Plan Is To Help

human mush. It is the fighting spirit that makes us strong. We have an opportunity now to show our mettle.

The way to bring about prosperity is to have money circulate. It gives employment to men unemployed. They spend it for food and raiment, the merchant increases his stock, this causes the factory wheels to move a little faster. In fact it is an endless chain that brings a smile of contentment to every human being.

The Chamber of Commerce proposes that we have a week of prosperity beginning Sunday, Sept. 7. Every movement for the betterment of humanity may quite properly be started on the Sabbath Day. Let the children be provided with a little extra change for the Sunday School offering. Later at Divine Service suppose each attendant dropped an extra sum of money into the contribution box. Then at the same time offering a silent prayer that the extra money put in circulation this week be used wisely.

"The sky is the limit." With that for our motto, let us attempt to set $100,000 in circulation this week.

There are some oil operators who contemplate drilling an oil well in the near future. Let us see if we cannot get one or two of these started either Monday or during this proposed prosperity week. This would be a good starter, then there are several good prospects on the sales agencies for the purchase of automobiles. Let a strong effort be made to close them during this week.

There are several parties planning to build new homes in our city. By and through a little persuasion they might be induced to start the building permit and start the work at once.

No better time ever existed for re-painting your house or store building than right now. The sun shines every day and the hot winds will set and dry the paint as fast as it is applied.

We take great pride in the appearance of our public square. Set off as it is by the beautiful courthouse and attractive lawns surrounding same, this beauty should be an inducement for every business property owner to polish up the front door of the store with new paint. Some buildings of brick and stone show the effects of some of our curb stone brokers a streak of dirt along the face rubbing against the polish surface of same. Why not employ a painter with soap and brush and have a house cleaning on the outside. All of this would involve some small expenditure meaning employment to some needy person as well as adding to the attractiveness of our business district. Most of the signs on our business buildings have been repainted recently, but there are a few that would be improved by a new coat of paint.

School will open very soon. No doubt many mothers have been saying, "Junior needs a new pair of shoes and Mary a new frock." There are pencils, tablets, etc. to be bought. Why not anticipate a little and do some of this buying during this week and thus spreading the school expenses over a little period of time.

Many of our young men who as yet have not the burden of providing for the wants of children might take that young lady you have been keeping company with to an extra movie some evening and a visit afterwards to an extra lunch or suppose you sent her a box of candy. Your chances might be improved for winning her in the end. On the other hand, the young lady who has been planning a trip to be beauty shop some time in the near future might go this week.

Winter will come soon requiring gas stoves to be put in service. Why not have them all looked over and repainted and furnished with new rubber hose if necessary? How about a load of chats for your drive way that you have been thinking about using? Why not make your improvement now? In fact if we look over our city from all angles there are many little improvements that could be made at this time and in this way bring about a measure of prosperity that would benefit every one.

one trodden path where no star of hope envelopes the land of the Aztecs. The Community Spirit is one to be encouraged in every way and every line. We are learning more and more of the generous spirit prevailing among our merchants. These beautiful gifts that we see given away each night are gifts worth while, and somebody has them to pay for. Our merchants are the ones who pay the price, and we should show our appreciation to them by boosting them.

Finally he interested two men in pooling their funds with him and he "checkerboarded" an unproven area near Cushing, Okla. He found the productive Wilcox sand. His holdings became the center of the Cushing pool. This was in 1912. Many millionaires, including Harry F. Sinclair, got their start from these holdings. He sold out for about $2,500,000 and married Miss Bernice Fraates, daughter of J. A. rates of Springfield, Mo., vice-president of the Frisco railroad.

He quit the oil business and lost practically all his fortune in building railroads. With his depleted funds and on his own initiative, he bought 50 acres near Tonkawa, Okla. Defying the geologists of the area, he drilled. The leases yielded about $20,000 in a short time.

Then he "wildcatted" his way into the Greater Seminole field and added millions. He played the stock market nearby and prospered by the cost of drilling many dry holes at a cost of $100,000 he continued to wildcat.

