PIONEER WEST TEXAN VISITS IN EASTLAND

J. M. Jones and wife of Lingleville were visitors in Eastland Saturday, spending most of the day in the city.

Mr. Jones is one of the real pioneers of this section. When a very young man he came to Rising Star and helped to survey the original townsite for that city. He first visited Eastland more than 50 years ago and recalls that the ground now occupied by the court- house and square was covered by a grove of post oak trees, with no sign of a town, when he first saw this country.

In 1876, when only a mere lad, Mr. Jones went up the trail with cattle owned by Maj. George Littlefield. "I recall," he said, "making a trip in 1876 with 5,000 Texas longhorns from Gonzales county to the Wyoming territory. We passed through Fort Worth, then a very small town, and camped under a big cottonwood tree on the banks of a creek a short distance from town while Major Littlefield, who never accompanied his herds on the trail, counted the cattle, many of which had been purchased along the route. I never go to Fort Worth that I don't find myself looking for that old cottonwood tree. I know of course that it has long since disappeared and our old camp site is now far inside the city limits of Fort Worth," he said.

Major Littlefield's men made five successful trips up the trail with cattle during the year of 1876, driving never less than 5,000 head, Mr. Jones said. "We made about 10 miles per day except at times when we would move a little faster in order to reach water by camping time. We had many stampedes and often had to ride with the herd all night in stormy weather or when the animals were thirsty, but we lost comparatively few cattle, Mr. Jones said.

Mr. Jones married Monrietta Jones, eldest daughter of Mason Jones, pioneer settler of Erath county. He and his wife began housekeeping in a small log cabin on 80 acres of uncleared land which they purchased near land owned by Mason Jones. They hauled supplies from Fort Worth and Waco, cleared a farm and reared a large family of children, all but one of whom is still living. Mr. Jones and his wife acquired large land holdings in Erath county. They now reside in the little town of Lingleville where they are still active in church and civic affairs of the town and county.

Mr. Jones is an uncle of Frank Jones, editor of the Eastland Telegram and Weekly Chronicle, and visited him while in Eastland Saturday.

JOHN FACTOR KIDNAPERS TO ASK $200,000

By United Press CHICAGO, July 1.—Belief grew today that the kidnapers of John (Jake the Barber) Factor, known variously on two continents as a multi-millionaire, as a stock broker and super-swindler, had contacted his attorney and demanded a ransom of upwards of $200,000 today.

While police fastened on the Touhy gang, most vigorous gunmen and racketeers of the post-Capone era, as the most likely perpetrators of today's pre-dawn abduction, Attorney Gilbert began an audit of Factor's valuable securities.

Since his son, who was kidnaped two months ago, was freed by kidnapers, police believed that there was no connection between the two abductions. Factor had been unusually wary following his son's abduction.

Capone gangsters, who aided in negotiations for the return of Factor's son, were conspicuously absent in today's procedure.

Complaint Filed In County Covers Big Territory

A complaint has been filed with Justice of the Peace Milton Newman, in Eastland which is far-reaching in its scope in that it involves one man as far away as Panama. The complaint was filed by Morris Bendix of Ranger and is against R. W. Tillery, now reported to be in jail at Borger, on a charge of forgery. The story of events leading up to the filing of the complaint was told to Criminal District Attorney Grady Owens.

Several days ago B. G. Womack of Panama was visiting his brother, T. P. Womack in Fort Worth. The home was entered and several traveler's checks, each $100 and issued by the Railway Express company, were taken from the possession of B. G. Womack.

The next event occurs at Ranger when a man, giving his name as R. W. Tillery, appears there, makes a purchase at the Globe, operated by Morris Bendix, and presents one of these traveler's checks in payment and requesting the difference in cash. Mr. Bendix questioned him about the check and received the explanation that it was issued to his uncle who is in the trucking business and had been troubled with hijackers; and therefore, had obtained the traveler's checks as a protection. He claimed the check had been given to him in settlement of some account.

Mr. Bendix hesitated to take the check and Tillery suggested that he would leave the check, which had been indorsed in Womack's name, and the merchandise at the store, stating that Mr. Bendix could get the check cashed at the bank and he would call for the money and the goods later. Mr. Bendix immediately called up the Express company and found that the check had been stolen. Tillery did not come back.

G. C. Bentnick, a special agent for the Railway Express company, made an investigation of the case and was in Eastland at the time the complaint was filed. It was his opinion that R. W. Tillery, reported to be in jail at Borger, is the man who left the check at Ranger.

Thousands Needed To Pick Cotton

By United Press FORT WORTH, July 1.—Several thousand Texas families will be given employment within the next 10 days picking cotton, C. W. Woodman, director of the United States employment service for this state, announced today.

The number will increase as the activities increase in this phase of work during the next two months, he said.

