

Citizen of year described as 'world-class' person

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Dudley Steele, 1901 Dogwood, was named Outstanding Citizen of the Year during the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet Thursday night at M. K. Brown Auditorium.

Introducing the award, Rev. Joe Turner, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, said, "We have the right to expect our citizen of the year to be a world-class person."

Rev. Turner said Steele "does much for people and for Pampa without fanfare," instead working quietly behind the scenes. He has a sense of humor and "an obvious love of people" and "makes each group a better group in which he is a member," Turner said of Steele.

Accepting the honor, Steele said, "I'm happy for whatever I've given Pampa. I don't think I've given it as much as it has given me."

Steele has been a member of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Equalization, the Lion's Club (a 25-year member and a past president), the Pampa Fine Arts Association, the Gray County Board of Retarded Citizens, the Texas Historical Society and Museum Board and the Pampa Community Concerts Board of Directors (he has belonged to the organization since its first year and is a past president).

Steele has worked with the Boy Scouts of America for more than 40 years from Cub master to chairman of the Leaders Training Program for the Santa Fe District.

An elder in First Presbyterian Church, he has taught Sunday School, serves on the Christian Education Committee and participates in the preparation of the annual church Thanksgiving Dinner.

He has worked on the United Way in Pampa and has served on the City Beautification Committee.

Born in Minominee, Mich., on June 24, 1909, he grew up in Denver, Colo., and attended the University of Denver, where he earned a bachelor of science and master of science in chemistry. He moved to Pampa to work for Cabot Corp., Carbon Black Division. He became the general production superintendent of the Southwestern Carbon Black Division and the head of the Southwest Division of Research and Development for Cabot in Pampa.

He is a member of the American Chemical Society, membership chairman of the Panhandle Plains section of ACS and chairman of the Panhandle Section of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. A member of Phi Lambda Epsilon honorary chemical engineering fraternity, he is listed in "Who's Who of Chemical Engineers in the United States."

He has been married to his wife, Kathryn Vincent Steele, for 47 years. They have one daughter, Marilyn Steele McBride, of Dallas.

His hobbies include golf, gardening, cooking, dancing, singing in the Lion's Club shows, traveling, fishing and making friends.

In his introduction, Turner quoted Mrs. Steele: "A white hat fits him perfectly, for he is truly one of the good guys of this world, and I ought to know."

Steele was nominated for the honor by the Community Concerts Board.

Featured speaker for the annual Chamber affair was Dr. W. C. Newberry, instructor of educational philosophy and adolescent psychology at Southwest Texas State University.

"This is not going to be an intellectual speech," Dr. Newberry said. "There's a lot of pseudo-intellectuals walking around today."

He listed ways in which people can appear to be intellectuals: Never leave your office, place of business or home without a piece of paper in your hand. Walk fast, never stroll. Get a roll of computer print-out ("People today are in awe of a computer print-out"). Get a pipe ("You ladies may want to do something else") and nod your head once in awhile. Stop in the middle of a conversation, stare over someone's head and keep silent for awhile.

Entitling his address "Creeping Tension," he said, "This is the tension that sneaks up on you. . . . This can kill most of us at an early age. It robs us of many precious moments."

Such tension is caused by worries that generally are really minor, he said, leading to unnecessary tension "usually caused by little things . . . that

Tax hike lowered

Lefors council bows to citizens

Bowing to pressure from citizens, the Lefors City Council lowered its proposed city tax rate to 30 cents for each $100 in valuation instead of 52 cents during a public hearing on the issue Thursday night.

The earlier proposal of 52 cents would have been an increase of 480 percent over the present rate of 10.9 cents per $100 valuation. The hearing drew a crowd of about 50 citizens.

Council members agreed they could live with the lower tax rate, even though it will mean forgetting about some needed improvements.

They set Thursday, Oct. 27, for the next town meeting at which time they will set the new tax rate.

The city can "make the budget fit the income" and live with a lower tax rate, councilman John Ashford said.

At the beginning of the public meeting, Mayor R. B. White acknowledged the receipt of a petition bearing 145 signatures of residents opposing the originally proposed tax rate of 52 cents. He then called on councilmen to voice their opinions on that proposal.

All councilmen said they had studied past expenditures, proposed projects and new information on revenue the city will be receiving from other sources, and decided they could accept a lower tax rate of between 28 and 30 cents.

Wendell Akins suggested 30 cents, "because it's easier to figure a 'three' 'o' than it is a 'two' - 'nine'."

He grinned and Mayor White joked in return that the city could use a calculator. The attitude of councilmen appeared to ease tension in the audience created by thoughts of paying higher taxes.

Some of the other sources of additional revenue from the one percent sales tax that will come from having five businesses in town instead of one and revenue from utility service, Mayor White said.

Councilmen J. W. Franks and Darrell Keckler said many people visited with them after the last meeting and volunteered the use of equipment and labor to help repair streets and clean up vacant lots.

Keckler said, "even with the money we get, we can't fix the streets; we will have to use the volunteers."

Torrential rains leave Texas...

By The Associated Press

Hurricane-spawned torrential rains finally moved out of Texas and into Oklahoma, where that state's governor declared a state of emergency in the face of more than a foot of rain in some places.

Oklahoma City already received more than 13 inches of rain this week, enough by itself to make it the second-wettest October ever, and less than a half-inch off the record, with more than a week still remaining in the month.

The rains, which fell on some parts of West Texas from Tuesday through Thursday almost non-stop, stranded cattle, damaged cotton crops, closed some streets and forced the evacuation of about 90 residents of a Lubbock nursing home.

"The remnants of Hurricane Tico that caused all the rain are now across the Red River, exiting stage north and east of Wichita Falls," meteorologist Bill Alexander of the National Weather Service in Fort Worth said Thursday.

Lubbock was among the hardest hit of the West Texas cities. In a 24-hour period from Tuesday through Wednesday evening, the city got more than a third of its average 18-inch annual rainfall. The city received 5.85 inches of rain in the 24-hour period and more than 7 inches from start to finish.

The rains devastated the South Plains cotton crop, which farmers were ready to harvest. Hail had damaged much of the crop earlier in the week. Agricultural officials said not only was the cotton in the fields damaged, there was a strong likelihood the cotton seed itself will suffer, causing a likely seed shortage in next year's planting season.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service estimated that 100,000 bales, or 7 to 9 percent of the crop in the 25-county region, have been destroyed by hail storms.

The dry summer had already pushed the forecasted crop for the area down to 1.2 million to 1.5 million bales, 50 to 60 percent of average production.

"The rain came right when we didn't need it," said Kary Mathis, agricultural economist at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

The storm system drifted to the east and north on Thursday, bringing additional rainfall to North and East Texas.

Officials in Wichita Falls planned to keep a 24-hour surveillance of the Wichita River and swollen creeks, fearing that runoff from Oklahoma

State and local officials waded into waters up to 7 feet high to speed the evacuation of the town's 1,800 families as nearby Cottonwood Creek overflowed.

The flooding was part of the devastation that has spun into Oklahoma and the rest of the southern Plains by the remnants of Hurricane Tico, which slammed into the Mexican resort town of Mazatlan with 150 mph winds that ripped off roofs and left eight shrimp boat crewmembers missing.

Five Oklahomans have died in weather-related accidents since the heavy rains started Wednesday. Kansas officials report that one pedestrian death has been attributed to rain and fog.

Flash flood watches were posted in parts of Kansas and Missouri today, and the rains were headed for Arkansas, Ohio, Pennsylvania and the Virginias.

Gov. George Nigh declared a state of emergency across Oklahoma on could cause the waterways to rise above flood stage.

David Tracey, Wichita Falls street superintendent, said any additional heavy rain would cause serious flooding.

"We're about maxed on our rivers and creeks, everything is full to the top."

White Deer students hurt

WHITE DEER — Four school students standing up as they rode on the bed of a flat-bed truck were injured this morning when the truck turned into the White Deer school's parking lot and the students toppled to the ground, according to School Superintendent Tom Harkey.

Holly Parsley, 13, Carri Sims, 13, Christi Martin, 14, Angie Bohannon, 13, all of White Deer, were taken by the Skellytown Volunteer Ambulance Service to Coronado Community Hospital this morning.

The teenagers were X-rayed and treated at the hospital. Parsley was treated as an outpatient; Sims and Bohannon were listed in stable condition; and Martin was admitted to the intensive-care unit for observation, according to a hospital spokesman.

A student who owned the one-ton, flat-bed truck went to the football field about two blocks from the White Deer - Skellytown High School here to pick up band instruments, Harkey said.

Rather than walk back to the school after band practice on the field this morning, the four students jumped on with the loaded band instruments and hitched a ride on the truck, the superintendent said this morning. Harkey said when the truck turned into the school's parking lot, the band students, who were standing up on the sidesled bed, fell to the pavement.

"There was no indication of wild driving or anything like that," Harkey said.

Tragedy shatters victims' parents

CANADIAN — The hysterical and injured parents who helplessly watched a fire burn down their Canadian home and kill their young children trapped inside remained so emotionally shattered in a Canadian hospital this morning that they were unable to discuss burial arrangements with the local funeral home.

Services for the three children killed in a fire that swept through a sleeping family's home here early Thursday morning are pending with Stickley-Hill Funeral Directors.

The conditions of six other people injured as a result of the fire remained unchanged today, according to hospital officials.

Michael Ward, a four-year-old crippled boy, and Nicholas D. Ward, 2, the sons of Richard D. Ward, 19, and Tina Lynn Ward, 20, died after the fire started shortly after midnight Thursday in the Wards' home at the rear of 311 Nelson, on the southeast side of Canadian. After knocking down some of the flames and entering the burning home, firemen found the crippled child dead on the floor of a hallway.

The family had managed to get the badly burned two-year-old outside the flaming house, but he died early Thursday morning after being transferred to the burn unit of Lubbock General Hospital.

The third child killed in the fire, Jodie Ellen Ward, 15, daughter of Richard D. Nichols, 38, and Shirley Ann Nichols, 37, and Richard Ward's sister, was staying in the Wards' home the night of the fire. Jodie Ward was asleep on a bed in a bedroom of the burning home. She was still on the bed when firemen found her, dead from smoke inhalation, according to Canadian Fire Marshal Lester Hodges.

Another person sleeping inside the Ward home, who escaped when it burned, Tony Wayne McMillin, 18, suffered third-degree burns over 22 percent of his total body surface, according to a Lubbock hospital spokesman. McMillin remained in serious condition this morning in the burn unit at Lubbock General.

The Nicholises, the grandparents of the two dead toddlers and parents of the dead teenager, live across the street from the fire-damaged home at 306 Nelson. The Nicholises, and another daughter staying in the Nichols' home, Windy I. Ward, 12, were also injured trying to help their neighboring family members escape the fatal blaze, according to fire and hospital officials.

Richard and Tina Ward and Richard Nicholis were admitted to the Hemphill County Hospital after the fire. They remained in satisfactory

CANADIAN — A mother, her three children, about 15 law officers and a truck driver are all alive this morning only because "The Good Lord was riding with all of us," Hemphill County Sheriff C. W. Wright said this morning.

Sheriff Wright said Rodney Raymond Payne, a truck driver from Oklahoma, is still in custody in Hemphill County jail this morning following a high-speed chase across three Texas Panhandle Counties early Thursday morning. The chase ended when the tractor-trailer rig collided with a car driven by 42-year-old Karen Meek who was taking her three children to school.

Payne is being held in lieu of a total of $9,000 bond. He has been charged with aggravated assault of a police officer, driving while under the influence of drugs, reckless driving and fleeing and evading arrest by authorities in Ochiltree County and by the Department of Public Safety, Wright said.

According to Wright, Payne said he "did not remember

This morning, Karen Meek was listed in satisfactory condition at Hemphill County Hospital and her daughter, Lisa, 16, was listed in satisfactory condition at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo.

According to a hospital spokesman this morning, Lisa "is doing very well. It looks like she'll be moved to her own room this afternoon."

Eddie Meek, 10, and Shonda Meek, 12, were treated for minor cuts and bruises and released from Hemphill County Hospital.

Sheriff Wright said he was "right behind the truck" when it appeared to "hit the car and roll over it. I don't see how the family escaped with the few injuries they did. It was only by the Grace of God, that's all I know."

He said the highway patrolman saw Payne crawl out of the cab of his truck, but the driver told him he was thrown out, "either way, it was a miracle he wasn't hurt, too."

Ochiltree County Sheriff Joe Hataway said the Frederick, Okla., man told officers he had been taking amphetamines since Sunday. He was hauling potatoes from Colorado to Dallas.

"He said he didn't know what he was doing or where he was or anything," Hataway said. "The sad part is that he almost killed some small children because of popping pills."

Several patrol cars suffered heavy damage during Thursday's early morning chase. One car was knocked out of the way when the truck barreled through a roadblock.

Two other patrol cars were totaled when they were run down by the truck after they had passed it in an effort to warn oncoming traffic. Another patrol car ended up in a ditch when an officer successfully averted an attempt by the truck driver to run it down, Hataway said.

The chase that would eventually involve seven patrol cars began just after 6 a.m., when a Perryton police officer saw the 18-wheel truck barreling through town at 65 mph, ignoring red lights and straddling the center stripe, Hataway said.

"The officer spoke with the driver over his C.B. and the driver told him to get out of the way or he'd kill him," Hataway said. "The driver then made a run toward the patrol car and the officer managed to avoid him, but wound up in the ditch."

Officers from the Perryton police and Ochiltree County sheriff's department then pursued the truck south on U.S. 83 toward Canadian. They radioed for assistance from the city's police department, the Hemphill County sheriff's department and the Texas Department of Public Safety.

DPS patrolman Jimmy Johnson set up a roadblock at a highway junction, but the truck rolled through, knocking the car out of the road, the trooper said. Johnson said he shot out a tire on the truck, then joined the chase when that seemed to have no effect.

By then, seven cars from Perryton, Canadian, and Ochiltree, Hemphill and Wheeler counties and the DPS were in hot pursuit, traveling between 85 and 95 mph, Hataway said.

