West German police use water cannons on crowd

Water cannons stop German protesters

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Riot police turned water cannons on angry protesters outside the Parliament building today and made 100 arrests as Chancellor Helmut Kohl reaffirmed his government's plans to deploy U.S. nuclear missiles this year.

"If negotiations remain unsuccessful, the alliance will establish the readiness of the first Pershing 2 missiles and cruise missiles by year's end," Kohl said in a 70-minute speech starting a two-day debate on deployment.

Several thousand police sealed off streets around the Parliament building with steel barriers to prevent thousands of anti-missile demonstrators from approaching closer than 100 yards.

About 100 demonstrators were arrested by late morning, said a Bonn police spokesman who declined to be named. He said the 2,000 to 4,000 anti-missile protesters were unable to carry out a threat to blockade Parliament and prevent the debate.

Reporters said a mixture of water and tear gas from five water cannon was sprayed on 400-500 protesters who tried to block traffic on a busy boulevard on the edge of the government district. However, the police spokesman denied that tear gas was used.

Hans-Jochen Vogel, floor leader of the opposition Social Democrats accused Kohl of failing to represent the West German interests in Washington.

Vogel said opinion polls showed a majority of West Germans oppose the deployment. "In the deployment question, the majority of our people stand against you," he said.

Kohl's right-center coalition government has a 58-seat majority in Parliament, so the missile plan is expected to win endorsement in a vote Tuesday.

An hour into Kohl's address, a half dozen deputies of the small anti-NATO Greens faction stood up and walked toward the podium carrying large posters showing victims of the Hiroshima atomic bomb. Parliamentary President Rainer Barzel called for order and the deputies were herded back to their seats by guards.

Referring to U.S.-Soviet arms limitation talks in Geneva, Kohl appealed "anew to the Soviet leadership not to persist in rigid principles but rather to make a result possible."

Kohl accused the Soviets of trying to pressure West Germany into abandoning the North Atlantic Treaty Organization deployment decision, but said he would never bow to threats.

"Whoever knuckles under to the pressure of a dictatorship because he does not stand up to its power always encourages new extortion and use of force. No democratic politician can allow himself to get into the position of not being able to decide freely," Kohl said.

NATO plans to station 572 Pershing 2 and cruise nuclear missiles in Western Europe over the next five years, including 204 in West Germany, and says they will go into place unless Soviet and U.S. negotiators work out an agreement to limit nuclear arms.

The government announced Sunday that Kohl had received a letter from Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov.

75 million watch nuclear film

'The Day After' raises tempo of nuclear arms debate

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

The horror of nuclear war, interrupted only by commercials, swept into millions of homes with "The Day After," raising the tempo of the nuclear arms debate across America today, from schools in New York to town halls in Oregon.

ABC-TV's movie Sunday night was used as a focal point for anti-nuclear groups, while the Reagan administration, led by Secretary of State George P. Shultz, called on Americans to "rally around and support" a policy of deterrence and negotiation with the Soviet Union to reduce nuclear arms.

The film was seen in almost seven out of 10 homes watching TV during its time period in three major cities. CBS News reported today. Quoting "overnight" figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. for the period 8-10 p.m., CBS said "The Day After" registered 70 percent of the audience actually watching TV in Chicago, 69 in New York City and 68 in Philadelphia.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle said today on the "CBS Morning News" that the film "makes the easy point without raising the hard question." That question, he said, is "how to avoid nuclear war, any nuclear war, no matter how limited." Perle also criticized the movie for prompting fear.

An estimated 75 million people watched the 2½-hour movie, many of them gathering in churches and neighbors' homes. Network affiliates said their switchboards lit up with hundreds of calls during the show, with most of the calls to ABC's New York headquarters supporting the showing of the film.

"The Day After," a $7 million project, depicted a Soviet nuclear strike on Kansas City, and the grim aftermath for survivors in nearby Lawrence, Kan.

"We saw our community destroyed this evening," Lawrence Mayor David Longhurst told about 500 people at a candlelight vigil near a hilltop war memorial after the show. Several hundred people also gathered for a candlelight ceremony in Kansas City.

"We saw all of the nightmares come true. We got a glimpse at what is really at stake in a nuclear war," said Longhurst, who called a town meeting for today to discuss the nuclear arms race. A nuclear disarmament rally was planned at City Hall in Kansas City.

Elsewhere today, teachers across the country said they would discuss the movie with their pupils and people planned to gather in student unions, libraries, banks and churches, from Tucson, Ariz., to Asheville, N.C., to talk about the movie and the prospect of nuclear war.

Even before the movie began, picketers in front of ABC offices in New York City, Los Angeles and Lynchburg, Va., protested what they said was the pro-nuclear disarmament theme of the program.

In New York, ABC-TV said it received 1,075 telephone calls during and immediately after the broadcast. Of those, 662 "expressed support" for the movie, 393 gave "negative views," and the remainder were asking for information about follow-up programs, ABC spokesman David Horowitz said.

Of 5,500 people in six cities polled by QUBE, a two-way cable TV system, 87 percent said they believed nuclear war could be avoided. Sixteen percent said they had not considered nuclear war a real threat before seeing "The Day After." Of those, 42 percent said the show changed their minds.

Reaction among other viewers ranged from shock to anger.

78-year-old woman with no training lands plane safely

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A 78-year-old woman with no flight training and "a dead man" beside her followed hand signals from other airplanes and instructions from the back seat to land a small plane safely against "20,000 to 1" odds, officials said.

"I sure had a mouthful of cotton when we got down, and I did an awful lot of praying," Edith Merrill said Sunday after landing the single-engine plane at Luke Air Force Base near Phoenix.

The trip began Sunday morning when Bruce Turner, 57, and his wife, Jane, 59, invited Mrs. Merrill and Dorothy Mathews, 65, to fly with them to breakfast in Sedona about 115 miles to the north.

Mrs. Merrill took the co-pilot's seat because, "I was very interested in looking at all the instruments and finding out what they were all about I found out."

But Turner lost consciousness while piloting the plane. Mrs. Merrill said she was "panicked all the way through" but realized it was up to her since the plane's cockpit was so small she couldn't change seats in midflight.

"I had a dead man beside me and his wife in back of me with one hand on each shoulder," she said. "It was kind of hairy."

"The odds against successfully carrying out this operation are phenomenal, I'd say 20,000 to 1," said Jack Seeley, a Sedona flight instructor who helped guide the plane in. "I figured the best we'd get away with is that they'd bust it up, and we'd have some broken arms and legs and no one killed."

When her husband collapsed, Mrs. Turner made "a panicked plea for help" over the radio, said Lt. Col. Dalton Smith, chief of staff of the Arizona Wing of the Civil Air Patrol.

"Jane thought he had fallen asleep because he was tired, and she patted his face and tried to wake him up, but he did not wake up," Mrs. Merrill said.

But Turner, who had been taking medication for a heart ailment, was unconscious, and was pronounced dead at Luke base hospital, officials said.

Mrs. Turner leaned over her husband and operated the throttle and propeller control as Mrs. Merrill steered the plane.

Within three minutes, Capt. Forrest Kline of the Civil Air Patrol flew within sight of the women.

"It was very frightening, believe me," said Mrs. Turner, the only passenger with any flight training — six hours of a "pinch-hitter" course taken as a Valentine's Day gift for her husband. "It was a matter of survival."

Smith said Kline and air patrol Maj. Thomas O'Connell steered the women through a ragged turn to avoid nearby mountains.

"To put it in layman's terms, the feeling would have been like you were in a roller coaster that jumped the tracks, hurling through space without any control," O'Connell said.

Seeley heard about the incident and took off with Bob Baker, a retired

MRS. EDITH MERRILL

American Airlines pilot.

The base cleared the runways while Mrs. Merrill prayed as she made the final approach.

"I said, 'God help us, God help us,'" she said. "And Jane says, 'He's right at your shoulder.' And right about then we hit and we didn't bounce."

Seeley said, "I let out a blood-curdling scream that just about knocked Baker out of my plane. I'm amazed that we pulled it off."

The reception committee included lots of welcoming arms and at least one general, Mrs. Merrill said. "Everyone of them out there was just terrific."

Asked if she would consider taking flying lessons, she said, "Oh heavens, no, no way. I don't even want to get in one of those things. Thank you, no. I'll fly commercial jets."

Arafat in corner

Rebels push into Tripoli

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian rebels using Syrian-supplied tanks seized the northern entrance of Tripoli today and battled to within 1,000 yards of PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's headquarters.

The overnight push, accompanied by heavy artillery bombardment on central areas of Tripoli, severed Arafat's supply lines with his Palestine Liberation Organization loyalists fighting the rebels at the southern edge of the Baddawi refugee camp.

Arafat, meeting with reporters at his headquarters, said the rebel forces for the first time had crossed into areas of the city that had been controlled by Lebanese authorities. There was a lull in the fighting, and Arafat was asked if a cease-fire had been declared.

"No ceasefire, no ceasefire," he said. "They want to invade the city, they want to control the city."

As the rebels closed in on Tripoli from the north and east, residents were fleeing toward Beirut, 50 miles to the south. Cars packed with suitcases, plastic bags and mattresses sped out of the port city.

The rebels pushed into the Malloweh traffic circle that forms the northern entrance to Tripoli in T-54 and T-55 tanks. They set up mortars and multiple rocket launchers on the roofs of highrise apartment buildings overlooking the circle.

Malloweh is about 1,000 yards from Arafat's headquarters in Tripoli's Zahrieh neighborhood. Lebanon's state radio said the rebels mounted hit-and-run grenade attacks on Arafat's defense line in and around Zahrieh.

"Fighting was fierce," said Arafat.

The rebels are demanding that Arafat leave Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city, as a precondition for a cease-fire. But Arafat has said he would not leave unless he receives guarantees for the safety of his loyalists and his local Lebanese militia allies.

In Israeli, meanwhile, the government warned it was prepared to stage more retaliatory raids like the air strike Sunday on Syrian-held mountains east of Beirut.

Winter storm roars through West

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press Writer

Winter roared into the West a month early, leaving over a foot of snow in Nevada and Utah today and blasting Arizona with 70 mph winds, while the South reeled from tornadoes and lightning-laced storms that left at least three people dead.

In Pennsylvania, six other people died when their twin-engine plane lost power and slammed into a hillside during a rainstorm Sunday night, officials said. The cause of the crash had not been determined.

Winter storm watches were in effect throughout the West today as snow continued to fall in Nevada, Utah, Arizona and Colorado.

In the central mountains of Arizona, the state Department of Public Safety on Sunday reported winds gusting up to 70 mph, ice-slick roads and visibility reduced by blowing snow. Forecasters predicted up to 10 inches of new snow by Tuesday.

The South and Midwest were battered Sunday by twisters, high winds and drenching thunderstorms that demolished homes and knocked out power to thousands of residents.

One person died when he was hit by a bolt of lightning, another was electrocuted by a downed power line and a Boy Scout trying to clear a road died when he was hit by a truck.

In Utah, the National Weather Service reported that a major winter storm developed overnight, with snow falling across most of the state. Ski resorts at Alta and Snowbird reported 16 inches of new snow Sunday, and more was dropping early today.

One to two feet of snow fell in the Sierra Nevadas around Lake Tahoe, Nev., the National Weather Service reported.