Woodman warned that families should not start for the cotton picking sections until they have conferred with the federal bureau here.

The bureau maintains field men throughout the cotton region and they know exactly where and how many pickers will be needed at a given time, Woodman said.

BUSINESS IS ON UPTURN REPORTS SHOW

By United Press WASHINGTON, July 1.—An unmistakable air of optimism was seen as the start of the second half of the year brought indications of business recovery in every section.

Hopes were high the country was on the road to lasting recovery. Industrial activity mounted to its best levels of the present movement. Officials looked to early operation of the industrial regulation program to give business a further and powerful impetus.

A year ago this month, federal reserve figure show, business activity touched its lowest level of the depression. After a slight recovery, business last March fell close to the depression low. Improvement has been rapid and activity is around the level of the fall of 1931.

PARTNERSHIP OF BANK FIRM IS REVEALED

By United Press WASHINGTON, July 1.—Secret details of the partnership agreement of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., obtained today by United Press, revealed that four partners in the famous international bank enjoy a 58 per cent slice of its profits. In the Kuhn, Loeb partnership no man wields such power as J. P. Morgan was shown to possess in the private bank which bears his name. Morgan takes a 25 per cent cut of Morgan & Co. profits. Felix Warburg's share of Kuhn, Loeb profits is 18 per cent, the greatest of any of the partners. Otto H. Kahn, who for four days has been a witness before the investigating committee, is allotted 14 per cent under the secret agreement which governs the firm.

Oil Operators At Cisco Meet Approve Code

CISCO, July 1.—Members of West Central Texas Oil and Gas association, meeting here Thursday, approved by unanimous vote the proposed code of fair competition drawn in a national meeting of oil industry representatives at Chicago. The code has been prepared for recommendation to the administrators of the federal industrial recovery act.

Individual approval of the members is being obtained through the medium of questionnaires. Three of the five operators who represented the association at the Chicago conference explained the code to the meeting. They were J. D. Sanderfer Jr., president; W. W. Wallace of Cisco, and C. W. Hoffman of Eastland. The meeting also empowered the association executive committee supplemented by the five delegates to the Chicago meeting, to act on behalf of the association upon any proposed changes in the code.

"As I see this," said Hoffman, "we can't lose and we stand a chance to gain." He asserted that Texas has been the source of trouble in the industry and blamed policies of the major companies for conditions arising in East Texas, asserting that in refusing pipe line connections they had forced many operators into the "hot" oil market.

"They had to sell their oil where they could at any price they could," he declared. "That situation encouraged the little refiners which pay prices under posted schedules. The situation got out of hands and something had to be done about it."

He answered argument that the plan amounts to price fixing by saying that "we don't have to get outside our own country to find examples of price-fixing. The utility companies have their prices fixed and they have been paying dividends all through the depression. They say," he continued, "that once we have federal control, we'll always have it. Personally I hope we do. I went to Chicago for one reason. That was to get a better price for oil."

"As I see it," said Sanderfer, "there is nothing in this code that will hurt this district. We are going to operate under the marginal well laws of Texas when the code is invoked. There are 8,000 wells in this district and the average is only three and a half barrels per day. If our allowable is reduced it won't hurt us more than a barrel a well."

J. A. Bearman, Cisco operator, made the motion that the association approve the code.

Early in the discussion Wallace told the group that he did not think the provisions of the code would operate to prevent development that is necessary in the interest of the industry and for the protection of properties.

Indicated Supply of Cotton Shows A Slight Drop

AUSTIN.—On June 1 the indicated supply of cotton in the United States was 10,537,000 bales, compared with 11,742,000 bales on May 1 and 10,900,000 bales on June 1 last year, according to Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. European port stocks and afloat to Europe are 1,657,000 bales or 320,000 bales more than last year. The results are that the balance of the supplies in the United States and in European port stocks and afloat to Europe are only 43,000 bales below last year.

"These figures usually represent the true position of the world's supply of American cotton, but at the present time they do not do so, for, according to Gar-side of the New York cotton exchange, the world's supply of American cotton is now about 743,000 bales less than on June 1 last year," Dr. Cox said.

"Based on the average supply-price relations for the last 7 years, this means a price advance of 140 points in the adjusted gold price over last year, or $9.40. When this price is further adjusted for the spinnings margin and the depreciated value of the dollar in terms of gold currencies, the price of middling 7-8 inch spot cotton at New Orleans should be between $7.80 and $8.20. The Bureau supply chart price indicates a price of $7.85 in terms of the depreciated dollar.

"Spinnings ratio margin declined from 169 in April to 162 for May. This decline was due entirely to advancing prices for the average pence margin was $3.69 in April and $3.77 in May. The ratio margin for May last year was 189 and the pence margin $4.01."