The truck swept through Canadian at 70 mph and "when it became apparent that his guy was gonna kill somebody," two deputies passed the truck to try "to warn oncoming traffic," Hataway said.

can eat you alive." This tension is like duck nibbles, he said. "They're never going to kill you."
 "If you watch too many television commercials, they will have you to where you cannot enjoy even the simple pleasures of life," he warned. They make everything look too good and your life suffers in comparison. Or they make you too aware of matters that are really minor.
 Creeping tension can also result from big things, he said. "It could be as big as your federal government. Every morning I wake up with the nagging fear that they're going to want to help me one more time."
 Politicians "are not any smarter than I am. And that frightens me," he said. Another cause of such tension is "that condition there today. Windy Ward and Shirley Nichols were treated at the Canadian hospital Thursday and released.

 A neighbor who lives directly across the street from the burned home, Sherry Swires, called the Canadian Volunteer Fire Department and reported the fire about 12:30 a.m. Thursday. Swires said she was awakened by a man pounding on her front door and by family members' screams for help.
 "People were screaming, 'Call the fire department!' To me, it sounded like everybody in Canadian screaming. We could see flames shootin' clear up to the sky," Swires said.

"Flames were coming out every door and window," Hodges said.
 The fire marshal said the injured family members helplessly watching the fire burn from the home's yard were "totally hysterical" by the time police and firemen arrived.
 The 15 volunteer firemen who responded to the fire had it extinguished in about an hour.
 Hodges said wet workboots "soaked in diesel" had been placed to dry in front of a "dummy fireplace," concealing an open - flame heater, in the living room of the home. The steel-toed boots apparently caught fire and spread the blaze to the rest of the house, the Canadian Fire Marshal said his early investigation indicates.

Soviet leaders say arms talks depend on missile deployment

BERLIN (AP) - Soviet bloc leaders say they are confident a U.S.-Soviet arms agreement can be reached if talks in Geneva are extended, but they insist that NATO first scrap plans to deploy new nuclear missiles in Europe.
 Warsaw Pact defense ministers and 10 Soviet bloc premiers made separate but similar statements Thursday in the latest of repeated demands that NATO forego the missile deployment that is scheduled to begin in December.
 The two meetings in East Berlin of Kremlin leaders and their allies came amidst an escalated protest campaign in parts of Western Europe by anti-nuclear activists opposed to the missiles.
 In Bonn, riot police dragged away some 2,000 anti-missile demonstrators who had gathered before dawn to try to block the entrances of the Defense Ministry. Several miles away, at the Economic Cooperation Ministry, helmeted police pushed back some 750 protesters who wanted to prevent workers from getting into the building.
 Police appeared to outnumber protesters at both ministries. No arrests were reported, and both police and protesters said the attempted blockades were peaceful.
 In London, the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament planned a mass demonstration for Saturday.

 About 50,000 West Germans joined protests against the NATO missiles Thursday in West Berlin, Stuttgart, Munich, Bremen, Hamburg, Cologne and other cities.
 The 10 Soviet bloc premiers released a statement Thursday at the end of a three-day session of the Council of Mutual Economic Assistance saying they are "convinced that the chance of coming to an agreement at the Geneva talks still exists."
 The statement also said a continuation of the talks "presupposes that the U.S.A. and its NATO allies disperse with the deadlines they have set for the deployment of new nuclear medium-range missiles."
 Hours before the premiers completed their economic summit, an "extraordinary" one-day meeting of the seven Warsaw Pact defense ministers was announced.
 That session is believed to have focused on North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to station 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe. Deployment will start by the end of the year unless arms negotiators in Geneva reach agreement.
 NATO says the medium-range missiles are necessary to counter the Soviet force of 370 SS-20 missiles.

Nicaragua presents proposals for Central American peace

WASHINGTON (AP) - Nicaragua's foreign minister has presented the United States with a formal set of proposals for Central American peace while denouncing President Reagan for saying the United States has a right to engage in covert activities in his country.
 The House, meanwhile, voted Thursday to cut off support for CIA activity in Nicaragua against the Sandinista government.
 The proposals, presented by Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto to the State Department on Thursday, caught U.S. officials by surprise since they said such documents usually emerge only after complicated negotiations.
 The proposals include three draft treaties involving the United States, Nicaragua and other Central American countries that would ban support by one nation for guerrilla movements in another.
 "It wasn't clear whether the proposals would be acceptable to the Reagan administration, which wants Nicaragua to cease its support for leftist insurgents in neighboring El Salvador."
 "These treaties will stop and prevent war in Central America and guarantee the security of every state in the region," said a statement issued by the Nicaraguan Embassy.

An embassy spokeswoman said d'Escoto would go to Panama this weekend to discuss the proposals with the Contadora group - Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama - which is trying to resolve the turmoil in Central America.
 A U.S. official, who insisted on anonymity, said the State Department hadn't decided how it would respond to the proposals which d'Escoto delivered to Assistant Secretary of State Langhorne Motley at the State Department.
 D'Escoto said in a statement that the proposed treaties provide for on-site verification and investigations by the Contadora nations when violations are suspected.
 "They are solemn and binding international commitments with guarantees for compliance," he said. "Nicaragua is ready and willing to be bound by these treaties."
 D'Escoto said it was the first proposal of its kind since Central American peace negotiations began nine months ago.
 A State Department official said it was too early to assess the significance of the documents left by d'Escoto. The official, who insisted on anonymity, said the meeting lasted an hour and was held at d'Escoto's request.
 Meanwhile, a bitterly divided House voted Thursday for the second time in

Rain

 But so far, we've been very, very lucky and all the flooding has been minor," he said.
 The light rain and drizzle Thursday afternoon was part of a cool front sweeping the state from the northwest, bringing temperatures in the 40s to the Panhandle. The heavier rains the preceding day were associated with the remnants of Tico, a Pacific storm that hit the northwestern Mexican coast Wednesday.
 The forecast called for decreasing cloudiness to spread from the west this afternoon. High temperatures today were expected to be mostly in the 60s and 70s except for readings in the 80s over parts of Southeast and South Texas and in the Big Bend valleys.

New figures show economy expanding

By The Associated Press
 New government figures show the economy has regained all the ground it lost during the 16-month recession and is expanding again, the administration says, as private economists joined in hailing a recovery with "zip."
 The report Thursday that the economy grew in the July-September quarter at an annual 7.9 percent rate was seen as a sign that the economy was continuing to advance briskly despite high interest rates.
 But Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker warned a congressional committee that it continues to be "a period of testing."
 The Commerce Department issued its quarterly report on the gross national product, the total value of all goods and services, showing a 7.9 percent expansion of the GNP for the third quarter. The increase compares to a 9.7 percent rise in the second quarter and a 2.6 percent advance in the first quarter.
 The GNP had fallen at a 1.3 percent annual rate in last year's fourth quarter and was down 1.9 percent for all of 1982. The recession is considered to have bottomed out in November.
 The Commerce Department, meanwhile, said its GNP-based measure of inflation slowed to a 4.1 percent annual rate in the latest quarter from a 4.3 percent rate in the spring quarter.
 The report said the growth in production came from the rebuilding of inventories by businesses and from all categories of final sales except foreign trade.
 At the White House, deputy presidential press secretary Larry Speakes said the reports showed "the economy has moved out of the recovery phase and into expansion."
 Jerry Jasnowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers, said the growth report shows the economy "clearly has enough zip to overcome" some factors economists say are holding back business activity - mainly high interest rates and widespread concern about huge federal budget deficits.
 In testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Volcker said it's important that further progress be made in holding down labor costs in order to keep the inflation trend on a steady track.

Wallace contends nation's energy resources at dangerous level

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Chairman Mack Wallace of the Railroad Commission says the United States may be worse off in energy resources than during the "energy crisis" caused by the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

"I believe we are in an equal — if not worse — situation today," Wallace told oil and gas executives Thursday. "The fact of the matter is, at this very moment we do not have enough oil and gas for our own national security."

Wallace called for a bipartisan national energy conference to "outline the steps that must be taken to help secure America's energy future."

The conference, he said, should include congressional leaders, federal energy officials, the public, and representatives from energy-producing states, major oil companies and independent producers.

Wallace said if foreign oil supplies were shut off, the 350 million barrels of oil in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve would last only 10 weeks. He said the United States has a 35-day supply of gasoline, but shortages caused by a foreign cutoff could affect motorists within three days.

Wallace also said the Reagan administration had decided to abandon the goal of energy self-sufficiency, a move Wallace called "a mistake with far-reaching consequences."

"A national consensus must be formulated and decisive action taken," Wallace said. "Our children are entitled to a future based on promise and opportunity, not regret and recrimination."

Wallace summarized at a statewide oil allowable hearing a letter he had sent to President Reagan on Thursday.

At the Thursday hearing, the Railroad Commission extended the 100 percent statewide oil allowable through November.

As usual, however, the commission held the allowable for the East Texas Field and several other fields to 86 percent to avoid possible waste.

The statewide production factor was first set at 100 percent of potential in April 1972.

Major purchasers of Texas crude oil submitted nominations for 2,394,185 barrels a day in November, a decrease of 31,836 barrels a day from October.

Wallace said crude oil and petroleum products imported into the United States averaged 5,904,000 barrels a day for the four weeks ending Sept. 30 — up 951,000 barrels per day from the same period last year and only slightly below the 6.2 million barrels a day imported during the 1973 embargo.

Helping to find lost family members

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — Sandra Sutter searched for her natural parents for more than 22 years before she found her father in Marshall six years ago.

Because of her experiences and frustrations during those years, she decided to start "Find a Relative," a service Mrs. Sutter hopes to establish nationwide soon.

"Find a Relative" is designed to provide a network through which people can search for lost family members.

Mrs. Sutter said the service, which is possibly the only one of its type in the United States, will try to match information forms from people who are looking for a relative and people who are lost from their families.

"I'm trying to close the gap between looking and finding," Mrs. Sutter said. "We don't pry, investigate or try to investigate anyone's privacy. We're strictly an informational source."

The Iowa native said the service will operate on a cross-file system.

A registration blank, along with other information about the service, can be obtained for $1. This cost helps defray mailing and printing expenses.

To file all pertinent information, a $25 fee is assessed. "That is for a one-time registration," Mrs. Sutter said. "Your file stays active until you are united or withdraw."

Mrs. Sutter has plans to advertise her service nationwide.

"That's the only way 'Find a Relative' will work," she said.

The service is a "reality avenue" for persons searching for relatives who, for one reason or another, have gotten separated from their families.

"I've talked to so many people that are bewildered (while trying to locate someone)," Mrs. Sutter said. "There is a definite hope for finding them if people use us."

Mrs. Sutter said her family became separated as a result of divorce.

"For about 22 years, I searched for my parents," she said.

Six years ago she was reunited with her father. She has had little luck in locating her mother.

"It's so much harder to locate females because of last names," she said.

Mrs. Sutter said a service such as "Find a Relative" would have been extremely helpful in her plight.

Bell rate case to start Monday

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite opponents pleas that they need more time to sift through hundreds of pages of testimony filed this week, the Public Utility Commission hearing on Southwestern Bell's $1.36 billion rate case will begin Monday.

PUC Administrative Law Judge Jacqueline Holmes on Thursday denied the requests to postpone the case, but she did set a one-week recess to begin after Bell's opening witness.

Bell is looking for a $1.36 billion hike that would double monthly bills for basic home service.

In addition to giving the go-ahead for the hearing that will last about eight weeks, Ms. Holmes ruled Thursday that Bell's filing package was completed Wednesday. That means the telephone company can set temporary, bonded rates on Feb. 21 if the commission has not acted on the rate hike.

But Paul Roth, Bell vice president for revenue and public affairs, said the company can't wait until February. He said Bell needs additional money after Jan. 1, when court-ordered divestiture will leave Bell as an independent company.

"If we don't get interim rates here we'll be in real trouble in January," he told reporters.

Divestiture will leave Bell without much of the long-distance revenue it now draws. Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence said the company will be out $2 million to $3 million a day after Jan. 1.

PUC General Counsel Allen King agreed the company needs more money soon.

"Southwestern Bell's toll revenues will disappear to a large extent. Something will have to be in place to replace them," he told Ms. Holmes.

The requests to postpone the hearing were based on a separate hearing on so-called "access charges," a method of replacing some of the long distance revenue. That hearing has been going on for five weeks.

Jim Boyle, the state lawyer representing consumers, said the rate hearing and the access charge hearing are equally important. The problem, he said, is "when you focus on the left hand, the right hand comes around and picks your wallet."

Geoffrey Gay, representing the State Purchasing and General Services Commission, said a delay was needed because "there's too much going on in the country today" relating to the future of telephone service.

Attorney General Jim Mattox wants the full commission — instead of its administrative law judges — to hear the case.

"The public has a right to expect the commissioners, who are accountable to the public, to decide this critical issue instead of a series of hearing examiners, who are not accountable to the public," Mattox said in a press release.

Ms. Holmes said the commissioners will decide whether they'll hear the case.

Don Butler, representing the Texas Municipal League, said a delay is needed because of "12 inches" of testimony filed by Bell this week. Butler pulled the voluminous books of testimony out of a cardboard box and threw them on the table.

But company lawyer Lawrence said "no amount of showboating" lessens Bell's need for more money.

Error caused LD overcharges, Bell says

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A computer programming error caused Southwestern Bell to overbill its WATS customers on one of every 12 calls in Texas and four other states between April 1982 and April 1983, but state utility agencies weren't informed until two months ago, a newspaper said.

The overcharges amounted to $10 million — more than half of it in Texas, where customers of the reduced-cost long-distance service are now owed about $5.5 million in refunds, the Corpus Christi Caller said in a copyright story Thursday.

A Southwestern Bell spokesman said WATS customers are owed about $3.1 million in the Dallas area, about $3.1 million in the Houston area, and almost $1 million in the San Antonio area.

Sonia Perez of McAllen, a Southwestern Bell spokeswoman for South Texas, said the company delayed notifying customers of the overcharge because it first wanted to determine how much each WATS customer was owed.