A travelers' advisory was in effect today in the Colorado Rockies, where up to 7 inches of snow was predicted. Significant snowfall was anticipated in the mountains through Tuesday, when a slow-moving cold front was expected to move east over the foothills and eastern Plains.

A winter storm watch was also posted today for central and southeastern Wyoming.

In Florida on Sunday, more than 15 mobile homes were damaged and several carports destroyed when a tornado touched down at an Ormond Beach trailer park, scattering debris for a quarter-mile, officials said.

The National Weather Service said a tornado also touched down in Putnam County, in northeastern Florida. Officials said Anthony Neese, 23, of Cantonment, was electrocuted when he touched a metal fence on which a power line had fallen during a storm in Escambia County.

Nineteen crewmen were rescued by the Coast Guard late Saturday night. The stern section, with the smoke stack, lies at an angle to the midsection of the ship. Viewers polled on 'Day After'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The ABC-TV movie, "The Day After," changed the views of some people in six cities about the threat of nuclear war, according to Warner Amex Cable Communications' two-way Qube network.

Qube said 42 percent of its subscribers who did not consider nuclear war to be a threat changed their minds after viewing the movie, which graphically depicted the aftermath of a nuclear exchange between the U.S. and U.S.S.R.

About 5,500 subscribers in Columbus, Houston, Dallas, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis took part in the survey, using home consoles to respond to questions posed by Qube.

Of the 16 percent who said they did not believe, prior to the movie, that nuclear war is likely to occur, 42 percent said they now consider it to be a real threat.

The majority of the viewers favored a mutual freeze on nuclear arms production with the Soviet Union as being the best means of achieving peace, but opposed a unilateral freeze.

The movie converted some people to arms control, according to Qube. Twelve percent indicated they now support arms control, for a total of 61 percent, while 35 percent said they believed in peace through strength and 4 percent had no opinion.

Eighty-one percent of the Qube subscribers who identified themselves as Republicans approved of President Reagan's handling of the arms control issue; 11 percent disapproved and 8 percent were undecided. Of the Democrats, 37 percent approved, 69 percent disapproved and 14 percent were undecided.

The Qube survey had some good news for ABC, which reportedly was concerned about public reaction and went out of its way to say the network was not taking a stand on the nuclear freeze issue.

A total of 63 percent of the respondents said they considered the movie to be a public service, as opposed to just another television show or propaganda. And most of the subscribers said their attitudes toward the advertisers were not changed because they sponsored the movie.

A note of optimism also was indicated by the survey. Eighty-seven percent believe there is hope for the future, expressing confidence that the superpowers will avoid nuclear war.

Ohioans elsewhere also voiced their belief of a need for disarmament.

Steven Schmitt, 33, a Vietnam veteran and a heavy equipment operator from Hamilton, said he believes both sides must disarm in order to have peace. He said the movie aroused strong feelings about how distasteful war becomes when fought on nuclear terms.

"All a nuclear bomb is just a bigger stick," Schmitt said. "And the victor is the one who's got the biggest stick. But who wants the victory?"

Stacy Bird, 31, a freelance interior designer from Cincinnati, said, "I think there's a difference between being a 'peacenik' and being against nuclear disarmament. I'm not saying I wouldn't fight and die for something I believed in. I'm saying 'no' to a fight that leaves nothing behind."

In Cleveland, about 110 people called a hotline set up by the Ecumenical Peace Project in the first 90 minutes following broadcast of the movie, said Jeffrey Chernin, a clinical psychologist who left his job to work for one year against the arms race.

Chernin said callers ranged from people who were in distress to people who said they thought the movie was a Communist plot.

"We had people calling who were watching the film alone. They called to say, 'Look, I'm really scared. I feel weird and I just want to talk.'"

The Ecumenical Peace Project hotline was created by a number of church groups and concerned citizens, he said.

Wall Street expects record high trading from new Ma Bell stock

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's financial storekeepers braced for record business today as they put some long-awaited merchandise on their shelves — more than 1.5 billion shares of stock resulting from the breakup of Ma Bell.

The new pared-down American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and seven regional companies taking over local telephone service will not actually exist as separate entities until Jan. 1, when the Bell System divestiture becomes official.

But as part of the breakup plan, their stocks were slated to begin trading at 10 a.m. today on a "when-issued" basis, with sales and purchases made now to be settled through payment and delivery of stock early in 1984.

The 1.5 billion shares make up the biggest one-day introduction of new stock in the history of the New York Stock Exchange.

The early trading allows the markets to put a price tag on each of the parts that will emerge from the divestiture and gives investors a chance to see what kind of yields their shares will produce.

Wall Street has been preparing for the "Baby Bell" debut for some time. Because AT&T has so many small shareholders, the NYSE put an extra computer in its facilities for handling "odd-lot" trades — purchases and sales of fewer than 100 shares.

The exchange was to begin taking orders from brokerage offices a half-hour earlier than usual, at 8:30 a.m., to give brokers on the trading floor more time to match up orders and arrive at prices agreeable to both buyers and sellers.

Early this month, a "dress rehearsal" for today's session "was carried out without a hitch," NYSE officials said.

Despite the special preparations, no major changes in Big Board operations were planned to handle the extra trading activity. Exchange officials noted that its facilities were already being expanded to handle projected future market volume of as much as 250 million shares a day.

Killers linked to most wanted

DARKLEY, Northern Ireland (AP) — The killers who burst into a Protestant church and sprayed machine gun fire on hymn-singing worshippers today were linked to a guerrilla gang led by Ireland's most wanted gunman, police said.

Three church elders were killed and seven wounded in the Sunday night attack when masked gunmen burst into the Mountain Lodge Pentecostal Church in Darkley, deep in a stronghold of the outlawed Irish Republican Army in County Armagh near the Irish border.

A police spokesman, who declined to be named said an examination of the spent shell casings scattered around the bullet-riddled church showed they came from a weapon used in three attacks claimed by the Irish National Liberation Army, a Marxist offshoot of the mainly Roman Catholic IRA.

The spokesman linked the weapon to the murder of two police officers in Markethill, near Dalkey, a year ago and two ambushes on police patrols in Dungannon, County Tyrone, in May and August.

Police sources said Dominic McGlinchey, 29, an INLA leader, was involved in at least one of the Dungannon attacks. A senior officer said McGlinchey, known as "The Mad Dog," was wanted for "between 20 and 30 murders."

"This evidence puts the chicken home to roost where it belongs," he said.

Police and troops sealed off a 40-mile stretch of the border around Darkley. A full-scale manhunt was delayed until this morning because of fears of a night ambush by guerrillas.

The murders Sunday night sent a wave of revulsion throughout Ulster and sparked fears of a new cycle of sectarian bloodshed. At least 17 people have been killed and scores wounded since Nov. 1, Northern Ireland's bloodiest month this year.

Cardinal Tomas O Fiaich, Roman Catholic primate of all Ireland, branded the attack on the Mountain Lodge Pentecostal Church in the border village of Darkley "a direct attack on God."

Three elders of the small fundamentalist church were killed and seven worshippers wounded, one critically, when two masked gunmen sprayed the congregation of about 60 men, women and children with bullets, police reported.

No action by Congress on gas prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a result of congressional inaction, many Americans can expect their heating bills to rise 10 percent to 20 percent this winter. A few may see their bills drop, but not because of anything their government did.

Promises to do something about retail natural gas prices that jumped 50 percent the past two years proved empty in the waning days of Congress last week. The action, or lack of it, affects some 45 million American families who heat their homes with the fuel.

Drowned out in an ideological battle between the Reagan administration's support of a free market on one side and calls for more government regulation from the other side were possible compromises that might have brought some relief to both consumers and the natural gas industry itself.

Pride also played a role. A Congress that just five years ago had told Americans it had solved their natural gas problems with partial deregulation under the 1978 Natural Gas Policy Act was reluctant to admit that its multi-tiered pricing system had failed.

No one in Washington was able to rally a majority for anything approaching a cure.

Hundreds of producers, transporters, distributors and users — and all of their financial backers — were quick to form constantly changing alliances to lobby for and against each proposed fix.

While ideological purists carried most of the public debate, ultimately it was the differing self interests among producers, pipelines, local utilities and consumers — all protecting their stake — that prevented any action.

The Senate rejected by overwhelming margins in back-to-back votes last week both the Reagan administration's call to remove all government price controls on natural gas and efforts by consumer advocates and labor unions to extend and expand the controls.

In the House, its energy committee mustered a 23-19 majority against a plan by the panel's chairman, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., to roll prices back by 5 percent to 10 percent under government order.

Both Dingell and Senate Energy Committee Chairman James McClure, R-Idaho, the chief architect of a White House-endorsed gradual decontrol plan, have vowed to try again when Congress returns in January.

Environmentalists wage battle over forest

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — Environmentalists say they are making headway in their fight to keep chainsaws out of Texas national forests, but to East Texans who work for the timber industry, they are "fern fondlers" who want to take away jobs.

In Angelina National Forest, hundreds of giant oak and magnolia trees already marked for cutting were granted an unusual stay of execution last month when the U.S. Forest Service decided to delay a scheduled 36-acre timber sale.

The delay was hailed as a major victory by Texas environmentalists who are battling to preserve about 65,000 acres in the state's four national forests as wilderness.

A bill sponsored by U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, that would outlaw logging in the wilderness areas faces stiff opposition from an East Texas congressman labeled "Timber Charlie" for his support of the lumber industry. U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, has introduced a rival bill, backed by the Forest Service, that would set aside only 9,000 acres of wilderness.

"When my constituents visit the woods, they shouldn't have to use machetes — they want picnic tables and toilets," said Wilson, who ridicules environmentalists as "fern fondlers" and "orchid sniffers."

Bryant's bill is stalled in Congress. Meanwhile, the Forest Service has stepped up its timber leasing programs in Texas, environmentalists claim. Another 400 acres of timber, included in the wilderness proposal, will be sold in January to the highest bidder.

"It's a Catch-22 tactic," said Ned Fritz chairman of the Texas Committee on Natural Resources. "As soon as they start cutting, the Forest Service can deny that the land is wilderness."

Opposition to the bill is strong in Lufkin where thousands of workers are employed in sawmills, pulp mills and paper factories.

"Wilderness means no jobs," warned a bumper sticker distributed by the Texas Forestry Association. According to industry estimates, forest-product industries employ more than 20,000 workers in East Texas.

Although the proposed wilderness area represents less than 1 percent of the 16 million acres of commercial timberland in East Texas, it threatens to chip away at the power of the timber industry, conservationists claim.

"Clearly, 65,000 acres is nothing," said Carlton Carl, a Bryant aide. "It's a drop in the bucket. I think the timber industry is reacting mainly out of fear of the domino theory — that if they let a few acres go, it will all go."

The Forest Service said it agreed to postpone indefinitely last month's planned 36-acre timber cutting in Angelina because the tract was small and the sale had not been scheduled for long. However, there were no plans for other delays, officials said.

The feud over Texas' national forests has been raging off and on since 1936, when Congress voted to purchase four national forests in the state. The Forest Service has been attacked repeatedly for a management policy that favors the planting of fast-growing loblolly pines instead of native hardwood and pine trees.

"The public thinks that national forests are protected, but that's totally untrue," said Bryant. "The men of the Forest Service are interested in board feet and board feet only. They have no interest in wilderness at all. They're interested in raising trees as fast as possible and cutting them down for lumber."