'DICE MURDER' IS ADMITTED BY PRISONER

Negro Tells Dallas Officers Where To Find Rings Taken From Body.

By United Press DALLAS, July 1.—A 25-year-old negro, arrested before dawn today in connection with the manhunt for the slayer of Patrolman Sam G. Lanford, 36, confessed to police he killed the officer and admitted the slaying last Dec. 1 of Mrs. H. K. Buchanan, pretty, 26-year-old film exchange official, whose mysterious death was recorded in police annals as the "dice slaying."

The negro, R. T. Bennett, sentenced to the state penitentiary for burglary in 1929, told detectives where they could find a revolver and two rings, owned by the dead woman.

The cache was found in a vacant apartment near the one occupied by Mrs. Buchanan.

A note reading "You don't love me any more" weighed down by two dice was left in the woman's apartment. Thus was the slaying catalogued "the dice slaying."

The negro said he was prowling around the building and found Mrs. Buchanan's door unlocked. When he entered, he said, he found her asleep in bed. He attacked her, tied a silk stocking around her neck, and choked her to death. Rings he took from the woman's finger and a revolver he carried were hidden in a vacant apartment.

The departure from Amsterdam will be delayed to permit funeral services, it was said. The next stage of the flight is 630 miles to Ireland, after which the trans-Atlantic flight, by way of Iceland and Greenland, will begin.

"SHOOT TO KILL" THE VOICE OF MISSOURI

Old Missouri needed to be shown. Old Missouri was shown. Now shoot to kill is the order given to the Missouri highway patrol. Machine guns are being placed in the hands of officers and will be used against the terrorists of the Southwest. Police authorities in Missouri and Kansas are purchasing these destructive weapons and arming their forces to meet the outlaws on an even footing. Col. Marvin Casteel is the superintendent of the Missouri highway patrol. He is a veteran of the World War. He is said to be as hard as chilled steel. In his order to the patrol he instructed his men "to disregard hostages of escaping criminals." In other words hostages will have to take their chances.

This is the command of the Missouri colonel: "I have issued orders to shoot to kill and disregard whoever might be riding with the escaping criminals as hostages. The hostages may be killed later anyway and it is better to make sure that we get the bandits."

There are hijackers and bank robbers everywhere in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas. They shoot to kill to make their getaway. They are as remorseless as the ancient Sioux warriors on the trail of a paleface. They are out for money. They murder if necessary to escape with the loot. They never show mercy. Why should mercy be shown by the agents of the law who are the protectors of life and property "of and for the social order."

"FIGHTING JIM" REED TAKES TO THE ROAD AGAIN

Fighting Jim Reed of Missouri is out of the hospital, physically fit and ready to take to the road again. Just before he met with a plane accident the last of the democratic Mohicans scathingly denounced the administration order against the hoarding of gold. He volunteered to defend any hoarder of gold who would defy the order and challenge the government "to do its damndest."

James A. Reed is one of the brilliant orators as well as one of the legal giants of the nation. He began as a prosecutor in the county of Jackson, Kansas City, Mo. There are times when "he is again everything." Is he a pacifist now, or is he preparing to let loose another ton of dynamite? As a news copy maker he is among the aces of the world.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

J. E. POWELL, editor and publisher of the Shanghai (China) Review, says:

"An American citizen is able to reside in Shanghai in apparent freedom and thumb his nose at the American authorities due to a curious legal system known as 'extraterritoriality.' This 16-letter word, according to the dictionary, means 'being outside a stated jurisdiction,' but applied to China it means that American citizens residing in China are not subject to the laws of China but to the laws of the United States as applied through the consular offices and the United States Court for China. The same situation applies to Britons, Frenchmen and a number of other foreign nationals who reside in the Chinese republic.

"This is true so long as the present treaties dealing with extraterritorial jurisdictions remain in effect. But there is a possibility these treaties may be revised in the not distant future because the Chinese for many years have agitated against their continuance, claiming they constitute an infringement of Chinese territorial sovereignty. The so-called extraterritorial treaties date back practically a century when American and European traders first visited the China coast. As a result of numerous squabbles over crimes committed by foreigners in the Chinese port cities, the Chinese and the foreigners finally reached a then mutually satisfactory compromise, which was to the general effect that the American consuls would take jurisdiction over their own nationals accused of crimes and the Chinese would follow a similar practice with respect to their people.

"The system worked satisfactorily so long as the foreign communities were small, but in recent years as the communities have grown and trade relationships have multiplied, the situation has become complicated. Also in recent years the Chinese have modernized their courts and this, in addition to the growth of nationalism, has caused the Chinese to resent the existence of the consular courts which are regarded as an infringement upon their sovereignty. Since the American treaty is scheduled to expire shortly, there is a possibility the whole system may be revised. One of the local Shanghai newspapers in recent comment on the situation declared, 'There is a certain amount of truth in the allegation that Shanghai forms a sanctuary for fugitives from justice from all parts of the world.'