She said the average refund will be "less than 5 percent" of monthly bills sent to WATS customers during the one-year period. The company does not plan to pay interest on the refunds, she said.

"It's peanuts when you're talking about interest on such an insignificant amount," the Bell spokesman said.

WATS is an acronym for Wide Area Telephone Service. It is a system that can be used to make many long distance telephone calls for a flat monthly rate.

The programming error affected customers in all five states that Southwestern Bell serves — Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri — according to information the company filed in September with the Texas Public Utilities Commission.

Bell officials said the faulty billings occurred because one full minute of time was erroneously added to charges on incoming and outgoing interstate WATS calls that lasted from 54.1 seconds to 59.9 seconds.

The billing error was discovered by one of Bell's major customers, the State of Kansas.

"We got to looking at the traffic reports and our figures didn't add up to theirs," said James Gilbert, assistant director of the State of Kansas Telecommunication Office, in a telephone interview.

His office monitors costs and charges for the state's communication network, including its leases with Southwestern Bell.

"We started digging," Gilbert said. "We told them to justify their charges or give us our money back."

The Kansas Corporations Commission, whose role is similar to that of the Texas Public Utility Commission, was notified about the error by Southwestern Bell, a spokesman there said.

Governor says Reagan offers only 'lip service' to battle alien problem

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The federal government's reluctance to beef up security on the U.S.-Mexico border has led to an unfair tax burden on Texans, who wind up footing the bill for the education and health care of illegal aliens, Gov. Mark White says.

White said President Reagan has failed to back immigration laws with adequate money and enforcement.

Legislation that would have effected sweeping reforms in this country's immigration laws, the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, stalled in Congress after House Speaker Tip O'Neill promised to block it from ever reaching a vote.

"The most controversial part of that bill has been the sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens," White said. "The least controversial was that the Border Patrol be strengthened."

White, addressing the 7th Annual Conference on Immigration and Naturalization on Thursday, said the U.S. Border Patrol currently has only 2,600 employees to guard the

Parents file suit in fair accident

DALLAS (AP) — The parents of a 19-year-old man killed in an accident at the Texas State Fair are suing the manufacturer, owner and operator of the Enterprise amusement ride.

William W. Phillips of suburban Allen was killed when a car broke from the ride's frame Monday night. His 23-year-old brother, Marion, and a friend were seriously injured in the accident.

The federal civil suit claims that Phillips' family is entitled to more than the $1 million in liability insurance that amusement-ride operators are required to carry in Texas.

Named as defendants in the lawsuit are the ride's manufacturer, Heintz Wilhelm Huss & Co., also known as Huss Manufacturing Co., of West Germany; the ride's owner, Continental Park Attractions Inc. of New York and ride operator Rick Polkenton.

The suit alleges that Huss "failed to design, manufacture or market the Enterprise with the ordinary care that a reasonable person would have employed."

"In particular, Huss failed to adequately design the Enterprise to withstand the stresses which it could be expected to encounter and failed to adequately warn the owner and operators of the Enterprise how and when to inspect the ride for structural and functional safety," the suit said.

A spokeswoman for Huss had said Wednesday in a prepared statement that the "manufacturing and design of the ride are safe and not at fault."

"The ride is safe when assembled, maintained and operated according to design," the company said.

Continental officials could not be reached for comment.

Teachers' march halts school board meeting

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 500 marching and chanting teachers halted a school board meeting Thursday in a protest of working conditions, pay and criticism from their boss during a national TV show.

The board decided to adjourn its 6 p.m. meeting because they "did not feel they could conduct the meeting" and Houston police officers had said they feared problems from the large crowd, said Geri Konigsberg, spokeswoman for the school district.

Three trustees of the eight school board members present stayed to hear complaints from the crowd.

The teachers said they had too much paperwork, too little academic freedom, poor working conditions and a lack of supplies.

They complained of insensitive treatment by administrators and board members, poor evaluation procedures, loss of prestige and low pay.

"We're not a few malcontents," teacher Alfonso Olvey told trustees. "We're the teachers you keep hearing about. We're not happy."

The protest came nearly two weeks after superintendent Billy Reagan, on the CBS news show "60 Minutes," criticized teachers as being among the most poorly educated college graduates.

Plane crash investigation begins

PATTERSON, La. (AP) — Federal investigators today were to begin checking the wreckage of a twin-engine plane that crashed Thursday near a south central Louisiana sugar cane field, killing two Texas oilmen and their pilot.

The National Transportation Safety Board were trying to learn what caused the crash that killed Melvin H. Gertz, 61; Arne Obel, 57; and pilot William J. Blanchette, 31, all from Dallas.

In Dallas, a company spokesman identified Gertz as 61-year-old board chairman of Boundary Oil Co. and the Terramar Corp., and Obel as the corporation's president and chief executive officer.

The spokesman said Dallas-based Boundary Oil is the majority owner of Terramar, a worldwide oil consulting firm also based in Dallas. He said directors would convene immediately to fill the corporate vacancies.

Paul Keenize, chief deputy of the St. Mary Parish Sheriff's Department, said the plane was flying here from Dallas when it went down Thursday morning about six miles from the town of Patterson.

The crash site was in the center of the parish, about a half-mile north of U.S. 90 and 10 miles east of Franklin.

Fire flared briefly, but most of the damage apparently was done when the plane slammed into a small hill in a cleared field speckled with debris. Witnesses said what was left of the plane was strewn over 70 yards or so.

Keenize said the plane was a twin-engine Mitsubishi.

The Terramar spokesman said Gertz was founder of Purvin & Gertz, an international consulting engineering firm headquartered in Dallas until 1981, the spokesman said.

He said Gertz also was founder of Guam Oil and Refining Co. and had been chairman, president and chief executive officer of Boundary Oil since Dec. 3, 1982.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

O'Neill playing political games

House speaker "Tip" O'Neill played politics with the proposed immigration reform bill, and that means another thousand illegal aliens will stream across U.S. borders every day for at least the next two years.

The Senate passed the bill overwhelmingly. Five committees of the House have approved it in a somewhat different version. But O'Neill says he won't bring it to the floor for a vote.

Why not? The speaker came up with a very strange story that he thought President Reagan might veto the bill to curry favor with Hispanic voters in the 1984 presidential election.

Never mind that Reagan has been a strong supporter of immigration law reform. O'Neill said he had heard from some sources that Reagan would veto the bill. Why didn't the speaker just phone the president and ask him? Presidents hardly ever refuse to take a call from a speaker of the House.

O'Neill's real reason for sandbagging the bill, of course, was his own attempt to gain favor for the Democratic Party from Hispanic voters.

Leaders of the U.S. Hispanic community have fought the bill. They claim that penalties in the bill against hiring illegal aliens would result in discrimination by employers against Hispanics.

O'Neill's true political colors came out when he said that the bill might harm "the immigrants, the Hispanics, the poor people that the Democratic Party is always trying to protect."

So there you have it: O'Neill is willing to scuttle the first real effort in years to stem the alarming low of illegal immigrants in exchange for votes from Hispanics for Democratic candidates next year.

By refusing to bring the bill to the floor in this session, O'Neill has effectively killed any chance of its being passed for two years. There is almost no possibility that the House would take the bill up in 1984, an election year.

Thus, it likely will be 1985 before another attempt will be made to enact new immigration laws. By then nearly another million illegal aliens will have crossed the borders to take up residency alongside several million already in the U.S. illegally.

Was Orwell right about 1984?

There are still a couple of months to go and already I've had enough. I'm telling you this because of what dropped in this morning's mail. An invitation to yet another celebration - if that's the word - of George Orwell's "Nineteen Eighty-four."

This time it is a series of seminars analyzing, in the words of the Manhattan College public information office, "the validity of George Orwell's prediction concerning loss of freedom and the rise of the totalitarian society."

I won't be there. With all due respect to Orwell and his enduring impact on the American consciousness, I submit that we are overdoing the 1984 business.

For one thing, Orwell was not predicting anything. He was warning. The message was what could be, not what would be.

For another, as 1984 approaches the world does not correspond to the Orwellian nightmare in any essential respect. Freedom has not been, nor is it being, lost. While far from being enjoyed without restraint everywhere, even in the "Free World," it is more vigorously pursued and far more widespread than ever before.

Functioning democracies are more numerous than ever and, despite differences, have managed to hang together in recognition of an overriding common interest.

Although a very large part of the world is not democratic - democracy does remain the ideal. It is the preferred political order to which even totalitarian regimes are compelled to pay lip service.

And although there have been conflicts, there have been none of a global scope for almost 40 years. Further, there exists what amounts to a global consensus that there must not be.

The fact is that we have not done badly in the decades since Orwell bequeathed us his bleak vision.

We have learned some lessons. Not perfectly by any means, but well enough to attempt with some success to correct some of the more disastrous mistakes of the recent past.

Which brings us to the United Nations and the debate over its presence in the United States. Believe me, it wasn't easy getting it here.

There is no debating the dismal truth that the world - be world parliament has not fulfilled expectations. However, those were hugely overstated from the beginning.

There was never any intention among the victorious World War II powers of permitting the world body to be a power in its own right. It was to be their instrument for running the world.

It has long since ceased to be that.

Dominated and misused as it is now by a majority of professedly non-aligned minor and mini-states, it is less an influence than an irritant in world affairs.

Still, it is the only world forum we have and a distinct improvement over its League of Nations predecessor in one important respect: The U.S. is a member.

It was to ensure that membership that the U.N. was sited in the U.S.

The questions to be asked about the U.N. are not what it is or is not accomplishing, but whether we would be any better off without it. Or with it somewhere else.

As flawed as it is, the organization still represents a commitment on the part of all of its members to cooperate in keeping the peace.

That commitment is not the least important way in which the real world of 1984 differs from Orwell's grim version.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Oct. 21, the 294th day of 1983. There are 71 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 21, 1879, Thomas Edison invented a workable electric lamp at his laboratory in Menlo Park, N.J.

On this date:

In 1797, the U.S. Navy frigate Constitution, known as "Old Ironsides," was launched in Boston.

In 1849, the first exhibition of a "tattooed man" - James F. O'Connell - was held in New York.

In 1973, leaders on both sides of the aisle said Congress would have to begin looking at once into the question of impeaching President Nixon.

Ten years ago: The Oakland A's beat the New York Mets 5-2 to take the seventh and deciding game of the 70th World Series.

Five years ago: One of the most prominent men in the history of the Soviet Union, Anastas Mikoyan, died at the age of 82.

One year ago: Former first lady Bess Truman was laid to rest alongside her husband in Independence, Mo.

Today's birthdays: Jazz musician Dizzie Gillespie is 66. Actress Carrie Fisher is 27.

Thought for today: "When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth." - Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, English writer (1859-1930).

"'Why not move the U.N. to Moscow for part of each year?' he said. 'Great idea, let's do it,' you said."

What women learn from men

"What I've learned from men." When I heard that a friend of mine had given a talk with that title, I was intrigued. I wanted to find out what she said.

She got the idea, she said, after being the only newswoman working with 10 newspapermen on the 4 p.m. to 1 a.m. shift. In that male-dominated situation, she observed how differently men operated from women.

"Built into all those guys," she said, "was an assumed confidence about themselves and their jobs that I did not have." She went on to say that the men did not seem to need approval from others as did she. Their behavior implied "I'm OK." They didn't stew over self-doubts or worry that they were in the wrong field. "Men are either kinder to themselves or more realistic," she concluded.

I decided to poll a few other women to discover what they had learned working with men. One of the women is a high-ranking manager at a public utility company, another a graphic artist; one is a counselor with a social service agency, and another a public relations executive.

All agreed that successful men exhibited characteristics they admired and wanted to emulate. Some of these attributes may be exaggerated in the eyes of the beholders, of course: Not all men are as confident as they seem. Nevertheless, here is what these women have learned:

Don't flip over a flaw. When men goof, they consider it a bad day or an isolated incident. "They can blame the mistake on someone or something," said one woman, "but I used to always worry. 'What did I do wrong?'" The public relations executive said, "Men have taught me not to be such a perfectionist - to give myself a break."

Don't expect more of the institution (or system or bureaucracy) than it can give. The woman counselor said: "If the power structure didn't ask for my opinion, I was hurt and felt I wasn't valued. Men taught me not to take it personally because the power structure is an impersonal thing."

Pick your battles carefully. The public utility manager says the most valuable lesson she learned from men is "to pick battles on my own turf where I have the upper hand." She also learned to line up her allies ahead of time: "Never be out in left field, crusading alone."

Don't be afraid of confrontations. Said the counselor: "I worked with a psychologist who felt good after he had a showdown with his bosses. I learned to do the same and not worry about it afterward."

Added another woman: "A woman perceives a clash with a co-worker as a skirmish and doesn't bear a grudge because of it."

Don't worry about being well-liked. The five women all agreed they had spent too much time on this. "I used to try to get even the jerks in the office to like me," said one.

Forget the job when you leave the office. "I would carry my work home with me in my head," said the graphic designer, "until I realized that men didn't do that. Now, I too turn off the job when I leave. I play violin in a string quartet and paint watercolors."

Said another: "Men don't get hung up about balancing roles between home and family. They seem to instinctively find a balance that's comfortable for them."

Don't second-guess yourself. "When I first started working," said one woman, "I would keep thinking of different approaches to an assignment. Men usually find one idea that works and stick with it. That's better."

Set your goals high and don't be afraid to go for them. The woman manager explained: "I was too timid to say I wanted to be a CEO someday, until I noticed that men aren't afraid to say what they are aiming for."

Most of these male characteristics could be called survival tactics or a primer on how to get ahead. Yet, there's one attribute I have learned working with men that's completely selfless: their willingness to encourage others.

A college professor coaxed me to go into independent studies - which I did. My first boss thought I should go into politics, which-lacking both confidence and female role models in those times - I did not.

Years later, a newspaper editor encouraged me to write a column for women - I do.

Askew moves toward the right

DES MOINES, Iowa - There's a new attraction in the crowded field of contenders for next year's Democratic presidential nomination - a conservative candidate.

He's former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, who really isn't a newcomer to the race. He declared his candidacy for the nomination last February and has waged an active campaign for the presidential in the ensuing months.

