Country in Sore Need of Labor Engineers

As labor relations grow more complicated there is greater need for men who understand them. In fact, Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor, believes that the job of conducting labor relations must become a profession, and a vital one to the industrial peace of the future.

Employers are realizing this more and more. Almost every great factory has experts constantly studying its labor relations problems, and discovering new means of administering industrial justice.

New methods are being tried in efforts to solve some of the ever-recurring problems. One of these is the "annual wage" in seasonal industries.

Building and automobiles are typical of industries where the hourly wages are generally satisfactory, but in which a man may work so few hours during the year that his annual income is pitifully small.

This idea is comparatively new, though Proctor and Gamble, Cincinnati soapmakers, began such a plan in 1923. This "guaranteed employment" plan assures the employment of a minimum of 75 per cent of the number of hours in every work week (now 40) for 48 weeks each year.

But see how the idea has worked out in another industry which in some departments is extremely variable from year to year and season to season.

Here abattoir employes have agreed to work long hours when the heavy seasonal run is on, but short hours when it is not, getting the same weekly pay for both periods.

Due to the drought in 1934, the company lost out, for hours were short and it had to pay the regular weekly wage anyway. But it recently extended the agreement to 1939, providing that employes may "pay back" those unworked hours any time until that date.

Thus, even in a highly seasonal industry like hog-killing, it has proved possible to keep men at work at short hours without reducing their weekly or annual pay.

It is pioneering efforts like these that point out the future job of the labor engineer. In unions, in management, in the government service, he has an interesting and vital work to do.

SUN-TAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
DARREN finishing her first year in college learns her father is out of work. Jo wants a job and secures part time work in a nearby candy store. There she meets wealthy handsome DOTTIE MARSH who offers her the job of hostess at his inn at Crest Lake. Jo accepts. This causes a quarrel with BRET PAUL to whom she is engaged. Jo breaks her engagement.

She goes to Crest Lake. Her father is pleasant but Mrs. Marsh's mother takes a dislike to her. She meets FRAGONET, a school acquaintance who has become Jo's popularity.

FRAGONET, a film actor, and his wife also goes to Crest Lake. They are also gossiped about. FRAGONET tells her he loves her and begs her to marry him as soon as he can secure a divorce from his wife. She agrees to marry him.

FRAGONET's company decide to take part of a picture at Crest Lake. Several others arrive. Jo, taking a walk alone one evening, encounters BRET. He questions her about FRAGONET and her quarrel. BRET, catching her in a lie, insists she still loves him.

FRAGONET comes to Crest Lake a life guard.

FRAGONET comes to Crest Lake a life guard.

Jo tried a little walk along the lake. Tubby said valiantly "but—but evidently she's still a bit weak from her illness."

"Indeed," said Mrs. Marsh. "She—she had a sort of nervous collapse." Tubby said leading Jo on down the hill.

"I suggest," the old lady remarked "that you try cold water and perhaps a cup of black coffee. And with this remark she took to the stairway without so much as a backward glance."

"That old narridan!" muttered Tubby through clenched teeth. "I'd just like to—to—"

"Never mind Tubby," Jo said weakly. "I'm past caring what she says or thinks." She went through the door of her room which Tubby opened, set into one of the cushioned chairs. "I'm leaving here tomorrow, anyway."

"Leaving?"

Jo nodded. "This is the last straw. Tubby. Every time I turn around I seem to walk into trouble here."

"Suppose you decide this thing in the morning," said Tubby bringing Jo's slippers and palamas from the closet. "Right now you're going to bed. And I hope you'll be that I'm not asking what happened tonight. I'm perfectly willing to wait until tomorrow—and for me that's pretty darned good!"

"Why?"

"It wouldn't be good for you. Look here you found yourself in a bad spot at the beginning of the summer. But you started out like a little soldier and found yourself a job. And when you lost Bret Paul you kept your chin up and went right on with your knitting. Now you've struck some bad spots and you want to chuck everything. Isn't that about it?"

"Well, suppose you're right, what then?"

"Just this. Jo you ought to see this through. You may have to hit the old world several years before you find the right man. If you quit now you'll always have your coat. Another thing. If you quit now you might get coursed on men—all men. And that'd be bad."

"You talk like a man yourself, Tubby," Jo told her, smiling. "To hear you talk the one ambition of every girl is to get herself a man!"

"Well, it's even up then," said Tubby "because the one ambition of every man is to get a woman. Frouble with some is once they get one woman they start out after some more." Suddenly Tubby dropped her bantering tone and leaned toward Jo. "Seriously, Jo, don't you see what I mean about staying on here? I don't know who is chasing you out—whether it's Mrs. Marsh, or Bret Paul, or Fragonet—but whoever it is, I think you're a fool if you run."

Deluxe Chair Cars Added To Train On T. & P. Railway

The Texas & Pacific railway announces that ten new deluxe chair cars, assuring a degree of travel comfort heretofore unknown in chair car travel, have been placed in service on its three crack trains, the Sunshine Special, the Texan and the Louisiana Limited.