Throughout his career, he had a phobia for being near his wells. When a well neared production he used to sleep under the boiler. When in distant cities, he would be informed of a well near production. He would order the drillers to halt while he flew to the location and watch the brown fluid gush over the crown block.

Friends said that only recently did he permit a modern bookkeeping system to be installed. He kept the details of his leases in his mind. Finally, he allowed his business to be incorporated as "T. B. Slick, Inc."

Slick sand, a geological formation, has been named after him. The town of Slick, one of the ghost oil towns of Oklahoma, stands as a monument to his exploits. When the talk of conservation was propounded three years ago, he bitterly attacked its proponents. In face of litigation he called their "bluff" and continued to flow his wells. His wells, like all others in Oklahoma, are prated now.

His major relaxation was hunting. He owns large game preserves in Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana. His friends say that the only nights he slept more than four hours was when he walked several miles on the hunt.

He owns homes in Oklahoma City, Clarion, and San Antonio, Texas. Slick's office announced all his wells will be shut down during the funeral which will be held at Clarion. Mrs. Slick, Clarion, a sister, Mrs. C. F. Urshell, Oklahoma City; two sons, Thomas B. Jr., 14, Earl S., and a daughter, Betty, 11, survive.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 16.—The body of Thomas B. Slick, Oklahoma oil magnate, who died of a cerebral hemorrhage at Johns Hopkins hospital early today, will be removed to his native town, Clarion, Pa., where he will be buried.

NATIONAL OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug. 16.—Federal aid to Oklahoma farmers stricken by the extended drought was asked today by Gov. W. J. Holloway. WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Possibility that Kanchow, China, where many Americans are living, may have fallen prey to bandit gangs, was seen in reports received by the State Department today saying all communications sent to Kanchow from Shanghai in the last few days had gone unanswered. Confirmation that Tsiangfu had been recaptured by the Nationalists was received by the Department.

Oddities in The News of Today

PEIPING, Aug. 16.—From Harbin the city of "tall tales" comes the report that an army of rats is marching through outer Monkolia, apparently headed for North Manchuria on its way from Yinsk, Siberia. The report says that millions of rats are marching in disciplined fashion under the leadership of different "army corps leaders," and that they seem to know just where they are going. They stop only to gather enough food to sustain them.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—A man once recognized by King Edwards of England as a musical genius, but now destitute and friendless, pleaded today with officials who had sent him to jail that they aid him in a delayed battle against narcotics. It was 40 years ago that Dr. P. Reginald Deighton was graduated with honors from the Royal College of Organists in London. He was 23 then. Great things were predicted for him. King Edward thrilled at his rendition of old masterpieces on the Royal Palace organ.

"That was the start of a brilliant career. He presided at the great pipe organs in ancient cathedrals, Westminster and Notre Dame, and wherever he went success was his. An attack of rheumatism led to his use of drugs. "I acquired the habit before I was aware what was happening," Deighton, now 68, told Judge Williams Helander in the Grand Crossing police court.

The once famous musician, unshaven, his clothes frayed, himself a tottering, mentally befogged derelict, was found wandering about the streets. His eyes had become glassy stare and he stumbled as he walked. "It may kill me, but I want to go to prison," Deighton pleaded, extending as in prayer the shaking hands that once thrilled thousands by the firmness of their touch. "Perhaps a sentence will break the hold the drug has on me. I'm no good as I am. Nothing can be worse, I want to try it."

The judge fined Deighton $100 so he could be sent to jail and have an opportunity to receive the treatment under state supervision.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The interstate Commerce Commission today authorized the Fort Worth and Denver Northern Railway company, a Burlington subsidiary, to construct 110 miles of line from Childress to Pampa, Tex. This was made conditional upon the Burlington and the Rock Island lines jointly constructing and operating the route between Shamrock and Wellington and south to a point where the Rock Island diverts south to connect with the Frisco north of Quanah. The construction will lie in Childress, Col. Burlington and the Wheeler and Gray counties, Texas.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 16.—The re-opening of the Mexico City cathedral yesterday was greeted with rejoicing by the capital. Large crowds went to the cathedral to hear Archbishop Diaz say mass. It had been open since the religious conflict, which was settled last year.