Askew's positions on a number of sensitive issues always have been somewhat more conservative than the views embraced by many of his opponents, but until recently he didn't seek to stress those differences.

Instead, he concentrated on presenting to potential supporters a comprehensive strategy for the long-term restructuring and revival of the nation's economy, with particular emphasis on the importance of international trade.

That approach, however, wasn't especially fruitful in terms of making progress against the other half-dozen men with whom Askew is vying for the nomination. Indeed, he was placed either last or next to last in most public opinion polls conducted in recent months.

Selected by Askew for the unveiling of a new campaign theme was an occasion that in recent years has been a major event for the party's presidential contenders - the Iowa Democrats' annual Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner.

Much of the speech delivered at that dinner early this month was composed of questions propounded by Askew, but all were rhetorical queries and his tone of voice left little doubt about his preferred answers. Some excerpts:

"I can understand and appreciate why so many of you who have been so active in our party for so long have begun to describe yourself as the real Democrats... Even so, I must tell you frankly that you and I are not the only real Democrats."

"It is one thing to advocate a closed shop. It is quite another to advocate a closed party... We must decide: Is ours an exclusive and exclusionary club, a glorified debating society devoted primarily to defining the dictates of ideological purity?"

"Is there no room in our party for those who don't necessarily believe that a nuclear freeze is the surest path to peace?"

"Is there no room in our party for those who believe that we must strive to fulfill the potential of life both before and after birth... (and for those) Democrats who don't believe in virtually unrestricted right to an abortion?"

"Is there no room in our party for those who don't necessarily agree with many labor unions that protectionism and compulsory unionism are the best guarantee of jobs and justice... (and for those) who support the right of the states to have right-to-work laws?"

"What about all the millions of working people who don't belong to labor unions? What about all the women who don't belong to the National Organization for Women?"

The speech reportedly was crafted to gain attention by promoting views that were unconventional, if not unpopular, for many in the audience of 6,000. And it succeeded in that goal by provoking scattered jeers, catcalls and boos.

For Askew, the new approach apparently is the product of frustration if not desperation. Although he served with distinction as governor of Florida for eight years during the 1970s and later was named in a study as one of the nation's 10 outstanding governors during the 20th century, his campaign for the presidency has not been notably successful.

The irony of the situation is that the man who now is positioning himself as a conservative in a national context long has widely been viewed as a moderate - to liberal politician in his home state.

But the new strategy is a logical one not only because the liberal side of the field of contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination already is overcrowded, but also because the views expressed here on "right-to-life," "right-to-work" and other controversial issues honestly reflect the long-held personal beliefs of Askew.

Caribbean leaders seek sanctions against new regime

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Angry Caribbean leaders today considered sanctions against Grenada's new military regime, which seized power after its soldiers killed Prime Minister Maurice Bishop in a bloodbath.

Army Gen. Hudson Austin, heading a military council, took over the island nation Thursday, a day after soldiers killed the prime minister and several his top supporters in the Marxist-led government.

Jamaica led Caribbean nations in expressing revulsion over the killings by breaking off diplomatic relations Thursday night. Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga proposed a trade embargo on Grenada and said heads of government from the English-speaking Caribbean would discuss the situation at an emergency meeting in Barbados this weekend.

People remained indoors today in Grenada after Austin threatened that soldiers would shoot anyone who violated a 24-hour curfew in effect until Monday.

Bishop was killed Wednesday after he arrived at army headquarters with a crowd of supporters who had freed him from a week of house arrest. He had been confined during a power struggle within the governing Marxist party that began last week.

Three Cabinet members were slain along with Bishop. Austin dismissed the surviving Cabinet members, dissolved the People's Revolution Government that had come to power in a coup in 1979 and seized "full executive and legislative powers."

The prime minister of Barbados, Tom Adams, said Thursday that Grenada's army executed Bishop after taking him captive during the showdown Wednesday.

"He was shot, perhaps slightly wounded, taken prisoner and executed. I don't think there is any doubt about it," Adams told an interviewer on ABC television's Nightline show.

Other sources claim eyewitnesses saw Bishop raise his hands over his head in surrender before the troops opened fire. These sources, who asked anonymity, said Bishop and the other government leaders were wounded, but instead of being taken to the nearby hospital were executed at Fort Rupert.

Radio Free Grenada, the official broadcast station, carried a military statement which said Bishop was going to execute the officers at Fort Rupert.

The broadcast said a soldier died from wounds suffered at the showdown, bringing to four the number of troops killed at Fort Rupert.

Austin earlier had reported only two soldiers were killed, as well as "many others," including Bishop, Foreign Minister Unison Whiteman, Housing Minister Norris Bain, Education Minister Jacqueline Cret and union leaders Vincent Noel and Fitzroy Bain.

In Washington, State Department officials said Thursday "there were suspicions" but no evidence that Cuba played a role in the upheaval.

But Adams rejected that speculation, saying Thursday that "we see no evidence that the Cubans have taken any hand in the events of the past seven days."

Bishop was friendly toward Cuba. Even more Marxist in his politics was Bishop's deputy, Bernard Coard, who was among Grenadan government leaders who complained Bishop was moving too slowly in implementing socialist policies. Coard resigned last week, saying he wanted to squash rumors he was plotting Bishop's assassination, and has not been heard from since.

Austin said Sunday that Bishop had been voted out of the government by the central committee of the ruling New Jewel Party for refusing to share power with Coard.

Seaga said Jamaica would seek a suspension of trade with Grenada by all members of the Caribbean Community and Common Market and petition the Inter-American Commission for Human Rights to send an investigation team to Grenada.

Seaga, who often demanded that Bishop hold elections, also said diplomatic relations would not be resumed by Jamaica "until constitutional government has been restored in Grenada."

Ask Swiss to host reconciliation conference

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The once-postponed peace talks among Lebanon's warring leaders will be held in Geneva, probably next week, if the Swiss government agrees to serve as host, Lebanese officials said today.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said President Amin Gemayel's administration has asked Switzerland to be host for the reconciliation conference and is awaiting a reply. They said the date of the meeting would be announced once the Swiss government's approval is received.

The request to the Swiss was made after the government announced late Thursday that Gemayel and eight feuding leaders have agreed on a new site for a peace dialogue.

Foreign Minister Elie Salem, while declining to identify the site, said, "The meeting will be held on the territory of a friendly nation, and protocol necessities diplomatic contacts with this nation."

Agreement on the new site was worked out by Saudi Arabian mediator Rafik Hariri one day after Gemayel government was forced to cancel the reconciliation dialogue that was set for Thursday at Beirut's international airport.

All three opposition leaders of the Syrian-backed National Salvation Front had rejected the airport as too unsafe for the talks, which are aimed at finding a new power-sharing formula to achieve peaceful Moslem-Christian coexistence and end eight years of civil turbulence.

The reconciliation conference was called for in the Sept. 26 cease-fire ending the fighting between Druse and Shiite Moslem militias on one side and the Lebanese army and fighters of the right-wing Christian Phalange Party on the other.

Sporadic sniping was reported in Beirut. On Thursday, police said a soldier and a policeman were killed in Beirut, and a French peacekeeping soldier riding in a truck was reportedly wounded when a tea kettle filled with nails exploded by the road.

Police also reported sniping and shelling Thursday from Druse positions against the Lebanese army garrison at Souk el-Gharb, the strategic mountain town overlooking Beirut airport, where 1,600 U.S. Marines of the multinational peacekeeping force are based.

But Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said it was "extremely quiet" at the Marine base.

Americans conquer Everest from Tibet

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Three Americans have conquered Mount Everest from the Tibetan side, the first non-Chinese to do so, a Japanese mountaineer reported today.

Almost all Everest climbers approach the 29,028-foot peak, the world's highest, from the Nepalese side. Until now, Chinese climbers have been the only ones to have scaled Everest from the Tibetan side, in 1960 and in 1975.

The names of the Americans were not immediately known. However, a 16-member American team led by Dr. James Morrissey of Stockton, Calif., left for the Tibetan side of the mountain in August and had hoped to reach the summit around Oct. 6.

The team, including Chris Kopsinski of Spokane, Wash., and David Brashears of Boston, Mass., were attempting to be the first Americans to reach the top via Tibet.

The Chinese Mountaineering Society in Peking could provide no information about their progress.

Here's more about our Gena Walls

As you've noticed Gena Walls' column, "Gena on Genealogy" has returned to our pages. For your information, we'd like to tell you a little bit about our writer.

Mrs. Walls began tracing her own family while attending the University of Georgia in 1963. She has continued the work through the years while becoming more and more interested in the history and personalities of her ancestors. Her goal is to trace her family to where they arrived in the United States — or "to the ocean" as she says.

Three years ago, her husband Ken began working on field assignments and she gave up teaching to travel with him. Since then she has become a full-time genealogist.

Mrs. Walls has attended workshops relating to the country and material available, in addition to genealogy courses through the Houston Community College and Brigham Young University.

Currently, she writes her newspaper columns and is a guest speaker on "family tree climbing," while teaching classes on the basic steps of genealogy. She also researches for others, but prefers to teach them how to search for their families themselves.

Mrs. Walls welcomes queries and letters from her readers. Her address is Rt. 2 Box 505 Lot 26, Gonzales, La., 70737.

Gena on Genealogy

It's all in their names

By GENA WALLS

Have you noticed a repetition of Christian names in your family? Especially during the 1800s and again in recent years, parents named their children for other family members. An old method of naming children might help you solve the puzzle, but remember that it was not always true.

The first son was named after the father's father, the second son after the mother's father, the third son after the father and the fourth son after the father's oldest brother.

The first daughter was named after the mother's mother, the second daughter after the father's mother, the third daughter after the mother, and the fourth daughter after the mother's eldest sister.

Try using this method with your family to see if it might have been the key in naming your relatives. Another thing to watch is brothers and sisters having the same Christian name.

The infant death rate was so high that parents often named two children the same first or middle name to insure the name being carried to the next generation. Frequently, if a child died and several years later another child was born, then the second child was given the name of the deceased child as a remembrance. Watch for this when checking the census. If the birthday is seven to eight years different, you probably are dealing with different children.

In some families the names are the same, only reversed. For example, WILLIAM VINCENT, b. 1844; MARGARET ANN, b. 1846; VINCENT WILLIAM, b. 1848; JOSHUA, b. 1849; and ANN MARGARET, b. 1852.

Many of the names were taken from the Bible. The names of the 12 Disciples, especially JAMES and JOHN, were favorites for boys. SARA, MARGARET, and MARY appear to be favorites for girls.

If you have an uncommon Christian name, look for it in past generations. Drop back two generations and if it is not located in the direct lineage, try branching out to uncles, aunts or even cousins. Usually babies were named for someone — either family or friend. Sometimes, locations or towns were converted into names. How did your parents arrive at your name? This is an excellent item to include in your family history book.

Growing Child

Activity for latchkey children

"I'll beat up whoever tries to break into my house," said Johnny when asked why he kept a shoe in one hand as he watched television every afternoon.

Johnny is a sixth grader whose Mom and Dad both work outside the home. When Johnny gets home from school each day, there is nobody there to greet him, so he takes the key that is tied around his neck and opens the front door.

Johnny is one of two million "latchkey children" who come home to an empty house.

There has been a dramatic increase in recent years in the number of single parent homes and two paycheck families. And the prediction is that these numbers will grow, with two out of every three mothers expected to work outside the home by the end of this decade.

Here are some pointers from "Growing Up", the newsletter for parents of school age children, to keep "latchkey children" as safe and secure as possible.

—Some parents have been successful in persuading local school officials to offer after-class programs such as crafts, sports, or hobbies for children whose parents aren't home after school. These programs are generally staffed by teacher aides and others. Parents provide the financial support.

—For children who spend the afternoon hours at home alone, it is wise for parents to make a routine telephone call each day to make sure all is well.

—Children should be given a specific set of tasks to perform rather than be left to their own devices. Depending on their age, children can be responsible for starting dinner, doing a load of laundry or vacuuming a room.

—Strangers who call on the telephone should not be told that there is not an adult in the house.

—The door of the house should never be opened to a stranger.

—A family pet in the house can help provide companionship for the child.

—Once parents return home, they should take a few uninterrupted moments to interact with their child.

These recommendations will alleviate some of the problems of latchkey children — and provide some peace of mind to parents who are concerned about their children's welfare.

"Growing Up" is a newsletter for parents of school age children. For more information, write to Growing Up, P.O. Box 620N, Lafayette, Ind., 47902.

Dear Abby

Former actress finds her star begins to fade

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've read your column for years, but never thought I would ever write a "Dear Abby" letter. I have had more than my share of fame and fortune over the years, having enjoyed a very successful career on the stage and in films. I'm not young, but I'm still considered a very attractive woman. I've been married and divorced. I was a singer and dancer in my teens, worked hard, made a fortune and lived well. I still live reasonably well, but like everyone else who writes to you, I have a problem.

I'm lonely. I have a few good friends, but I would like to get around more. Men are afraid to call me because they assume I am too busy, too popular or I must be going with someone. I'm not. I sit home alone night after night, watching TV or reading. I would love to have a nice gentleman to spend time with.

Abby, please print this for lonely gentlemen, 50 and older: Do not assume that all women who were once rich and famous are too busy or too important to approach. They're not. I'm sure there are other women who were also big stars in the '50s who are as lonely as I am. Abby, if you printed my name, nobody would believe it, so sign me...

DON'T GET AROUND MUCH ANYMORE

DEAR DON'T: Ask a few of your "friends" to get the word out that you are (a) lonely and (b) available, and when the word gets out, you'll need police protection. Trust me.

***

DEAR ABBY: My son is 6, and ever since he was in day-care at the age of 3 he has been stealing.

He hasn't stolen from a store yet, only from children at school, but I'm worried. I have tried to explain that it's wrong to take things that belong to other people, but I don't seem to be getting through to him. I have punished him in different ways and even made him return the stolen articles to their owners. So far, he's taken little things like dice, plastic toy soldiers, cheap key chains, etc. Abby, he has plenty of toys and doesn't want for anything.

