her full, scarlet-tinted lips, "about—Lon Moore—what a fool I'd been—everything!"

BARRETT glanced at the hand holding her cigarette, noticed how it shook and glanced quickly away.

"Poor child!" he thought. "Poor child!" The pain of others always aroused in him a blend of fierceness, tenderness and strength. Marcia drew another deep breath before going on with her story. "Dick's extremely conservative. All his life his father went to his office at exactly nine each morning and left at the stroke of four. He never varied. And Dick's mother still feels that no 'lady' appears on the streets before six in the evening with a bare throat. She wears those funny little boned net collars. Dick adores her and—oh, I know it all sounds terribly mixed up! I can't seem to tell the story but—"

"They're that way, all of them, about everything! Never getting away from the path of what they're supposed to do. I wish I could make you understand!"

"I think I follow better than you suppose," Barrett put in gently. "I hope so, Barrett, I'm so terribly alone!" It was Marcia's old cry, always voiced while someone else shouldered her burdens. "You see," she went on, "for a man, Dick has lived with such decency. He's absolutely certain I was completely innocent and inexperienced when we were married. Oh, Barrett, if he knew the truth he'd never get over it! Never! I'm afraid to risk it!—"

Stamford to Hold Annual Rodeo July 3, 4 and 5

STAMFORD, June 11.—A genuine western rodeo featuring actual cowboys from the ranches of Texas and adjoining states will be the central attraction around which is being arranged the program of entertainment for the Fourth Annual Texas Cowboy Reunion to be held in Stamford July 3, 4 and 5.

Rodeo performances will be held twice daily, at 2:30 p. m. and 8 p. m., in the natural amphitheater on the Reunion grounds. Grandstand seating capacity has been doubled this year to accommodate the crowds which have been increasing in number each year. Several downtown ticket booths will be operated this year to avoid delay and confusion at the grounds.

The rodeo program will include contests in bronc-busting, steer-riding, calf-roping and wild cow milking at each performance. Two special features will be the contest for the best "cutting horse" and the calf roping contest for cowboys over 55 years of age. A handsome saddle will be the prize for the champion roper among these veterans of theariat.

Special prizes also are offered for the champion ropers among the younger generation of cowboys. The ten ropers making the best average time in calf roping and wild cow milking during the three days of the rodeo will compete for these prizes in the closing performance on the night of July 5.

In addition to the special prizes, some $1450 in cash will be paid the winners in various events, the money being awarded at the close of each day's contests. Low admission prices will prevail, general admission being 50 cents plus tax and grandstand seat 25 cents additional.

Entry fees for rodeo contestants will be $4 a day for calf-roping, $3 a day for bronc-riding, $4 a day for wild-cow-milking, $5 for cutting-horse contest and $2.50 a day for steer-riding. There is no entrance fee for the old-time cowboys' calf-roping contest.

Day money in each of the roping events—calf-roping and cow-milking—is $130 for each day, divided into five prizes ranging from $50 for first prize to $10 for fifth prize. The purse each day in bronc riding is $100 and in steer-riding $75. The purse in the cutting-horse contest is $150 for one day only.

The reunion management has just published a folder containing the rodeo rules and detailed prize list. "Scandalous" John Selman, who was selected last year as the most typical cowboy under 55 years of age, is rodeo arena director.

Crooks Prove The Public Gullible And Take Billions

Barnum, Harry Joe Brown agrees, was right. Or maybe he underestimated the case.

For Brown, Hollywood director, looked up figures showing how much the American public contributes to crooked business men, out-and-out swindlers, smooth talkers, and other varieties of "confidence men," and gasped as he learned that it reaches from one to two billion dollars annually.

Brown got the figures from the National Better Business Bureau as he set under way the filming of "I Love That Man," story of a woman's devotion to a man she knew was a swindler. The picture comes to the Lyric theatre Monday. Edmund Lowe and Nancy Carroll are featured in the film.

As the "con man" in "I Love That Man," Lowe sweeps about the country pulling one gag after the other. He is accompanied by Nancy, who knows what he is, but loves him so much that she cannot give him up. They taste wealth and they taste poverty, but she sticks. Ultimately, quite by accident, Love stumbles into a legitimate business venture, and Nancy heaves a sigh of relief. But it is too soon, for a couple of thugs with whom he was formerly associated appear on the scene and force him to participate in a bank robbery. The picture reaches its climax in the action which follows.

AMBERGRIS IS FOUND ON BEACH
By United Press

Visiting Club Boys and Girls Given Free Show

County Agent J. C. Patterson and Miss Ruth Ramey, county home demonstration agent, expressed themselves this morning as being well pleased with the attendance at the club boys and girls annual encampment in Eastland Friday and Saturday.

They also expressed their appreciation for the splendid co-operation given them by the people of Eastland in entertaining the visiting club members. "We did not ask for many things this time, but what we did ask for was freely given," the county agent said.

John Burke, manager of the Lyric theatre, gave the visiting club boys and girls a free show while they were in the city. George Harper installed a radio at the City Park for their entertainment, and Ernest Jones, manager of the ice company, provided ice free for the encampment.

That Reminds Me

The event we're writing about ever Eastland does, and we have no kick coming, if it can't be helped. We'll drink it and like it.

Eastland trippers will journey to Oakley tonight. A fine program of music and other entertainment has been planned. It is hoped that the largest crowd ever will attend.

Take your wife, sweetheart and mother. It will do all of us good. Meet at the court house at seven to seven-thirty tonight as usual. These are wonderful events and it is what it takes to make people know each other and love each other, they're simply great.

"Never Give a Sucker a Break" is the title of a new movie. We haven't seen it yet, but we suppose the plot has something to do with Wall Street.
