Miler Wins Her

Bill Bonthron, Princeton University's star miller, has bowed to opponents occasionally during his track career, but he has beaten all rivals for the hand of Marion McLennan Lineweaver (above), of Princeton, N. J. Their vacation romance will be climaxed by marriage at Montreal on June 27.

MYSTERY OF SLAIN COUPLE STILL PUZZLE

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, June 27.—The sheriff's department still was attempting today to clear up the mysterious death of a man and woman identified tentatively as Lawrence Mouson and Mrs. Carrol Mickelson of San Diego, Calif. Bodies of the pair were found late yesterday in a car parked on the beach near here. They apparently had been dead about six hours. The floorboards of the small sedan had been torn away and the windows were closed. Although the ignition was turned on, the motor was not running. A coroner's verdict of suicide was returned. Investigators expressed belief that the motor ran until fuel was exhausted, pouring fumes into the car. Apparently the two were practically penniless. Cans of food believed issued by the San Diego relief office were found in the car.

LOCAL DELEGATE TO ROTARIAN Food Not To Taste, B. M. Collie Says MEET FINDS MEXICO IS FRIENDLY

Latin America—a friendly country—the food not so hot—B. M. Collie, Eastland delegate to the recent International Rotary convention held in Mexico City, D. F., reports. The Eastland delegate states that the Spanish and American food concoctions were not to his gastronomical taste. The Mexican food, he indicated, might have been satisfactory if partaken alone, but when mixed with American dishes not prepared to U. S. rules or recipes, it just didn't go. Collie returned early this week with C. A. Hertig and Mr. and Mrs. Carl P. Springer, all of Eastland. Keynote of the convention was plea of speakers for world peace, Collie stated. Sessions of the international club were held in the Palace of Fine Arts, comparative to a municipal auditorium in the United States, he said. The building, costing 20 million pesos, was started in 1904 and completed in 1934, is an elaborate structure, Collie noted. A peso, the Rotarian discovered, is equivalent to 29 cents in American currency. Lighting a mild cigarette of Mexican manufacture, costing considerably less than those of Kentucky and North Carolina vintage, Collie told of side trips—five in all. One took the party to pyramids, presumably constructed by the Aztec Indians centuries ago. A woman guide explained they appeared to her as those she had seen in Egypt. The convention was opened by an address of welcome by President Cardenas of Mexico, though the presidential mansion which he viewed is for use of the chief executive, it is not used by Cardenas, Collie reported. "He was elected on a 'poor man's ticket'." Seen from the district at the convention were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Newham of Ranger, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Anderson of the same city, and Tom H. Taylor of Brownwood, district governor. Returning from Mexico, at Cameron they tarried 14 hours while tracks, washed out by heavy rains, were repaired on the 20-mile stretch to Laredo. Rails between the cities were placed in what Collie described a "horse-shoe shape." Answering a puzzler to the average American, Collie stated the "D. F." that follows Mexico City means "federated district," as D. C., District of Columbia, after Washington. Convention notes: Edward Johnson of Roanoke, Va., elected Rotary International president, succeeding Robert Hill of Missouri. Two thousand, six hundred and seventy-six of the 3,800 clubs were represented. Meeting opened Monday, June 17, ending Friday, June 21. Multi-lingual police were on duty for convenience of delegates. Over 5,000 delegates attended.

OUTLAWING OF GOLD SUITS IS ASKED TODAY

WASHINGTON, June 27.—President Roosevelt today asked congress to outlaw all further suits against the government based on abrogation of the gold clause and federal securities. In a special message, the president asked that this be done through legislation, withdrawing the consent of the United States to be sued "on its securities, coins or currencies." Mr. Roosevelt also proposed that congress authorize the treasury to redeem outstanding gold clause bonds, dollar for dollars, if the holders desire, without waiting for the regular maturity dates. Mr. Roosevelt said outlawing of further suits was necessary to prevent "a handful of private litigants" from exploiting "the general public in the hope of a wholly speculative private profit." In suits decided by the supreme court last winter, claimants sought to collect $1.69 in present currency for each dollar of face value of gold in the dollar prior to devaluation.