HAVANA, Cuba., Aug. 16.—Police searched today for an unidentified man who shot and killed Abelardo Pacheco, editor of the newspaper La Voz Del Pueblo. The editor was killed by a volley of shots from an automobile as he alighted from a street car near his home.

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Aug. 16.—Gen. Emilio Arevalo Cedeño, Venezuelan revolutionary leader, was refused landing permission from the S. S. Coronado today when he applied to port authorities. He was en route here from Colombia.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—What is claimed to be a new world's record in the half-mile run was established by Miss G. Gunn of the Birchfield Harriers in the Stamfordbridge women's A. A. championships today. Miss Gunn covered the distance in 2 minutes, 18 1-5 seconds.

BOLZANO, Italy, Aug. 16.—A local carpenter, Giuseppe Teschet, amateur mathematician and geometer, claims to have solved the problem of the squaring of the circle. Teschet said he has solved the problem both mathematically and geometrically, and is willing to demonstrate before a group of experts and authorities. He handed his "solution in a sealed envelope to Notary Longhi in this city, and the envelope will be opened before local authorities and professors of mathematics.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The new management of the Republican party sounded today a keynote directed at offsetting any political reaction resulting from business depression. Robert H. Lucas, new executive director of the Republican National Committee, issued his first statement declaring that while men were walking the streets hunting jobs, democratic strategists were fearing an improvement before election.

A Republican keynote for meeting the economic issue was sounded by Lucas as follows: "When a man gets a serious illness, he doesn't call in a quack. That's just the time he puts his faith and hope in the old family physician."

Lucas said the country is facing a crisis and that if a democratic congress were elected the country would not see normal business for some years to come. Politicians of both parties have privately felt the business situation would be one of the chief factors in the coming congressional elections.

Rescuers Work Unflatteringly To Save Fellows PRINCETON, B. C., Aug. 16.—Flames bursting from the Coalton Colliery today turned No. 4 tunnel into a funeral pyre for the bodies of 43 miners who were entombed there by an explosion Wednesday. Heroic attempts to rescue the bodies have been abandoned due to the imminent danger of further explosions in the gas choked chambers of the mine. George Murray, superintendent of the Collieries, announced he would not permit the lives of rescue workers to be jeopardized further.

PRINCETON, B. C., Aug. 16.—Grimy, hysterical men, their faces streaked with perspiration, staggered in and out of the shaft of the No. 4 mine of the Coalton Collieries today, defying nature and man to make them abandon efforts to rescue entombed comrades, now believed to number 42. Inspectors and managers agreed there was hardly a chance that any of the trapped miners would be found alive, but their fellows would not give up. Neither would the families of the men who were lost. Some of the rescuers have been carried out, half paralyzed. Some have some of the entombed men stood in little groups about the entrance to the shaft, hoping against hope that at least some of the men might be found alive. Three bodies already had been recovered. One man out of 46, Joe Porchella, a Colliery hospital attendant, "I sensed something was coming and threw myself flat on my face. "A hurricane, it seemed, passed over me. Then I crawled and crawled, as fast as I could, with dust and gravel falling all about. "Finally in the darkness, I felt water and followed it up grade. That was the way I knew I was on the way out." When I saw light at the mouth of the tunnel, I fell. I woke up in this bed." Rescuers early today had cleared away all but about 500 feet of the shaft closed by the explosion. They were at the 1,500 foot level. It was believed the passage could not be cleared in less than another day.

You Can't Get Rain by Ordering It C.O.D. Many Freak Attempts to Produce Showers Have Been Made But All Are Futile, Says Weatherman

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Rorimer, temperamental man of Hollywood, can't stand the studio manager's contract as scenario writer to be fired. But he isn't. He has become keenly interested in a young girl, Mona, who is working for a studio manager. She has had stage experience, and she knows enough to make a living. Dan suspects that these may be some sort of tragedy in her life.