"God" is the subject of the lesson—Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, July 2.

Among the citations comprising the Lesson—Sermon is the following from the Bible, I Chronicles 17: "O Lord, there is none like thee, neither is there any God besides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears."

The Lesson—Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, Love."

"Question—Are these terms synonymous? "Answer—They are. They refer to one absolute God. They are also intended to express the nature, essence, and wholeness of Deity. The attributes of God are justice, mercy, wisdom, goodness, and so on.

"Question—Is there more than one God or Principle? "Answer—There is not. Principle and its idea is one, and this one is God, omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent Being, and His reflection is man and the universe. Omni is adopted from the Latin adjective signifying ALL. Hence God combines all-power or potency, all-science or truth knowledge, all-presence." (p. 465.)

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — People who always insist that the surface facts are not the real facts and that there's a bug under every ship are now telling us that the astounding demand of the railroads for a 22 1/2 per cent reduction was only a bluff.

They just wanted to stall off a demand for wage increases at a time when the administration was out to raise them, according to that yarn.

As a matter of fact, the railroads were in dead earnest. They thought they could get away with it, regardless of the fact that it was in sharp conflict with the administration program. They knew this was their last chance to make a $255,000,000 labor saving. It would have added 12 1/2 per cent to the temporary 10 per cent cut already accepted by the railroad unions.

Roosevelt promptly gave Federal Coordinator Joseph B. Eastman the job of bringing the railroads into line. As soon as the carriers realized that Roosevelt was ready for even stronger intervention if necessary they gave up all hope and signed the agreement under which neither side will demand a wage change before next February.

The man who drafted and submitted the agreement was Donald R. Richberg of Chicago, attorney for the unions and authority on public utility rate regulation, who rapidly is becoming one of the most important men in the United States—now that organized labor is getting such big ininnings in Washington.

Working behind the scenes, Richberg drafted the original "Perkins amendments" to the Black 30-hour bill which first brought minimum wages into the plans for industrial control. With Gen. Hugh Johnson and one or two others he worked out the National Recovery Act itself and then sold it to the pro-labor members of Congress. He also wrote and helped put through the "labor freezing" amendment to the railroad act.

Roosevelt insisted that Richberg take an important post in the recovery administration, not only because of his own esteem but because he knew the man's presence would create confidence in the recovery act among a large section of his own liberal supporters.

A RIPPLE of laughter swept through the Department of Agriculture Building when it was announced that Theodore Bilbo, the remarkable ex-governor of Mississippi, had been appointed to the Agricultural Readjustment Administration to "assemble current information from newspapers, magazines and other public sources"—which meant to cut clippings.

"How's Senator Brookhart getting along?" a snickering reporter asked Co-Administrator Charles J. Brand at a press conference, referring to the famous Iowa lame duck who has a job promoting farm exports to Russia.

"You know, I used to smile about that myself," said Brand earnestly, "but he's really doing some good work."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

WHEN planning your summer menus with all the good, chilled foods, iced drinks and the like, don't forget that one meal each day should include at least one hot dish. After a few weeks of cold dishes you'll find that the hot dish will go far toward whetting lagging appetites.

Sometimes you can have a piping hot cream soup before the cold courses are served. On other occasions the main dish can be hot and all the other things on the menu be as cold as you please.

Macaroni and cheese is an old favorite, makes an admirable main dish and is very easy to prepare. Here's the way you do it:

Macaroni and Cheese Put a cupful of elbow macaroni into a pan of boiling water to cover a generous helping of salt has been added. Let it boil for 15 minutes, stirring it occasionally to make sure it isn't sticking to the bottom of the pan. When it is done, remove from the stove and drain to remove all excess water.

Now cover the bottom of a baking dish or casserole with a few thin slices of onion. Have a cup of grated cheese ready. Arrange a layer of macaroni in the bottom of the dish, cover with a thin layer of cheese, then another layer of macaroni, alternating until the dish is filled. Pour a cup of milk over the whole thing and put a layer of butter on top of the dish just before you pop it into the oven. Bake in a hot oven until the top is a golden brown. Serves about eight.

and peers, and has found inspiration in both. It was such a cheer as "Come on you, Eddie Eagan, fight, you Eddie Eagan, fight, fight, fight!" that started Eddie on his way to victory years ago at the Deaver Athletic Club. In his book Eddie offers his hand to Flitiana's followers:

"So here's to you, Mr. Fight Fan! I've loved you and I've hated you in all parts of the world. Most of you shout too much. Few of you know what you're talking about. Almost none of you are fighters yourselves.