In 1977, environmentalists gained a federal court order to halt the clearcutting of timber in Texas national forests, but the ruling was later reversed by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

OSWALD COLLECTION — June Oswald Porter, 21, daughter of Lee Harvey Oswald, alleged assassin of President Kennedy revealed that an unexamined library of her grandmothers' papers, is "probably the most complete collection of material concerning my father," and remains unexamined in crates at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. Daughter not permitted to see papers about Oswald

NEW YORK (AP) — The daughter of Lee Harvey Oswald, alleged assassin of President John F. Kennedy, says crates of information concerning her late father remain unexamined at a Texas university, and not even she has been allowed to look inside.

June Oswald Porter, 21, says the papers were part of her late grandmother's library, which was donated by her uncle to Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. "No one, not even my sister and I," has been allowed to see the collection, she says.

The library consists of "probably the most complete collection of material concerning my father," she says in a bylined article in the current issue of People magazine. Ms. Porter, whose mother remarried when June was 3, says the papers were given to TCU after Oswald's mother, Marguerite, died without leaving a will.

"Though we have fought to obtain possession of the library, the matter needs to be pursued through the courts," she says. She also says she first discovered "the hated people have for the name Oswald" as a freshman at the University of Texas, when a roommate demanded that she move because "her father would not allow her life to be put in danger by living with me."

Ms. Porter describes herself as an aspiring journalist attending a university in the Northeast.

'Creative civil disobedience' is planned for the Republican convention in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Representatives of anti-Reagan groups from 26 states gathered in Dallas over the weekend to plan "creative civil disobedience" at the Republican National Convention next year.

The 45 organizers who completed a three-day conference Sunday predicted that at least 30,000 and as many as 250,000 protesters would be in Dallas during the August convention.

The organizers said some of the acts they called "creative civil disobedience" would include:

— The dumping of two truckloads of lead-contaminated soil from a West Dallas neighborhood on the grounds of the Dallas Convention Center to dramatize chemical waste contamination.

— The planting of small white crosses to symbolize killings in El Salvador.

— Lying down in roadways to prohibit access to the convention.

— Decorating cars with papier-mache "missiles" and driving them around the convention center to protest deployment of medium-range missiles in Europe and nuclear war.

— "Nothing-a-plate school lunches" including ketchup and relish, which the Reagan administration argued at one point should be considered vegetables, as a counterpoint to the lavish fund-raisers planned for the convention.

City officials remained skeptical that many protesters would show up for the convention, saying there had been no indication that any significant number will come.

Blood test could speed leukemia detection

DALLAS (AP) — Scientists say a new discovery may lead to a simple blood test that will help doctors detect recurrence of childhood leukemia earlier and less painfully and allow treatment to be started sooner.

The test was the result of a discovery by University of Texas Southwestern Medical School researchers. They found that children with acute leukemia have higher levels of a certain enzyme than other children.

The enzyme is known as terminal deoxynucleotidyl transferase.

Currently, doctors must use the painful procedure of extracting bone marrow through a large syringe to detect when a child is no longer in remission, researchers said last week.

"These (bone marrow tests) are done very two to three months," said Dr. George Buchanan, director of hematology-oncology at Children's Medical Center. "But they are painful and expensive. It's a big deal for the child and his family."

If the new test turns out to be effective, it could be done with a simple blood test taken routinely from leukemia patients, Buchanan said.

The test, he said, could "allow us to give those predicted for relapse larger doses of chemotherapy and those doing well smaller doses."

By the time the current test detects the recurrence, "there already are millions of leukemia cells," Buchanan said.

"Initial therapy of children with acute lymphoblastic leukemia produces a remission 95 percent of the time," he said. "But about 50 percent of the children will have a recurrence. There has been no way of predicting these relapses. By the time it comes back it comes back in a big way. Those kids almost always die."

Researchers using the test on 23 children in remission were able to pick seven of the nine children whose leukemia recurred before currently available tests were able to detect it.

Investigators begin examining train wreckage

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — Federal investigators have begun examining the wreckage of a Southern Pacific train that rammed a line of idle freight cars, killing four men and injuring a fifth.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board, the Federal Railroad Administration, the Texas Railroad Commission and Southern Pacific took measurements, checked equipment and reviewed operating procedures for clues to the crash. Southern Pacific spokesman Tony Aleman said Sunday.

He said initial evidence indicated that "the train should have been able to stop."

The wreck occurred Saturday in a yard where trains are assembled for cross-country hauling. Aleman said it was traveling at the maximum allowed speed of 20 mph.

"That's the fastest they can go. The restriction was set because there may be times where something is blocking the tracks," he said.

The accident was the second fatal train wreck in Texas in eight days.

Forty-one cars were parked on the track so they could be switched to another train, Aleman said. "It's done all the time," he said.

The train — an engine, a caboose and 12 tank cars — was traveling along a wooded gully near Baytown, about 30 miles east of Houston, when it hit the line of 41 parked freight cars, authorities said.

Two tank cars were knocked aside and a third tanker laden with jet fuel rammed into the cabin at the rear of the engine and came to rest on top of the crew cabin.

Aleman could not say when the investigation would be completed, the wreckage removed and the tracks repaired.

Four dead crewmen and a fifth who suffered broken legs and a broken arm, lay in the wreckage and jet fuel leaked from the tanker for two hours before other rail workers discovered the accident as they began hauling away cars from the undamaged end of the line.

The small leak was plugged Saturday evening, Aleman said.

The dead were identified as G.A. Stewart, 31, of Pasadena, and fireman C.C. Hutchison, 35; engineer J.R. Sandras, 33; and brakeman E.C. Hallmark, 59, all of Houston.

Lucas accomplice is charged with another murder

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Ottis Elwood Toole, who says he helped Henry Lee Lucas kill up to 50 people, has been booked in the death of a Calcasieu Parish woman who was bound, strangled and stabbed with a screwdriver.

Toole, 36, was booked with first-degree murder in the Feb. 17, 1982 murder of 20-year-old Catherine C. Martin of Iowa. La. Calcasieu Parish deputies said.

The similarity between that case and others involving Lucas and Toole prompted investigators to interview Toole in Florida, where he allegedly admitted to the killing, said Detective Chief John Fryar III.

Ms. Martin's body was found floating in Black Bayou, south of Lake Charles, Feb. 18. She had been last seen leaving a friend's Lake Charles home the previous day, and her car was found abandoned on Louisiana 101 in nearby Jefferson Davis Parish about 11 p.m. Feb. 17.

She was bound at the wrists, and had been strangled and stabbed 16 times with a screwdriver, investigators said.

Toole, 36, is jailed on charges of first-degree murder and arson in Jacksonville, Fla.

He has told authorities he killed between 35 and 50 people while traveling the nation with Lucas, a Texas drifter who claims to have killed 165 people, mostly women, since the age of 13.

Lucas has been convicted already in two Texas murders, including the 1982 slaying of his 15-year-old girlfriend.

In October, investigators from 20 states met in Monroe, La., for a conference on the Toole-Lucas case and said they had linked both men to 69 murders.

A second Monroe conference has been tentatively scheduled for Jan. 18-20.

Last month, police in Hollywood, Fla., said Toole confessed to the murder of 6-year-old Adam Walsh. He allegedly signed a statement saying he abducted the boy from a shopping mall in Hollywood on July 27, 1981, then killed him and buried his body in a marsh in St. Lucie County. The boy's head was discovered 10 days after he disappeared, but the rest of the body has not yet been found.

Toole later denied having anything to do with the case, but state and local investigators said last week that they had some evidence against Toole in it. They have been scrutinizing Toole's automobile for traces of blood, hairs and other evidence that would link him to the Hollywood boy's murder.

Second open beach hearing set

AUSTIN (AP) — A hearing on the second open beaches suit brought to court by Attorney General Jim Mattox was scheduled to begin today before State District Judge Harley Clark.

In the suit, Mattox seeks a court order forcing Galveston homeowner John M. Arrington and his wife, Dorothy, to remove a bulkhead because, after Hurricane Alicia, it is now on the public beach.

Arrington seeks to have the trial transferred from Austin to Galveston.

Mattox has filed a series of 15 suits against homeowners and property that he alleges infringe on public beaches after Alicia shifted the vegetation line.

State law says the area between mean low tide and the vegetation line is public beach.

The first case, against Robert Matcha and his wife, of Houston, was brought to trial Nov. 14.

Clark refused to move the trial from Austin to Galveston but he did delay the trial until Dec. 5 to give Matcha more time to gather testimony and evidence for his defense.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Social Security problem remains

When Congress passed the Social Security Amendments of 1983 - the so-called "emergency rescue bill" - last April, congressmen, senators and President Reagan praised about each other with pats on the back about "statesmanship" and "bipartisan spirit." On Oct. 31 Americans who work were reminded of the ugly teeth behind that much-touted bill.

That was the day the Social Security Administration announced that payroll taxes on the self-employed will rise dramatically in 1984. Beginning Jan. 1, self-employed Americans will begin paying 21 percent more to the Social Security system through the payroll tax. For the nation's 8.8 million self-employed, the payroll tax in 1984 will climb from 9.35 percent to 11.3 percent.

In addition, the higher tax will have to be paid on the first $37,800 earned, rather than on the first $35,700, as in 1983. That means the self-employed who earn more than $37,800 will face a 28 percent payroll tax hike next year.

This whopping increase should remind us once again that taxpayers - not beneficiaries - will be paying the price for the latest effort to "save" Social Security.

The supposed compromise worked out last spring was really no compromise at all - benefits were modified slightly, taxes increased heavily. Of the $168 billion in newly enacted deficit reductions for the rest of this decade, more than 76 percent will come from payroll tax increases.

Less than a quarter of the $168 billion will come at the expense of Social Security beneficiaries. The political hysteria swirling around the latest attempt to reform the system precluded any realistic cutback in benefits to retirees. Most politicians and self-appointed spokesmen for the elderly refused to accept any cut in benefits save a six-month delay in the cost of living adjustment. Their resistance came despite the 50 percent increase in per capita Social Security benefits from 1977 through 1981 - including a cost of living adjustment in July 1981 of 14 percent.

If Congress fails to cut benefits in any significant way in the future, the payroll tax, by one estimate, will reach 44 percent by the year 2025. A tax of that magnitude will destroy millions of jobs, close down businesses by the thousands and virtually destroy the American economy.

The Social Security system is on a collision course with our growing American economy. We cannot continue, year after year, to raise the payroll tax without eroding the incentive to work and, for small businesses, to hire workers.

Jesse's friend deserves notice

NEW YORK (NEA) - Jesse Jackson's declaration of his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination makes it necessary for Americans to consider afresh a curious episode in the career of the late Martin Luther King Jr., and the links of both men to a man named Hunter ("Jack") O'Dell, who should be better known to the American people.

The story begins in 1956, when the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee (of which I was then associate counsel) issued a subpoena for O'Dell, whom it suspected of being a district organizer for the Communist Party in New Orleans. O'Dell got wind that the feds were looking for him and skipped town; but when the U.S. Marshals inspected his rented room they found a highly suggestive cache of documents, including two fake Social Security cards in names O'Dell was using as aliases; 375 copies of an issue of the official communist newspaper, The Worker; a directive from the National Organization Commission Party, addressed, "To all districts"; a memorandum proposing communist penetration of the churches, the NAACP and the Democratic Party; and a vast array of communist literature from nearly a dozen countries.