Rorimer, former newspaper man from New York, lives with Paul, who writes a daily movie story for a string of newspapers. He lives with Mona Morrison, Eva Harley, two extra girls, and a rather bitter. She does not seem to make a living. Dan suspects that these may be some sort of tragedy in her life.

Rorimer, famous Hollywood actor, has shown some interest in a young girl, Mona, who is working for a studio manager. She has had stage experience, and she knows enough to make a living. Dan suspects that these may be some sort of tragedy in her life.

Rorimer, former newspaper man from New York, lives with Paul, who writes a daily movie story for a string of newspapers. He lives with Mona Morrison, Eva Harley, two extra girls, and a rather bitter. She does not seem to make a living. Dan suspects that these may be some sort of tragedy in her life.

There was a sprinkling of sailors, dancing or lounging in chairs near the soda fountain. "The fleet's not in," Collier explained to Mona and Eva. "You'd see enough of them to man a battleship."

They remained there for a couple of hours of dancing and watching others dance. The orchestra played with unwearied frequency and there were the inevitable few couples trying to show off. Their exaggerated grotesque maneuverings were vastly entertaining to Collier. He laughed a great deal and declared that it was more fun than a show. "It would be so funny," Dan Rorimer told him, "if one of those sheiks gets wise to you."

But Paul ignored him. "I like that couple over there," he told Mona. "The ones keeping time with their chewing gum. . . I told you it would be so funny, didn't I? Was I right or not?"

Dan said, "At that, it's got it all over some of those nightclub gyp joints where they sock you a dollar a bottle for ginger ale and expect you to dance on a floor about the size of a postage stamp."

Mona said it reminded her of some of the places she had been to in Chicago. "You know, where the dance tickets sell for 10 cents apiece. I was just a kid then. Gee, it makes me homesick."

Collier laughed at her. "Just a kid, did you say?" And Mona made a face.

It was after midnight when they got back to the bungalow, and Anne was waiting up. Rorimer knew a queer feeling of guilt, as though he had been spying on her, when she informed him that she had been out to dinner with Mr. Hurley.

"We went to the Montmartre," she said.

Dan managed to get her aside and tell her of the invitation to Martin Collins' party. "He's a real person, Anne; you'd better come."

She said she would be glad to go. "Did Mona tell you I tried to reach you on the phone this evening?"

Dan nodded. "She told me the good news too. I'm mighty glad. . . How did your voice sound to you? You heard it, of course."

"It sounded—" Anne stopped, and she laughed. "You'll think me conceited, Dan. It sounded—good. I'm so thrilled. I hardly know where I am. Mr. Hurley said that when he heard the play-back he decided he was going to let me have a song. . . Dan, I can hardly believe it! I didn't think I'd dare to try to sing!"

Anne Winter's dark eyes shone with excitement. Rorimer wanted to hear her in his arms and hold her there, for her eager beauty was almost irresistible. He thought that never before had he seen her so lovely as she was tonight.

He looked at her gravely, holding her sparkling eyes with his own. "I wasn't fooling," he told her, "when I said there was something in your voice that would get them. You've got something, Anne."

"You mean my singing, Dan?"

"Everything," he assured her, and Anne smilingly told him that that made her feel better.

"Because I'd be awfully disappointed if they just wanted me to sing and dance. After all, you see, I came out here with certain pretensions to being an actress. And I hope to be given a chance to act."

"You should worry about what kind of a ladder they give you to climb," Dan said. "You're bound for the top, Anne. . . Isn't that right, Paul?" he demanded, and he swung around toward Collier.

Paul was sitting on the sofa between Mona and Eva, carrying on an animated argument with the red-haired Mona. "Sure, that's right," he said, looking up briefly. "What did he say, Anne?"

