Terrorist organization gives U.S. 10 days to get out of Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Islamic Holy War extremist group today claimed responsibility for bombing the French regimental headquarters and gave a "last warning" to U.S. and French peacekeeping forces to leave Lebanon in 10 days.

Beirut that killed 241 American servicemen and 58 French paratroopers. They also claimed responsibility for April's U.S. Embassy bombing in Beirut in which 63 people died.

The U.S. Marine contingent based at Beirut International Airport was ordered to stand by its highest state of alert, apparently anticipating a possible bombardment by Syrian-backed anti-government militiamen because of the overflights.

second bomb contained about three pounds of explosives. The explosions were the latest in a series of car-and truck-bomb attacks, attributed to little-known terrorist bands, that have killed more than 300 people at U.S., Israeli and French military and diplomatic facilities in Lebanon and Kuwait.

Income tax forms to follow Santa's visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Santa's on his way, can your income tax forms be far behind? Ho, ho, ho — they'll be in the mail next week. In its traditional year-end postal blizzard, the Internal Revenue Service is sending out close to 92 million tax-form packages beginning next Tuesday, an IRS spokesman said Wednesday.

Bundles of the forms are already at postal distribution points, "but we instruct the post offices not to begin actual delivery until after Christmas," Fadely said. He said most people should have their forms by mid-January at the latest.

Ma Bell gets interim rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has given Southwestern Bell a $653.3 million temporary rate hike that seems to have pleased no one.

"It means we earn in the toilet," said Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence. The company wanted at least $200 million more.

American Telephone & Telegraph, which will pay $617.8 million of the Jan. 1 increase, responded by promising to ask for a long distance rate hike of up to $200 million. Other long distance companies will pay $35.5 million to Bell.

"We have no alternative but to seek an immediate rate increase," said Ron LeMay, AT&T regional vice president for external affairs. That increase would add about 20 percent to AT&T revenue.

Two lawyers representing consumers said the immediate effect of the Wednesday ruling — no direct increase to ratepayers — was encouraging, but the long range effects are unknown.

"AT&T lost," said Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle. "In the short term, the local ratepayers won. In the long term, AT&T may be in here next week asking for a rate increase. The jury's still out."

Carol Barger, representing Consumers Union, Texas ACORN and the League of United Latin American Citizens, said she was glad there was no direct charge to ratepayers. But she added, "We always pay."

Bell came to the commission looking for a New Year's Day rate hike to replace long distance revenue that will be lost in the AT&T divestiture. After Jan. 1, Bell will retain only a small portion of the profitable long distance business.

AT&T and companies such as MCI and Sprint will handle most long distance calls. The utility commission, in a 3-0 vote, said the long distance companies should pay the entire $653.3 interim rate hike.

Bell's request called for a $2.60 monthly increase on residential bills. PUC Administrative Law Judge Jacqueline Holmes denied the local increase, but recommended about $50 million in long distance increases.

Her ruling was appealed by several sides, including Bell, which wanted more, and Boyle, who said the company should get nothing.

Bell has a $1.3 billion rate hike pending at the commission, with a ruling expected in that case in April. Company lawyer Lawrence told the commission that Bell can't wait that long for financial help.

"The economic future of this company lies in the hands of you three today," he said.

Boyle, the state lawyer who represents consumers, argued for no increase. He said Southwestern Bell's request was based on projections, not data. He said the company's economic forecasts are less reliable "than the point spread for the last two Dallas Cowboy games."

Commissioner Phil Ricketts acknowledged that higher long distance bills are a "possible result" of the ruling. Erwin said it would be unfair to let AT&T keep all the long distance revenues without paying Southwestern Bell.

"In the absence of action, it's just gravy to AT&T," said Erwin.

He added, "The main thing this points out to me is divestiture is a bad idea."

Among those less than satisfied with the result was Commissioner Peggy Rosson. She said the information the commission had to work with was "pitiful, just pitiful."

Small town's only doctor jailed

SAN SABA, Texas (AP) — It seems the only way Dr. Roy E. Lee will get out of jail before Christmas is if there's a medical emergency.

Lee is the only doctor in this Central Texas town of 5,500. He was jailed Wednesday and ordered held until he pays almost $5,000 in family support for his 4½-year-old son and estranged wife.

"I knew I was under orders to pay the money, but I couldn't make it and I didn't have the money," Lee told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from the jail Wednesday night.

"There's a lot of people in town that could go pay that money," Lee said. "They might take up a collection in a New York second, but I wouldn't be about to let them do that."