O'Dell subsequently appeared before the subcommittee in Washington, took the Fifth Amendment on these documents and all related subjects, and dropped out of sight. By 1962, however, he was, believe it or not, serving as Southeastern director of Martin Luther King Jr.'s Southern Christian Leadership Conference. O'Dell's presence in that high capacity in King's entourage was one of the factors that prompted Sen. Jesse Helms to suggest recently that the Senate ought to inform itself more deeply about King's communist connections before making his birthday a national holiday.

It was the St. Louis Globe-Democrat that discovered and published, late in 1962, the astonishing background of Dr. King's Southeastern director. In December of that year, King announced that O'Dell had resigned his post "pending an investigation" of the charges. But there were seven more months of backing and filling before The New York Times reported, on July 27, 1963, that O'Dell had left the SCLC for a second time on June 26 "by mutual agreement," because of concern that his affiliation with the integration movement would be used by "segregationists and racebaiters."

O'Dell thereupon dropped out of sight again, but there is some question as to whether he in fact severed all his connections with the SCLC. In any event, between 1968 and 1972 he served as an associate editor of Freedomways, a communist-oriented quarterly targeted at black leaders, and in 1969 he was publicly listed as a sponsor of a "cultural tribute to Ben Davis," described in a promotional letter as "the first black Communist to win election" in America. In 1977, O'Dell served as an American delegate to the World Peace Council, a notorious Soviet front.

O'Dell has known Jesse Jackson at least since their days in the SCLC in the early 1960s, and at some point in the middle 1970s Jackson incredibly named him to serve as director of the International Department of Operation PUSH ("People United to Save Humanity"), Jackson's black self-help group. In that capacity, O'Dell regularly accompanied Jackson and Jackson's friend on trips abroad, becoming known as a staunch friend of the Arabs and especially of the PLO.

Thus O'Dell's name (and PUSH title) appear in the program brochure of a May 1978 "National Organizing Conference" for Palestinian human rights; he signed, listing himself "Operation PUSH," a July 1982 ad for the American Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee; and in December 1982 "Jack O'Dell (PUSH and SCLC)" was listed as a member at large of the Executive Committee of the pro-PLO Palestinian Human Rights Committee for 1983.

That is the astounding 27-year record of a chief foreign policy adviser to the latest entrant in the Democratic presidential sweepstakes. The media obligingly buried O'Dell's connection with Martin Luther King Jr. Will they be as cooperative in the case of Jesse Jackson?

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Nov. 21, the 325th day of 1983. There are 40 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Nov. 21, 1980, more than 80 people were killed when a fire raged through the MGM Grand Hotel-Casino in Las Vegas.

On this date:
In 1766, the first permanent theater building in the United States, the Southwark in Philadelphia, opened with a production of "The Gamester."

In 1871, the first patent for a cigar lighter went to Moses F. Gale of New York City.

In 1877, Thomas Edison announced the invention of the phonograph.

In 1899, Vice President Garret Hobart died in office at the age of 55.

In 1924, former first lady Florence Harding died in Marion, Ohio, at the age of 64, one year after her husband, President Warren G. Harding, died in office.

And in 1964, what was then the world's longest suspension bridge - the Verrazano Narrows - opened, linking the New York City boroughs of Brooklyn and Staten Island.

Ten years ago: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said the Arab oil embargo would not change U.S. Middle East policy.

Five years ago: Guyanese troops hunted for hundreds of members of the Peoples Temple cult believed missing after hundreds of others were found dead in a mass suicide.

One year ago: Football resumed after a 57-day strike by National Football League players, but none of the 13 games drew a capacity crowd.

Harassment not easy to define

There seems to be more talk and lawsuits concerning sexual harassment in the office. A recent survey indicated that while few women complained of being physically harassed by males, many maintained they were verbally abused by their male co-workers.

Unfortunately, verbal sexual harassment is still a much cloudier area than anyone wants to admit.

When I go to lunch by myself I have the bad habit of listening to conversations at the next table. When two or three girls are launching together the conversation seems to concern the various men in their office. "Tommy is a teddy bear, but Harry is a dirty old man."

Wanting to know where a man should draw the line when it comes to harassment in the office, I turned to three female office workers sitting next to me at School's Cafeteria the other day and said, "I beg your pardon, I'm doing an article on sexual harassment and I was wondering if you ladies could help me define the difference between verbal harassment and old-fashioned flirting in the office."

One of the girls replied, "If you like the guy and think he's cute, he's flirting with you. If you don't like him, he's harassing you."

A second girl said, "If Arnie, whom you've had your eye on, asks you to have dinner with you, tell all the girls in the office. If Charley, whom you can't stand, invites you, tell your boss."

"Then what you're saying is that verbal harassment in the office is really a judgment call. It isn't what's said but who says it?"

The third lady in the party said, "There's a lot more to it than that. Lilly was dating a fellow from our office, and he stayed over in her apartment once or twice a week. Then he dumped her and wouldn't talk to her. His silence was far more harassing than anything he had ever said to her."

"Correct me if I'm wrong," I continued, "but it seems to me in the old office mating game, many men and women who are now married admit they didn't like each other at the beginning, but eventually fell in love. If office harassment had been as big an issue then as it is now, maybe the couple would have never gotten together, and the guy, instead of cutting the lawn for the girl of his dreams, could be doing five years in the country workhouse."

"The difference is that in the past," one of the girls said, "a girl had no choice of who harassed her. Now the law says it's our decision."

One of the other ladies added, "It's also a question of who holds the power. If your superior implies your position with the firm depends on how nice you are to him, that's harassment of the worst kind."

"But if you like him, would that still be harassment?"

"If he's married, that's one thing. If he's fun and single, it could be a different story."

"Are there cases in your office," I asked, "where women harass men that they are attracted to?"

They all laughed. "We're not made of stone. Why are you writing an article on this?"

"Because if women can go to court over verbal harassment in an office department, men may become too frightened to say anything to you girls. It could take all the romance out of your jobs, and no one would look forward to coming to work any more."

"Do you have a solution?" one of the women asked me.

"Yes, I do. I think when you first apply for a job you should be asked on your personnel questionnaire if you want to be verbally harassed or not. If you say yes, then you must describe the type of guy you want to be harassed by and the type you wouldn't be caught dead with. Your superior could then notify all the males in the office accordingly, and everybody would be spared the consequences."

The girls thought this over. Then one of them said, "It will never work. We might not want to be harassed by George on Monday, but when the weekend rolls around, and we don't have anything to do, we should have the right to change our minds."

Can silence be called prayer?

We all know "silence is golden" but is it prayer? New Jersey Federal District Court Judge Dickinson R. Debevoise thinks so.

Recently, Judge Debevoise issued a 41-page ruling, declaring the Garden State's "minute of silence" for public school students unconstitutional.

The New Jersey statute, adopted last December when the legislature overrode Gov. Thomas Kean's veto, provides that "principles and teachers in each public elementary and secondary school of each district in this state shall permit students to observe a one-minute period of silence, to be used solely at the discretion of the individual student before the opening exercises of each school day for quiet and private contemplation or introspection."

First, Judge Debevoise said of the New Jersey statute: "It advances the religion of some persons by mandating a period when all students and teachers must assume the traditional posture of prayer of some religious groups and during which times those who pray in that manner can do so." Where in the statute it says "a traditional posture" must be assumed escapes us.

Then, the judge continues on his logically erratic course, adding that the law inhibits the religious beliefs of those whose methods of prayer "require movement and sound."

We even checked with a Washington spokeswoman for Hare Krishna adherents, who are well known for their chanting and dancing during prayer. She replied that this is merely one form of prayer, adding that one can pray in any posture, even while conducting your day-to-day routine - cooking, cleaning or such.

Finally, Judge Debevoise goes totally around the bend in justifying his ruling against golden silence in the public schools of New Jersey. He concludes his edict by citing threats "by students who believed the minute of silence constituted enforced prayer contrary to their own conviction." The students had threatened to disrupt classes in protest of the law.

Does the jurist believe any law should be judged constitutional or unconstitutional based on threats by those who believe in rule by disruption? Unbelievable! If there's a law you happen to dislike just threaten disruption, challenge the statute in court, and pray - excuse us - hope to have Judge Debevoise rule on the issue.

One last point: it is ironic that in most cases dealing with legislation mandating a moment of silence the judge cites the "intent" of the lawmakers in legislating the practice. You hear words like: "This bill, while calling merely for a moment of silence to be used for any purpose - religious or secular - was really enacted with a religious intent."

This is quite probably true 99 - and - 44 - hundredths percent of the time; but isn't it remarkable that these laws are branded as violating the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution without the judge taking into consideration the intent of the authors of that amendment?

The First Amendment says: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." Any reading of the deliberations of the framers of the Bill of Rights will readily show that they never intended a religiously sterile nation. They merely wanted to end the then - prevalent oppression of certain religious sects. And it is clear that the New Jersey minute - of - silence law adheres to that tradition.

We're pleased to see that New Jersey lawmakers intend to appeal Judge Debevoise's ban. Judge Debevoise or no Judge Debevoise: We wish them Godspeed!

Workers and the new reality

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Can you blame a worker for fighting for the job in which he has developed skill, built seniority, won insurance benefits for his family and from which he planned a comfortable retirement?

Do you blame him for striking when the company tries to cut his income and benefits?

Can you blame the other guy for trying to take that job when the worker rejects the new terms and continues striking? Considering that last month 9.9 million Americans were actively looking for jobs?

Americans aren't used to facing such questions, having little experience since World War II with the basic problems provoking them. The questions don't arise in expansions, but in contractions.

For various reasons, some contraction is occurring in several industries simultaneously. And with it the painful realization dawns: There are no good answers to the questions, maybe none at all.

The pain is sharper because so much was taken for granted since World War II: wage and benefit increases, comfortable retirement.

Greyhound says it cannot keep paying drivers as much and replaces strikers. Continental Airlines reduces pilots' pay and tells them to take it or leave. The steel and automotive industries won concessions from workers. And it could happen in other industries too.

At least three distinct reasons for the problems can be cited:

—Foreign competition: The steel and auto industries are hurt most. New steel mills spring up all over the world. They are efficient, but they are run by workers earning less than Americans, and may be government-subsidized. Thus shrinking profits and lost jobs here.

Similarly with automobiles, with most of the competition from Japan. Last year foreign cars made up 27.8 per cent of all U.S. car sales, says the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association. In 1962 it was 4.8 percent. To challenge the imports, U.S. automakers have cut costs.

And dollar's strength over the Japanese yen gives imports an edge.

—Marketplace changes: Many companies find it hard to adjust to an economy where services, not goods, predominate. And goods now are often made by high-tech assembly, not old-fashioned manufacture.

The so-called smokestack industries have also found it harder to adjust to relatively high energy costs.

—Deregulation: Transportation is most affected by such decisions. Routes once were protected from competition, but Congress in 1978 stripped airline regulations it said reduced competition. Trucking and railroads were deregulated in 1980, and intercity bus service last year. Thus competition developed over the most popular routes.

There has been a familiar response to the new competition: Cut costs that had grown over the more comfortable years.

STINKING OUT THE UNION? — Garbage piling up in front of the office of the Abva-Kabo in Amsterdam, one of the unions supporting a strike of civil servants protesting the proposed salary cuts planned Jan. 1, was put there by angry people, fed up with the municipal dust collectors strike. Although negotiations between unions and government are to continue on court orders, neither party expects a quick settlement. (AP Laserphoto)

Three dead in political violence

JUCHITAN, Mexico (AP) — A dispute erupted into violence in Oaxaca state Sunday, killing three people, as an expected one million voters across the state went to the polls.