"Nothing tough about that," said Collier, and he picked up his hat and grabbed Dan by the arm. "Come on, give the girls a break and let them get some sleep."

Driving homeward, Dan told Collier that he soon might have his opportunity to carry a story about Anne in his columns. "Hurley told her he's going to give her a song, and she'll probably have a dance with it. When it's all set you might give the little girl a big break."

Paul nodded. "You bet your life."

Dan continued: "She sure deserves it if anybody does. I'm tickled to death that she's made such a hit with Hurley."

"Hurley's a bachelor, Dan. Aren't you jealous?" Collier grinned.

"Maybe I'd better look into that," said Dan.

"You'd better." More seriously, he added that Hurley probably

"Sloan, the star maker, eh?" Rorimer laughed callously. "Every time I turn around I hear Sloan, Sloan! You'd think the man was a god or something. There are other directors in Hollywood. I'd be willing to stack Martin Collins up against him, for instance."

"Collins is good, all right," Paul agreed. "But he's no Garry Sloan—not yet. . . What the devil," he demanded, turning on Rorimer, "have you got against Sloan, anyway? You've never even met the man. I think, by God, that you're afraid he'd eat Anne Winter up, or something, if he took a shine to her! Don't be a sap; that girl can take care of herself."

Dan drove a short stretch in silence. He said, presently: "Let's stop in Henry's for a cup of coffee."

"And a piece of eggnog pie," Collier agreed. "Though I'll bet two bits they sold the last piece at lunch."

Martin Collins, Dan learned, lived at the crest of one of the numerous winding uphill drives in Beverly Hills. Collins had sent him an invitation with a map drawn on it, but despite its explicit directions, Rorimer lost his way twice; and twice he had to descend the hills by the main road and take his bearings over.

"This time," he informed Anne, or something."

But white really was what he liked her best in, he thought, and he told her so. "No fooling!"

He looked rather well himself, in his Tuxedo and his Panama. Paul Collier, who had watched his toll with critical eye, had pronounced him acceptable, and Anne's eyes had approved him.

Collins' new house was Spanish in design. It was impressive. The Japanese butler who admitted them took them toward the patio, where the director and his wife were sitting with their guests, and Collins jumped up at once and came toward them, bringing his wife with him, holding her by the hand.

Rorimer had met her before, and she welcomed him cordially. "I'm especially glad to see Dan Rorimer again!" she exclaimed, and her husband said shrewdly: "I'm especially glad to see the lady."

Dan laughed. "Miss Winter," he said, introducing her, and a moment later Mrs. Collins took Anne off with her.

Martin Collins took Dan by the arm and headed him toward the patio. "Your friend," he assured

Dallas Man Tells How New Medicine Ended Nervousness and Kidney Trouble.

"My system was in a very rundown condition due to nervousness and kidney trouble," said Mr. Andrew Lorton, 2420 1/2 Elm Street, Dallas. "My nerves were in such a condition that I could not sleep at night. My kidneys were very weak and I had dull pains across my back. I was forced to rise several times a night."

"A friend urged me to take Konjola. I am thankful I took his advice because Konjola drove all my pains from my back. I feel much better and am entirely out of misery, which I had for the past year. Konjola put my kidneys in a healthy condition and they are functioning properly. I am only too glad to praise this famed Konjola to other people who suffer as I did."

Konjola contains no alcohol, no nerve-deadening drugs, no heart-depressing chemicals. It needs no such hazardous ingredients, its seeming wonders to perform.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Aug. 16.—Here in New Jersey, where a speakeasy is still called a saloon, a good one was offered for sale, but it didn't appear such a good buy today.

Had you known about it, you might have bought it yesterday for $20,000 down, but prosecutor E. O. West was watching the place today for evidence of violations—a fact which made it seem much less desirable as a business proposition than when the following advertisement was inserted:

"For Sale—Saloon with property, old people want to retire; doing a 40,000-a-year business; never any liquor difficulties; catering to a select trade; a live wire can clear at least $20,000 yearly. This is one of the outstanding opportunities of a lifetime."