In making the announcement, Frank Jensen, general passenger agent, said the new chair cars "embodied every new feature known in passenger car equipment and that they meant a new high point in pleasure and relaxation for passengers."

"The new cars," Mr. Jensen explained, "introduce an innovation in reclining arrangements. The chairs, heavily upholstered to make them soft and comfortable can be turned entirely around. If the occupant wants to face the window, his chair will turn that way. If a party of four want to face one another, the chairs are quickly turned to accommodate them. In addition, the reclining arrangements have been greatly improved. The chairs tilt back farther so as to provide a greater degree of comfort than was possible in the old style chairs."

Lounge compartments are provided at both ends of the cars, where passengers may lounge and smoke. These compartments also have mirrors and dressing tables for women. Then there are dental laboratories, free soap and towels, sanitary water coolers and parcel racks.

The cars are lighted by a new system of indirect lighting that prevents glare and makes it possible for all lights in the car to be lowered so as not to interfere with the sleep of passengers. Floors are covered with a material that acts as a sound deadener. Window shades and interior decorations strike a new note in modern passenger car construction. Provision has been made for tables for passengers who want to play cards, write or eat their food in their chairs.

No matter how hot or dusty it may be outside, air conditioning insures fresh, cool, clean air and comfortable temperatures at all times. To add further to the comfort of passengers, noise and shock absorbing material has been placed in trucks and springs.

"What a contrast these new chair cars present with passenger equipment of other days!" exclaimed Mr. Jensen. "They are far more comfortable and enjoyable than Pullmans were not so long ago."

The inauguration of this new equipment makes it unnecessary for passengers traveling on the Louisiana Limited between Fort Worth or Dallas and points in Louisiana, to change cars at Marshall, as these new chair cars go straight through on this popular train.

FRAGONET comes to Crest Lake a life guard.

BUT next morning when Tubby knocked at Jo's door and re-appeared to the latter's "come in," she found her just as insistent as ever that it would be best to leave Crest Lake.

"I can't understand why," Tubby wailed. "I thought you'd made up your mind to stick it out, and now—"

"I met Bret last night, Tubby, and we had a—-an unpleasant talk."

"But what right has he to create unpleasant situations for you?" asked Tubby stoutly. "He had no chance and he tossed it overboard. I'll admit he's a hero and he probably feels on that account he has a right to stick his nose in your business but—"

"A hero?" repeated Jo, puzzled. "I don't know jus, what you mean Tubby, and I fail to see what right Bret Paul has to tell me what to do with my life."

"All right, then," said Tubby turning toward the window. "I want to get away from Bret Paul, and I think I want to get away from Douglas Marsh's mother. Her insult last night was about all I can stand."

"You shouldn't mind her Jo. And I must admit that you were a sorry sight. Your hair was every which way and your dress was all torn. Tubby turned from the window in sudden breathlessness. "Did Bret Paul muss you up 'that way?"

Jo smiled in spite of herself. "No-o. I did that myself. I was angry and excited."

"You must have been," Tubby conceded, perching herself on the window ledge. She looked hard at Jo for the space of several seconds. "Then she said, 'Jo do you mind it I shot a little snake your way?'"

"Of course not Tubby."

"It may be hard to take," the other warned.

"You don't have to take advice, smiled Jo.

"Well, you'd better take this. If I were you I wouldn't leave Crest Lake until they tossed me out on my ear."

THOUGHTFULLY Jo studied her hands, twisting a ring back and forth on one smooth finger. Then she stood up, faced Tubby with frank admiration in her wide blue eyes.

"I think you're right, Tubby. I'm going to stick it out."

"Brava!" cried Tubby, grasping Jo's hand in her delight. Then, serious again she added "I'd like to ask something else of you, Jo."

"Now what?" Jo wanted to know in mock exasperation.

Tubby replied with difficulty. "It's about Bret. I—I wish you wouldn't pass judgment on him as quickly as you do. I'm darned sure he thinks a lot of you, Jo, and that he tries to do what he thinks is best for you."

"Perhaps you're right," said Jo. "But just the same, I'd rather he let me take care of myself as best I can."

Tubby nodded. "That's just the trouble. You're so darned fiery and proud that you cut him off every time he tries to reach you again and help you. Maybe if you'd meet him half-way—"

"It's quite all right now, Tubby. Bret Paul and I understand each other perfectly. . . . Shall we go down to breakfast?"

Utterly miffed, Tubby inclined her head and started toward the door. But, as they were leaving, the telephone rang. Jo took up the instrument and answered. She was astonished to hear the voice of Peter Fragonet.

"I came in on the morning plane," he told her. "Won't you have breakfast with me?"

"Why—Miss Davis and I were just going down."

"Fine," exclaimed Fragonet. "I'll be delighted to see you both." Then he lowered his voice. "But I want to see you alone afterward, Jo."