"You don't know that lonely feeling which comes at times in the ring when you're facing a ruthless opponent charging you like a tornado or an enraged beast. You've never felt the stinging pain that shoots from the spot where a six-ounce glove, soggy with water and stained with the gore of battle, connects. You've never seen a sudden flaming Arizona sunset flash with a sock to your eye.

"You've never experienced reeling senses as the ceiling of the fight hall cracks wide open overhead, letting in the inky blackness, as a right-hand biff darkens your consciousness. You've never heard the ringing sound and the thunder inside your head, as unnamed stars and comets stud your vision.

"So mostly I ignore you. I've had to win my own fights. At Denver you helped me get a start in this game I love. I've been heartened by your cheers, but I've been inspired by your jeers and scorn as often. Here's my hand, fans. With all your faults you make the game worthwhile."

"There you are, Mr. Fight Fan. That's what a man who has fought all his life for fun thinks of you!

MONTREAL—Canada's external trade in May totalled $78,502,967, as compared with $84,837,716 in May, 1932. This being the smallest decline on an annual basis in several years, according to figures just released by the Department of National Revenue.

The improvement is due principally to the expansion in ex- ports from $40,476,404 in May 1932, to $45,576,337 last month, the first expansion on such a basis since that shown in June of 1929. Texans Fell Out Of Their Homes In High Caves

By United Press
WASHINGTON, July 1.—Pre- historic cave dwellers of Texas appear to have been such a hardy race that they could fall off 150- foot cliffs and still live to recover from broken arms and legs.

Reporting on a recent acquisition of skeletons of these people, the Smithsonian Institution says: "Nearly all skeletons showed evidence of fractured legs or arms which had healed without being set. The cave in which the skele- tons were found is in the side of an almost perpendicular cliff, ap- proximately 150 feet above the flood plain of the river, and the velopments, however, with the consequent war talk, caused the organizers to abandon their project, hoping, however, that the general political situation will be sufficiently settled by next summer to permit holding the meet- ing.

fractures indicate that the ancient people not infrequently tumbled over the edge."

The cave was discovered by Dr. Frank M. Setzler in the canyon of the Pecos River. One of the speci- mens he found was an almost perfectly preserved mummy.

"The body was buried in an upright position in a deep deposit of wood ashes," the report said. "It was wrapped in a rabbit skin robe with a basket over the head. When the mummy was dug up the face had an almost lifelike ex- pression with the hands crossed in a peculiar fashion under the head."

Six other similarly preserved bodies were found, one of which was lying in a prone position with the bones articulated.

From the bodies and accom- panying relics, Smithsonian sci- entists hope to learn much about the life and culture of Texas cave dwellers.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By KATHARINE HAYLAND TAYLOR

ELINOR HERE TODAY

BARRETT COLVIN, back in New York after years abroad, is in love with 20-year-old Lida Stafford. Barrett is 35, wealthy, and has made a name for himself as an archaeologist. Years before he abducted his half-sister, MARCIA, when a youthful romance ended disastrously, MARCIA had a son whom Barrett adopted. Marcia is constantly in fear that her husband will learn of the affair.

LIDA STAFFORD, Elinor's best friend and unscrupulous mother, is carrying on a flirtation with VANCE CARTER. Lida schemes constantly to keep in the good graces of MISS ELLA SEXTON, her husband's aunt, in order to inherit a share of the SEXTON fortune.

When she learns that Barrett is about to propose to Elinor she deliberately tries to break up the romance and succeeds. The girl is heartbroken when she does not hear from him. One day they meet at her aunt's home. Barrett offers Lida a cigarette and she refuses, declaring she does not smoke. He offers her a cigarette, thereby offending her will.

A few days later she dies. Her will leaves practically her entire fortune to Barrett. He does not want it and yet can not turn it over to the rightful inheritor.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVIII

BESSIE called out. "Who is it, Sexton?" and her son answered, "Cousin Elinor."

"Why, dearie!" Bessie was up in an instant, hurrying to the hall. Elinor clung to her.

"Come in! Come in!" barked Jim. "Just in time for dinner!"

A moment later Elinor sat looking at the faces about the table. Sexton had brought a chair for her. Bert was getting the silver. Elinor was crushed because Aunt Ella hadn't done something for the Thurses. Her own tactlessness could not have had anything to do with their being left as they had been, with no help in sight and the constant fight against poverty ahead. She would have done anything to get them what they deserved.

"I'm glad you ran over, darling," said Bessie warmly. "I had to come, I— but she could not finish. Her lips were trembling again.

"Have some more fried potatoes," Jim urged. They were all so kind. Elinor realized, as she always did when she was with them or thought of them. Her eyes rested on Jim Junior's thin face. The boy was already at work since his father couldn't seem to make enough to keep things going.

