Promising Market Ahead of Us

Congressmen, lobbyists and innocent bystanders are to wrangle over the way in which Congress was not persuaded to knock out the "death sentence" utility holding companies bill, the rest of us are apt to look the fact that whether we use private or public power we are going to have to build some new power plants in the near future.

It makes an odd picture, somehow—industry and government wrangling over the financial set-up of the power industry while all the while an enormous untouched power is awaiting exploitation. And it is more or less of the attitude we have adopted in regard to many phases of our economic life.

It is near the talk that has been going the rounds during the past two or three years one would suppose that the productive machinery of the United States would be put on a leash for the next generation.

Yet all the while the greatest market in the world's history is all about us, fairly begging to be supplied! It is of course, a great deal easier to talk about the possibilities of this market than it is to equip it with the necessary purchasing power.

The mental attitude right now is important. If we stop looking back at the restricted markets of the last few years and ahead to the opportunities which await us, that confidence about which people talk so much will come overnight.

Hurl Gauntlet League of Nations

An unexpected note of common sense seems to have been injected into the international situation by the report that Britain will quite the League of Nations if the members of the league allow Italy to go to war with

A note of common sense for this reason: For the first time since the league was organized, it is a decision from one of the principal members that the other do the things it was drawn up to do or quit. The British position is reported to be about as follows: The league, organized to prevent aggressive action by any member state, fails to make at least an honest effort to prevent the Italian drive on Ethiopia, it leaves the way open for aggressive action by any other state.

In that case, the principal reason for the league's existence would seem to be canceled. Great Britain, threatened with withdrawal if this state of affairs is allowed to develop points out that in such a case the league would be what small usefulness it has ever possessed.

At the very beginning the league has failed to live up to the expectations of its founders. This has been due to a variety of reasons, including the fact that the French persistently tried to make of the league a super-ally to enforce the provisions of the Versailles treaty.

Nevertheless, if there is to be any kind of international peace, something of this sort must be attained. The refreshing news of the latest British gesture is the fact that it is the world at large that if the league cannot do its job as well go out of existence.

It remains to be seen how effective this gesture will be. It is just a chance that it will have enough of a sobering effect on such nations as France to make possible a bold and effective protest. But the chance is a slim while, however, it will serve a useful purpose, if it is us all that abolishing war from the modern world is for something more than pious resolutions and ringing phrases.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

Although they assure one another and all who will listen that Roosevelt's prestige has been declining very rapidly, they're still less than optimistic of the party's chances next year. Schools Urged As Best Guide For Child's Early Years

PHILADELPHIA.—Mrs. Mary M. L. Bixler instructor of primary education at Temple University, believes the parents of today are not sufficiently well-trained to undertake the responsibility of guiding their children through "their crucial-forming years."

So the bill passed unnoticed, to the subsequent chagrin of such friends of free speech as Norris LaFollette, and Wheeler. The bill, facing a fight in the House, but not unlikely to pass there, provides heavy penalties for anyone who "advises, counsels, urges, or solicits" anyone in army, navy, or national guard to disobey regulations.

from them. Defeat of prohibition repeal will not prevent the demand for a special session. And amendment permitting old age pensions seems fairly sure to pass. There will be agitation for laws to put that into effect without delay. Relief for the unemployed, turned back to the state by federal agencies likely will call for a fall session. Representative C. M. McFarland, Wichita Falls, has a plan to let the state collect some delinquent taxes to overcome the state deficit. Many more measures are likely to be pressed upon the governor for immediate action. If the session is called, Governor Allred is not likely to overlook the opportunity against to seek passage of the utility regulation bill, drafted by Prof. Robert Montgomery of the University of Texas and sponsored by the administration at the regular session of the 44th legislature. Reaction from utility lobbying at Washington would make a special session an ideal time for pushing stringent utility legislation. In the governor's office are marked copies of papers with Washington dispatches, placing utility leaders on record for state regulation rather than federal control. The governor admits that he is studying what should be done if there is a special session, but he