What should I do?

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: Punishment won't help, but learning why he steals will. Ask your pediatrician or family physician to recommend a therapist who can find out why your child steals. Children usually take things because they feel deprived of something they lack — attention, love, friends, etc.

***

DEAR ABBY: To the lady whose sex life was suffering because she and her husband worked different shifts:

I'm a man who enjoyed sex every time I wanted it — up until I was 60 years old. After that it was almost every night — almost on Monday, almost on Tuesday, almost on Wednesday, etc.

She is lucky to have a weekend lover instead of one like me.

Sleep Tips

If you tend to be a poor sleeper, don't nap during the day. Naps can decrease the amount and quality of your nighttime sleep.

If it's been more than a few hours since your last meal and you can't get to sleep, try a glass of milk, or a cup of yogurt, or sardines with bones on crackers, or a couple of chicken livers, or a banana, or a glass of fruit juice, or unsalted peanuts, or a handful of raisins, or a fish stick or a chicken leg.

Fall Foliage Festival set

CANADIAN — Canadian's annual Fall Foliage Festival, Oct. 30, is to include a hobby show, a tour of two historical homes, food at the Kountry Kitchen, as well as the ever-popular drive at Lake Marvin through the colorful cottonwoods and other foliage.

The Hobby Show opens at the city auditorium and will feature a wide variety of handcrafted goods for sale by exhibitors. Hobbyists from throughout the Panhandle will display their collections, also.

Canadian's Women's Service League is to sell hot beef brisket sandwiches, cakes, cookies, pies and beverages, beginning at 11 a.m. Proceeds go to the League's various service projects.

Free, unescorted tours of the drive to Lake Marvin through the colorful foliage will draw many visitors all during the weekend. A nature trail at Lake Marvin is to be marked, identifying 21 of the more conspicuous plants with numbered plaques.

Two of Canadian's oldest and most unique homes will be featured in the Tour of Homes. The Abraham Homeplace at Sixth and Cheyenne, owned by Dr. and Mrs. Malouf Abraham and built in 1902, is the first of Canadian's large old homes. Over the years, this three-story structure has been remodeled in Mediterranean style, with graceful arches and verandas, flagstone walks and walled gardens. The interior boasts an open central staircase which rises to the second and third floors, and unique carvings on the first floor window and door frames.

Also to be shown is the home of Dr. and Mrs. Teddy Dorocho at Sixth and Main. Built in 1910, this house is a Colonial Revival of the Edwardian Period, with massive front columns, a veranda, and balcony. Recently, the natural wood has been restored in the interior, replacing carpets, and windows have been decorated with glass curtains of the 1900s style, allowing a light and airy appearance. This home has recently been designated a state historical building.

THE DEWEYS

Singers at Lamar Assembly

The Deweys of Nashville, Tenn., considered to be "one of the most talented musical families in the world today," will appear at the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly Church, Bond and South Sumner, at 7 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 23, said Gene Allen, pastor.

Their vocal quality, musical expertise and unique touch of humor will inspire and entertain you from the first to the last note," Allen said.

The public is invited. A nursery will be provided.

Weatherfords to appear here

The Weatherfords, gospel singing group, will appear at Fellowship Baptist Church, 622 E. Francis, at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 28.

For more than 35 years the Weatherfords have been considered top song stylists, setting the standard for arrangement, selection and presentation, according to Rev. Earl Maddux, pastor. This has earned them the appellation "The Smooth Singing Weatherfords," Rev. Maddux said.

Pastors have learned to appreciate the spiritual impact of the group, Rev. Maddux noted. "Their emphasis is to honor Jesus Christ in every phase of their program. Reaching the lost through the presentation of the gospel in song with humility, simplicity and dignity has become a hallmark of the Weatherfords," he said.

The group's motto is: "Our purpose is not entertainment, but entertainment with a purpose."

The public is invited to attend the service.

REV. MIKE EDDY

Revival at Calvary Assembly

A revival crusade will be conducted at the Calvary Assembly of God Church, corner of Crawford and Love Sts., Oct. 23-30. Service times are 10:45 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The evangelist will be Rev. Mike Eddy from Raton, N.M. Rev. Eddy is a graduate of Southwestern Assemblies of God College in Waxahachie. He will be preaching and singing for each service during the crusade.

Pastor Mike Benson says the public is invited to attend the services. A nursery will be provided.

Hi-Land Pentecostal Holiness Church schedules revival

Hi-Land Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1733 N. Banks, will be in revival services Sunday, Oct. 23, through Friday, Oct. 28. Sunday services will be at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Services Monday through Friday will be at 7:30 p.m.

Leading the services will be David Garrison, former evangelist now pastoring in El Paso.

Pastor Cecil Ferguson says the public is invited.

Religious Roundup

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A meeting of clergy and farmers agreed that farmers, many of them being pushed toward bankruptcy and foreclosures by crop failures, debts and unstable prices, need help from their churches.

That was a consensus of about 60 farmers and clergy who participated in a special conference on the church and the rural crisis.

"Farmers discovered the support the pastors can and will give," says Mary Ellen Lloyd, director for the domestic hunger and poverty program of the National Council of Churches. She adds:

"And pastors discovered a tremendous amount of hurt and pain from farmers being forced from their land."

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N. C. (AP) — The unusual call to worship went like this:

"Praise God with audio-loops and wheelchair. Praise God with withered hands and with Braille. Praise God through creative bodies which proclaim the Good News to those who cannot hear."

The chant was used for a worship service at the first national meeting of United Methodist clergy with handicaps. There were about 30 participants from 19 states in wheelchairs and using canes, crutches, leader dogs, Braille hymnals, hearing aids and sign language.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

WHEN SOMEONE HAS HAD A CLOSE CALL WITH DEATH THE EXPRESSION "HIS LIFE HUNG BY A THREAD" IS QUITE OFTEN USED. NOW MOST HOUSEWIVES CAN TELL YOU THAT THREADS COME IN DIFFERENT SIZES AND STRENGTHS. AND WHEN DOUBLED IT IS EVEN MORE DURABLE. BUT EVEN AT ITS BEST, THREADS DO BREAK AND BUTTONS HAVE TO BE REPLACED. HOW WONDERFUL THAT OUR LIVES ARE NOT HELD TO GOD BY A THREAD. BUT BY HIS WORD. A WORD THAT HAS NEVER BEEN BROKEN. ATTEND CHURCH SUNDAY. STRENGTHEN YOUR TIES WITH GOD.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

PRISON VISIT—Debbie Lyons walks into Maine State Prison for a one-hour visit with her husband. Mrs. Lyons, who is expecting her third child, sometimes has to borrow $5 for gas to make the 80-mile trip from Portland to Thomaston, Maine. (AP Laserphoto)

Bringing inmates closer to their families

By KEN O'QUINN
Associated Press Writer
PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Debbie Lyons, 22 years old and expecting her third child, sometimes borrows $5 for gas when her welfare check doesn't arrive in time, but she never misses the Saturday morning trips to the state prison.

Clinging to her one-hour visit with her husband, Mrs. Lyons makes the tedious 80-mile journey from Portland to the prison in Thomaston every week with her mother, Bev Barden, whose husband is also an inmate.

Mrs. Lyons and her mother are among a group of women with no cars and little money — they all receive some form of welfare — who depend on the Bus Project, a 6-year-old program sponsored by the Cumberland County Jail Project to bring inmates closer to their families.

"You've got to be strong and stick with it," said Mrs. Lyons, whose husband has been sentenced to 3½ years for breaking and entering. Along with the visits, "We've got our letters and our phone calls and our furloughs. That keeps us going."

"They count on us visiting. It means an awful lot to them," said Mary Ann Berube, who visits her boyfriend.

The bail project, which offers bail and pre-trial legal help to low-income people, provides money to help cover the $200 a month in transportation costs, but it's not enough.

"I usually end up putting in $200 or $300 out of my own pocket" each year, said Pierre Shevenell, who oversees the program.

Last year a regional transportation service stopped providing a comfortable, 12-passenger van after Mrs. Barden, the bus project's driver, had an accident in a parking lot and failed to report it.

"We're using cars until we can get something we can call our own," said state legislator Laurence Connolly, who helped start the program.

"There are a number of people who really have a commitment to stay together," said Connolly. "And being able to get up and see him really gives her (a wife) strength."

It is a struggle to borrow a vehicle each week, and families sometimes are turned away because the vehicles are filled.

Four women made one recent trip on a foggy, raw day under overcast skies. As the maroon and white van crept north along coastal Route 1, a two-lane rural road, chilly air blew in through windows left open to vent exhaust fumes that rose through cracks in the floor.

The van had no heat, no radio, torn upholstery, and a missing door handle. Gray electricians' tape wrapped around the edge of the rear-view mirror held it in place.

"I think if we had a more dependable ride, we'd get more people going up," said Mrs. Barden.

There was little conversation during the trip; anyone wishing to speak had to compete with the drone of the engine, which strained to climb the slightest hill. The van never reached 50 mph.

Although she drives each week, Mrs. Barden rarely visits her husband because he despises the strip searches that inmates must submit to after visits, she said. He fears he will lose his temper at a guard and then lose his furloughs.

"It hurts me because I drive up here every Saturday and I sit out here" in the van, she said. "But what am I going to do? I can't force him."

While all Saturday visits are an hour, weekday visits can be two hours if an inmate's good behavior has earned him the privilege of using the annex.

Says 28 Guatemalan peasants killed

By The Associated Press
A Roman Catholic church source says Guatemalan civil patrolmen killed 28 peasants, including an 8-year-old girl, who apparently were suspected of being leftist guerrillas when they could not produce identity cards.

The source, who asked not to be identified for fear of reprisal, said Thursday the victims were killed at a roadblock outside the village of Sacupul, where they were going to buy food.

In another Central American development, leftist rebels in El Salvador ended a three-day blockade of the town of Suchitoto, located near two hydroelectric dams supplying most of the nation's electricity.

In Panama City, the foreign ministers of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama planned to open their eighth meeting tonight to press their Contadora group peace initiative for Central America. A key section of the group's 21-point plan calls for demilitarization of Central America to avert war between Nicaragua and its neighbors.

The Guatemalan church source said victims of the mass killing included four women and an 8-year-old girl. The source they were killed Wednesday evening and buried Thursday in Sacupul, 52 miles northwest of Guatemala City.

"They must have thought that since they came from villages close by, they wouldn't have problems," the church official said. "They must have lost their identification or just forgotten them."

The Guatemalan government had no immediate comment on the report.

Church officials and local residents have reported increasing abuses by civil patrolmen, organized by the army and given old rifles and machetes to help military patrols in their fight against leftist guerrillas.

Peasants in guerrilla-infested areas are instructed by the army to produce identity documents in order to reduce rebel infiltration. They also are told to turn over "suspicious" strangers to the local patrol corps.

Mexico-based human rights groups claim 95,000 people have been killed and 40,000 have disappeared since 1954 in the struggle for power in Guatemala.

In El Salvador, rebels fighting a four-year civil war to topple the U.S.-backed government lifted a three-day blockade of Suchitoto on Thursday. The rebels set up roadblocks along a 17-mile stretch of highway between the Pan American highway and Suchitoto, 27 miles north of San Salvador.

Informants, who declined to be identified for security reasons, gave no reasons for the withdrawal.

Movie at Church of God

"God's Prison Gang," a newly released film featuring Al Capone's getaway driver, the last member of Bonnie and Clyde's gang and two other notorious criminals who have become Christians, will be shown at the Church of God, Gwendolyn and Sumner Streets, at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Shot behind the walls of New York's Attica Prison, the film is hosted by Art Linkletter. It tells the story of how the work of Intra-national Prison Ministry is accomplishing what more guards, higher prison walls and greater financial expenditures have failed to do — keep released inmates from returning to lives of crime.

Rev. Sam Goude, pastor, said he hopes all local citizens concerned about the problem of rising crime will attend the film's screening here.

He restores vehicles to their original beauty

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Opulent cars that once turned heads and transported the wealthy usually end up as hunks of metal rusting beside their more humble cousins in junkyards. Or they are hidden in garages where they molder away, victims of neglect.

But some vintage vehicles are more fortunate. They are placed in Bob Smith's care and are restored to their former beauty, once again to turn heads.

Smith, who parlayed his love for automobiles into a thriving car restoration business in Gainesville, Bob Smith's Coachworks Inc., laughed as he recalled starting his business with only $50.

Fifty dollars of his own money, that is. His dad, grand-dad and a bank loaned him $4,650 in 1978 to help get his business going.

His first job was to restore a 1958 Edsel to its former, rather dubious beauty.

Since that time, he has restored Rolls and Bentleys, and earned a respectable reputation around the country for his talent and expertise in taking shells and pieces of once-glorious automobiles and returning them to their "original condition."

"I'm a working boss," Smith said. When any of his workers have questions, Smith is right there to answer.

When his employees run up against something they have not dealt with before, Smith is there to help them learn the tricks.

When one of his men "messes up or has a problem," Smith tells them, "Don't get mad. Fix it."

Smith emphasized that he was not just the owner of the shop and the boss. He was his employees' friend. "They can always come to me," he said.

Some of his men who now sand, buff and paint, or upholster or do metal work or any of the other jobs associated with restoring cars started out as high school students sweeping up the floors and doing other odd jobs. But Smith saw their potential and hired them.

There are three ways to do a job, Smith said. "You can do a good job, or a better job, or the best job possible."

Bringing a car to 100 percent show car restoration — which is what Smith's company mainly does — is not an easy task. Every inch and each detail of the car must be considered. But it is a task Smith enjoys.

Smith views his work as an art. His latest masterpiece is a 1931 Marmon V-16. "Over 5,000 man-hours went into the job," Smith said. With the restoration complete, the car is now worth more than $200,000. Smith said it was the biggest challenge he has undertaken in his five years of business. The car was taken to Pebble Beach, Calif., to compete in a major show car competition.

