

ROOSEVELT TO URGE COTTON REDUCTION PLAN

WILL APPEAL TO FARMERS TO COOPERATE

Reports Show Increase of Cotton Acreage Over Average For Two Years.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Administration's cotton stabilization program has passed halfway mark in its goal of 10 million acre reduction, according to reports made today by Secretary Wallace. Wallace said reports from 16 of 16 cotton producing states showed that farmers have offered total of 5,566,169 acres to be taken out of production. At same time Wallace formally announced he would extend cotton sign-up campaign until midnight July 12. It was indicated further extension might be granted even after that date.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Close friends of President Roosevelt today said they were certain he would direct an appeal within the next 48 hours to cotton farmers of the south to get behind the acreage reduction program in order to assure a fair price in the commodity.

The projected action on the part of the president would come, it was believed, as the result of the cotton acreage report which today showed an increase in planting. At the same time farm relief officials indicated the acreage cut campaign was lagging.

Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, was a White House caller, discussing the cotton situation with Mr. Roosevelt and expressed the conviction that the farmers would fall in line behind the administration plan for agricultural recovery.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is expected to announce extension of the cotton acreage reduction campaign into next week. It had originally been scheduled to close tonight.

Heavy increases in cotton acreage throughout the south was reported today by the department of agriculture, estimating July 1 acreage at 40,798,000 acres. The increase brought land under cultivation to 11.6 per cent more than July 1 last year and 4.3 per cent more than the 1931 figure. It emphasized the task remaining before the farm relief administration which seeks to prevent another bumper crop with a correspondingly heavy carry over which would further depress cotton prices.

Score Feared Dead In Colorado Flood

MORRISON, Colo., July 8.—Up and down precipitous Bear Creek canyon, yesterday a peaceful vacation land, but overnight a sight of desolation and death, searching parties sought almost a score of persons today who were believed killed in a sudden disastrous flood. A 10-foot wall of water rushed down the canyon after a mountain cloudburst and swept resort cabins, tourists, automobiles and even business buildings of two small towns before it.

Four bodies have been recovered. None had been identified. An incomplete checkup, hampered by broken communication lines and washed out roads and bridges, indicated at least 15 more were not accounted for.

TEXAS GUNMAN TO FACE THREE CHARGES SOON

COLEMAN, Texas, July 8.—Luke Trammell, West Texas desperado, who was captured near here last night after a gun battle in which his brother, Starkweather Trammell, was killed, today faced probable charges of highway robbery.

Trammell and his brother recently escaped from the Lynn county jail at Tahoka and since have lead officers a wild chase in the course of which, officers said, they stole automobiles in Coleman, Runnels, Taylor and Tom Green counties.

Last night's gun battle, in which officers said the young bandits returned their fire, occurred about a mile north of here. A posse led by Sheriff Frank Mills came upon the brothers, who were fleeing on foot.

County Attorney John Harris said today he would file three charges of highway robbery against the surviving Trammell.

Ranger Principal To Adopt Two Orphan Children

RANGER, Texas, July 1.—Marion D. Vines, the little boy who was run over by a car on East Main street, Eastland, a week ago and seriously injured, was taken to the City-County hospital at Ranger and there events occurred which will mean much in his future life. H. S. Von Roeder, principal of the Ranger high school, saw him there and became attached to him, finally expressing a desire to adopt the child.

County Judge C. L. Garrett was informed of this desire. He told Mr. Von Roeder that Marion had a baby brother that was a fine youngster and suggested that both of them be taken so that they would have a home together. This proposition interested Mr. Von Roeder and he asked that the baby, whose name is Sherman Evin, be brought to his home. The baby was taken to Ranger Thursday, kept by the Von Roeders in their home over night and Friday Mr. Von Roeder announced that he was ready to adopt both of them.

Marion D. and Sherman Evin are grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Truly and were orphans, their mother having died about three months ago. Since that time Mrs. Truly has been caring for the children with financial aid from the county and assistance from Mrs. Iola Mitchell and Mrs. W. L. Graham. It is probably through the efforts of these two ladies that the children will be adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Von Roeder.