Lee said he was "chagrined by this and concerned about my patients."

Sheriff Brantley Barker told the AP that if there's a "real emergency," the San Saba Clinic is under orders to give the sheriff a call and he will deliver the doctor.

"The hospital's about a mile from the jail. I had one emergency today, and I carried the doctor up there. A small child had a finger broken and needed to be seen about right quick. I did take him up there," Barker said.

Lee said the jailing took him by surprise. He said he had been ordered to pay the support money in a Dec. 7 court order.

In addition to the $1,500 support for his son and $2,500 for his wife, Lee also has been ordered to pay $750 in attorneys' fees and $43 in court costs, he said.

Wadene Ivy, assistant administrator at the clinic, criticized the contempt of court jailing by State District Judge D.V. Hammond of Burnet.

"Small hospitals have a very hard time getting by. Dr. Lee is the sole doctor up here. I wish he (Hammond) could have confined him to the hospital or something," Ms. Ivy said.

"We've been running back and forth to jail to talk to the doctor," she said. "We're trying to set up a special line to the jail. He'll be in jail for Christmas and that will break our hearts. It will break our backs and this will probably put us out of business."

Thirteen patients were in the hospital Wednesday, two of them in serious condition after heart attacks, said Ms. Ivy. Lee also cared for 100 patients at two local nursing homes.

"We're just holding our breath at this time," she said. "We're just praying we don't have anything serious. We would normally ship all our patients out to Brownwood, but the roads are so bad (from Wednesday's ice storm), we can't do that."

Lee said it's unlikely he can get the support money together if he's in jail.

Jury deliberates case of sheriff's captain

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A sheriff's captain admitted to a jury that he ordered the destruction of an unknown substance found in a judge's car because he believed it was "a setup."

Capt. Willie Hill testified in his own behalf Wednesday at his trial on charges of tampering with evidence. Prosecutors alleged he ordered the disposal of a suspicious white powdery substance found in El Paso County Judge Pat O'Rourke's car.

Jurors deliberated for 1½ hours Wednesday night without reaching a verdict. They were told by State District Judge Sam Callan to resume deliberations today.

Hill told the jury he ordered the unknown substance destroyed because he believed it was planted to discredit a witness in a federal investigation involving the county jail.

"I could see it was a setup. I could see the whole plan in my mind," Hill said.

He said one of the two deputies who discovered the substance last February was a key witness in a federal grand jury investigation into alleged inmate beatings at the El Paso County Jail in 1981.

Hill said Deputy Dwight Jefferson testified against jailers, three of whom were indicted last week on charges of beating inmates, and "was very unpopular."

"I had calls telling me they were going to kill a soul brother," Hill said, explaining that he thought people planted the substance in O'Rourke's car because they knew Jefferson would be working on the vehicle and would find the substance. Both Hill and Jefferson are black.

Hill, an 11½-year veteran of the sheriff's department, was indicted in October on misdemeanor charges of official misconduct and tampering with evidence.

Callan dismissed the official misconduct charge Wednesday before the case went to the jury.

Jefferson and Deputy Jim Boykin have said they found the suspicious substance, which they believed to be heroin, inside a condom while they were installing a two-way radio in O'Rourke's car.

The two men said that when they told Hill of the discovery he ordered it destroyed.

Hill said Wednesday he did not believe the substance was evidence in any investigation and only wanted to protect Jefferson.

He said he feared Jefferson would go to jail if anyone knew of the substance and said Jefferson would be killed in jail.

"He'd be dead today," he said.

Jefferson and Boykin were granted immunity from prosecution in return for testimony against Hill.

Under cross-examination, prosecutor Tom Roepeke asked Hill if he ordered the substance destroyed for political reasons, pointing out that Hill was a "political and personal friend" of O'Rourke.

Dog wakes man to escape gas fumes

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Mike DeLoney was angry when his 75-pound pit bull terrier jumped onto the bed in the middle of the night and started barking.

DeLoney, 49, a dispatcher with the Fort Worth police department, shoved the dog — named Mr. Ed — off the bed and went back to sleep.

When he awoke again, Mr. Ed had bitten DeLoney's arm and was pulling him onto the floor.

DeLoney was really angry at the dog this time.

"Suddenly I realized something was wrong," he said.

A leaking propane stove had filled the house with dangerous fumes.

"I smelled the odor of rotten eggs, and I half realized that some kind of fumes were in the house. My arm was bleeding and I crawled on my hands and knees and tumbled out the front door," DeLoney said.