BEGIN HERE TODAY JO DARREN finishing her first year in college leaves her father in a hurry. She has a job and secures part time work in a marine supply store. There she meets the handsome 1914-15 LARS MARSH who offers her the job as waitress at his inn at Crest Lake. Jo accepts. This causes a quarrel with BETT PATI in whom she is engaged and Jealousy breaks the engagement. She goes to Crest Lake. Her father is pleased but Marsh's eccentric mother takes a dislike to the girl. BART MONTGOMERY, a school acquaintance who is jealous of Jo's popularity comes to the inn. PETER FRAGONET, film actor, and his wife are also guests. Fragonet takes Jo out in a sailboat there he has an accident and she narrowly escapes drowning. Just as Fragonet comes to see her. He tells Jo he loves her and takes her in his arms. MRS. FRAGONET and MRS. MARSH witness this scene and accuse Jo of encouraging Fragonet's attentions. Fragonet goes to Hollywood promising to return soon. Jo discovers that first Peter is the real life guard at Crest Lake. She and Peter have a tussle, but the rift between them remains. who was quickly despatched to the leather jacket and half a minute later the little green roadster was climbing variantly toward the knoll above the inn. Marsh drove in silence and Jo wondered now to begin the questions which were tossing around in her head. Finally to her immense relief Marsh himself asked a question which opened the subject that was worrying her most. "Did Pete Fragonet bother you while I was gone?" he asked. Jo shook her head. "No... He wrote me a note just before he left for Hollywood." Marsh chuckled reminiscently. "He promised me he wouldn't try to see you. But I had to promise too!" He turned to her, smiling. "He seems really to be in love with you, Jo." "He imagines that he is," she replied, "and for the time being that makes it just as difficult as if he were." "Then you don't love him?" Marsh asked. "No... He was silent a moment, and when he spoke again his voice was freighted with relief. "You don't know how glad I am to hear you say that. Jo. Pete Fragonet is a friend of mine. I've liked him very much—but he's like a great spoiled child, and a spoiled child can hurt." "You mean you wouldn't quite trust him?" "Not with a woman's happiness," Marsh said quietly. "And yet I shouldn't say that about a friend. Perhaps, this time, Pete is on the level. Why shouldn't you be the one woman he'd fall in love with and want to keep forever? You're young and beautiful, and you—"

JO interrupted, embarrassed by Marsh's words. "Talking of Fragonet brings up the whole question of whether or not I should stay on here, Mr. Marsh." "Of course you should stay. Why not?" "I've caused trouble—and talk—" "Let 'em talk," Marsh said. "And if I hear any of it myself I'll put them right side up in a devil of a hurry." "But I don't think we've heard the end of it," Jo said. "Mrs. Fragonet is likely to make trouble, and with Fragonet so well known there are sure to be stories in the newspapers." "We'll hope for the best, Jo." "But... it would be awfully bad for the name of Crest Lake." Marsh laughed. "If I were running a strictly commercial enterprise I might worry about that. But I'm doing this for fun mainly, and most of the people who come here are my friends. If they're real friends it won't matter how much scandal Fragonet stirs up." "But—" Jo faltered, "there's always the chance that—that your name might get mixed up some way." He turned to her with a wide grin. "I remember one thing my father told me when I was just a little kid. He said that if I had any brains and was able to keep what he left me people would be sure to talk about me whenever they got the chance. He said not to worry about it, because if I didn't get into a scandal then peo-

History LAKESID most unusual... CHICAGO maiming sk... MESA, went on a men's conv... DALHART, Cal.—After an absence of more than 20 years, an old key bearing a leather tag from the famous Erey Hotel has been returned. Meanwhile the old landmark was destroyed by fire and a modern hostelry built on the site.

History Omits Battle of Ice

LAKESIDE, O.—One of the most unusual incidents in the history of this section, and one overlooked by historians, was recounted by Chandlee D. Knapp, 85, Brooklyn, Mich., a native of Marblehead, near here, on a recent visit.

This was the "Battle of the Ice," in which British cavalrymen clashed with Canadian "Patriots" on the frozen ice fields of Lake Erie during the winter of 1837. The "Patriots" at that time were struggling to liberate Canada from the mother country.

Organized by a Colonel Bradley, the people marched out on the ice regularly to raid Pelee Island and the Canadian mainland, where they pillaged homes, seized supplies and stole horses which later were sold to mainland residents at trifling prices.

On March 4, 1837, as a party of nearly 200 "patriots" neared the boundary on one of the islands they were met by a detachment of British cavalry. Hastily forming up a barricade of ice, the leading party began firing on the soldiers. After a few exchanges of shots, they began to retreat across the ice toward Kelleys Island.

They were pursued by the cavalrymen and only escaped serious losses when thin ice forced the horsemen back to the Canadian shores. Five men were killed on each side.