She did not reply directly. "We'll be right down," she said, and replaced the telephone in its cradle.

Farm Systems To End Floods

WASHINGTON.—Floods such as recently paralyzed farming in the middle West can be reduced by a thorough application of erosion control measures, according to H. H. Bennett, Department of Agriculture chief of the soil conservation service.

Bennett, a department report said, drew his conclusion from reports submitted to him by regional directors of the agency in Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado—the states most affected by the floods.

A. E. McClymonds, Colorado Springs, advised Bennett that "proper erosion control measures and a well-balanced farm management program would prevent a repetition of the recent flood."

He explained that terraces, conservation reservoirs and contour cultivation between the drainage area and water courses would reduce run-off by more than one-fourth in torrential storms and would completely control the run-off in ordinary storms.

Regional Director F. L. Duley, reporting from Mankato, Kan., said that "if the whole basin were treated we could keep enough of the water out of the stream so that the flood stage would seldom be reached."

The "elimination of over-grazing" was emphasized in the report of R. L. von Treba from Nebraska. All three directors reported the department said, that the region presented "ideal conditions for a flood," because the drought of the past few years had depleted vast areas of vegetation which formerly helped to hold rainfall in the soil.

Business Man To Get An Award

NEW YORK.—Announcement of an annual award "for achievement in industrial administration" is made by Fortune Magazine in its August number.

The conditions of the award are: "The editors each January will select from among those charged with the administration of American industries, small as well as large, the name of the individual whose achievement as an administrator during the preceding year seems to them most worthy of praise. To that individual Fortune will award $1,000 in cash and an appropriate certificate."

The editors express the opinion "that an industrial administration in an industrial society is as fully, if less formally, charged with a public interest as was political administration in a political society."

"Industrial administration," the announcement said, "as contemporary industry understands the term, is as much an art as politics is an art" and "industrial administration in the modern world attracts very much the same kind of energy, intelligence and ambition as was attracted by the art of politics in the politically minded world of the 18th Century."

The editors believe that a "series of such decisions, honestly made and publicly criticized, cannot fail to clarify the state of public opinion upon the standards of industrial conduct."

Old Fashioned Camp Meeting Planned For the Panhandle

DALHART, Texas.—Beginning Aug. 18 an old-fashioned camp meeting will be held in Nature's park, between Morse and Gruver, the first held in the North Texas Panhandle since the days of the cattle barons and the longhorns. Rev. L. D. Mitchell, pastor of the First Baptist church here said today.

Dr. L. R. Scarborough, Southwestern Baptist Theological seminary president, Fort Worth, will preach.

People are being invited to come and camp, and all facilities of the park are being bought by the Baptists of the Trans-Canadian Baptist association, comprising Dallas, Hartley, Sherman, Moore, Hansford and Hutchinson counties.

This camp will be the first since Dr. George W. Truett, Dallas, and the late Dr. J. B. Gamble, also of Dallas, rounded in the cowmen years ago and told them "of the supreme Boss Rider and the Last Round-Up when the mavericks without the brand of salvation would be eternally cut back."

Cavalry Officers Proud of Governor

AUSTIN.—National guard cavalry officers, back from Camp Wolters, Mineral Wells, are proud of Governor Allred. He rode like an old trooper at the inspection—something that governors in the past have rarely been able to do. In fact, the governor had a better "seat" than some of the ranking officers.

Usually a governor contents himself, or herself, with a figurative ride. A mount, carefully chosen for docility, is used. The governor sits while the cavalrymen pass at walk, canter and gallop as the regulations provide. Not so, Governor Allred. He was right out in front. "It's lucky a governor does lead the formation," he chuckled. "I could not have kept that horse of mine back. He will not let anything pass him."

County Relief Cases Entirely Eliminated

ALICE, Texas.—Cases of work relief in Jim Wells county have been entirely eliminated by work available in cotton and broom corn fields, relief Administrator George Adams said today.

Remaining clients on the rolls are on direct relief. Those, consisting of about 90 families have been classified as non-employables.

Maytag Wood Co. Orders Carloads Of the Machines

Preparing for orders this winter, the Maytag S. R. Wood company, serving Eastland and Callahan counties, has ordered three carloads of the machines.

The order, believed by Mr. Wood largest and unprecedented in this part of the state, means an outlay of $15,000.

Mr. Wood points out that the company has difficulty in placing orders in the winter and the move of the Eastland county agency was in order to have a reserve for those months.

Actualy of the company's difficulty in sending machines to their different agencies over the county was shown in communications to Mr. Woods stating they were behind orders by many units.

a year ago. Aggregate sales for first six months of the year 24.4 per cent below those of corresponding period last year. Production, 2,508,000 yards, down 13.3 per cent from month before and 31.2 per cent under the like month last year. For the first half year production was 28 per cent less during the similar period a year ago. Unfilled orders on June 30 were down 17.6 per cent and per cent respectively from the corresponding dates of the previous month and last year.