The cold air brought DeLoney to his senses, but he was suddenly sick and had a pounding headache. He breathed deeply for several minutes and went back in the house to turn off the heater that was leaking propane gas fumes.

"I truly believe my dog saved my life. Why if it weren't for him, I would probably never have opened my eyes again," DeLoney said of the incident.

DeLoney said he came home from his job as police dispatcher about 12:15 a.m. Monday. He lit his gas heater, but it popped loudly and went out. DeLoney then lit it again and went to bed.

A propane gas tank outside of the house provides gas for his heating and cooking. But as the weather got colder, DeLoney said he used the gas heater more and more, at higher temperatures.

"It seems I had used up most of the gas without realizing it. There wasn't enough pumping to keep the flame lit, but it kept escaping into the room," he said.

DeLoney said he didn't know Mr. Ed was such a sensitive dog. He said he has owned the dog since he was a puppy, four years ago.

"That dog has been everywhere with me. I just didn't realize how loyal he was. But by golly, he's proven himself," DeLoney said.

Report says

An emphasis on high visibility over safety led to bomb tragedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision by Marine commanders to emphasize high visibility for peacekeeping troops in Beirut — over ensuring their safety — led to the truck bombing that killed 241 servicemen, a congressional investigation concludes.

Leaders on the ground, lacking clear guidance from their superiors in the chain of command, found that their mission to provide a "presence" as part of the multinational force often conflicted with security considerations, the report said.

"This conflict lay at the center of many of the decisions made by the Marines that led to inadequate security and laid the Marine compound open to the kamikaze attack that was to come," said a 78-page report issued Wednesday by the House Armed Services investigations subcommittee.

The full report, which drew on testimony the panel obtained in eight days of hearings in Beirut and Washington, supplemented a five-page "summary of findings and conclusions" made public Monday.

Col. Timothy J. Geraghty, commander of the 1,800-member Marine amphibious unit in Beirut at the time of the Oct. 23 explosion, was accused in the summary of making "serious errors in judgment in failing to provide better protection for his troops."

The full report said: "Col. Geraghty is a dedicated and talented officer who was given a difficult mission that, as he interpreted it, became increasingly more difficult to perform without exposing the Marines under his command to significant death or injury."

"This is not a case of dereliction of duty, or of neglect. But it is a case of misjudgment with the most serious consequences."

Geraghty, who returned with his unit to Camp Lejeune, N.C., earlier this month, has not been available for comment.

"The origins of this attitude that visibility took precedence over security remains obscure," the report said, but there was no evidence that it had been forced upon the Marines by the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

In fact, it said, the ambassador wanted his own facility turned into a fortress.

But, the panel said, Geraghty and his predecessor in Beirut, Brig. Gen. James Mead, "argued forcefully on behalf of visibility even now. It appears that the Marine commanders, recognizing correctly that their mission was primarily political and not a traditional military one, determined to be more diplomatic than the diplomats."

The report said Mead told the panel: "I am concerned if you go into a mole-like atmosphere and dig deep and don't go out amongst the population, I am concerned about morale and concerned about the accomplishment of the mission."

At another point, Mead said: "You were told to create an environment. You know, obviously you had to be seen to do that, because the Lebanese people had to have the feeling of well-being with which they would not use their arms and their militia."

Geraghty also said he was concerned that his troops not give an impression "that we were covering, particularly with the shelling. I was very adamant that we maintain our visibility."

Asked by the subcommittee why he did not erect dirt barriers and other impediments at the compound, Geraghty replied: "It was a balance really in judgment on what we could do, what we should do, and at the same time not giving the appearance of being an occupation force."

But the strongly worded report, which one source said actually was watered down a bit before publication, rejected that reasoning.

"How was the absence of dirt barriers around the Marine area at the (Beirut) airport complementary to the mission?" it asked rhetorically.

"After all, the area wasn't open to the public and few would know what was behind all the dirt barriers. How would tank traps that could possibly have stopped a truck attack convey a 'fortress mentality' in a way that a quarter-million sandbags (protecting other Marine positions) did not?"

And the report said the mindset that made security secondary to visibility "may have led to the curious refusal of anti-terrorist training offered Marines by the U.S. European Command."

It said the Marines "received insufficient direction from above on how to interpret their mission and noted testimony that although a stream of high-ranking officers visited their positions, none questioned the adequacy of security arrangements."