Jim Junior, working on ledgers, dreamed of being an engineer, a bridge builder. Bert was strongly artistic. With help, Elinor was sure he could be a real success. Sexton's bent was as yet a mystery but he certainly needed good schooling. Why had Aunt Ella made such a will? If only there was a way, even now, to right the matter!

Before the meal was finished Jim Junior said boldly, "Well, let's decide how we'll spend that $100!" Everyone laughed in a way that meant the tension was relieved.

Bessie began to plan. Elinor's eyes filled, hearing her. So many beads were made plain by Bessie's plans—a suit for Jim, a new linoleum, the hall repaired, a nice set of glass cooking dishes (Bessie had always wanted to 'bake in glass'), some new sheets, a new rug for the stair, some bath towels, shirts for Bert, a suit for Sexton, a new white porcelain sink for the kitchen.

"Whoa!" said young Jim when the $100 had been spent at least four times. Everyone laughed—Elinor with the rest but unsteadily.

"You haven't told us, Elinor," Bessie was saying, "what you're going to do with your $10. I do wish, dear, it had been more for you!"

"I'm going to blow it in on a party that we'll have here!" Elinor answered. Sexton let out a whoop, "Ice cream and everything!" she added, smiling at her youngest cousin.

"Cousin Elinor, can we have that kind of cake you get at the German shop on Hays street? You know—it has whipped cream on it and jelly inside!" Sexton said excitedly.

"Certainly!" she assured him. "We'll have that cake!"

LIDA, meantime, was having a bad half hour. Vance Carter had pushed past Benson to reach her, although she had given the strictest orders about receiving no one.

He found her curled up on a chaise longue in the drawing room, looking frightfully untidy and showing the rage and tears that she had shed.

"Darling!" he whispered unsteadily, nearing her.

She sat erect, frightened, angry because he had come. He took her hot hands.

"Some one may hear!" she warned.

He laughed, the brimming, assured laugh of a man who feels that he is near his goal. "They'll all know how it is—has been—with us soon anyhow," he stated. "You know that!"

She sank back. He was obviously going to be very difficult!

"You'll start your suit soon?" he asked, bending toward her, his eyes narrowed.

"I—I don't know, Vance—"

"Why?"

"Bentwell depends on me so!" she confided with nervous haste. "After we came in from the funeral he told me how much I mean to him. He's threatened my life if I leave him—"

"Lida!"

"I can't seem to see any way out! I can't bring myself to give him that blow just now, Vance. He's been—so disa ointed! Aunt Ella left him $100!"

"But you said—"

"I know, dear, but how could I foresee?"

"I'm not going to let anything keep us apart!" Vance said. Lida had not known that his chin could be so hard.

"Oh, dear!" she whimpered. She covered her face.

When Vance left an hour later he realized that she was firm in her resolve not to ask for a divorce. Miserable, he hurried to his favorite speakeasy. Two cocktails and he felt somewhat cheered.

"Another, Joe."

"Yes, sir—"

An hour later he was unsteady on his feet but certain otherwise and smiling grimly. He summoned a taxicab and went to his rooms. There he took from a desk drawer a small Spanish revolver and inspected it.

"All right—" he murmured thickly. He put it into a pocket, returned to the street once more and to his waiting cab.

"Where to?" the driver asked.

"Park avenue. Know the number—can't seem to remember—"

However, with a second's thought he had it. Wilkins, spelling the night doorman, opened the taxicab door. It was that Carter man again, he saw. The one who had been coming there so much to see Mrs. Stafford. And more "snoot" than usual, too.

Smiling cynically Wilkins watched Vance Carter lurch toward the elevators. "Swell gang they are!" the doorman thought. "And a swell chance that nice girl has!" He wished old Miss Sexton had left the girl something. Already the news of the will had spread, with Lida screaming as she had before the servants.

Wilkins saw Vance Carter fumbling in a rear pocket as he stepped into the elevator that had come rushing down in response to his ring. Wilkins supposed he was reaching for a flask. "You need another drink!" Wilkins thought scornfully. "If you didn't take it you might sober up in a week or two and have to think!"

The elevator boy winked at the doorman; Wilkins raised his stocky shoulders and again turned toward the street.

A moment later tenants of the fourteenth floor heard a shot. They thought, rushing hysterically toward the elevator corridor, that the sound had come from above.

ELINOR was wiping dishes for Bessie, painstakingly and a trifle slowly, when the telephone rang. "You go, Junior," Bessie called. "Mother's hands are in the dish water—"

Bert moved toward the dark rear hall where Junior was barking. "Hello!" Bert had a girl and didn't want the family to know. He was aware from past experiences of the ragging that would be his if they got onto it.