A spokesman for the federal Secretary of the Interior said the violence in the city of Magdalena Tequisitlan had nothing to do with the state elections. The spokesman said the shooting was the result of a labor dispute between two factions at the Primotopia marble factory in the city.

But Ariel Zarate Cabrera, the mayor of Magdalena Tequisitlan, said a group of 30 armed men opened fire on 1,200 people who were marching to a local voting place in a political protest.

Zarate said the marchers were supporters of Jesus Montero Toledano, who they wanted to be the Institutional Revolutionary Party's candidate for the next mayor. Leaders of the party instead had chosen Benito Ordonez Martinez as the official candidate, Zarate said.

The spokesman for the Secretary of the Interior said Zarate himself was marching with a group of workers who were trying to take over the marble factory. The spokesman, who asked not to be identified by name, said an opposing group of workers heard the news and went to the factory, causing the fighting that resulted.

The spokesman said he did not know which side the three dead people were on. Twenty people were wounded, eight of them seriously, according to Zarate.

Zarate said in a statement released to the press that there were no police or soldiers nearby to deter the violence.

The killings came as cities elsewhere in the country celebrated with parades and athletic events the anniversary of the Mexican Revolution, which began Nov. 20, 1910.

The most important election contest in Oaxaca was here in Juchitan, the second largest city in the state, where a communist-backed Coalition of Workers, Peasants and Students waged an angry battle against the Institutional Revolutionary Party.

No results were expected to be announced until Monday afternoon, an election official said. The Institutional Revolutionary Party, known here by its Spanish initials PRI, has dominated federal and local politics in Mexico since 1929. Opponents say the party has used massive fraud to maintain its hold.

Sunday, the leader of the communist-backed coalition said his workers had detected fraud early in the day's voting. Deciderio De Gyves (cq) said the PRI had stuffed more than 3,000 votes marked in their favor in voting boxes.

He warned his party would "take corresponding actions" if it uncovered more fraud. Juchitan, 480 miles southeast of Mexico City on the narrow isthmus of Tehuantepec, is considered vital because of its proximity to Central America, where there is widespread and violent political unrest.

A foreign analyst said the Mexican federal government fears the mixture of a leftist local government and thousands of Central Americans streaming into the area in flight from rightist regimes.

There were widespread predictions of violence in Juchitan, and federal troops drove slowly through the dustry, unpaved streets. In one of the few incidents reorted by nighttime, Mexico City newspaper photographer Pedro Meyer said he was kicked and beaten by PRI supporters.

Demos challenge Reagan on South Africa

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats sense political gains in 1984, particularly among black voters, by challenging President Reagan's policy of trying to encourage changes in South Africa's racially segregated society through quiet diplomacy.

Reagan is relying on the pressure of U.S. business investors and international good will — he calls it "constructive engagement" — to alter white-ruled South Africa's treatment of its black majority.

Booyed by a recent House vote in his favor, Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., one of the most outspoken congressional critics of the South African system of apartheid, or racial separatism, says "constructive engagement has failed and is flawed." Calling South Africa "a volcano waiting to erupt," Solarz declared that "Americans truly want to distance themselves from South Africa."

Led by Solarz and Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., the Democratic House approved by voice vote Oct. 27 a reauthorization bill for the Export Administration Act that would:

—Ban imports of South African gold coins, including the popular Kruggerands, of which an estimated 20 million are owned by American investors.

—Ban new investment in South Africa by U.S. companies or individuals.

—Require U.S. firms with more than 20 employees in South Africa to abide by a series of fair employment practices.

—Ban new loans by U.S. banks to the South African government, except for health, housing and educational purposes available to everyone on a non-discriminatory basis.

—Tighten export controls on sale of computers, communications equipment and certain industrial goods to South African military and police forces. The measure actually would reimpose the controls that were relaxed by Reagan in February 1982.

The Senate intends to take up the Export Administration Act next year, and the anti-South African amendments face a much tougher time in the Republican-controlled chamber.

Another measure approved by the House would put the United States on record as opposing loans from the International Monetary Fund to South Africa. The Senate went along with the IMF proposal but forced Congress to tone it down.

The House vote to restrict commercial ties between the United States and South Africa, together with a string of similar measures approved by several state legislatures, are encouraging to Randall Robinson, the black lobbyist for TransAfrica, a private organization that seeks to influence U.S. policy in Africa and the Caribbean.

"Things have been going much better than we expected, really," said Robinson. "But we still have a long way to go."

Robinson and other South African critics see political significance in support for the House export bill from leading contenders for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination.

Steps intended to isolate South Africa have been endorsed by Walter F. Mondale, Sens. John Glenn, Ernest Hollings, Alan Cranston and Gary Hart and former Sen. George McGovern. The Rev. Jesse Jackson, the black activist who recently entered the Democratic race, has been a vocal critic of South Africa.

While Reagan has eased former President Carter's harsh policy toward South Africa, Robinson sees a return to a tougher stance if a Democrat wins the presidency next year.

Robinson said in an interview that the Democratic candidates, reflecting the growing muscle of black voters, stand even further to the left than Carter on the issue of South Africa.

"No Democrat can win without black support, and the South African issue is very important to blacks," Robinson said.

The TransAfrica lobbyist is pleased that Massachusetts, Connecticut and Michigan, along with Philadelphia, Wilmington, Del., and some other cities, have passed various laws imposing curbs on their investments in companies that do business in South Africa.

The Massachusetts law, signed earlier this year, is the most comprehensive. It requires that an estimated $90 million in state pension fund money be withdrawn from 42 such companies within three years.

The administration, calling apartheid "morally wrong," defends its approach as the best way to bring about peaceful change in South Africa. Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said last June that "a peaceful process of change depends on support from those who reject, as we do, both alignment with the current racial order, and violence as a means of ending it."

The administration's view is backed by Herman Nickel, U.S. ambassador to Pretoria, who says the 300 American companies represented in South Africa are a powerful force for change. Total U.S. investment in South Africa amounts to about $2.5 billion.

Nurse recalls years in captivity

By PATTI PATTERSON
Longview Morning Journal
JEFFERSON, Texas (AP) — Retired Lt. Col. Hattie R. Brantley joined the Army Nurse Corps in 1939 because she "wanted to travel and see the world."

She got her wish, but not until she had spent almost three years as a Japanese war prisoner.

Stationed on Luzon, the largest island in the Philippines, Miss Brantley was among a group of nurses who lived from May 1942 until February 1945 in a civilian prison camp.

More than 40 years later, the Jefferson native recalled the start of her years in captivity.

The day she learned the Japanese had bombed Pearl Harbor, Miss Brantley spent the morning on a golf course.

"Our chief nurse said, 'Now girls, things will be all right. The Japs will never bother us.' A friend and I went out and played nine holes of golf," she said.

Luzon was bombed about noon.

"I don't believe anybody believed war would come," Miss Brantley said. "Certainly not young nurses enjoying a tropical duty."

The word was

"unprepared. Nobody recognized the war clouds. They did, but they didn't face reality."

By Christmas Miss Brantley and the others were retreating from the north end of Luzon to the southwestern Bataan Peninsula where they set up field hospitals.

Daily bombings and constant artillery fire became routine. Instead of treating malaria and tropical infections, the nurses found themselves faced with critically wounded soldiers.

Despite faulty ammunition and the unexpected attack, U.S. troops managed to hold off the Japanese for five months, Miss Brantley said.

"We did it with blood and guts," she said. "It was a question of sheer courage."

On April 9, 1941, the troops surrendered. Miss Brantley and the nurses were evacuated the night before to the nearby rock island of Corregidor, but the troops remained.

About 10,000 U.S. troops and thousands of Philippines were forced to head north to a prison camp. Hundreds died in the 60-mile death march to the camp, Miss Brantley said.

The men were weak from living on half rations since January. Many were sick with malaria and dysentery, but their Japanese captors forced them to march continuously.

"They marched without food, water or rest," Miss Brantley said. "If someone fell by the wayside, they bayoneted them."

The nurses remained on Corregidor until May 6, when the troops there surrendered. This time the nurses were taken east to a civilian prison camp in Manila.

The camp was on the Santo Tomas University campus and the other prisoners included businessmen, professors, teachers and their families.

The 50-acre campus was enclosed by a brick and wrought-iron fence, which prevented people from seeing in or out. The prisoners were forced to bow to the Japanese guards.

Living quarters were dirty and food and medical supplies scarce. A typical morning meal was watered-down coconut milk and worm-infested cornmeal mush. Supper usually consisted of rice and a thin stew.

Occasionally the internees were given bananas or native citrus fruit. Toward the end, Miss Brantley estimated the daily food intake at 500 calories per person.

During the first year of her imprisonment, Miss Brantley was listed as missing in action. Her family didn't know if she was dead or alive.

In August 1944, the prisoners finally received mail from home. Miss Brantley received a Christmas card from her mother in September. She learned her father had died in August 1943.

Although they were prisoners, Miss Brantley said she and the others were not afraid of being killed. At least, she recalled, there was no bombing in Manila.

Friendship makes two imperfect people better

By DAVE BRUMMETT, MDiv

An old saying goes, "a friend in need is a friend indeed." This may be true, but few of us have that thought in mind when we are pursuing a friendship.

Dear Abby

Runaway hotline bring parents peace of mind

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing your column of Nov. 17, 1981, with a request that you please run it again. It changed our lives.

ALSO GRATEFUL IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ALSO: With pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: Our problem daughter, not quite 17, ran away from home 14 months ago. She had been giving us a rough time for about a year—skipping school, staying out late and lying to us constantly. After a noisy scene, she stormed out of the house with only the clothes on her back. We didn't have a clue as to where she went.

Only a parent who has lived through this kind of nightmare can realize what we went through. After a year of heartaches and sleepless nights, we were told by the police to give up and assume she was dead. But parents never give up. We continued to search and hope and pray that she'd return to us one day.

Well, our prayers were answered when, out of the blue, we received a telephone call from someone who said he was a volunteer with Runaway Hotline (formerly Operation Peace of Mind) in Houston. (We live in Michigan.) We were told that our daughter had read of the toll-free number in "Dear Abby" and she wanted to let us know that she was well and happy in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The volunteer said our daughter would call him again on the following morning in case we had a message for her.

We told him we would welcome a collect call from her. Sure enough, she called us the next day! She sounded wonderful and said she was working and was going to night school to finish her education. This story has a happy ending. Our daughter is coming for Christmas!

Abby, will you please publish that toll-free number again so other runaway kids can establish communications with their families? Our daughter said that she had seen your column with the number posted near telephones where runaways hang out.

We will never be able to thank you enough for giving us the happiest holiday we've ever had!

GRATEFUL IN MICHIGAN

DEAR GRATEFUL: With pleasure. Runaways, call this toll-free number: 1-800-231-6946. If in Texas, use this number: 1-800-392-3352.

An operator will take your call and telephone your parents anywhere in the United States with a message from you. There will be no lecturing or recriminations. Your call will not be traced. And only one question will be asked: "Do you need anything?" If you do, you will be told where you can get it, free. I repeat, no attempt will be made to contact you or bring you back home—regardless of your age.