Agents substituted cement for Moscow-bound components

DENVER (AP) — Customs agents substituted concrete and an obscene message for a laser system en route to Moscow by way of a West German company believed to be a link in an scheme to send high technology equipment to the communist bloc, authorities say.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Spriggs revealed the actions Wednesday at a hearing for two men charged with trying to illegally ship components to "unfriendly nations."

A suburban Denver firm, International Consulting Group, had planned to ship the goods from Stapleton International Airport to a Munich firm for relay to the National Physics Institute in Moscow, Spriggs told U.S. Magistrate Royce Sickler.

But customs agents intercepted the goods Dec. 15 and the Soviets wound up with 700 pounds of concrete instead of a $53,700 krypton laser system for etching computer chips and a $13,000 seismometer for detecting nuclear explosions, Spriggs said.

He said the agents also included a message that said only, "...you."

Norman Comerford, 38, the president of International Consulting Group, and Bruce Adamski, 30, the office manager, were arrested Tuesday — the same day that U.S. and West German agents raided the Munich firm and found papers showing the goods were bound for Moscow, Spriggs said.

A search Tuesday at ICG's headquarters in Englewood showed "about 80 additional shipments of air freight from Stapleton to points overseas," Spriggs said. He did not say if any of those shipments were to communist nations.

Sickler on Wednesday reduced Comerford's bond to $100,000 from $500,000 after his lawyer said Comerford, a British citizen who has lived in the United States since 1969, had many ties to the community. Adamski's bond hearing was scheduled for today.

Comerford and Adamski were charged with violating the federal Munitions Control and Arms Export acts. If convicted, they face up to seven years in prison and more than $150,000 in fines.

Their arrests were part of the federal government's "Operation Exodus," launched by President Reagan in October 1981 to stem the flow of high technology from the United States to "unfriendly nations," according to Gary Hillberry, special agent in charge of U.S. Customs in Denver.

In fiscal 1983, which ended in October, 1,444 similar shipments worth about $86 million were seized in the United States, he said.

Tuesday's raid on the Munich firm, Sciencecare, produced documents that prove the company was a link in an international scheme to ship restricted high technology to the Soviet Union, officials said. Another West German firm, Helling KG of Hamburg, was also searched.

According to an affidavit filed in federal court, Adamski in October 1982 contacted Teledyne Geotech of Garland, Texas, about buying a seismometer. Teledyne vice president J.M. Whalen said the device is "specifically used for detecting and measuring nuclear explosions."

Early in 1983, Teledyne informed Adamski that a federal export license would be needed for the seismometer.

According to the affidavit, Adamski sent Teledyne a photocopy of such a license, but Teledyne officials became suspicious and sent it to U.S. Customs officials. They determined that the license Adamski had submitted had actually been approved for shipment of a computer system to the United Kingdom.

Jet-powered backpack mission is not daring, astronauts claim

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Bruce McCandless, who will be the first man to maneuver in space completely free of a space craft, says he's not worried about the maneuver.

McCandless and fellow astronaut Robert Stewart will propel themselves away from the space shuttle Challenger with powered backpacks during the next shuttle mission, scheduled to start Jan. 30.

"There's nothing bold about it and there's no particular danger or risk involved," McCandless said.

"The backpack is very easy to fly and the risk is very minimal," said Stewart, who also will take a couple spins out to 300 feet away from the space craft.

Commander Vance Brand, McCandless, Stewart and the other two crew members on the 10th shuttle mission, Robert Gibson and Ronald McNair, discussed the flight during an hour-long news conference Wednesday.

"Any time you do something new in space like this, there is a certain aura of boldness about it," Brand said. "But with NASA, we really don't do anything bold until we look at it six different ways. We simulate it and make very sure that we never paint ourselves into a corner."

Brand said the major goal is to deploy two commercial communications satellites for paying customers, Western Union and the Indonesian government.

The crew is also very excited by the other tasks planned during eight days in orbit Brand said. These include the backpack flying, a rendezvous with a balloon satellite and the first landing back on earth on a 15,000-foot runway near the launch pad at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

"This flight will be a bridge to the next flight when a shuttle crew will attempt to retrieve and repair a satellite in orbit," Brand said.

To test the backpack for that flight, McCandless is to take three trips away from the shuttle and Stewart is to test it twice during a two-spacewalk periods lasting about six hours each. These will be on the fifth and seventh days of the mission.

"We'll start out testing its handling characteristics close to the shuttle bay, within 40 to 50 feet," McCandless said. "Then we'll gradually work our way out to 150 feet and then 300 feet."