Each restoration job is different, he said, because it depends on what the car owner wants done. Before Smith begins a job he has to get answers: Does the owner want the original color of paint? Is this going to be a "street car" or a "show car"? Are there any missing pieces that will have to be found? How much detail will go into the work? How long is the car owner willing to wait for the job to be complete?

Most cars that pass through Smith's shop have stories behind them. For instance, he is grooming a car once owned by the late actress Ingrid Bergman.

The car, a 1953 Ferrari 212, was given to the actress as a wedding gift by her husband, Roberto Rossellini.

The car now belongs to Smith and a friend. Smith got the car when he "heard it was available."

Smith draws his business mainly from the Dallas-Fort Worth area — about 60 percent. The rest comes from other parts of the state and the country.

Smith's shop is full for about the next four months.

Bitter battle over Lake Tahoe development

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer
SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — Early fall snow tops the Sierra Nevada peaks which give Lake Tahoe its special grandeur. Afternoon clouds throw shadows on the lake, its color a dozen shades of deep blue.

But down along the south shore, where condominiums jostle for space with casinos and tacky motels, planners are locked in a high-stakes battle to shape the future of the popular lake.

Their forum is the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, created 14 years ago by Govs. Ronald Reagan of California and Paul Laxalt of Nevada to bring order to the lake's chaotic growth.

But the agency is in chaos itself this fall, bitterly divided between environmentalists who want to stop the growth and developers and landowners who want to see more.

In August, after years of work, the agency failed to meet a congressional deadline for passage of a regional plan. Members deadlocked over what they regard as the key issue facing Tahoe planners — whether to allow building on "environmentally sensitive" land.

Since then, board members have reached agreement on virtually nothing, and have heard so many different proposals that they frequently lost track of which one they were debating.

"We have plans and documents coming out our ears," complained member William Swackhamer. "What I'd like to see is for us to reach agreement on a base from which we can at least start an argument."

Still, chairman Jim Reed said he is optimistic that the agency will reach a compromise at its Oct. 27 meeting.

The fight could come down to a deadlock between a pro-environment Nevada delegation and a pro-development California group. The irony is that for most of the bi-state agency's history, casino-backed Nevada members have fought bitterly with anti-growth Californians.

Things changed last year with the new administrations of Democrat Richard Bryan in Nevada and Republican George Deukmejian in California.

The gambling industry has lost much of its interest in the lake because the agency has said there will be no new casinos built at Tahoe.

Tahoe was a quiet mountain resort until casino development in the 1960s and '70s spurred uncontrolled growth. Most of it was in California, but the high-rise casinos on the Nevada shore wooed the tourists who fed development in both states.

When the planning agency was formed in 1969, an assortment of projections called for an eventual population in the Tahoe basin of up to 800,000, more than live in San Francisco.

In 1980, the population was 48,000, with peak weekend crowds hitting an estimated 200,000 people. In addition to being a popular summer vacation spot, the lake also has become one of the nation's major ski resort areas.

As vacation home sites grew scarce in the flatlands around the shore, developers began building on the steep slopes of the surrounding mountains. Those slopes, highly prone to erosion, are the ones categorized as environmentally sensitive.

The issue of what to do with them is crucial because it could affect what all agree is the lake's primary asset: its extraordinary clarity.

From a pier jutting out into 25-foot water along the Tahoe shore, it is possible to see every pebble on the lake's sandy bottom.

That clarity is declining, largely due to erosion and air pollution. Between 1972 and 1981, visibility in the lake declined from 109 feet to 82 feet. This summer it was a record low 25 feet.

"The evidence is irrefutable that Tahoe is declining at an increasing rate," said Jim Bruner of the conservationist League to Save Lake Tahoe. "A straight line projection of the figures shows that Tahoe will become a very ordinary lake in 40 years — within our lifetimes." To stop the decline, the planning agency proposes to clean up air pollution with better mass transit, reduce erosion by restoring denuded slopes and streams, and retard growth with government buy-outs of private land. The buy-outs are already under way. Under the congressional Burton-Santini Act, the government is selling land around Las Vegas and using the proceeds to purchase undeveloped land at Tahoe.

Tourist center declared disaster zone

MAZATLAN, Mexico (AP) — Authorities Thursday declared this Pacific tourist resort a disaster zone and said 30 people are missing after Hurricane Tico swept through the area with 150-mph winds that forced 25,000 to abandon their homes.

Red Cross spokesman Antonio Velazquez said officials knew of no injuries or deaths in the storm, but said there are 30 people missing, including seven fishermen who set sail before dawn Wednesday despite warnings from port authorities.

Mazatlan Mayor Jose Rico said the emergency was declared because the winds blacked out the city and crippled the electrically-run potable water system. He said damage was extensive in the port area, but no estimate of the cost has been made.

About 25,000 poor people had to abandon tin-roofed and palm-thatched houses that were destroyed or damaged by the hurricane winds that struck early Wednesday here, 650 miles west of Mexico City.

The city is a popular resort, vacation and retirement home for Americans.

Tico blasted Mazatlan before dawn Wednesday, diminishing about four hours later, the National Meteorological Service said. The service, along with government officials in Mexico City, said Mazatlan was cut off from communications most of the day Wednesday.

Along Mazatlan's luxurious beach hotel strip, damage was reduced to broken windows, blackouts and water shortages, said Carlos Esquivel, manager of the Camino Real Hotel. Most of the hotels have their own emergency power supplies and were open for business normally, Esquivel said.

The storm took a number of American tourists staying at the hotel by surprise.

"It was really scary," said Sheri Rosburg, of Denver, who is staying at the Camino Real. "You could feel the building swaying. The window were rattling and sheets of water came into the hotel. But everyone here was beautiful, they kept us all calm."

But other tourists slept through the storm.

Pipelines... make good neighbors

America has over 220,000 miles of petroleum pipelines carrying crude oil and products to refineries and storage terminals across the United States. Each day, more than 1.5 billion ton/miles of crude oil and products move through this network. These pipelines have a safety record second to none in the transportation industry... and we want you to help us keep it that way.

- liquids on or a mist above the ground in the area of a pipeline.
- Flames originating from an opening in the ground.
- If you become aware of a pipeline leak...
- LEAVE THE LEAK AREA IMMEDIATELY.
- Avoid driving into vapor clouds.
- Avoid direct contact with the escaping liquids.

When you see signs like those shown above, they tell you that there's a pipeline nearby. If it's underground, you can't see it, of course. But it's there, working quietly to provide energy for you and other consumers throughout this nation.

Some of these signs list the commodity transported in the pipeline, the name of the operator, and a telephone number where the operator's representative can be reached at all times.

Although pipelines have an exceptionally good safety record, once in a while a leak can occur. Indications of a leak might include:

- A strange or unusual odor in the vicinity of a pipeline.
- A hissing or roaring sound (caused by petroleum or product escaping from a pipeline).
- A dense white cloud or fog.
- A spot of dead or discolored vegetation.
- An accumulation of petroleum

- Avoid creating sparks or sources of heat which could cause the liquids or vapor to ignite and burn. If you find yourself in a suspected vapor area, do not light a match, start an engine or even switch on an electric light.
- Notify the pipeline operator as soon as you reach a safe area. Call collect. Give your name, a description of the leak and its location. If you do not know who the pipeline operator is, call your local fire, police or sheriff's department, or the state police. Advise them of the nature and location of the emergency. If you see someone digging near a pipeline or doing other construction work... or if you plan to do such work near a pipeline yourself... please call the telephone number shown on the sign and let the pipeline company know so damage can be avoided. It's in your interest... and the nation's.

Harvester mentor wary of Brownfield

Pampa's Devin Cross is averaging 37.8 yards per punt this season, along with two field goals and six extra points.

Brownfield went winless in 1982 and hasn't won a game in six tries this season while yielding 206 points. Going back to last season, the Cubs have had seven scoreless games.

Those kind of statistics scare Pampa head coach John Kendall. "Their type of team always worries a coach," Kendall said. "You always wonder if your kids can get up for the game."

There's also other reasons why Kendall fears Brownfield's 0-6 record.

"Brownfield has a lot of young kids and they've been making a lot of mistakes.

After six games, you wonder if they're going to start putting it all together."

With 170-pound junior fullback Ricky Garcia and 160-pound sophomore quarterback Steve Smith, the Cubs have better than average speed in the backfield.

Garcia has rushed for 367 yards while Smith has scored four touchdowns this season.

Brownfield has an outstanding punter in Darrell Wilson, who is averaged 37.4 yards per kick in 34 tries.

Pampa's Devin Cross is averaged 37.8 in 28 attempts. Cross, a 175-pound senior, also has two field goals and six extra points. "They've also got some pretty big kids. They're bigger than we are," Kendall said.

Weather, the wet, slippery kind, could also be a factor in the game, which kicks off at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Brownfield.

"It's rained all over the area. They had six inches in Lubbock," Kendall said. "A lot of things can happen on a wet field, like fumbles and slipping around. The team that has the speed and can keep from fumbling will win the games in wet weather."

Wet weather has also hampered Pampa practice sessions. "The weather hurt us Wednesday and we didn't get outside too much Thursday," Kendall said. "We have had some real good practices. Our timing on offense has really been great."

Pampa is 3-3 overall and is tied with Canyon, Lubbock Dunbar and Levelland for second place in the District 1-4A standings. Pampa has wins over Levelland, 3-0, and Dumas, 21-3, in district play. The Harvesters lone loss was to loop leader Lubbock Estacado, 5-1 and 3-0.

Senior tailback Anthony Scott is Pampa's leading rusher with 588 yards in 100 carries. Junior fullback Eugene Smith boosted his rushing total to 273 yards in 77 tries after accumulating 110 yards against Dumas last week. Scott and Smith each have three touchdowns.

Pampa's offense is ranked next to last among the eight district teams, but its defense is ranked fourth.

David Carter, a 155-pound sophomore linebacker, is one of the ringleaders of Pampa's defense with four quarterback sacks and two fumble recoveries. Dean Birkes, a 185-senior tackle, has three quarterback sacks and a fumble recovery.

Rivera seriously injured in car wreck

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gabriel Rivera, the highly regarded Pittsburgh Steelers' rookie defensive lineman known as "Senior Sack," escaped a brush with death in an auto accident but remained in critical condition today with severe spinal cord and internal injuries.

The accident, which doctors said for a time threatened Rivera's life, casts a shadow of doubt over the career of one of the Steelers' most promising young defensive players in years.

"This came as a great shock to us," Gordon said. "It's hard to believe. Dan (Rooney, the Steelers' president), Franco (Harris) and Mel (Blount) came to the hospital as soon as they heard, and many other players called."

Rivera may suffer some paralysis. Rivera was in surgery at Allegheny General Hospital for over three hours, beginning at 11 p.m. Thursday, as doctors tried to determine how badly injured he is, Gordon said.

Rivera also suffered various cuts, bruises and abrasions to the head and body in the accident, which occurred on a rain-slick Ross Township road at about 9 p.m. as he was driving to his suburban North Hills home from Julian's, a restaurant-bar on the city's north side.

Rivera's car collided with a car driven by Allen Wates, 48, of Ross Township, authorities said.

Wates was treated and released from North Hills Passavant Hospital, but Rivera had to be "lifted from Passavant to Allegheny General via Lifeflight helicopter when his blood pressure dropped dramatically."

The 6-foot-3, 295-pound Rivera then was taken to surgery by a team of doctors headed by Dr. Daniel Diamond, the chief of Allegheny's trauma unit, said Fred Peterson, the head of Lifeflight.

The Steelers, 5-2 and the winners of three games in a row, will be in the Seattle Kingdom Sunday against the Seahawks. The Steelers are to leave Pittsburgh on Saturday.

Rivera was only the third defensive lineman to be drafted by the Steelers in the first round since 1969, the others being Joe Greene (1969) and Keith Gary (1981).

take him," said Dallas Green, Chicago Cubs general manager.

"I'm sure there are some teams out there who want me," he told reporters.

Kansas City Royals General Manager John Schuerholz said Rose's name "certainly will come up in an evaluation of all players who are available."

Several teams, however, were less than enthusiastic. "If I had position open I'd designated hitter.

After seeing limited action from 1947 to 1949, Rosen became the club's leading third-baseman and played at the position for seven years.

In 1954, he helped the Indians into the World Series against the old New York Giants.

Rose may return to Cincinnati Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds are interested in talking to Pete Rose about returning to Cincinnati to finish his major league career where it began and reached its heights, but not at the conditions he wants.

"Certainly the Reds would be interested in talking with Pete Rose. But, it seems to be the conditions he has laid down would not fit our situation that we have here in Cincinnati," said Bob Hovsam, the Reds president.

"I can understand what Pete is looking for and why he wants it."

Rose, with the Philadelphia Phillies since 1979, became a 42-year old without a job this week when he took his release from the Philadelphia Phillies rather than accept the role of a parttime player. Rose, a key member of the The Big Red Machine during the Reds glory days, became a free agent in 1978 after playing out his option and signed with Philadelphia.

Rose, now free to negotiate with any team, said he wants to play full-time and said he would consider switching from the National League to the American League as a designated hitter.

Rosen excited about Astros' future

HOUSTON (AP) — Al Rosen says he thinks he could have been president of the American League if he wanted to, but preferred to remain general manager of the Houston Astros because he is excited by the team's future.

Rosen signed a three-year contract as the Astros' president and general manager Thursday.

"I don't know if I was formally offered the American League presidency, but I got the idea the job was mine if I wanted it," Rosen said. "It was flattering, but I prefer to be in Houston. Building the Astros into a yearly contender is our goal, and I wish to be part of it when we succeed."

NBC-TV reported last month that Rosen, the Astros' general manager for three years, would replace Lee MacPhail when the president of the American League becomes director of the owners' Player Relations Committee.

Rosen denied that report. Later, Astros owner John McMullen said he had denied permission for AL officials to talk formally with Rosen.

Eventually, Rosen and the

AL people made contact. "John even told Lee MacPhail I was going to call him," Rosen said. "I talked to Lee and to others about the job. John wanted me to stay, and I wanted to stay. We just had some problems getting together."

McMullen said he is "not surprised, but certainly pleased, that Al made the decision which I think is not only in his best interests but for the Houston Astros."