LONDON, Aug. 16.—It was reported in Angoria today that 300 Kurdish insurgents and 40 Persians were killed in recent fighting on the frontier, a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company said.

Attitude Of The Church Toward Certain Elements In Modern Life

By ARTHUR DE GRAVE, United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The attitude of the church toward "certain elements in modern life" again became the subject of heated controversy today with publication of the Lambeth conference resolutions providing for the guidance of Christian principles in practice of birth control.

The resolutions also recommended to Anglican churches throughout the world, including the United States, were regarded as the most important pronouncement in behalf of the Anglican communion during hundreds of years.

The conference affirmed the duty of parenthood as the glory of married life, but "where there clearly is a moral obligation to limit or avoid parenthood the method must be decided by Christian principles" the birth control resolution said.

Other resolutions adopted were: The conference urges a closer and more intensified study of the Bible throughout the world to obtain the Christian doctrine of God. The conference believes the Christian church of every nation should refuse to countenance any war in regard to which the govern-

Grid Stars in Baseball

THE Yankees have signed Jesse Hill University of Southern California athlete of no small fame in football and track. To succeed with the Yankees, Hill has to overcome a tradition. If memory serves me right, about 99 out of 100 football and track stars who get to the big leagues, are sent away after a brief trial.

McGraw gave Jim Thorpe, the greatest athlete of our modern times, every chance in the world to succeed as an outfielder. Thorpe had been a star outfielder at Carlisle, had won Olympic fame at Copenhagen by winning the pentathlon and decathlon and was the finest football player a coach could desire. McGraw realized the Thorpe drawing power and gave him a bigger chance than he accords most recruits.

No Like Crooked Ball

BUT Jim couldn't hit. Anybody with a good curve ball had the Indian sign on the Sac and Fox tribesman. Jim's weakness for a curve was so pronounced they didn't even want him in the minors. The best teachers in the world couldn't teach him how to set himself for an out or an outdrop.

Ernie Nevers was another. Nevers was All-America fullback one year playing with Stanford. He went up to the St. Louis Browns. The big league was too tough for him. Even the Browns couldn't use him—and he was one of the greatest football players the coast ever saw.

Glen Killinger made the All-America one year at Penn. He was given a trial in the majors, but drifted down, and this year was playing at Williamsport in the New York-Pennsylvania League.

Karow and Caldwell

MARTY KAROW was a great fullback at Ohio State. As I remember it was the Cards who gave him a trial in the big leagues. Marty has been holding down an infield job this year for Pueblo in the Western League.

Bruce Caldwell, the Yale halfback of a few years ago, who could ment of its own country has not declared willingness to submit to arbitration and conciliation when the nations are bound by a treaty or pact of pacific settlement of international disputes.

The conference recommends an enlarged scope of work entrusted to the order of deaconesses to attract more women who are barred from theatrical clergy.

It was understood the conference discussed most heatedly the resolutions on divorce and birth control, the latter being carried by a vote of 193 to 67. No other vote was made public.

The birth control resolution emphasized the need for sex education.

"The sexual instinct is a holy thing implanted by God," the resolution said, "and where the primary purpose of marriage is procreation of children, the conference believes that this purpose, as well as the paramount importance in married life of deliberate and thoughtful self-control, should be the governing considerations when there is clearly felt a moral obligation to limit or avoid parenthood, the method must be decided on Christian principles."

"The primary and obvious method is complete abstinence—but nevertheless, in those cases where there are morally sound reasons for avoiding complete abstinence, the conference agrees that other methods may be used provided this is done in the light of the same Christian principles."

The conference strongly condemned birth control practiced for "motives of selfishness, luxury or mere convenience." Legislation placing definite restrictions on birth control information was recommended "in view of the widespread and increasing irregular unions."

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—World famous aviators were aboard the Leviathan when she docked today from Europe.