The backpack is called an MMU, for manned maneuvering unit. Two of the units are aboard but only one will be used at a time. When McCandless is flying it, Stewart will be in the open spacewalking suit, ready to assist, and vice versa.

If something goes wrong and one of them is unable to steer himself to Challenger, Brand and pilot Gibson are trained to fly up and rescue.

"If one is stranded out there 100 yards or more away, we'll just drive very slowly up and he can grab up to something on the bay or the other crewman back there can grab on and help him in," Brand said.

"This is a very critical test to the future of the program. They're not going to get out there more than 300 feet and we're not going to let them out of our sight."

Each MMU has two complete control systems and the thrust of the jets is so low there is no possibility an astronaut could be sent spinning out of control, McCandless said.

Squaw dress featured in fashion show

Despite the icy weather, many Pampans braved the elements to view an unusual fashion show presented by four members of the local charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association Dec. 18.

Brilliantly colored Indian squaw dresses and square dance dresses designed by Ester Scrivener of Shamrock were the center of the show presented as a fund raising project for the ABWA's scholarship program.

Hostesses for the Christmasy event included Jimmy Ivy, Peggy Cloyd, Ellen Malone and Edna O'Neil.

O'Neil explained that her aunt, Ester Scrivener, has been a seamstress since the depression when she supplemented the family income by sewing waitress uniforms for 35 cents each. She branched out from the uniforms to all kinds of sewing until she had more than 165 customers on her list at one time.

Dear Abby Teenage drinkers need help By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem; I am writing out of gratitude. Because of you I now belong to a beautiful fellowship that gave me back my life and a reason to live. I am 19 and tried to commit suicide four times within a period of six months. I was sent to a counselor who gave me a 15-question test she said she got from your column. It read: "If you are of school age and into drinking, this test is for you. If you answer yes to one or more questions, consider it a warning." Abby, then you said that if you answer yes to three or more questions, alcohol has become a serious problem in your life and the best help available can be had by calling Alcoholics Anonymous.

Well, I answered yes to every question, and that's when I called A.A. I went through the treatment for the disease of alcoholism. That was very traumatic at age 18.

I have been dry for a year, and for the first time in my life I know how it feels to be really alive and respect myself.

Thank you for showing me the way.

SOBER IN OHIO

DEAR SOBER: Congratulations. The column to which you refer was published in November 1981. Because I am sure many other teen-age drinkers would like to see that column, here it is:

DEAR READERS: I have been made aware that there is a serious drinking problem among young people. Almost everyone who drinks alcohol thinks he can handle it. If you are of school age and are into drinking, the following test is for you. Answer yes or no.

1. Do you lose time from school because of drinking?
2. Do you drink to lose shyness and build self-confidence?
3. Is drinking affecting your reputation?
4. Do you drink to escape from study or home worries?
5. Does it bother you if somebody says that maybe you drink too much?
6. Do you have to take a drink to go out on a date?
7. Do you ever get into money troubles over buying alcoholic beverages?
8. Have you lost friends since you started drinking?
9. Do you hang out now with a crowd that can get liquor easily?
10. Do your friends drink less than you do?
11. Do you drink until the bottle is empty?
12. Have you ever had a loss of memory from drinking?
13. Has drunk driving ever put you into the hospital or jail?
14. Do you get annoyed with classes or lectures on drinking?
15. Do you think you have a problem with alcohol?

If you answered "yes" to one or two questions, alcohol has become a serious problem in your life.

If you are interested in learning how to deal with a drinking problem, help is available by calling Alcoholics Anonymous. It's in your telephone book. And in my book, the most effective help for an alcoholic of any age is through A.A. There are no dues; it's absolutely free. No questions will be asked. You may remain anonymous, and no one will know you've been there—unless you tell someone. If someone you care about has a drinking problem, ask about Al-Anon. For teen-agers, it's Alateen. Good luck and God bless.

Loose Marbles

By LISA PATMAN

Our son Wacko has always been a different child. I began to suspect this when he was born singing "For I am jolly and mellow..." I was sure of it when as a toddler he warbled to me, "Happy birthday to you, happy birthday to you. You look like a monkey and you smell like one, too."

Wacko has continued in this vein throughout the many, long, interminable years he has lived with us. This Christmas was no exception. (Although I confess I wrote to Santa and asked for a good case of laryngitis, and signed his name.) I'd like to share with you some of the more endearing little ditties he came up with, just so you'll know why I am what I am. (Good grief, I'm beginning to sound like Popeye.)