If you are a runaway, I beg you to forget the past and send a message to your parents now. They will sleep better tonight and so will you. And you will all have the best holiday season you've had in years. God bless you.—ABBY

P.S. Runaway Hotline was established 10 years ago by a handful of public-spirited volunteers with the support of the governor of Texas. To date it has placed over 600,000 calls from runaways, assuring their families that they are OK. Beautiful!

DEAR ABBY: When a funeral director signed "Dead Serious" requested that you ask people to quit making jokes about his profession, instead of being sympathetic, you added a few more. Abby, you showed the sensitivity of an armored tank and the shallowness of onionskin!

I am also a funeral director, and I've heard just about every horticultural joke in the book.

When I walk into a place, I am asked, "What are you doing here—looking for business?"

Then someone else pipes up with, "Hey, everybody, act alive. Look who's here with his meat wagon!"

Abby, how would you like to come into a place and be greeted with, "Well, if it isn't Heartache Hannah" or "Lovelorn Abby with all the answers... ha, ha, ha!"

Now do you get my point, or should I hit you with my shovel? My name is not "Digger" or "Planter"—just call me.

DAVE IN IOWA

DEAR DAVE: Though somewhat corny, there may be a kernel of truth in your complaint.

(Problems? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

So many people seem to be aware of their need for a friend, yet they are believed to be hard to find. Once you locate someone whom you would consider a potential friend, discrepancies often mar the longevity of the relationship. Something isn't right and the two people stop relating.

How are friendships formed? The best way is in being genuine and real. Be who you are. Express the qualities which make you different and special, attractive to someone. Plenty of prospects are available to us.

Have enough trust in another person to be open and vulnerable with him. Be self-confident that you are of worth and risk being an advantage to someone to get to know you. Look for the person. Tear the blinders off and perceive those around. It is possible to develop a friendship and it's our responsibility to do the searching.

There isn't a sure, right place to meet a person of worth to you. There are too many places. There are enough people. People are in every place.

Don't wait for her to come over and break the ice either. Ice is cold and hard. Be real, genuine and respectful. That's impressive and attractive. Charisma magnetizes these qualities and draws people to one another.

Be involved as a result of the enjoyable companionship. The event will take care of itself as far as satisfying the spectators or participants. Realize that you would not feel the same without the presence of this unique person you've chosen to be alongside. The experience is more pleasurable because of who you're with, not because of the experience.

Friends tell their life story without reservation because of trust and confidentiality built into the relationship. The dependability element of closeness and the desire to be complimented afterward, regardless of the behavior, is the quality of a friendship.

Beneficial rewards are that someone helps us experience meaningful awareness—a natural high. Life shells are cracked and the sweet nectar offered your friend is tasted. Another life experience is meaningful and lasting and healing, and being away from a friend carries with it an element of loss or loneliness. Parting is a brief grief encounter as we go off to work, take a trip back home, or go alone to a separate event. Separation can cause sadness, the being away from the person with whom I feel pleasure and togetherness. It's almost a romantic ecstasy. It can become such a relationship, too.

Reuniting is a glad moment. A rejoicing. A comforting. A completion. We anticipate being with each other again. A celebration of collective sharing transpires. We laugh. We believe our friendship is beneficial to our health.

We want someone to receive our messages, pick up our signals, tune in to our individuality by their giving us room to be ourselves. That's what a friend does.

She also helps us know the fuller meaning of ourselves in self-commitment rather than triumph over us. According to Eugene Kennedy, professor of psychology at Loyola University of Chicago, "friendship is a bond between fragile, faulted people who are able to make each other stronger and better despite failures. If we were perfect, we wouldn't have any need for friends."

Building friendships has its handicaps. The high mobility of our society is discouraging to long term relationships. Social conditions limit our trust of others and the risk can be daring. An emphasis on self, and the superficial things we encounter leave us cautious to being friendly on a continual basis. Preoccupation with self interest doesn't contribute to good inneraction between two people. The body building craze moved rapidly from physical fitness to self-admiration or narcissism.

There is a growing awareness that we desire to belong with someone because only close and lasting relationships give our lives satisfaction and fulfillment. It's important to be accepted, understood and wanted. We learn as a friend to say no to ourselves only, prior to saying yes to this special person. That's why in finding things to do together isn't the purpose of a friendship. It's okay but not the basic value.

Appearance and wealth are not the measures of a relationship because a model's appearance and a career woman's wealth may become a preoccupation which can leave a potential friend unarmed especially when she doesn't have either quantity or quality these two categories offer.

People are valued for who they are and not what they appear to be. Intimacy can be when people are themselves and where most of us want to meet and relate as friends. The capacity one has for compassion, humor and other basic human qualities is when friendship develops best.

Friendship doesn't just happen. It is "a dynamic relationship in which we yield something of ourselves before we can get anything back from others," says Kennedy.

A friend is a person who doesn't expect someone to assist when they're in need, but gladly accept a free hand. As long as it's not charity, we're friends and there are no unmet needs in this friendly way.

Being myself is enough for anyone. You are what I want in a friendship. Nothing more is necessary.

Ways to keep holiday spending under control

Will the "ho-ho-ho" of the holidays turn to "bah, humbug" when the January bills roll in?

Over spending the family budget during the Christmas season is a common occurrence. Caught up in the spirit of the season, many people find that the 12 days of Christmas can lead to 12 months of payments.

"Green and red are the perfect colors for Christmas," says Julia B. Martin, branch manager of the Reynolds Carolina Credit Union. "People spend too much of the green stuff and wind up in the red."

I try to remind people that even Santa Claus plans all year for Christmas gift-giving," Martin says. "By putting money aside every month into a savings account, budgeting for the holidays becomes simple."

"I encourage clients to set aside their overtime payments or tax returns for the holiday season. That money earns interest all year, and many people are pleasantly surprised by how much they have saved by December," Martin says.

For those who have not saved all year for the holidays, Martin offers some tips for Christmas spending that may help avoid budgetary blues:

Make a list of all the gifts you need to buy and stick to it. Impulsive purchases add up quickly.

Shop as early in the year as possible. Sale items picked up throughout the year cause less strain on the budget, and you won't be forced to buy a more expensive item just because you have run out of time to shop.

Family members can pool their resources and buy one nice gift, rather than several smaller ones. This works well for children buying gifts for parents and families making purchases for grandparents and other relatives.

In many large families, each member draws a name from a hat and is responsible for getting that person one nice gift. This practice reduces shopping pressures and each family member can afford a gift of higher quality.

Divorced parents should coordinate gift-giving for their children so that gifts are not duplicated and the children receive a balance of practical and fun items.

Households headed by a single parent can benefit from having children draw up a list of things they want for Christmas, then having them select the items they want the most. If they are involved in the budgeting process, most older children will understand that the number of gifts they receive will be limited.

Consider giving "service certificates"—handmade coupon books offering various services and favors as a gift. Examples might include one day of free child care for a working mother whose regular babysitter calls in sick, one free car wash, one turn at doing the family laundry or one free back rub.

Home sewers can make gifts

With the Christmas season soon upon us, gift ideas begin to assume top priority in our holiday plans. If you are a home sewer, however, the choice may be easier for you.

A number of interesting items are possible for smaller Christmas gifts or stocking stuffers.

"If your time is limited, for example, you can go out to a kitchen shop and purchase a chef's apron from a good available selection. Then you can monogram initials on the pocket or applique a favorite logo. In all, the job shouldn't take more than an hour," Johnson said.

Baby quilts are popular and don't require too much time to make, she said. Select a baby print panel and sew all three layers together. You may then finish the project with blanket binding.

"For children, there are many fabrics available that are printed with small animals or Santa Clauses. These can be cut out, stuffed with fiberfill and then hand-stitched closed. Cover a coat hanger with ribbon and attach the stuffed material to it and you have an attractive ceiling mobile."

Gifts not only appealing to the eye but also practical are pot holders and monogrammed finger towels. Johnson said.

HAPPY THANKSGIVING

Because many families celebrate Thanksgiving in the month of November, a lot of time is spent planning and preparing a special and nutritious feast. Perhaps one of the nicest parts of this traditional day is that families sit down to eat together. What a nice change it can be to place the importance on the company, rather than on the foods involved.

Foods digest better when eaten in a calm, relaxed manner. This Thanksgiving, decide ahead of time to make it a pleasant day—a day to relax and appreciate life itself.

DECEMBER'S BIRTHSTONE

The finest quality turquoise stones are smooth and have an evenly-distributed color of intense medium blue. The name "turquoise" is said to be derived from the French term "Pierre Turquoise" which means "Turkish Stone." The adoption of the phrase was probably due to its being the first stone to reach Europe by way of Turkey. It is the Birthstone of December. The ancient Aztec, Inca, Egyptian, Persian, and American Indian civilizations valued turquoise highly. To the Indians of the American Southwest, in the 16th Century, turquoise was a medium of exchange. It embodies the spirits of the sea and sky. Both the ancient Egyptians and the Aztecs of Mexico buried Chiefs and Monarchs with turquoise treasures as protection.

BUTTERFLIES IN THE STOMACH

You have a near accident in your car, or your child doesn't get home from school on time, or you are not certain if you will have the money to meet a financial obligation. All of a sudden, you get a weak feeling and suffer from what has become known as "butterflies in the stomach."

What you are experiencing is actually a disturbance in breathing. And it is a common symptom of anxiety.

Anxieties and emotional experiences cause muscular tension, which is reflected in a limitation of movement of the chest and diaphragm. Since the Diaphragm is an important muscle forming the floor of the chest cavity and the roof of the abdomen, the disturbance you feel as a result of this tension is a weakness in the stomach area.

To compensate for these butterflies, quite often a person will breathe harder and often. But speeding up the breathing may cause the individual to become dizzy, for overbreathing results in hyperventilation.

If you experience "butterflies in the stomach," you have a symptom of anxiety. Try to control your rate of breathing without overbreathing. Stand up straight in front of a mirror and take deep breaths. Breathe out deeply and pause a minute before taking in the next deep breath. Repeat this procedure a few times during the course of the day. While doing this, force yourself to relax, let the shoulder drop, the arms hang free, unclench your teeth and smile.

It will require practice to learn to overcome the "butterfly stomach feeling" caused by anxiety. Once you have learned to control the rate and depth of your breathing, you will find the procedure an effective and efficient way to relieve pent up emotions.

It is difficult to completely avoid those experiences that cause degrees of anxiety. Your doctor of chiropractic recommends that you learn to reduce the stress and strain of disturbed breathing. Good health depends on the proper functioning of all organs, especially your lungs and heart; and structure influences function.

Miracle reception wins for Falcons

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Some have called the play "Big Ben." Others have dubbed it "Hail Mary." Steve Bartkowski says the Falcons call it the "Rocket" because "the ball goes up and comes down like a rocket."

Atlanta won a 28-24 National Football League thriller Sunday on the last play of the game with San Francisco on a so-called "Big Ben" desperation pass by Steve Bartkowski.

"That play never works in practice, it only works in games somehow," Bartkowski said following the Falcons' latest miracle.

It came on a 47-yard touchdown pass thrown up for grabs. Billy "White Shoes" Johnson came down with it. Bartkowski lofted a high, long pass down the left sideline into a crowd of players at the 5-yard line. The ball was tipped twice before Johnson, who had slipped down, grabbed it on the 7 and barely reached the goal line for the winning touchdown.

The Miami Dolphins, meanwhile, opened some daylight for themselves in the tight American Conference East race with a 37-0 thrashing of the Baltimore Colts in one of four shutouts Sunday.