World Grows Up At World's Fair

CHICAGO, July 8.—Watching the world grow up in a few minutes and a million years pass in the tick of a clock is the experience of those who visit the Hall of Science at a Century of Progress.

This phenomena occurs in the geology exhibit. Slides flash scenes of the development of the world, while the hands of a synchronized clock move around a dial representing the two thousand million years of the world's history.

Onlookers see mountains and oceans form. One celled creatures appear in the sea. Later in heavy jungle, plants appear, and fish evolve in the waters. Life moves onto the land. The age of dinosaurs comes and goes. The glacial age appears, goes, and then the first man is born.

The entire exhibit takes only a portion of an hour and yet covers all the important steps in the development of mankind.

At present Mr. Jones is practicing law in Eastland.

National Guards to Have a Motor Unit

AUSTIN, July 8.—When artillerymen of the Texas National Guard roll into Camp Hulen Palacios, this summer for their annual camp, there will be no stable duty. The entire 61st Field Artillery brigade will be motorized.

Inspection of horses and horse drawn equipment now is being made by Lieut. Col. Innis P. Swift in preparation for the change.

There is a possibility that only two guns of each battery will get their motor equipment in time for the August camp, but that will be ample for the summer training to be under the new motorized methods.

The camp begins Aug. 5. Problems for its two weeks have not yet been mapped, Adjutant General Henry Hutziruz said.

The 61st F. A. brigade headquarters are at San Antonio, home of the brigade commander, Brig. Gen. Claude V. Birkhead. Organizations of the 131st and 132nd Field Artillery, which make up the brigade are stationed at Abilene, Amarillo, Bonham, Corpus Christi, Corsicana, Cleburne, Dallas, Decatur, Fort Worth, Italy, Jacksboro, Kerens, Lubbock, Marshall, Paris, Plainview, Weatherford and Wichita Falls.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—More than half a hundred letters and telegrams have been received by Chief Hugh D. Harper giving descriptions of missing women in an effort to determine if the one found murdered near Florissant might prove the one sought in each instance.

To date the victim of the brutal slaying in the hills has not been identified. The woman has not been buried, and daily persons visit the morgue in Cripple Creek to view the remains.

Ed Vinyard Sheriff of Teller County, who has worked day and night in an endeavor to clear up the mystery, declared that the investigation now is right where it started, every clew having failed to produce the desired results. NEW OUTLOOK

Alfred E. Smith, editor of the New Outlook Magazine, asserted in an editorial in the current number that he might be old fashioned but he could not understand how the industrial control act "can possibly work."

"Viewed from this angle, the job is one for the philosopher the priest, and the doctor, rather than the statesman, lawyer or business executive."

Eminent financiers of the East, speaking of the international Napoleons of the world of gold and glamour, worked their laboratories for 12 years. It is conceded that they ran the ship of state on the rocks, and then the chief pilots deserted in life boats in order to escape the consequences of their very wild or reckless handling of affairs, financially and otherwise.

There is another Texan in the picture. Charles L. That Reminds Me

The on and on-unselfish business man or private individual, professionally or otherwise, will succeed in spite of the clouds, in spite of the drought, in spite of the howls "the country is going to the dogs." They are real sportsmen in the sense. They don't pass the buck. They wake up to every advantage the minute they start on their busy day.

It is naturally common sense to be conservative of course. One should practice all economy except false economy. There is a dividing line between bull headedness and sane conclusions. It is not essential and necessary that we all should hold up our hands in assent just because some "leader" got up and said "This is the way to do it."

Miss Mary Pearl Judkins Entertains

The week, socially, has been largely given over to impromptu affairs of an intimate nature or the summer supper picnic, with a few friends gathered with their dishes, and after a cool luncheon, adjourning to the movies.

Socially, everyone felt the effects of Eastland's strenuous Fourth and spent the greater part of the last of the week in desultory fashion.

Miss Mary Pearl Judkins was hostess Friday afternoon to a little coterie, entertaining at her home in compliment to Miss Louise Wolfarth of Lubbock, the house guest of the Dr. J. L. Johnson family.