Foremost among them was Lieut. Alford Williams, former navy flier who went abroad recently to gather the most prominent European aviators for the air races to be held next week in Chicago. Williams said the United States is just getting out of "the circus stage" in its air progress. He said there would be no acrobatics at the Chicago exhibition, but some "real flying."

Flight Lieutenant R. L. Acherley of the Royal Air Force of Great Britain who holds the world's speed record of 332 miles per hour also was on board.

Others were: Pietro Colombo of Italy; Marcel Doret, France, and Fritz Looz, Germany.

A Tale of 65 Cities

Sixty-five cities and towns, in West Texas, some of them large and some of them small, have one important advantage in common. They have ample electric power for future growth.

These 65 cities and towns of West Texas receive electric power from the transmission system of the Texas Electric Service Company, which assures not only sufficient power to care for the immediate needs, but also a power supply which is sufficiently flexible to care for unusual emergency demands, a situation which often occurs in a growing territory like West Texas.

The natural resources surrounding the 65 cities and towns served by the Texas Electric Service Company have formed the basis for substantial industrial development in the past, and point to a rapid growth in the future. Electric power has aided this development and the Texas Electric Service Company pledges itself to do everything necessary to maintain a class of electric power service which will continue to aid in bringing about this development.

Tune In Texas Electric Service Company Radio Program Over WBAP Every Tuesday at 8 P.M.

Texas Electric Service Company

Some cities which receive electric service from the power transmission system of the Texas Electric Service Company have been going through periods of phenomenal growth, yet have always had ample electric service for both domestic and industrial purposes. One of the cities served by the company increased its population more than 300 per cent, most of the increase coming within the last four years, yet electric service from the power transmission system of this company was more than sufficient to meet this unusual demand.

SAYS INDEPENDENT OIL MEN SHOULD OPPOSE STERLING

The independent oil men and all who are dependent upon them should oppose the candidacy of Ross Sterling for governor to the last ditch.

Why is the price of crude oil down to the vanishing point as far as profit is concerned and why are new activities almost at a standstill? Because the big oil companies have immense oil holdings in foreign countries and have prevented a tariff from being placed on crude oil. Since there is no tariff on petroleum, the big oil companies can import their cheaply produced oil in a flood and beat down the price on the independent operator's oil.

The independents need in the governor's office a candidate who will work for beneficial legislation and who will throw the whole prestige of the great office into the fight in Washington for a tariff on oil. Everything the oil man buys has protection. Oil, the only thing he has to sell, is unprotected.

Will Ross Sterling make the fight for the independents? He is the man who sold out the controlling interest in the Humble Oil company that brought the Standard back into Texas. Would he be properly grateful to the Standard—who paid him an amount reported to be $18,000,000—if he fought against their interest now?

Defeat Ross Sterling and elect instead the candidate who feels a sympathy for the "little man" as against the great oil octopus, for the struggling independent as against the mighty monopoly. Put a tariff on oil and you will add fifty cents a barrel to the value of every bit of oil produced in Eastland county. That will mean $20,000 a week or $1,000,000 a year. It will mean prosperity for the small operators, for the farmers on whose lands the wells are located and for the oil field workers, because new activities would immediately begin.

R. N. Grisham, Eastland, Tex.

Considerable mystery was thrown about his death.

FAMILY MENU

BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer

EVERY housekeeper has had the experience of having a visitor on the very day there's hash for dinner and no dessert and not a minute's time to run to the market.

To this end it's very much worth while to keep some "stock" company menus and recipes written down in black and white in an easily accessible place. A scrap book, card index or loose leaf note book should have a section devoted to "Company-Emergency Menus and Recipes."

As to the hash, if the meat is veal or a fine cut of beef and there is time, why not make timbales and serve the potatoes au gratin or in a cream sauce? If they are served au gratin, they can be put into the oven with the timbales. If the hash is necessary, try serving it on toast with a poached egg dropped into a small depression on each portion.