Principles and Procedure Followed in Selecting New Projects Is Outlined

AUSTIN, June 27.—Preliminary statement of the principles and procedure to be followed in selecting Works Progress Administration projects was in the hands of county relief administrators this week. The statement indicated county relief offices will be the point of contact for sponsors of these projects until local offices of the Works Progress Administration have been established. Sponsors of Works Progress Administration projects will include all authorized governmental agencies, such as states, counties, cities, villages, such as townships. Unofficial groups, such as boards of trade, clubs, societies, churches, and other such institutions, may not act as sponsors, but may cooperate unofficially with sponsors in the organization of proper proposals. The following fundamental principles, the statement said, should be recognized in determining the eligibility of projects: (a) The projects should be of a nature that a considerable proportion of the money spent will go into wages for labor. (c) Projects which promise ultimate return to the Federal Treasury of a considerable proportion of the costs will be sought. (d) Funds allotted for each project should be actually and (Continued on page 3)

Austin's Population Boosted In Quality, Says Writer in Column Devoted to Judge, Mrs. Hickman

Austin's population received a boost in quality since Judge and Mrs. J. E. Hickman moved from Eastland, according to the writer of "Diantha's Dairy" in a recent issue of the Austin American. Eastland's loss was viewed as only fair by the writer because "for hasn't Eastland had Austin's good folk, the Albert Taylors, for a year past?" Judge and Mrs. Hickman moved to Austin when he was appointed a member of the supreme court commission of appeals. "Diantha's" views in the column were as follows: Austin has had a big boost in population recently, in quality at least, if not numerically speaking in the addition to its citizenship of Judge and Mrs. J. E. Hickman, who came from Eastland when the Judge was named a member of the Commission of Appeals. Eastland told the world how he felt about it at a farewell party for the Hickmans. An extra, pur-

Black Widow Spider Beats Tarantula In Battle; Eats Victim

CISCO, June 27.—The controversy over the relative deadliness of the black widow spider and the Texas tarantula was settled here yesterday—at least as far as representatives of the two species were concerned. The black widow, a vicious brute at best and acclaimed by doctors as the most dangerous of Texas spiders, turned giant killer and slew Primo Tarantula. Then, not content with that, the champion celebrated with a victory feast, the vanquished spider being the chief dish on the menu. Eugene Lankford, who discovered a black widow in a tire he was changing and promptly bottled it, yesterday found a tarantula and placed it in the bottle with the killer. Inside, three minutes the two spiders were at it, and there was no referee to award a technical knockout. Although much smaller than the tarantula, the black widow had the better of the scrap from the first, piling up points in the early part of the battle. Finally it bit the tarantula and that settled the matter. The victor then spun a web about the tarantula and turned cannibal, devouring its victim and growing all the while. As soon as it finished its grisly meal it cut the web and allowed the tarantula's exoskeleton, only part remaining unsoaked, to fall to the bottom of the bottle.

Authorities To Unite in Crime Campaign

Society has had no greater encouragement for its security than that derived from the latest accomplishments of the government's G-men in solution of the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping case.

But that is only one phase of an extensive program of federal, state, and local co-operation against criminal activities that the government at Washington is soon to put into effect.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings recently revealed the plans by which a scientific training school for state and local police officers will be opened, probably this summer. A similar training course will be made available to state prison officials; a federal bureau of crime prevention will be sought from Congress for co-ordination of federal, state, and local police efforts, and not only police officers, but federal attorneys, marshals, and commissioners will receive training that will help them in proper prosecution of criminals.

Never before in the history of the country has so complete a campaign on behalf of society been attempted, and for this Attorney General Cummings and his staff are to be commended.

"Plant, technical equipment, scientific facilities, lecturers, and instructors will be available," Cummings says, adding that the sole expenses for the "students" will be their transportation to and from Washington and their personal living costs during their stay there.

All that is needed now is co-operation of federal, state, and local authorities for this united battle against crime. Recent developments promise well for such joint effort.

"One of the major factors in such recent success has been achieved has been the increasing co-operation among federal, state, and local agencies," Cummings asserts in this connection. "The future requires even closer co-ordination, and even more complete give-and-take in all our activities."