The entire home was beautifully decorated in gladioluses, in green crystal vases, in carrying out the yellow and green color motif, further obtained in the tallies for the bridge, the mints served throughout the afternoon, and the iced punch with which the guests were refreshed upon entering.

For the ten hour the two tables employed in auction were surfaced in individual green embroidered and yellow lunch cloths with matching napery.

High score favor in games, a pair of embroidered guest towels, was awarded Miss Luellie Brodgon, and consolation, a ribbon handkerchief holder, to Miss Wolfarth, who was also presented the guest favor, a double deck of playing cards.

Dainty melbas on green crystal plates were served Misses Dosis Johnson, Maurine Davenport, Ima Payne, Edna Day, Joyce Johnson, Wilma Beard, Lucille Brodgon, Louise Wolfarth, honoree, by Miss Mary Pearl Judkins assisted by her mother, Mrs. Frank Judkins.

An undertone of radio music was a charming feature of this pretty entertainment.

Little Card Club Organized

A little group of young girls met at the home of Miss Ellen Francis on North Daugherty avenue last Thursday afternoon and organized a two-table bridge club, which will meet each Wednesday afternoon at the home of a member.

Miss Francis was a delightful hostess, and awarded in high score in game, a silhouette with chain hangings, to Miss Lurline Brawner, and a pretty scrap book, consolation, to Miss Pauline Bida.

Ice cream and cake was served Misses Norma Reagan, Louise Day, Lurline Brawner, Pauline Bida, Ruth Harris, Eloise Ligon, and Audrey Brawner with whom the club will meet next week, and the hostess, Miss Ellen Francis, which forms the personnel of the club.

Miss Ellen Francis was elected president, Miss Norma Reagan secretary, and Miss Eloise Ligon, reporter, for the club, which will be named at the next meeting.

Impromptu Picnic Supper

One of the delightful, informal gatherings of the week was that of the close friends of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil T. Seaberry, in token of their "welcoming to our city," the return from the Chicago fair of the travelers, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil T. Seaberry.

A covered dish supper brought the friends together Thursday night, on the spacious Seaberry lawn. Following the consumption of a delicious spread the party adjourned to the Lyric theatre show.

Personnel, Senator and Mrs. W. B. Collie, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Collie, Mrs. and Mrs. Joe H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil T. Seaberry, and Mr. and Mrs. Copperfield Grisham of Abilene.

Martha Dorcas Class Honors Members

The Martha Dorcas Bible class of the Methodist church, was entertained at the home of Mrs. M. B. Griffin, assisted by co-hostesses Mrs. A. W. Hennessee, on Friday afternoon, in a pretty affair honoring Mrs. C. Hurt, with a miscellaneous shower of gifts, most daintily presented, and meeting in a farewell party for a valued member, Mrs. L. B. Lippard, who left Saturday with Mr. Lippard for their new home in Stephenville, where Mr. Lippard will be connected with the Winkelman firm, in a branch insurance office.

Mrs. Griffin's home was beautifully decorated for the afternoon, with shasta daisies, and tall stands of brilliant-hued Texas sunflowers carrying out the color scheme of gold and white.

Guests were assembled on the wide front veranda, where each was supplied with a "friendly" quilt name block, which, when completed by the honoree, will form a lasting token of this friendly afternoon.

Palms and ferns, pillows, and flowers on stands, made the shady veranda most attractive.

Mrs. W. E. Coleman, president of the Martha Dorcas class, presented the pretty gifts, tissue paper wrapped, and tied in blue rib-

BARGAIN BRIDE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BARRIETT COULDN'T look in New York after years abroad. He is 25 and she is 20. Elinor returns his affection but LIDA STAFFORD breaks up the romance by convincing Barriett that Elinor was only flirting with him.

Rich MISS ELLA SEXTON, Elinor's aunt, dies and, to the despair of the relatives, leaves her entire fortune to Barriett. Lida Stafford has a change of heart and learns she will not divorce her husband, but she will marry him and live in his home for a year. He will give her the entire sum to divide between her relatives.