Along with the whitewashing of the Colts, the Cleveland Browns whipped the New England Patriots 30-0, the Chicago Bears beat the Tampa Bay Bucs 27-0 and the New York Giants blanked the Philadelphia Eagles 23-0.

In other games, the Washington Redskins clobbered the Los Angeles Rams 42-20; the Dallas Cowboys whipped the Kansas City Chiefs 42-21; the Minnesota Vikings upset the Pittsburgh Steelers 17-14; the Los Angeles Raiders edged the Buffalo Bills 27-24; the Detroit Lions defeated the Green Bay Packers 23-20 in overtime; the St. Louis Cardinals bombed the San Diego Chargers 44-14; the Cincinnati Bengals crushed the Houston Oilers 38-10 and the Denver Broncos outscored the Seattle Seahawks 38-27.

The New York Jets play the New Orleans Saints Monday night in the Superdome.

The game-winning play for the Falcons capped a 73-yard drive that started with only 1:04 remaining, six seconds after San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana had given the 49ers a 24-21 lead by scrambling 11 yards for a touchdown.

The desperation pass by Atlanta is getting to be old hat for the Falcons. They beat New Orleans twice on the same play in 1978, each by 20-17 scores, one going for a touchdown and the other drawing an interference call that set up a touchdown.

Johnson said had he not slipped down, he probably would have been in the crowd of players batting at the ball.

"I was surprised when the ball came into my hands," Johnson said. "I knew I had gotten in."

Dolphins 37, Colts 0

Dan Marino's 85-yard pass to Mark Duper and Mark Clayton's 60-yard punt return for Miami touchdowns only 42 seconds apart in the second quarter triggered the Dolphins' rout of the Colts. The victory gave the Dolphins an 8-4 record and a one-game lead in the AFC East over the Bills.

Duper's scoring catch, just one yard shy of Miami's longest pass play ever, boosted the Dolphins' lead to 17-0 with 1:42 to go in the first half and they were on their way.

Marino said Duper "came up, I looked at him and he took off and I just threw it as far as I could. It was a great play by Mark."

Browns 30, Patriots 0

Cleveland exploded for 17 points in less than four minutes, starting with linebacker Chip Banks' 65-yard interception return for a touchdown, and the Browns rolled to their second consecutive shutout. The second-quarter eruption gave the Browns a 20-0 halftime lead. New England was blanked for the first time in 125 regular-season games.

"They put us away for good early in the game," said New England offensive guard Ron Woolen. "I hate to say it, but we never really recovered from that interception. That had to take something out of us."

Permian sprints to playoff victory

Tailback Marcus Hudgins sprinted for 180 yards, including two touchdowns, in 12 carries to pace Odessa Permian in a 48-0 rout of El Paso Eastwood in a key Class 5A high school playoff game Saturday.

The Panthers, 11-1 and ranked fifth in the final Associated Press poll, overcame a season-high six turnovers to win the right to advance against Wichita Falls Rider at 8 p.m. Friday in Wichita Falls.

Meanwhile, four 5A teams remained undefeated, improving their records to 12-0. They were No. 1-ranked Highland Park, No. 3 Plano, No. 4 Temple and No. 7 Houston Yates.

Plano beat Mesquite 28-3 and Temple mastered Houston Cypress Creek 14-0 and will play each other in a 7:30 p.m. game Saturday in Texas Stadium, a short time after Highland Park tries to move past Houston Klein on the same turf.

Highland Park rolled over Richardson 21-13, with quarterback John Stollenwerck scoring two touchdowns and running back Rod Jones rushing for 122 yards. Klein battered Longview 35-0 Saturday.

In other Class 5A action Saturday, Dickinson clipped previously unbeaten Beaumont West Brook, the No. 4-ranked team and defending state champ, 10-0, and San Antonio Churchill hit No. 9 Brazoswood 21-17.

No. 6 Converse Judson whipped No. 8 Stafford Dulles 20-7.

Midland Lee beat 10th-ranked and previously unbeaten El Paso Irvin 48-14 and No. 7 Houston Yates dropped Houston Westbury 41-31.

In Class 4A, three members of the AP's final top 10 were eliminated through head-to-head battles. Second-ranked Cleburne, 11-0, defeated seventh-ranked Wichita Falls Hirschi 28-12. No. 5 Lubbock Estacado routed No. 10 San Angelo Lakeview 34-0, and No. 9 New Braunfels crushed previously undefeated and No. 8 Carrizo Springs 56-18.

Class 4A's top-ranked team, Fort Bend Willowridge, remained on track, winning its 11th straight game with a 15-0 decision over Taylor. No. 3 Bay City, 11-0, beat Huntsville 39-9; No. 4 Jasper, 12-0, beat Brazosport 32-7; but No. 6 Allen lost for the first time, being eliminated 24-13 by Terrell.

The key match of 4A playoff action next weekend is a 7:30 p.m. confrontation Saturday in Pasadena between Willowridge and Jasper.

In Class 3A, the state's three top-ranked teams ran their perfect records to 12-0. No. 1 Littlefield defeated Childress 14-6, No. 2 Navasota beat Brookshire Royal 16-7 and, in a battle of unbeaten teams, No. 3 Daingerfield defeated No. 5 Waco Robinson 14-7.

No. 7 Post advanced with a 14-10 victory over Muleshoe; No. 8 Ballinger, 11-0-1, beat Coleman 34-0; No. 9 Kaufman, 12-0, defeated Springtown 28-20; but No. 10 Van Vleck lost for the first time, falling 14-12 to Hondo.

Bears 27, Bucs 0

Chicago's Walter Payton ran for 106 yards and two touchdowns in the rain and moved into third place on the NFL's all-time rushing list as the Bears remained in the thick of the Central Division title chase by crushing Tampa Bay.

Payton went over the 1,000-yard mark in a season for the seventh time in nine years on an 8-yard touchdown burst in the second quarter, and zoomed past the retired O.J. Simpson in the career standings with a 3-yard pickup in the third period. The shifty running back put together the 53rd 100-yard day of his career on 22 carries and boosted his nine-season total to 11,257, while Simpson rushed for 11,236 in 11 campaigns.

Giants 23, Eagles 0

Butch Woolfolk's first 100-yard plus game and a defense that allowed Philadelphia only 79 yards in total offense carried the Giants past the Eagles. Woolfolk gained 159 yards on 43 carries, an NFL record, and scored a touchdown as New York ended a streak of seven games without a victory.

Woolfolk, a second-year running back from Michigan, topped the single-game high of 42 set earlier this season by Tampa Bay's James Wilder.

Redskins 42, Rams 20

John Riggins smashed into the end zone on three short touchdown runs as the Redskins overpowered the Rams. The win kept the Redskins in a first-place tie with Dallas in the NFC East with a 10-2 record. The Rams, now 7-5, remained tied for first place in the NFC West with San Francisco.

Cowboys 42, Chiefs 21

Tony Dorsett scored two touchdowns and became the ninth player in NFL history to gain more than 8,000 yards, carrying the Cowboys over the Chiefs. Dorsett dashed 28 and 32 yards for touchdowns as he went over the 1,000-yard mark for the sixth time in seven seasons.

Professor Landry teaches a lesson

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The professor gave his former pupil, Kansas City Coach John Mackovic, another lesson Sunday on the National Football League law according to Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry: You don't win without a running game.

The Cowboys yielded 391 yards and three touchdowns to Kansas City passers but rolled to a 41-21 victory behind the artful dashes of Tony Dorsett, who reached a rushing milestone.

"This is the stretch drive, the dash for cash," said Dorsett, who became the ninth National Football League player to rush for over 8,000 yards. "We have to run as well as we pass if we expect to accomplish the things we set out to do in July."

Dorsett bolted 28 and 32 yards for touchdowns and had 108 yards on 18 rushes as he passed the 1,000-yard mark for the sixth time in his seven-year NFL career.

"I guess 1,000 yards is still the criterion for a great back in the NFL, but I think for me it's just a mediocre season," said Dorsett. "I'll have to get 1,600 before I can say I had an outstanding year."

"It's my intention to play 10 years and after that I will reassess my desire to play," Mackovic, the Dallas offensive coordinator for two years, could squeeze only 43 yards in rushing out of his attack.

He was envious of Dorsett. "When they get execution with their offense like today and Dorsett gets some running room and makes the plays he did then the Cowboys are extremely difficult to beat," Mackovic said. "Rarely do they lose when they play that way."

Landry said "Tony was the difference. He made the two big runs for touchdowns."

"John has done a real good job coaching Kansas City but Dorsett's runs nullified what the Chiefs were trying to do — stop him."

Dorsett has called the Dallas running game "disgraceful" earlier in the week.

Landry said "I asked him (Dorsett) if he ever heard of the 'Bootsie' play where the offensive line lets the gates open and don't block anybody."

Dorsett said he wished he had kept his mouth shut.

"I've been in the league seven years now and you'd think I'd know better," Dorsett said. "I wish I hadn't said those things."

The Cowboys upped their record to 10-2, good enough to stay in a tie with Washington in the National Conference Eastern Division.

Kansas City dropped to 5-7 in the American Conference West in Mackovic's rookie year as an NFL coach.

It was the first victory this year for the Cowboys where they didn't have to come from behind.

They built a 27-0 lead before Kansas City quarterback Bill Kenney hit Carlos Carson with touchdown strikes of 13 and 48 yards behind Everson Walls in the third period.

"We will have a tough assignment on Thursday," said Landry. "We are giving up a lot of 300-yard passing games and that worries you."

Tony Hill off and running

But Steers survive Texas celebration almost too soon

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It was Texas 24, Baylor 7 and the Longhorns were driving for another score with visions of the Cotton Bowl dancing in their heads.

A lost fumble, a Baylor touchdown pass, a recovered onside kick, and a short touchdown run and the dream was almost replaced by a nightmare.

"I was happy to see it end," said Mossy Cade, who stopped Baylor's upset hopes with an interception in the final 13 seconds.

Unblemished Texas survived the late Baylor passing blitz to clinch at least a tie for the Southwest Conference title and a Cotton Bowl bid Saturday with a scary 24-21 victory over the Bluebonnet Bowl-bound Bears.

Field Scovell, representing the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association, told the Texas team: "You are great champions."

Texas will play Georgia in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 2.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff felt the Bears deserved their first victory in Austin since 1951.

"You deserved this one men," said Teaff. "You lost but you didn't get whipped. And there's a big difference."

Baylor had 96 offensive plays against the top-ranked team in the nation.

The Bears stung Texas for 29 first downs, most ever surrendered by a Longhorn team.

The Longhorns managed only 11 first downs against the second worst defense in the SWC.

Baylor completed 22 of 54 passes for 320 yards against the highly vaunted Texas defense which had yielded only an average of 87 yards per game.

The 7-3-1 Bears will play Oklahoma State of the Big Eight Conference in the Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston New Year's Eve.

Texas is 7-0 in the SWC and 10-0 overall and can claim its first outright title since 1977 with a victory next Saturday over Texas A&M. Baylor finished its SWC play with a 4-3-1 ledger.

Texas linebacker Jeff Leiding said "I'm just glad we only have to play them once a year. Baylor kept fighting all the way. Their quarterbacks are both good."

Teaff said, "I think Texas was tested today more than they have been all year, but they held up just like SMU last year and like we did in 1980."