"Mother!" Junior called, turning toward the kitchen. "Is Benson He wants to speak to you—"

"Don't you mean he wants Elinor, dear?"

"No, he said you."

"Tell him to hold the line a minute," Bessie was wiping her red-rimmed, water-corrugated hands.

"Yes, Benson," she said a moment later. "Mrs. Throppe speaking. You wished to speak to my WHAT?"

There was a moment's pause. Bessie turned from the telephone. "Jim," she called steadily "take Elinor into the front room and show her that nice little footrest Sexton made at school. Then she turned again to the telephone.

"Just a minute, Benson—"

Elinor followed dazedly but she was troubled, almost alarmed. Her aunt's tone had been sharpened by some real shock. Elinor was afraid something unpleasant had happened. She admitted the foot rest generously but she continued to wonder and worry.

Bessie was slow to appear. Elinor heard her calling her husband, heard him coming down the stairs. Then there was an interval, punctuated by the sibilant, buzz broken silence that means a whis pered colloquy.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

Signed letters to this paper will be carried in this column, but names will be left off where requested. No anonymous letters can be printed, however. These letters express the views of the writer and may not be construed as the policies or beliefs of this paper.

In view of the fact that there appears to be an erroneous opinion held by a few citizens of my precinct with reference to the recent appointment of the County Board of Welfare and Employment, I desire to explain what the recent law creating "Texas Relief Commission" provides and the commissioners' court connection with same.

In the outset, I wish to state that the law provides that the Texas Relief Commission shall appoint the County boards of Welfare and Employment in each county and the commissioners' court shall approve same. In appointing a county board for Eastland county the Texas relief commission named the following citizens to constitute same: Earl Corner, Eastland; Frank Kirk, Gorman; F. E. Harrell, Cisco; E. A. Ringold, Ranger, and E. R. Yarbrough, Carbon. Mr. Yarbrough being the only one who has served on the old county-wide. The above names were the only one submitted to the commissioners' court by the Texas Relief commission for approval. Relief commission who was re-appointed. The commissioners' court had no authority to appoint the county board nor any member thereof, but when the board was duly appointed and presented by the State Relief commission, the commissioners' court unanimously approved same as the law provides.

It has been rumored that I personally desired the appointment of the board above named for the reason that I had hopes of securing funds through this board to aid me in building and maintaining roads in my precinct which report is unfounded and untrue. I desire to state that with one possible exception I have not asked for any of the R. F. C. funds, that being just a very small piece of work near city limits of Ranger, but on numerous occasions I have provided machinery and equipment and co-operated with local committees in projects which they were sponsoring and my dealings with them have been altogether pleasant and agreeable and the re-appointments of the entire committee would have been perfectly agreeable to me. If any one should feel that I want to expend or administer any of the state or federal relief funds which the county may at any time receive they have a badly mistaken idea. I much prefer to have no connection whatsoever with these funds.

I am frank to say that I firmly believe that any fairminded citizen will have to admit that the commissioners' court in this matter. Yours very truly, H. V. D.

ONCE . . . EACH DAY

By V. MARIE STEPHENS

Were we to go a-stumping, as it seems all America threatening to do, we'd choose us a side and stand faithfully by to the bitter end.

Were we wet or were we dry, we'd hang on to our personal parachute until we drifted somewhere.

With the present attitude of the nation prevailing, it is not surprising that the innocent statement of a no-doubt-wet movie actress, while touring recently, has turned many of our fashion-setters to wondering about repeal.

"Aid the innocent one, 'It'll make you fat, girls."

Of course there are a few who have adopted the "Nothing drunk, nothing gained" attitude . . . and intend to fill the shoppes with larger sizes.

Then, boosting drydom, we recall the ultimate outcome of prohibition parties . . . booze-sickness.

For that which made the world go around in such a delightful manner, had the further tendency to make it take a few lurches upward, too. A little like the stock market . . . unsettled.

Again, the philosophical attitude: "Better to have drunk and lost, than never to have drunk at all."

Quickly the states go.

So quickly, in fact, that we have almost ceased to look up the results. Front page material has become a dead cinch.

To the victor belongs the spoils . . . and bottles . . . and glasses . . . and among those present will be:

Our national executives.

Our social leaders.

Our doting mamas and papas who set the pace for Tommy and Sue.

Tommy and Sue themselves.

But not Yet Olde Editor, who quotes statistics and useless thoughts and shallow observations on the question as a whole . . . and knows little about it as a stimulus.

We aren't quite settled about capital punishment, and kidnaping has stirred us only currently and around the surface . . . but we dislike beer.

Putting it mildly, that's the difference in us . . . despite the wisdom of the president and his cabinet and 50,000,000 Frenchmen who have never been wrong.