Acids Will Melt Down Sky-Ride At Chicago Fair

CHICAGO.—"Andy," the remaining sky-ride tower of World's Fair fame, will be razed with chemicals.

"Amos," the other sky-ride tower, was blasted down. But the windows of the nearby Soldiers' Field stadium were shattered by the force of the explosion and wrecking company officials sought a way of bringing down the 628-foot giant.

Science came to the rescue, and "Andy" is to be melted down. The legs of the tower will be weakened first by undercutting, causing the tower to lean. Then steel-dissolving chemicals will be applied to melt the legs down another six feet.

At the rate of ten feet of lean at the top for every foot of steel melted at the base, an inclination of sixty feet will result. Then gravity will do the rest.

The tower is one of the few relics on the grounds of the World's Fair.

Fire Trails Firemen On a Vacation

MESA, Ariz.—Even when they went on a vacation trip to a firemen's convention, Fire Chief Earl Harmon, Assistant Chief Karl Ellsworth and Fire Supervisor Jack Kimbstrom couldn't get away from their work.

Driving along a highway near here, Chief Harmon smelled smoke. "We're just driving too fast," replied Supervisor Kimbstrom. "The motor will cool off in a minute."

It didn't. Instead, the car burst into flames. The firemen struggled with extinguishers and sand and finally quenched the blaze.

Bedraggled, they returned to Mesa.

ELEVEN $100,000-A-YEAR MEN ARE AMERICA'S BIGGEST EXECUTIVES; PAID TOTAL OF $1,800,000 IN YEAR

NEW YORK.—How would you like to hire some high-powered executive ability to put your business on its feet next year? Well, you might get 11 of the greatest executives in the country by offering a salary substantially above $2,000,000 for the year.

At least, that's what you'd have to offer if these 11 men are doing as well as they did in 1934, as indicated by figures compiled by the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington. That's one of the by-products of SEC — it compiles figures showing the compensation paid to highly valued officers of great corporations.

For 1934, at least 11 men each received compensation of $100,000 a year or more—total compensation of the 11 was above $1,800,000, according to the SEC figures.

First of these is T. J. Watson, whose income in salary and from several other sources mounted to the neat total of $365,358. He's president of the International Business Machines Corporation, the vast agglomeration which manufactures computing, book-keeping, and similar machinery in a half dozen countries.

Schwab Well Paid Then comes Charles M. Schwab and G. G. Crawford, with a clean quarter million apiece. Schwab is well known as chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, whose plants dot New Jersey and Delaware. But Crawford? He's another steel man, president of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation.

Close behind these steel men comes W. S. Gifford, who is renowned as president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. For running practically all the nation's telephone lines, Mr. Gifford drew down $206,250.

Philip LeBoutillier came next in line with a little matter of $130,095. Never heard of him? He's president and general manager of Best & Co., a big New York department store with several branches.

Nicely over the mark with $125,219, was Francis B. Davis, Jr., chairman of the board and president of the U. S. Rubber Co., one of the "big four" of rubber. And close behind him was E. G. Seubert, with a stipend of $117,000. Didn't you recognize Seubert? President of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

Others Draw $100,000 During this hot weather you are in a position to appreciate the $100,000 salary paid in 1934 to R. W. Woodruff. He's president

Texas' New Laws Which Go Into Effect On Aug. 10 Are Outlined In Series of Austin Dispatches

Editor's Note: Here is the first of a series of articles on new Texas laws which become effective Aug. 10, 90 days after the adjournment of the 44th legislature.

AUSTIN.—Texas steps further into the field of regulation Aug. 10, when acts affecting a variety of industries—from hairdressing to undertaking—become effective. The field of artificial beauty will be regulated literally "down to the fingertips" under direction of a state board of hairdressers and cosmetology. All beauty shop and beauty school operators must be registered. Licenses are procured on a showing of proficiency.

Another profession for a woman, that of nursing, is regulated and "accredited school of nursing" defined. Special hospitals approved by the state board of nurse examiners are allowed to train nurses, providing there are 25 or more beds in the hospital and a daily average of 15 patients. Three years is specified as the minimum time to train a nurse.

Dairymen of Texas won part of a long fight for control of that industry when the legislature defined and outlawed sale of "filled milk" in competition with pure milk. The law becomes effective Aug. 10.

