Control Over Liquor Must Be Maintained

The Senate should go slowly in considering the House alcohol control bill which permits shipment of liquor in casks or barrels to hotels and clubs.

This might look like a move for cheaper whiskey, and so it is.

But it is much more. It might well be the first breach through which later on a flood of unbranded, cut and generally inferior liquor would pour across the country.

And from that it is only a step to the old-fashioned barrel house where, in the old days a man could cut his way through the reek of alcohol and buy 10 or 15 cents' worth of cheap whiskey to fill whatever empty container he brought with him.

Cheaper bread, yes. Cheaper meat, and cheaper beans and potatoes. But let the government think twice, or even three times, before letting down the bars that now hold hard liquor under close regulation as to quality, measure, and source.

It is by taxation and regulation that Britain has steadily brought about a reduction in the amount of hard liquors consumed in the British Isles.

Let it be remembered that hard liquor is, after all, a luxury. Even the slogan, "the workingman must have his beer," doesn't broaden out into "everybody must have cheap whisky at the expense of bringing back practices we have worked hard to get rid of."

The leading government officials concerned, and even some far-sighted liquor-dealers and distillers, are against bulk sales of hard liquor, knowing the abuses to which it leads.

It is this kind of breach in the well-built wall of repeal that will be gaily stormed by the WCTU, whose annual convention comes soon, and which will have some justification in seizing on any such let-down as evidence that "the bad old days" are returning.

United States Faces a Golden Dilemma

The mysteries of international finance are much too much for practically all of us.

And here is just another of the paradoxes that make it so. We think of gold as good, something to be desired. Yet American financiers are actually worried because gold continues to pour into the United States.

During the last six months, the total of gold brought into the country exceeded the amount sent out by $804,163,000. Now that is equal to 85 per cent of all the new gold produced in the world in 1934.

Without going into technical details, this much is evident to anyone: such a flood of gold coming into the country means that trade relations between the world's countries are still in a terrible state of imbalance. For what comes to us is being sent out of other countries.

The working of the gold standard or any international standard yet devised, implies that all countries must have a workable amount of the precious metal used, so that exchange may take place. It is like a poker game. Every player must have some chips if the game is to go on.

But as the stack of golden chips rises before Uncle Sam, the other players have fewer and fewer. That, however, is where the likeness to a poker game ends.

In a real poker game, when a man wins all the chips he quits and goes home.

In the international game, if one country gets all the chips, it has no home to which to go.

For gold has no value in itself. It is only as a medium of exchange that it has value. And if you have it all, nobody can exchange with you.

Soon, despite rising government debt, it appears that we will actually be faced with the problem of getting rid of gold, of devising some means whereby the other players will get part of our stack of chips so the game can be kept going.

CHAPTER XXXII

The first pink streaks of dawn reflected upon the lake. The water was calm and the air was still. The sun was just beginning to rise over the horizon, casting a golden glow over the scene.

She sat for a moment on the edge of the bed, retrieving her thoughts and trying to brush them away. The room was quiet, and she could hear the soft breathing of the person next to her.

And yet she knew it now she had always somehow believed that they would mean something to each other again. She knew now that from the first time she had met him, she had known that she was in love with him.

When Douglas Marsh had told her the bitter truth which meant that she could never be faithful to any man, she had realized more than ever that Bret had meant to her.

It had seemed so aloof and distant and right. And now he was as cheap and common as the hundreds of men she might meet and talk with or look in the eyes and see the same thing there.

She was shaking her head. "No, Tubby I don't think I want to go back now."

The other was silent a moment. Then she said, "I can understand that. You're way ahead of us who are in school yet. You've found a place in the world—and none of us can know where the door we're headed onto the campus lets go of us."

They found the dining room crowded with the movie company. Drann and the principals—except for Fragonet—were at one table, and the technical crew grouped around several square tables which had been shoved together.

She was shaking her head. "No, Tubby I don't think I want to go back now."

The other was silent a moment. Then she said, "I can understand that. You're way ahead of us who are in school yet. You've found a place in the world—and none of us can know where the door we're headed onto the campus lets go of us."

There Ain't No Such Animal, Eh?

The okapi seems to be the answer to the old riddle. "What is so rare as a day in June?" This is the first one to be shown in the London Zoo, a gift from the Prince of Wales, to whom it had been sent by King Leopold of Belgium; and only two others are in captivity. Practically a one-animal zoo, the okapi combines features of the giraffe, zebra and deer, and is a native of Belgian Congo.

Oxford Honor Due American

By United Press

OXFORD, Eng.—Fenton A. S. Gentry may be the first American to become president of athletics at Oxford University.

Gentry, who came from University of Virginia, has been in the Oxford squad as a shot-putter for the last two years, receiving his "blue" or letter when he competed against Cambridge University.