Rosen, who has been in Arizona this week watching Instructional League prospects, said the Astros will probably retain draft rights for free agent pitcher Frank LaCorte and first baseman-outfielder Denny Walling but not for infielder Art Howe.

He also said first baseman Pete Rose, released by the Philadelphia Phillies earlier this week, does not fit into the Astros' plans. Rose said he would not accept the role as part-time player the Phillies wanted him to accept.

"I think Pete would serve himself better by being an everyday player, and he couldn't play every day for us," Rosen said. "Things could change. But as I see it, Pete is better off in the American League, where he could be a designated hitter some games and play other games."

Early in his baseball career, Rosen played for the Cleveland Indians.

Imposters plague Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — A tall, handsome man introduced himself as Dallas Cowboys' wide receiver Tony Hill recently at a sporting goods store and then tried to make a purchase. He didn't want running shoes or tennis shorts; he wanted to buy the whole store.

Cowboys imposters are at work coast-to-coast in what might be described as an epidemic of fraud. Most imposters merely try to impress strangers, usually female strangers, but some are running con games for profit and one has been charged with theft.

"The guy trying to buy the whole store is a crazy deal," Tony Dorsett said. "I hope nobody ever tries to use my name like that."

Dorsett's name frequently has been used in several cities by athletic-looking men seeking financial or sexual favors.

He said a few weeks ago a man called him asking about some tickets he had promised. Dorsett told the man he didn't know anything about tickets. The man told Dorsett that someone who looked like him "was in a bar and had a bunch of women around him. He was promising everybody tickets to the game."

Cowboys security director Larry Wansley estimated he receives 12 to 24 calls a week from people who suspect they have been taken by Cowboy imposters.

"About 90 percent of the time I can tell them the person they've met is not a Cowboy," Wansley said. "That's why I don't even tell the players most of the time. Why distract them?"

Wansley said most of his calls are from women who supposedly have met the Cowboy player or players at a local nightclub. One woman admitted that she had been duped into sexual relations with an imposter.

"She said, 'I know he wasn't one of your players,'" Wansley said. "But she said, 'if you happen to run across the guy, please ask him to call me. I really liked him.'"

The most popular subjects of impersonation have been Tony Hill and fullback Ron Springs. A man currently faces charges in Los Angeles for using Hill's name and bilking several gullible Californians.

The same man allegedly has identified himself several times as a pro basketball player. He even made the rounds in Thousand Oaks during Cowboys training camp and showed up at one of the practices. After telling several fans he was Hill, the man was escorted from the area by a local sheriff.

Why are Springs and Hill more popular with imposters than Dorsett?

"Because they hear my name and don't see my face," Spring says. "You hear my name and you see it flashed around a lot of places. But you don't know what I look like."

Hill and Springs are not as immediately identifiable as Dorsett or Danny White. Neither imposter favorite has a national endorsement contract.

Cowboys are chosen over Houston Oilers or Baltimore Colts because of the Dallas team's popularity.

"This is a country that idolizes heroes and the Dallas Cowboys are heroes," Wansley said. "If he walks and talks the part, people just go ahead and believe he's a Cowboy."

Sometimes, however, the tables are turned.

After finishing a meal in a local restaurant recently, Ed "Too Tall" Jones was approached by a woman wanting his autograph. He obliged and she returned to her table where a conversation ensued between the woman and another customer.

"The guy told her that I wasn't Too Tall 'cause he'd bought drinks the night before for Too Tall," Jones said. "She stormed back over to the table, slammed down my autograph and yelled, 'Thanks a lot, Too Tall. I just laughed and they watched me all the way out the door.'"

Rosen signed a three-year contract as the Astros' president and general manager Thursday.

"I don't know if I was formally offered the American League presidency, but I got the idea the job was mine if I wanted it," Rosen said. "It was flattering, but I prefer to be in Houston. Building the Astros into a yearly contender is our goal, and I wish to be part of it when we succeed."

NBC-TV reported last month that Rosen, the Astros' general manager for three years, would replace Lee MacPhail when the president of the American League becomes director of the owners' Player Relations Committee.

Rosen denied that report. Later, Astros owner John McMullen said he had denied permission for AL officials to talk formally with Rosen.

Eventually, Rosen and the

McCumber leads Disney golf

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Mark McCumber had the lead and Hal Sutton may have had something more important after the first round of the $400,000 Walt Disney World Golf Classic.

"I'm playing as well as I have all year," Sutton said Thursday after he'd fired a 5-under-par 67 for a position three shots off McCumber's leading pace. "And I'm hitting my irons as well as I have at any time in my life."

"I'm thinking it's about time I had a good week. It's very important to me this week to have a good tournament, be the leading money-winner and put a lock on Player of the Year."

And he virtually clinched Player of the Year a few moments later — even though he wasn't aware of it. That occurred when Calvin Peete withdrew after shooting a 73.

A PGA spokesman in Palm Beach Gardens said that Peete was the only man with any possibility of overtaking Sutton in the complicated point standings that determine the Player of the Year and that he would have to win the final two events on the schedule — including this tournament — to do it.

With Peete's withdrawal, that possibility no longer existed. An announcement of Sutton's selection as Player of the Year was being prepared for release early next week.

Sutton, who wrapped up Rookie of the Year honors last season when he won this tournament, has won twice this season — the PGA and the Tournament Players Championship.

Pampa spikers involved in three-way deadlock

With only three matches to go, Pampa's Lady Harvesters find themselves in a three-way tie with Lubbock Dunbar and Levelland for first place in the District 1-4A volleyball standings.

Levelland had defeated Lubbock Dunbar on Tuesday to gain a three-way tie.

Dunbar defeated the Lady Harvesters in two matches last Saturday to keep Pampa from retaining sole possession of first place.

Pampa hosts Brownfield at 1 p.m. Saturday in a dual, then closes out the season at home against Borger on Tuesday night.

TENNIS
BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Second-seeded Pam Shriver ousted Czechoslovakia's Katerina Srebnik 6-0, 6-4 to move into the quarterfinals of the $150,000 Daihatsu Challenge women's tennis tournament.

Joining Shriver in the quarterfinals of Europe's richest indoor women's event were Jo Durie of Britain, Ann Kiyomura and France's Catherine Tanvier.

Durie, the No. 4 seed, easily defeated Switzerland's Petra Delhees 6-4, 6-1. Kiyomura advanced with a comfortable 6-2 triumph over France's Nathalie Herremann, while Tanvier produced the upset of the day, eliminating seventh-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 7-5, 7-6.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Sweden's Stefan Edberg advanced to the quarterfinals of the $117,000 Fischer Grand Prix Tennis Tournament with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Marcos Hocevar of Brazil.

BASKETBALL
SALONICA, Greece (AP) — The University of North Carolina, led by Michael Jordan's 34 points in each game, won a doubleheader to capture the Dimitria International Basketball Tournament with a 3-0 record.

Within four hours, the Tar Heels rallied to defeat the Greek national team 100-83 and then edged Red Star Belgrade of Yugoslavia 105-104 in double overtime.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell, in accordance with rules and orders of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of its intent to re-file evidence and appropriate tariff(s) in support of a request to establish rates for the use of certain complex inside telephone wiring in the amount of $54.5 million annually. This request was previously a part of the considerations in Docket 5141 and now has been re-docketed as Docket 5420.

Customers who do not own the Complex Inside Wire associated with their Customer Premises Systems (such as PBX and Key Systems), and who utilize Southwestern Bell's wiring after January 1, 1984, could be affected by this request. On January 1, 1984, all of the Customer Premises Systems presently provided by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company will be transferred to a subsidiary of AT&T and that subsidiary of AT&T will be almost exclusively responsible for the charges pursuant to the proposed tariff on January 1, 1984. After January 1, 1984, customers who purchase their Complex Customer Premises Equipment and do not purchase, but continue to use, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's inside wire will be subject to the charges proposed in the tariff.

The proposed effective date for these new rates is January 1, 1984.

Persons interested in intervening in this matter should file a written motion expeditiously with the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Austin, Texas 78757, as the Hearing on the Merits in Docket 5420 is set for November 21, 1983.

Athletic events canceled

The Pampa High Boys' Invitational Golf Tournament has been reset for next weekend due to inclement weather.

The tournament will tee off at 9 a.m. Friday at the country club course. The final round will be played Saturday.

A girls' triangular involving Pampa, Palo Duro and Tascosa has also been postponed until next weekend. Those matches will be played at the Celanese course.

An eighth-grade football doubleheader Thursday involving Pampa and Canyon has been postponed until 10 a.m. Saturday at Harvester Stadium and the middle school field. If Pampa Blue wins its next two games, they will tie with Dumas for the district title.

NFL roundup

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The good news for Detroit is that John Riggins may not play Sunday. The bad news for the Lions is that Alvin Garrett may be in the lineup for the Washington Redskins.

Riggins, one of the National Football League's most punishing runners, has been taking quite a beating lately. The Redskins' fullback, last year's Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl, has gained 660 yards and scored 10 touchdowns this season.

But he also has a painfully inflamed sciatic nerve in his right hip and was hospitalized for treatment at midweek.

The Lions remember him well. He rushed for 119 yards when the teams met last Jan. 8 in the teams' first-round National Conference playoff game — but the Lions no doubt have more vivid memories of Garrett.

He replaced the injured Art Monk in that game and caught six passes, three of them covering 21, 21 and 27 yards for touchdowns in the Redskins' 31-7 romp. Monk is healthy now, but fellow wide receiver Charlie Brown isn't, sidelined with a bruised ankle. So Garrett's back in the lineup.

Sunday's other games are New England at Buffalo, Atlanta at the New York Jets, Kansas City at Houston, New Orleans at Tampa Bay, Minnesota at Green Bay, Chicago at Philadelphia, Cleveland at Cincinnati, Miami at Baltimore, Pittsburgh at Seattle, San Diego at Denver, San Francisco at the Los Angeles Rams and, at night, the Los Angeles Raiders at Dallas. On Monday night it's the New York Giants at St. Louis.

"For the first time this year we are coming into a game at less than 100 percent physically," Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs said. "This is probably going to be one of our biggest challenges because we might have a lot of players missing and Detroit is really hot... We are going to need some big efforts from people coming off the bench."

The Redskins are coming off their second loss in seven games, the 48-47 shootout in Green Bay last Monday night, while the Lions, 3-4, are shooting for their third consecutive victory, a feat they haven't achieved since November 1981. In their past two games they've beaten Green Bay 38-14 and Chicago 31-17.

Buffalo is alone atop the American Conference East at 5-2 and New England shares last place with the Jets at 3-4, but Bills Coach Kay Stephenson notes: "There's always been a special rivalry between the Patriots and the Bills, and it's always going to be a dogfight, no matter what the records."

Both teams are coming off big games, the Bills ripping Baltimore 30-7 and the Pats shocking San Diego 37-21. New England's Steve Grogan was the hot quarterback earlier this year but Joe Ferguson of the Bills is now. He has thrown eight TD passes in the past two games.

All in New York, there's the drama of two teams in trouble, the 2-5 Falcons and the 3-4 Jets.

"At this point in time, we need something good to happen to get us rolling," said Jets Coach Joe Walton. "I guess 3-4 is better than 2-5, but everything is relative in this world. My mother calls me and complains that she's 70-years-old. I tell her, 'Mom, be grateful you're not 71.'"

The Falcons biggest asset has been quarterback Steve Bartkowski, who shares the NFL passing lead with Green Bay's Lynn Dickey. "Steve has put us into position to win every game," said Coach Dan Henning. "He hasn't turned the ball over indiscreetly (only one interception, 12 fewer than the Jets' Richard Todd) and he's made the big plays. But some things happened out of our control."

Kansas City hasn't won in the Astrodome since 1974 — but the Chiefs are going against the AFC's only winless team. The Oilers' losing streak is at 14 games. It's also Chuck Studley's first home game as Houston's interim coach. His debut ended with a 34-14 pounding in Minnesota.

The NFL's other winless team also trudges home this weekend, Tampa Bay hoping it can end its skid against the Saints the way it did in 1977. Back then, in the Buccaneers' second season, their losing streak hit 26 before they upended the Saints 33-14.

AGAINST THE ODDS— James Phelps, a McMurry College freshman from LaMarque, Tex., has overcome a bout with cancer and a hurricane to play football. (AP File Photo)

Two-year battle McMurry center beats cancer

By BILL HART
Abilene Reporter-News
ABILENE, Texas (AP) — James Phelps has a big smile on his face these days and it's not entirely because his McMurry football teammates are having an excellent season in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

James Phelps, a freshman from LaMarque who is the starting center for the Indians, is just happy being alive and seeing the sun shine.

In the spring of 1981, the doctors told him he had cancer of the lymph nodes and six months to live.

That was the last thing he had figured to hear because he "had never been sick a day in his life."

He only went to the doctor in the first place because he had been hit in the stomach with a soccer ball. When he doubled over, he felt a lump and didn't know what it was. Treatments followed and the 200-pounder lost 50 pounds and his hair. However, he didn't lose his competitive edge and that perhaps, more than anything, helped him win out.

"I was shocked when I first heard the news and there was a lump in my chest the size of a baked potato," he said. "The doctors removed the tumor and I was scared for a while. But a doctor at M.D. Anderson (Hospital in Houston) told me to stick to the treatments and have the pride to beat it."

Phelps had a lot of people in his corner. School officials told him he didn't have to come back to school for the final month because of his 87-average, so he didn't have to worry about his school work. His family, friends and high school coaches visited him regularly and tried to cheer him up.

"No one tried to bury me, they always encouraged me, so it was always in the back of my mind that I'd beat it," he said. "That summer, a guy gave me a job as life guard at the swimming pool and he told me if I didn't feel like working to not show up. That helped, too, because I didn't want to sit around the house and feel sorry for myself or just look at the four walls."

In November, a month after his "six-months-to-live period," he walked out of M.D. Anderson with a clean bill of health and with permission to play football.

"After the third or fourth treatment, the spot went away, the doctor couldn't explain it," Phelps said. "I've learned to live with it and I live everyday to the fullest, knowing I've beaten the odds...I made it."