Citrus fruit farmers secured passage of a law providing "funeral directors" will be required to secure license from the state board of embalmers if they wish to continue in business. The board was increased from three to five, with rotating six-year terms.

"Transportation agents" were defined and will be regulated by the state railroad commission under another measure.

Wynne Goode, state service officer of the American Legion, who has his office on the first floor of the state land office building, Thursday filled out the application which will make life a bit easier for them. Mr. Goode has been doing this for six years, as state service officer, and his predecessors in office have been on the job since 1924.

Any widow or orphan of a World War veteran killed in action or who dies as a result of war injuries or any dependent parent of such a veteran is entitled to a monthly benefit payment upon making application, Mr. Goode said. Though this fact has been widely advertised, there are yet many like the Creators of Austin who do not yet know about the service, he said.

CCC Enrollments Will Be Filled By Last of August

AUSTIN.—Young men throughout Texas eligible for Civilian Conservation Corps enlistment have been advised by State Enrollment Supervisor Neal E. Guy to make themselves known to their county administrators if they are interested in being among the 16,000 to be enrolled by Aug. 31.

Guy advised county administrators of their quotas and asked that they examine their relief rolls for probable enrollees, with the possibility that quotas will be increased when administrators show enough CCC candidates to warrant.

An eligible candidate is any single man between 18 and 28 whose family is on the relief rolls. While administrators were asked to search their rolls for probable enrollees, Guy suggested that the young men themselves notify their administrator if they are eager to enroll in the CCC.

Approximately 16,000 Texans are to be enrolled by Aug. 31, with about 10,000 expected to be sent to out-of-state camps, Guy said. Out-of-state assignments are made because Texas camps already have their quotas, while camps in some of the other states have not, he explained.

Enrollment will be made at intervals during the next month, and enrollment instructions have already been issued to the first allotment of 32,244.

Forty-three new camps are being built in Texas, bringing the total in this state to 96. Approximately 30,000 Texans will be in the CCC by Aug. 31.

Germany's billion-dollar debt wouldn't be so bad, if it were all owed to the United States.

Murals Depict a Town's History

COLUMBIA, Mo.—The history of Columbia from the time Indians roamed where college romances now flourish until the present day is depicted in murals recently painted on the city council room walls.

The work of Kenneth E. Hudson, professor of art in the University of Missouri, the paintings "express the development of the particular social and economic culture pertinent to mid-western communities."

One of the more interesting of the murals pictures the building of the old plank road from Columbia to the Missouri river.

Prominent in the group is the laying of the cornerstone for the first University of Missouri building.

DALLAS.—Her majesty, the Black Widow Spider, notorious insect of the dreaded species, is challenged in Dallas.

Eddie Carroll, emergency hospital ambulance driver, who caught what he terms the granddaddy of all poisonous insects—a young vinegarone, issues a challenge to backers of black widow spiders, scorpions, tarantulas or any other of the many legged species, for a fight unto death.

In behalf of his "Viny" he made the challenge to fight them one at a time or all at once. "Viny's diet of just plain bugs and things is a bit too soft for him, I'm afraid," Carroll declared. "I fear for his well being unless I can scrape up some black widow spiders or scorpions to afford him a little exercise and a square meal for a change."

The unsightly, copper-colored member of the scorpion family after whose bite Mexican sheeps-knows to have wrapped a blanket around their bodies and lie down in the shade to await death, is being kept carefully guarded in a glass container.

COOL in spite of the HEAT... No matter how much the sun beats down on a shingle, tile or composition roof, excessive heat can't collect in the attic and make an oven out of the entire house if a Comfort Cooling system is installed. Instead, cooling breezes come in ALL the windows and hot, dead air in the attic is forced out. Cut-away view showing how a Comfort Cooling system operates in the attic, out of sight and out of hearing. The only visible evidence is a grilled opening in the ceiling of a hall. The arrows show how large quantities of air is drawn in through windows and forced out through openings. At the right is a photograph of an actual installation, showing the large ventilating fan that changes the air in the house every minute. Here is a way to make your entire home comfortable, even on the hottest days and nights. Install a Comfort Cooling system and banish the discomfort of hot, stuffy rooms. Make the inside of your home as pleasant in the day time as a spot under the shade of a tree and as refreshing at night as a breeze on the lawn. We will be glad to furnish detailed information about a Comfort Cooling system for your home. Just call our office or fill out and mail the coupon.