To attain this sort of co-operation, however, petty local pride and jealousy must be waived for the higher purpose at hand. Politics must be set aside entirely.

And there must be a willingness of local officers, at times, to work under others in a centralized effort to achieve a common end.

Activities of Uncle Sam's operatives against kidnapers, and the commendable aid given them by state and local authorities, points to the effective success of such program.

COOL
in spite of the heat.....

It's cool in spite of the heat at the seashore—why not bring the seashore right into your home, store or office?

Air conditioning can and will make any room cool and comfortable no matter how hot it may be outside. Cool, clean air, rid of all impurities, takes all the unpleasantness away from even the hottest, sultriest days of summer. Excessive water vapor is condensed from the air and drained away.

Phone or write the nearest office of Texas Electric Service Company—trained air conditioning engineers will gladly discuss your air conditioning problems with you.

Pictured at the left is an entirely self-contained air conditioning unit that will add to the attractiveness of any room in which it is placed. One unit of this type will usually adequately serve any one room of the home or office. Other styles and types are available, some one of which will surely meet your requirements.

earth they saw it was only a woman's torn scarf, caught on a jagged root. The little ship circled and swooped. "She's here — some place," Michael said. "We can't help but find her."

"Want to go on, brother?" That was the pilot speaking. The fat, amiable pilot who had a date that night back in his home town and wanted to keep it. "I'll make it worth your while to keep going."

It was a huddled figure they saw ahead on the desert floor. Khaki-colored clothes. A bright scarf. Wilbur made a beautiful landing. Michael never knew afterward how he got out of the plane. He remembered stumbling as he ran, and he remembered hearing the soft, hurried breathing of the little man who followed him.

The pilot was a tubby little man with a mustache. Clem Wilbur from Santa Fe, he said, introducing himself. His own ship — he made a hobby of it — but if the lady or the gentleman wanted to go up, why, sure, he'd be glad to. Michael, briefly, explained. Clem Wilbur whistled. Yes, he knew the region. Come along — they'd get started pronto.

promptly spent and not held over until later years. (e) In all cases projects must be of a character to give preference of employment to those on the relief rolls.

Projects should also be so planned that continuous work may be available for such persons. Projects may include work relief projects previously submitted to Texas Relief Commission, and upon work has not been started.

Governmental agencies should utilize the facilities of local and state planning boards in the formulation of projects, the statement said. The sponsoring governmental agency is expected to contribute equipment, materials, and services to the maximum amount possible.

As has been previously announced, the nation was divided into four regions for the establishment of the earnings of workers on these projects. Texas was included in the third region in which salaries will range from $21 per month for unskilled work in rural areas to $75 per month for professional and technical work in the larger urban areas.

these things. Better to think of something else. She sang songs, lightly, until her cracked throat rebelled. She was dead tired now but still she stumbled on, her harsh sand drifting above the tops of her jodhpur boots. Once she tore at the top button of her pongee shirt and released it as if better to breathe.

Frank Millard would find her; or Dirk. They both knew the country like a book. They would laugh at this adventure later on. Or would they? She remembered reading the story of a man and woman lost in the desert. They had been middle-aged lovers. The man had left his heart medicine at home so as not to appear handicapped to his bride; the woman had not worn her spectacles for the same reason. And so both had perished, one because of his seizure, the other because she could not see to lead them out of their trouble.

A sagebrush root tore at her ankle. She stumbled. Fell. Rising again, she realized that she had hurt her ankle cruelly. Not a sprain, perhaps, but nearly so. She stumbled on. There was no pity in the aching sky, no living thing in all the world to pity her. Only the burning and heat and silence, and far-off, the birds wheeling and swooping. There were no planes to be had nearer than Claymore. Hilda Hillard told Michael lifelessly. Fifty miles back, the way they had come. Even then it was not certain. It was an emergency landing field.

A Rare June Day—a la Oregon!

After glancing at this scene, folks sweltering in summer heat will agree that the poet should have written, "What is so rare as a day in June—in Oregon!" To these men, trying valiantly to drive a path through a 40-foot snowdrift to open the MacKenzie Pass highway, it's a lot of hard work. But hot weather sufferers generally wouldn't mind swapping with them.