Not that my opinion or yours matters a great deal when a nation decides to pour its way to prosperity . . . only . . .

Were we to go a-stumping, we'd choose us a side and stand faithfully by to the bitter end.

30-YEAR-OLD DEBT PAID

By United Press

BATON ROUGE, La.—F. P. Summers, merchant, recently received a $10 money order in payment for a debt contracted 30 years ago. The debt was for goods purchased by a customer who later became ill and was unable to pay. The customer stated in a letter which accompanied the money order that he was sorry he couldn't pay interest.

It is a matter of simple justice, no doubt, that an autoist who attempts to burn up the road often lands in the cooler.

CHEAP for Cash

Three 8-foot display cases, Corona Cash Register and Adding Machine, G-E Electric Fan and Light Fixtures. Write Walton Studio, Cisco.

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

A lady writes to say that she does not understand why an 8-cylinder car does not cost more to run than a car with fewer cylinders. She refers to my statement that our Ford V-8 develops more power on a gallon of gas than any car we have made.

The use of 8-cylinders does not mean the addition of two or four extra fuel consumers. It is not, for example, a 4-cylinder engine multiplied by two. Our 8-cylinder engine takes the fuel supply of an ordinary 4-cylinder engine and divides it eight ways. And why?

By reducing four larger explosions into eight smaller ones, we get engine smoothness and quietness. Eight-cylinders indicate the way the gas is used, not the amount. It is just the difference between going upstairs in four long jumps or in eight ordinary steps.

Two things use up gas—bad engine design and useless car weight. Besides having an engine that gets a high percentage of power out of the fuel, the Ford V-8 has a light, strong body and chassis so that no power is wasted in moving excess weight.

The only extravagance about the new Ford V-8 engine is in the building of it. The extravagance is ours—the economy is yours.

The whole question of car economy needs clearing up. An economical car gives economy all round. Price, operation, upkeep, all play their part. If what you save on gas you lose elsewhere, that is not economy.

As to upkeep, our dealers say that in recent years the improved quality of Ford cars has cut down their repair business 50 per cent.

As to price with quality,—judge for yourself.

As to economy, here is the record of a stock car three weeks out of shop in Oklahoma:

On a run of 10,054 miles at the rate of 1,000 miles a day—the Ford V-8 gave 18.8 miles per gallon of gas. Not a drop of water was added to the radiator. The oil was changed once in 1,000 miles.

That should answer a lot of questions.

little farther than just talk... and who feel that there is a responsibility upon their shoulders for the best interest of the community in which their property and homes are located... And it is those citizens that will defy the word "can't."

If an outsider who has had no former interest in the community has the confidence in the community enough to offer to put up 50 per cent of the capital necessary... then it would be certainly out of line to presume that the business interests of Eastland would let it be felt that they didn't have any confidence in Eastland by refusing to put up a like amount.

It's like the fellow that attempts to negotiate a loan for a project and telling the lender that he didn't have any confidence in the project but "if you'll lend me the money I'll try it." In other words the idea could be formulated that we would tell any body that wants to, to come here and put up a bank, although we don't have any confidence of a bank making any money... or doing good... but if you haven't any more sense than to put up all the money and come here and try it... then go to it.

Everybody knows that Eastland needs a bank... and every body knows that a bank in Eastland will be a valuable asset instead of a liability... and everybody knows that this is the logical time to get behind the movement and see that

"Adorable," Gaynor-Garat Film, Opening

Heard as one of the outstanding motion pictures of all time, "Adorable," the new Fox production, starring Janet Gaynor and Henry Garat, opens today at the Lyric theatre. It is the first American film to claim the talents of the famous international star, and the fact that he is co-starred with Miss Gaynor promises something of the unusual in screen entertainment. The story of the film is said to give America's most popular actress her best opportunities. It calls for extreme capabilities in acting, singing and the dance. In her quest of the handsome soldier of the guard, Miss Gaynor reveals talents hitherto not credited to her. American audiences will probably remember Garat for his dual portrayal in "Congress Dances." This, however, is his first appearance in a domestic production destined principally for American audience.

The supporting cast is headed by C. Aubrey Smith, veteran character actor, and Herbert Mundin, one of the leading comics of the screen. Others in the large cast are Blanche Frederici, Stuart Holmes, Albert Conti, Ferdinand Schumann-Hewnd, Esther Muri, Hans von Thwardowski, Peter Duray, Barbara Leonard, Sterling Holloway and Joe Cairo.

Wilhelm Dieterle directed the production from the story by Paul Frank and Billie Wilder and the screen adaptation by George Marion, Jr. and Jane Storm.

An important feature of "Adorable" is the musical background and accompaniment. The music is by Werner Rickard Heymann, with additional songs and lyrics by Richard A. Whiting and George Marion, Jr.