He would fill the post held by A. G. Pilbrow, who graduates at the end of this year. K.S. "Sandy" Duncan, the athletics secretary, would normally take over from Pilbrow next year, but he is unable to do so, and the choice therefore falls on Gentry on seniority grounds.

Once before an American has held the position of honorary secretary. This was in 1934 when Charles Stanwood, specialist in triple victories from Bowdoin, was secretary to Jack Lovelock's presidency.

CCC Enrollments To Finish Oct. 1st

AUSTIN—Enrollment of 16,000 youths in Texas in civilian conservation corps will be completed within two months, Neal E. Guy, state enrollment supervisor, said today.

The first allotment will be 3,224, only 338 of whom will remain in Texas. Of the total, about 10,000 will be sent out of the state. The 16,000 will make the total of young Texans in CCC camps number almost 30,000.

Fifty-three CCC camps are now operated in the state, and 43 more are being constructed.

Break open the large claws, using a hammer or nut cracker. Disjoint the claws first, since this makes it easier to remove the claw meat in whole pieces. There is a thin, bony membrane through the center of the meat in the large claw which can be removed by cutting through the meat at the base or joint and sitting lengthwise at the long side.

Cut the meat from the small claws and remove this meat with a skewer or nut pick. Or leave the small claws whole and use them for garnishing.

Chill the meat thoroughly before using.

Man Doesn't Know If He Has Water Or An Oil Well

By United Press NAVASOTA, Tex.—Jess Statum doesn't know whether he would rather have an oil well or a water well.

But he would like to know whether the well he dug a few days ago is going to yield oil or water.

He sent a bucket down to the water line at 36 feet. On withdrawing it he found a pail of liquid, 25 per cent of which was oil. Other trials met with the same results.

Since there are no pipe lines or oil wells for 20 miles, Statum doesn't know what to believe. Neither do his friends and neighbors.

He has found it necessary to guard the shed which he built over his unique well to keep visitors and curiosity seekers away until he decides what course to pursue.

"I need good water," he said the other day, "but I would not object to having an oil well in my yard."

STUDY IN EXPRESSIONS

SENSITIVE FOREIGN STATESMAN BEING DEEPLY SHOCKED BY A CRITICAL NEWSPAPER ARTICLE

SAME SENSITIVE FOREIGN STATESMAN LOOKING OVER SOME OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS

Highway Number 89

and there is a grim determination to find out just where the trouble is. Frequent interviews are appearing in the daily newspapers concerning new projects and what the highway commission is going to do, but as "sit" all is as silent as the tomb. It seems that the present state administration and the majority of the highway commission have turned thumbs down on Highway 89 and those sections of West Texas most interested in its final completion. Rumors are flying thick and fast. Political combinations are hinted at and it is even charged that there is a concealed effort to discredit the official acts most directly responsible for the building of Highway No. 89.

A modern bridge has been built across the Brazos river on Highway No. 89 and hundreds of thousands of dollars have already been spent on this highway, and it would be and is nothing less than criminal to jeopardize the big investment already made by delaying the topping and completion there of and thus allow the construction already made to disintegrate.

Bankhead Highway No. 1 extending along the Texas & Pacific Railroad is now and will continue to be the main highway of travel between East and West Texas. It is along this route that the greatest number of people live and where the most towns with modern hotels and conveniences for the traveling public are found, and it is the people along this route who are most vitally interested in the topping and completion of Highway No. 89.

It is reported on reliable authority that an agreement has been entered into with the people of a certain section, who for selfish reasons have from the very first opposed the building of Highway No. 89, that said highway will not be topped and completed until another certain road is built. We do not wish to be understood as opposing the building of any road for the reason that it will likely take traffic from our own town and community for we favor the construction of highways wherever they are needed, but we believe it is unfair and unjust to make the completion of "89" contingent on the building of some other road. There is no connection between the projects, one is ready for completion, the other has not been started. Such an agreement is nothing less than political favoritism and if undertaken to be adhered to by those in authority will be resented by thousands of West Texans.

To contend that there is no money on hand to top and complete Highway No. 89 is merely juggling with figures and hiding behind technicalities, and there are none but that know the highway commission can top and complete this road if they want to. There is no highway project in this state the completion of which is more imperative, and there is no good reason why it should not be done. In this connection we would especially point out the great benefit which this highway would be to this section and to the great number who will pass this way in going to and returning from the Centennial to be held at Dallas next year.

We sincerely trust that the present administration and the highway commission will without further delay proceed with the topping and completion of Highway No. 89.

Ordered work commenced which was a definite promise to this section that the road would be completed. Any successor is honor bound to carry out that promise which is made by the State of Texas to its citizen-ship through the Highway commission. The citizenship of this section have contributed their portion in taxes and otherwise for road-building, they kept their faith and promise to the state government by paying their taxes. The state would violate a sacred vow in the event that Highway 89 was junked in its present condition. Respect can only be maintained by keeping a promise.