The ceremony is set for next day. With her mother, Elinor goes to the church.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIV

IN the vestibule Barriett waited with Dick Radnor. Dick was nervous, having left Marcia in tears. She wept so easily these days, wept when nothing at all had happened to make her unhappy.

Barriett looked as if he would gladly have given $1000 for a deep puff of a cigarette. He had never been so realized, more shaken or uncertain of himself. But when he saw Elinor he forgot himself. She had lost color and her smile was forced yet she was lovely, as always. Truly and beautifully lovely.

He moved toward her quickly to draw her away from the group to a small, dimly lit arm of the vestibule running across the front of the church.

"It will be all over in no time now," he promised as lightly as he could. "Palmer said it was only a matter of a few minutes and then done for life."

Lord, why had he said that about it being done for life? She looked her gratitude. "I can't think why I'm so nervous!" she confessed.

"We'll go home," he said, "and have a decent luncheon and forget the whole business. Meantime, Elinor, you'll have to look a little happier. Can you manage it?"

She tried to smile. "How's that?" he heard her whisper. "A bit better."

"I'll do my best. I want you to know—I'll try to do my best—always."

"I know that!" he answered almost harshly and, for the moment, he did. Lida drew near to say crisply, "Doctor Palmer is waiting. I think—"

They were married in one of the small chapels where Dick, after a word from the vergier, led the small group nervously. The blended lights from a stained-glass window shone down on Elinor.

Bessie whispered, with a catch of breath, "Did you ever see anyone so sweet and lovely?" as she mopped her eyes with an already moist handkerchief.

LIDA remembered her own marriage to Bentwell and how she had had to remind herself not to show her scorn of him. She had thought, of course, that Miss Ella

Seven would immediately settle "something decent" on Bentwell, her nephew. She had, Lida knew, been a fool. All the years of lying to the old woman had gone for naught. But of course now things would be different.

"I will," Elinor whispered, head bent.

"I will," came strongly. If not quite steadily, from Barriett. Then it was over! Barriett stooped to kiss his wife. Arthur Palmer gave his stole to an acolyte and stepped from the chancel as a friend and not a clergyman.

Elinor, oddly dizzy, clung to Barriett. He felt her dependence, flushed more deeply.

"Of course we'll all have lunch together," said Lida.

Barriett smiled quite naturally. "Sorry to hear out the old theory of mothers and sons-in-law," he said, "but of course we won't. We're going to skip. Aren't we?" he ended with a tenderness that was not masqueraded, as he turned his head toward Elinor.

"I think—considering everything"—she answered with an effort—"that Barry and I will run—now, I'll look in to see father this afternoon," she added.

"And we'll make up for it by having a real party for you all some day when we can celebrate," Barriett added.

He put his hand over Elinor's and pressed it reassuringly. She was so very young, he realized with a rise of tenderness. Dimly he heard the good wishes that were theirs. With stoic stiffening he suffered Lida's dramatically delivered kiss. And at last they were alone in his car, piloted by Hutten.

"Well!" Barriett murmured after a sigh, turning toward her. "Feeling better?"

"Yes," shyly. "Are you?"

"I'm a new man. Will you smoke?"

"Yes."

HE found cigarettes and held his lighter to hers, laughing suddenly to see how her hand shook. "Still badly knocked," he said. "You're trembling."

She nodded. "But I'm not uncomfortable," she stated, "I'm absurdly at ease—considering."

He also was at ease, he realized. He said slowly, "Odd, isn't it? I feel the same way."

They were silent for a space. Then Barriett asked, "Your bags were sent to my—our home?"

"Yes. There are a few trunks on the way, too. I hope I won't be a great bother."

"Oh, not! And you'll remember my promise to make it as easy for you as possible?"

"Yes, thank you."

The car came to a standstill. They were at home. Barriett opened the door before Hutten could reach it. Higgins admitted them, bowing low and tremulous from excitement. Elinor smiled and, rather shyly, spoke a few words to the butler. His eyes brimmed as he murmured, "Thank you, Mrs. Collin—"

He was going to be able to love her, he saw, as he had hoped he might.