A Substitute for Dessert

Hot biscuits and preserves often can be made to take the place of a dessert and always are well liked. Baking powder biscuits mixed up and popped into the oven will bake while the table is being set. Warm ginger bread is another popular dessert that is quick and easy. At this time of year, apple sauce and ginger bread make a delicious dessert. When food must be stretched to serve more than were originally planned for, it is advantageous to cream it on toast. Often hard cooked eggs can be added to increase the quantity.

Fritters are another excellent emergency dish. Corn or apple fritters served with maple syrup eke out the main course and make an elaborate dessert unnecessary. They must be served hot and can well be made after the guest arrives.

Daily Menu

Small amounts of vegetables can be used in cream soups to advantage. A cup of vegetable pulp will make cream soup for four, but would not do for four if merely served in butter.

The serving of the whole meal is most important. The best china and glass, linen and silver add dignity to the simplest meal.

American Collector Gets Rare 17th Century Watches

Fred G. Gruen and the famous Alexander Battle Watch, showing the face and reverse side.

FIFTEEN rare antique watches, at least two of them said to be as fine specimens as are in existence, have just been brought to this country by Fred G. Gruen, president of the Gruen WatchMakers Guild, of New York and Cincinnati, and will be added to the private collection.

Mr. Gruen declined to say what the watches were worth but persons familiar with similar collections said the value would be in excess of $60,000.

The watches all date from the seventeenth century and the earliest was made in Germany in 1600. It is oval shaped and resembles the original "Nuremberg Egg," the first pocket time piece, made several years before by Peter Heinlein. The original Heinlein is in the Nuremberg Museum.

The most valuable watch, and one which Mr. Gruen has been trying to get for three years, was made in 1650 for the Duke of Savoy. It is elaborately enameled with a painting depicting a battle of Alexander the Great and was in the famous Marfels collection in Berlin, many specimens of which now are in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Connoisseurs say this watch alone would be valued by collectors at $10,000.

Mr. Gruen obtained eleven other watches in Berlin, and the rest in Belgium, Switzerland and Paris.

A French watch, more than 200 years old, with an open face and almost as thin as a modern time-piece, is decorated with intricate blue enamel and gold designs. It was an early form of the "repeater" and still rings out the hours.

Another watch is one of the few made entirely from wood, including the works with the exception of the springs. It is about three and one half inches in diameter and approximately an inch thick. Mr. Gruen estimates it took several years of patient carving to produce.

The collection also contains one of the earliest specimens of small watches in existence. This watch, also elaborate in enamel designs, is about the size of a twenty-five cent piece but very thick in proportion.

Mr. Gruen's collection now numbers several hundred rare and historic watches, and includes a wrist watch with a hunting case made in the 18th century. He says the collection eventually will go to some museum.

Pin money

A five-cent paper of pins as a wedding gift would now be considered bizarre and the donor "tight," to express it mildly. Yet pins were once so scarce that none but the wealthy could afford them. A box of pins was ne plus ultra of wedding presents, as much admired as costly jewelry and silverware.

As pins became less expensive and in more common use, women were provided with a certain amount of money to be devoted exclusively to the purchase of pins. And so the expression "pin money," was originated. The phrase now has a much broader meaning and denotes any allowance to wife or daughters for personal and incidental expenses.

Pin money now buys a thousand and one things dear to the hearts of womenfolk. The advertising columns are scanned eagerly by millions of women to see what is offered that comes within purse limits. They know that the advertisements enable them to buy wanted articles at reasonable cost.

Advertising also keeps them informed of the latest news in the world of fashion. It tells what Paris is wearing in dresses, hats, hosiery and footwear. It pictures gowns for evening, afternoon and street wear, as well as simple little house frocks that are charming in their simplicity. Advertising introduces improved household utensils, new foods, automobiles in gay colors—in short, everything that the heart of woman could desire.

And that is why women are such careful readers of advertising. It enables them to make their pin money buy more and last longer. It helps them keep expenses within the household budget. Every one should read advertisements. It is one of the simplest habits to cultivate, and pays dividends in savings and personal comforts.