McMurry Coach Rodney Murphy, who had tried to recruit Phelps when he was a senior in high school, was the only college coach to keep up with him after the malignancy was discovered.

So, when he got his clean bill of health, Phelps called Murphy to tell him he was coming to school at mid-term.

"I didn't have my hair back, so I wore this Marine cap all the time on campus. I think most of the students thought I was an ex-marine, not a football player," he said. "I didn't tell very many what had happened to me."

He weighed 170 when he came to school, but he went on a weight-lifting program and now weighs over 200 pounds and has been starting at center. If overcoming cancer wasn't enough to cope with, Phelps had another scare this summer when Hurricane Alicia hit his hometown of LaMarque and his house was destroyed. He even had to carry his sisters to safety in waist-deep water.

"The storm totaled our house, but we rode it out," he said. "We went to the second story of our house, but when the storm took off the roof, we went downstairs. The water was waist deep, that's when we went across the street to some friend's house."

Phelps missed the first football workout this fall because he stayed at home to make sure everyone was all right after the storm. Anyone who could outlast a serious illness and then a hurricane shouldn't have too much trouble with defensive linemen and linebackers.

"I just didn't have the energy to push my self at first, but when we went to the one-on-one drills, I started going as hard as I could. Surely, if I could beat my other things, I could beat my man," Phelps said.

Sick sticker

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Longhorns have their own bumper sticker as part of their preparation for the football game with Southern Methodist on Saturday.

There has been much publicity over SMU's "The Lies of Texas are upon you," sticker, so a UT graduate had one printed that says, "Support Pro Football: Watch the SMU Mustangs."

The UT sticker refers to the NCAA investigation of SMU recruiting.

Six more players go on free agent market

NEW YORK (AP) — Six more players, including veteran outfielder-designated hitter Oscar Gamble of the New York Yankees, have filed for baseball free agency, bringing to 27 the number of players who have decided to become free agents.

In addition to Gamble, who had seven home runs in only 180 at-bats last season, those adding their names to the Nov. 7 re-entry draft were utility man Derrel Thomas of the Los Angeles Dodgers, outfielder Gene Richards of the San Diego Padres, shortstop Mark Wagner of the Texas Rangers and pitchers Dale Murray of the Yankees and Jamie Easterly of the Cleveland Indians.

However, John Wathan of the Kansas City Royals, who had played out his option, signed a four-year contract with the Royals. And the Los Angeles Times reported that Doug DeCinces, another potential free agent, had reached agreement in principle with his present team, the California Angels.

Players eligible to declare free agency have until Nov. 1 to decide whether they want to be on the Nov. 7 list.

Others who will enter the draft include catcher Ted Simmons; pitchers Doug Bair, Jim Bibby, Doug Bird, Rich Gossage, Don Hood, Frank Lacorte, Dennis Lamp, Jerry Reuss, Dan Schatzeder, Larry Sorensen, Kent Tekulve, Dave Tomlin, Tom Underwood and Milt Wilcox.

Also, infielders Rob Pisco, Manny Trillo, Mark Wagner and outfielders Warren Cromartie, Ruppert Jones, Dave Parker and Dennis Walling.

Unbeaten West Virginia favored over Penn State

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Kansas Coach Mike Gottfried has this comment on the ups and downs of college football:

"One week the band's waiting on you, then you play another game and the dog's barking at you."

The band hasn't played for West Virginia against Penn State since 1955. In the intervening 27 years, Penn State has won 26 times, including 24 in a row since a 14-14 tie in 1958.

This may come as a shock to those Rip Van Winkles who have been dozing for the last two decades, but times have changed and West Virginia, 6-0 and ranked No. 4 nationally, is a 3 1/2-point favorite for Saturday's game at State College, Pa., against the defending national champions, who are 4-3 and unranked, but own a four-game winning streak.

"This is my fourth year (at WVU) and most of the time we've been a 15-to-20-point underdog (against Penn State)," says Mountaineer Coach Don Nehlen. "But kids today don't live much for what happened in the past. They weren't even born in 1955. All they know is that this team hasn't beaten Penn State."

However, Penn State Coach Joe Paterno says he'll be "very disappointed if we don't play our best game of the year. We're healthy and ready to play."

ABC to carry N.Y. marathon

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

But for four knee operations, Bob Iger might be running in the New York City Marathon this Sunday. Instead, he can take pleasure from his role in bringing the race into the homes of 20 million or more Americans.

Iger is the director of program planning for ABC's Wide World of Sports. He has also been a runner since long before it was fashionable. So when Fred Lebow, director of the New York Marathon, began pushing ABC to televise it, it was natural that he went to Iger.

He found a sympathetic ear. "I'm a runner and I'm a fan of running," Iger says.

ABC is in its third year of televising the marathon and Sunday will be a key test of its viewer appeal. Last year, an estimated 24 million people watched it, compared to 14 million in 1981 — perhaps because of real interest; perhaps because the football strike left the nation's couch potatoes starved for Sunday sports action.

Iger, admittedly a biased source, thinks the appeal is there.

"When we finally decided to do it, we really didn't know whether people would be interested in seeing people running," he says. "But I think it's an excellent event for television, much more so than originally anticipated. It's a spectacle and if televised properly, it can become the same kind of spectacle as the Kentucky Derby and the Indianapolis 500."

The Marathon goes on the air Sunday at 10:30 p.m. EDT (before breakfast on West) and will stay on until 1:30. As is standard with major sporting events these days, television sets the actual starting time — 10:45, 15 minutes later than in the past, to allow Jim McKay and his colleagues in the studio to properly set the scene.

It is not, as it has been in the past, replete with running's biggest names. Alberto Salazar, the men's winner the last three years and Bill Rodgers, who won the previous four, are absent. So is Joan Benoit, who set the women's world record in the Boston Marathon.

But there will be 17,000 runners — world-class runners, accountants, pipefitters, secretaries — and an estimated 2.5 million spectators lining the route. Along with vistas of New York, they provide plenty of camera fodder.

There's also the question of whether the event makes television or television makes the event.

"Last year, the president had the winners to the White House," Iger says. "Maybe if he hadn't seen it on television, that wouldn't have happened."

Senate Republicans break with Reagan on two issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Breaking twice with President Reagan, the Republican-controlled Senate has voted to restrict the sale of government mineral rights and to delay a White House plan for plugging leaks of classified information.

The Senate joined the House Thursday night in adopting restrictions on the Interior Department's sale of seacoast oil drilling rights and federal coal reserves. The restrictions were contained in a $7.9 billion appropriation measure for the Interior Department and related agencies that won final approval in both houses.

The restrictions, which bar the department from selling oil and gas drilling rights in federal wilderness preserves, were drafted by House Democrats in reaction to the pro-development policies of outgoing Interior Secretary James Watt. The Senate accepted most of the proposals following a conference committee.

On a second front, the Senate voted 56-34 to delay by six months the implementation of an administration plan to require prepublication review of writings by some 120,000 federal employees who once had top-secret clearances, amounts to unconstitutional censorship.

The restriction was tacked onto a $6.4 billion appropriation bill for the State Department, which would also cut U.S. support of the United Nations by 50 percent over the next four years.

The full measure now goes to a House-Senate conference committee where senators predicted the U.N. money would be restored.

The House, meanwhile, rebuffed the administration's Central American policy, voting 227-194 to cut off the CIA's covert military aid to rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government. Democrats charged the aid amounts to an undeclared war on Nicaragua.

The vote marked the second time this year the House has moved to suspend funds for covert aid to the anti-Sandinista forces. But the Senate is unlikely to go along with the cut-off, which was attached to the 1984 intelligence authorization bill.

Reagan received more favorable treatment from the House Appropriations Committee, which approved a $246.3 billion defense spending bill. Although the panel voted 28-22 to eliminate money the president sought to produce new chemical weapons, one administration supporter was satisfied.

"We haven't done anything in the bill that gives the administration total heartburn," said Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala.

The panel also turned back efforts to delete money for MX and Pershing 2 missiles, two controversial weapons the Reagan administration has fought to include in the spending package.

Did GM put cars with brake problems on market?

WASHINGTON (AP) — When General Motors Corp. put its highly touted X-body cars on the market 4 1/2 years ago, it did so despite numerous reports from test drivers about the car's braking problems, according to GM documents.

The files, made public Thursday as part of a suit against the automaker, also showed that less than two months before production began, top GM executives discussed the driver reports and acknowledged the brakes appeared to be the cars' "number one problem."

Among the documents were logs that showed at least 35 instances on 11 different test cars during 1978 in which drivers had control problems because brakes locked prematurely. Similar reports continued to be received right up to when the cars went into showrooms in April 1979, the files revealed.

"The brakes are getting really bad. They are some times locking up, and they are grabbing constantly," complained one test driver in May 1978, eight months before general production on the front-wheel drive cars began.

The files, totaling thousands of pages, were made public by U.S. District Judge Thomas Jackson, who is hearing a suit brought by the Justice Department, seeking a recall of 1.1 million 1980 X-body cars.

The suit also seeks $4 million in damages, alleging that GM knew of the defect, failed to correct it and later misled federal officials pursuing an investigation of the matter.

Names in news

NEW YORK (AP) — It seemed like Mother's Day when Walter Cronkite, John Ritter and Phil Donahue were asked to describe the influence their moms had on their lives.

"Besides being particularly pretty, a superb dancer and a marvelous companion, she inculcated in me a sense of honesty, integrity and social responsibility," Cronkite, the longtime CBS news anchor, said of his mother, Helen. "At every moment of crisis when such qualities are strained, I have felt her hand on my shoulder."

"My mom is the one everyone turns to when they're in trouble," recalled "Three's Company" star Ritter, of his mother, Dorothy. "She's the one who's there with the shoulder to lean on, the food, the comfort. And she's a good listener."

Donahue, the talk show host, said of his mother, Catherine: "The big gift from Mom was encouragement to try a lot of things, with what behaviorists today would call 'positive reinforcement.'... My mom raised me good. She raised me real good."

Cronkite, who will be 67 next month, Ritter, 35, and the 47-year-old Donahue give their views in the November edition of Good Housekeeping magazine.

NEW YORK (AP) — Wedding bells won't be ringing right away for actress Mary Tyler Moore — at least not until late next month, her spokeswoman said in response to reports that Miss Moore, 45, is about to get hitched for a third time.

The city clerk's office stayed open late Tuesday night so she and her husband-to-be, cardiologist S. Robert Levine, could pick up their license. However, the wedding date has yet to be set, spokeswoman Jackie Becher said Thursday.

Levine works at Mount Sinai Hospital and the Bronx Veterans Administration Hospital.

Miss Moore's most recent marriage was to Grant Tinker, now head of NBC, from whom she was divorced last year. Together they founded MTM Enterprises, which produced the "Mary Tyler Moore Show."

LONDON (AP) — Former King Constantine of Greece gave a kiss on the cheek and hand to Queen Elizabeth II as she arrived at a Greek Orthodox cathedral in west London for the christening of his fourth child.

The child, 4-month-old Theodora, fell asleep soon after the ceremony Thursday as a host of European monarchs looked on.

Constantine, 43, is godfather of the queen's grandson Prince William, the 16-month-old son of Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

Theodora's godparents include Queen Elizabeth, former Queen Anne-Marie's sister Queen Margarethe II of Denmark and Constantine's sister Queen Sophia of Spain, who was accompanied at the ceremony by her son Prince Philippe. Other guests included the former Greek queen's mother Ingrid — Queen Mother of Denmark — and members of the former Romanian and Yugoslav royal families.

Constantine and his Danish-born wife live in north London, in exile following a 1974 plebiscite banning their return when Greece was proclaimed a republic.

NEW YORK (AP) — In this city of concrete, Mayor Edward I. Koch got a piece of a rock which he described as "the biggest diamond I've ever owned" — but actually it wasn't worth much.

The mayor, 58, was given a plaque at the Diamond constitute a safety defect.... The GM brief does not go into the specific reports by the GM test car drivers.

In a statement issued in Detroit, the automaker accused the government of presenting a "distorted and one-sided analysis" of the internal documents. GM said it had "acted properly in carrying out its safety responsibilities."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Comedian Flip Wilson expressed "great satisfaction" over a California Supreme Court ruling that he was illegally detained when a 1981 search at Los Angeles International Airport turned up narcotics in his briefcase, his lawyer says.

Small amounts of cocaine and hashish oil were found, but the tribunal said Thursday that they were seized illegally and must be suppressed as evidence.

Officials had no objective reason to detain the 49-year-old comedian, the court said.

"I'm delighted that we won," said Wilson's lawyer, Paul F. Moore II. Wilson had no comment other than "an expression of great satisfaction," the lawyer said.

The case had not come to trial pending arguments over the evidence.

News in brief

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Police worked by candlelight after an electrical transformer exploded, blacking out half the city including the police and fire stations for four hours and injuring two utility workers.

Traffic signals also were knocked out by Thursday's blast at a Southern California Edison transformer in a substation, causing numerous accidents, said police Lt. Robert Thomas.

About 8,600 customers' meters were affected, but it was impossible to estimate how many of the 88,000 residents were affected because meters, said utility spokesman Bob Krauch. He said the two utility workers had been testing circuits when the blast occurred.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A Caribbean charter airline left a Boeing 720 jetliner sitting at Newark International Airport since Aug. 15 because too few people signed up for a scheduled return flight to the Dominican Republic, the airline's president says.

Officials of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport, had been mystified by the jet, which had been towed to a spot among maintenance trucks.

Jacques Bernateau, president of Hispaniola Airways, claimed ownership Thursday. He said the 3-year-old airline has been trying since August to arrange flights on the plane between Newark and Santo Domingo beginning Nov. 24.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten European airlines have sued the government for $100 million in damages because they couldn't fly DC-10 planes to the United States for 18 days in 1979 after the aircraft were certified as safe.

In a lawsuit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court, the foreign airlines contended the Federal Aviation Administration ignored a treaty that bound the agency to honor inspection certificates from their governments.

All DC-10s were grounded by the FAA from June 6, 1979