Bluebonnet Bowl Executive Director Ted Nance said a month ago his selection committee felt Baylor was "The most exciting team in Texas."

"We changed our minds. We feel like we are getting the most exciting team in the United States," he said.

Texas quarterback Rob Moerschell scored on a one-yard bootleg and passed six yards to tight end Mike Chapman for a touchdown while Ronnie Robinson ran 19 yards for a touchdown and compiled 120 yards rushing on 19 carries.

Texas built a 24-7 lead then watched the Bears storm back.

Time for Kuhn to call off dogs

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Come on, Bowie, call off the dogs.

George Steinbrenner and the New York Yankees got the bad end of the stick in the now immortal "Pine Tar Incident," so what's the point of pouring vinegar into the wound?

To haul Steinbrenner onto the carpet for the apparent purpose of determining the extent of his punishment for getting sore and saying a few nasty things about American League President Lee MacPhail doesn't make much sense.

To draw the New York State Supreme Court into the rumpus makes the whole episode seem all the more ludicrous.

Certainly in pursuing the matter in the last weeks of Bowie Kuhn's tenure as commissioner, would only add substance to Steinbrenner's charge that you have a bias against him personally and you'd like to get a last dig before leaving office.

That doesn't jell with the reputation you have built up over 15 years as a man of high honor and ethics — albeit a tendency sometimes to be a bit starry in an earthy game that dictates common sense and understanding of human emotions — whether they come from an owner, a player or a league president.

The whole episode involving extent of pine tar on George Brett's bat was a little silly in the first place — a comedy of errors, first by the ump, then by the American League office and finally by the commissioner, who, if he didn't see fit to inject himself in the first place, had no cause to do so later.

Please spare us the trite rationale: "Such criticism of a league president reflects on the image of the game. The commissioner must protect his league president."

Why?

Why shouldn't the commissioner feel as much an obligation to protect one of his owners, his baseball clubs, the players themselves on both sides of the fence?

It's a fallacy, we know, but why shouldn't the commissioner serve as overseer and protector of the entire game — owners, players, umpires and fans alike even though he is the hired hand of the owners?

The first commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, never felt he was the pawn of the club bosses and acted accordingly. The same was true of Happy Chandler. The owners couldn't fire Landis, but they did fire Happy.

Kuhn can't be fired. He's already quit. This is good time for him to show his human — instead of his legalistic — side.

With two out in the ninth inning, Brett hit a two-run homer that apparently gave the Royals a 5-4 victory. But wait a minute! Yankees Manager Billy Martin rushes out on the field and says, "Hey, Brett was swinging an illegal bat."

The ump went into a huddle. Sure enough, the bat had pine tar above the 18-inch mark and in the hitting area, forbidden by baseball law. Dramatically, the head ump thumbed Brett out, ending the game and giving the Yankees the decision 4-3.

Cincinnati romps

Oilers brought back to earth

CINCINNATI (AP) — Wide receiver Cris Collinsworth can't explain the Cincinnati Bengals' recent mastery over the Houston Oilers.

Collinsworth caught one of three touchdown passes by quarterback Ken Anderson as the Bengals blitzed the hapless Oilers 38-10 Sunday for the second time in three weeks. Cincinnati dealt Houston a 55-14 drubbing in the AstroDome Nov. 6.

"Some teams just have another team's number a little bit," Collinsworth said. "I don't know why. Anytime you get beat 55-14 it has to have a little bit of a psychological effect."

The 1-11 Oilers appeared to be in shock Sunday as the 5-7 Bengals rolled off 38 first-half points and coasted to their fourth victory in five games.

Cincinnati scored the first six times it got the ball, behind Anderson's clutch passing and fullback Pete Johnson's surges. Johnson would end up with 137 yards rushing, the second-best single-game total of his career.

Anderson threw a first-quarter touchdown pass of 16 yards to Dan Ross — the tight end's first TD reception of the season — and 45 yards to Collinsworth for a 17-3 lead.

Johnson burst through the middle of the Houston defensive line for scoring runs of 12 and 10 yards in the second quarter, and Anderson linked up on a 1-yard scoring toss to Ross to effectively put the game out of reach before the half, 38-3.

"I felt they would play us tough," Bengals Head Coach Forrest Gregg said. "We got off to a good start, and we got to jump on them early."

Cincinnati's first-half offensive explosion brought back a painful sense of déjà vu for interim Houston Head Coach Chuck Studley.

"It appears that what happens to our team early in the game is almost instrumental in how we play the rest of the game," Studley said. "If we get a decent start, we play decently. If we have adversity early, we just seem to be incapable of overcoming that adversity."

"I think this is probably because we've suffered so many losses, victimized ourselves in many cases. And when it starts again, we seem to lose our confidence — what little confidence we might have had going into the ballgame. And then things begin to snowball — again, just one horrible mistake after another."

The Oilers made plenty of mistakes in the first half, getting penalized 8 times for 93 yards while managing just 137 total net yards. Meanwhile, Johnson had 69 yards on 14 carries. Ross had five catches for 76 yards, and Collinsworth had two catches for 57 yards at the half.

The Bengals eased up in the second half, with Johnson carrying 16 more times to reach his total of 137. His 160-yard performance against Cleveland in 1978 is Johnson's only higher yardage total.

Also, it was Johnson's second 100-yard game of the season since returning from a four-game suspension for admitted cocaine purchases.

"He had a good day," Gregg said. "Some people had thought that Pete was through for the year. He's not through for the year."

Johnson said he's finally back in form, and he felt good going into the game Sunday.

"When I came back (after the suspension), I got kind of banged up in the first two or three games," Johnson said. "Playing with soreness and stretched muscles makes it tough. Now I feel great."

Backup quarterback Turk Schonert replaced Anderson with 9:49 left in the game. Anderson completed 10 of 15 tosses for 177 yards without an interception.

Gregg said he kept his first-string quarterback in the game for more than three quarters because he feared Houston could come back.

"We scored 38 points in one half. Who's to say they can't?" Gregg said. "You don't take your starting quarterback out until you think the game is well in hand. The game was well in hand at the end of the third quarter."

Houston quarterback Oliver Luck, making his second straight National Football League start, completed 15 of 30 passes for 181 yards with three interceptions. He tossed a 14-yard touchdown pass to tight end Walt Arnold in the fourth quarter.

"I thought that under the circumstances he played reasonably well," Studley said of Luck.

After beating Detroit one week earlier for their first victory, Studley said he hoped the Oilers would be able to string together several victories.

"I would say that our performance today was certainly not an emotional performance at all," Studley said. "It wasn't a team that looked like they wanted to have a new beginning."

Last-second lob pass provides victory margin for San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Practice makes perfect. at least for center Bill Walton of the San Diego Clippers.

Walton lobbed an alley-oop pass to teammate Terry Cummings, who left his feet to catch the ball and, without coming down, slammed in a dunk as time ran out to give the Clippers a 99-97 victory over Cleveland in the only National Basketball Association game scheduled Sunday night.

The Clippers had called a timeout with one second remaining after Walton rebounded a missed shot by Cleveland's Jeff Cook.

On the ensuing out-of-bounds play from halfcourt, Walton made his perfect pass and Cummings scored.

Cummings was lined up at the other side of the court from Walton, near the mid-court line, when the play began. Cummings came around a screen from a teammate and wasn't closely guarded when the ball arrived.

"I practiced throwing lob passes today, but not from halfcourt, from the three-point line," said Walton. "We look for the lob at the basket as a part of our game plan. This is the first time I've thrown one from halfcourt. I'm usually the one trying to catch those."

"I played with two of the best lob passers ever, Greg Lee (at UCLA) and Bob Gross (for the Portland Trail Blazers), and they told me to see the man and let it go."

"By the time I saw Bill, the ball was coming," said Cummings, a second-year pro who was held to a career-low 12 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. "All I had to do was reach up and grab it."

"We made a mistake," said Cleveland Coach Tom Nissalke. "We guarded the screen instead of Cummings."

Walton had 16 points and also grabbed 10 rebounds. He made a dunk shot with 25 seconds remaining to tie the game at 97-97.

Craig Hodges led the Clippers, who are 5-7 on the season — all five wins at home and all seven losses on the road — with a season-high 20 points.

The Cavaliers were on top nearly all the way. They led by as many as 16 points in the second quarter before settling for a 57-47 halftime advantage. It was 81-75 entering the final period.

Fewer pulses mean higher soup prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's pulse crop faded but still held on in 1983, the Agriculture Department says. Even so, when there are fewer pulses the price of bean soup can cost more.

Pulses are the seeds of a group of edible legumes including dry beans, dry peas and lentils. They are grown widely in the world and sometimes, in the Soviet Union, for example, are included in overall grain production figures.

In the United States, beans are the leading pulse crop, and it is down sharply from last year. Dry pea production, on the other hand, is up slightly while lentil output declined.

The 1983 dry bean harvest — which includes the familiar pinto, navy and other varieties — is estimated at 15.6 million hundredweight, down 37 percent from last year and less than one-half of the record harvest of 32.2 million hundredweight in 1981.

Prices at the farm have risen accordingly, averaging $23.80 per hundredweight in last month, compared to $17.90 a year ago.

A recent outlook report said this year's bean crop is the smallest since 1967, due mainly to a sharp cutback in plantings to 1.11 million acres, 37 percent below last year's 1.76 million acres and 50 percent below 1981.

"Production fell in all states, indicating output declines for all classes except lima beans, which were unchanged from last year," the report said.

Michigan is the largest dry bean producer, along with California, Colorado, Idaho, Nebraska and North Dakota. The crop is also produced to a lesser extent in Kansas, Minnesota, Montana, New York, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

"Lower grower prices for the 1982 crop primarily influenced the huge plantings decline. Producers received an average of $13.80 per hundredweight — the lowest price since 1972 — for the 1982 crop, contrasted with $21 and $27.60 for the 1981 and 1980 harvests, respectively," the report said.

With the smaller 1983 crop, prices at the farm are expected to average $22 to $28 per 100 pounds for the season.

One reason for last year's bean glut and the lower prices was a sharp decline in export sales, the report said. And the higher prices will make U.S. beans less attractive to foreign buyers.

"In addition to the higher U.S. crop prices, the continued strength of the dollar further inflates the price," the report said.

However, smaller crops are expected in Argentina and Canada, which are competitors in the world bean market, and reduced harvests in South Africa and Venezuela — all pluses in the U.S. export outlook.

But with a larger crop in Mexico, bean sales to that country are expected to be minimal, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has approved licensing for three veterinary companies to make a new vaccine for immunizing poultry against Marek's disease.

Dr. David A. Espeseth, a veterinarian in USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the licenses are being issued to DeKalb AgResearch Inc., DeKalb, Ill.; Inter-Continental Biologics Inc., Millsboro, Del.; and Salsbury Laboratories Inc., Charles City, Iowa.

The new vaccine was needed to provide greater protection against a recent highly virulent form of Marek's disease, Espeseth said. It was developed through cooperative efforts of USDA's research facilities and the manufacturers.

Marek's disease is a tumor-producing viral infection that results in a high rate of carcass condemnations in infected poultry flocks.

The manufacturers will continue laboratory and field testing of the vaccine during the coming year, Espeseth said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Burley tobacco growers and others will have an opportunity to express their views next month at an Agriculture Department meeting in Lexington, Ky.

The public meeting has been scheduled for Dec. 16 to gather comments on the 1984 burley marketing quota.