First I heard, "Marbles the rednosed nightmare, had a very shiny schnoz. Somebody find her powder — or put her out with the dogs."

After that came, "Juggle bills, juggle bills, juggle bills today. If you juggle long enough you'll be in jail by May."

Those were followed by "We wish you a hairy Christmas, we wish you a hairy Christmas, we wish you a hairy Christmas — 'cause Dad's going bald!"

And least but not last, "He sees you when you're sleeping. He knows when you are gone. He knows if you've been good, dear Mom — 'cause he's a peeping Tom."

I don't know if I'll survive any more of these tuneful titillations from Wacko's tongue. I think the only hope I have of enduring is to retaliate. It's been quite a struggle to come up with the sort of sweet revenge which I so fervently desire — something so subtle yet forceful, that even Wacko might understand it. But I think I may have found it.

So here's to Wacko (with sincere apologies to the author of "Auld Lang Syne"): Should old acquaintance be forgot,
I hope it is Wacko's.
But if it's not, I'll take the sledge
And smash all of his toes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
You've been making a more favorable impression on persons who can help you add to your material resources than you may realize. Good things will result.

Cowboys face tremendous odds

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Landry isn't a betting man, but even if he were he wouldn't wager on the Dallas Cowboys making it to the Super Bowl.

"The odds on it would be tremendous," Landry said on Wednesday. "I wouldn't put a lot of money on us getting to the Super Bowl."

Then Landry hedged.

"This game is not always played in realism," Landry said.

Such as in 1975 when the Cowboys, a wild card then as now, made it to the Super Bowl only to lose narrowly to Pittsburgh.

The Cowboys host the Los Angeles Rams Monday at 1:30 p.m. in a wild card joust. If Dallas wins, the Cowboys travel to San Francisco for a divisional game on Jan. 1.

If the Rams win, they must play at Washington on Jan. 1. Oddsmakers installed the Cowboys as early six-point favorites.

Landry said he has to find a way to reach his team mentally.

"My role right now is to get this team out there playing in the proper mental frame of mind," Landry said. "We have to overcome the mental disappointment of two poor performances in a row. It's a mental thing now more than anything else. We have been emotionally drained since the loss to the (Washington) Redskins."

The Cowboys have been humiliated by both Washington and San Francisco.

Landry said, "I don't remember two back-to-back losses of this caliber, anytime," Landry said. "It doesn't happen often."

Washington blasted the Cowboys 31-10 and the 49ers whipped them 42-17 Monday night. In both games, star running back Tony Dorsett was held to just 66 yards.

Landry said, "The errors we have been making are out of sight compared to the first 14 games."

Landry said the 12-4 Cowboys had been playing "like a team that was 3-14."

He said "it's just not like us."

Some 9,000 tickets remained for the game. Joe Bailey, executive vice president of the Cowboys, said the weather was helping keep fans away from the ticket lines.

"We only sold 20 this morning," Bailey said.

Gamblers file suit over Sims

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Gamblers, feuding with the Detroit Lions over the services of running back Billy Sims, have filed suit in state district court, claiming a contract Sims signed with the Lions has damaged the Gamblers' financial efforts.

State District Judge Felix Salazar signed a temporary restraining order Wednesday prohibiting the Lions from interfering with the contractual relations between Sims and the Gamblers, an expansion team in the United States Football League.

Sims signed a five-year, $3.5 million contract with the Gamblers on July 1 and accepted $200,000 as part of a signing bonus. He also signed a $5 million contract with the Lions Dec. 16.

The Gamblers claim unless they receive a permanent injunction against the Lions, voiding the Lions' contract, "losses will continue to mount and, in all probability, will be devastating to the Gamblers," according to the suit.

The Gamblers' suit cites no specific amount for monetary damages, but asks for at least $5 million in punitive damages.

"We're not in a position to ascertain or predict ultimately how much we've been damaged," Gamblers attorney H. Lee Godfrey said. "We know we have been damaged."

The Gamblers contend the Lions induced Sims to breach his Gamblers contract and that the actions of the National Football League club were calculated to cause damage to the Gamblers.

Salazar scheduled a Dec. 29 hearing on the Gamblers' request for a temporary injunction.

The suit says Sims received $197,608.10 on July 1 from the Gamblers as a portion of a $1 million bonus.

The Lions have filed suit in Detroit, seeking to void Sims' contract.
