Budget nearly a freeze

President asks Congress to exhibit courage

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today asked Congress to exhibit "political courage" and adopt a low-growth $973.7 billion budget for next year that would freeze, trim or eliminate scores of familiar domestic programs.

At the same time, the program Reagan portrayed as austere would fail to meet his own earlier target of halving the federal deficit by 1988.

The budget proposes a $30 billion increase in defense spending — guaranteed to provoke congressional criticism — while chopping domestic spending by nearly $40 billion.

It recommends sharp reductions in mass transit, housing and student aid; an end to the revenue-sharing program that turns federal tax dollars back to state and local governments without strings; termination of the federal subsidy of the Amtrak rail-passenger system, and a 5 percent pay cut for all federal civilian workers.

Formal release of the budget kept the president on a collision course with Congress, where leaders of both parties have said for weeks that cuts in popular programs, already slashed during Reagan's first term, would be difficult to enact without accompanying spending restraint in defense programs.

In fact, Republican and Democratic congressional leaders were quick to criticize the budget proposal when details were made available on Sunday.

"The president, I must say, is in a fairly comfortable position," Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas said. "He says, 'Don't touch Social Security. Don't touch defense. Don't raise taxes. And you can't touch interest on the debt.' That doesn't leave a great deal," Dole said.

House Majority Leader Jim

Wright, D-Texas, said the proposed budget shows "a blind spot on the part of Mr. Reagan" and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. "When they speak of spending, they don't mean military spending. When they speak of shrinking government, they don't think of the Pentagon as a part of government," Wright said.

The Senate Budget Committee scheduled hearings beginning Tuesday, and Republican Senate leaders predicted floor action on the overall package as early as March. Meanwhile, the House of Representatives, under Democratic control, planned a series of hearings on the budget in various cities for later this month.

If adopted by Congress in anything approaching its current form — an unlikely prospect in view of congressional performance in the past — the budget would amount to a virtual net freeze on all government spending.

It calls for a growth over this year's $959.1 billion budget of a bare 1.5 percent, representing payment of interest on the national debt alone. It would be the smallest increase in federal spending in more than two decades.

Reagan said his budget would reduce deficits, now soaring over $200 billion, to $144 billion for 1988 — missing his earlier target of a reduction to $100 billion by that year.

The projected 1986 deficit would be $180 billion, down from an estimated $222.2 billion in the current year.

The budget does not call for tax increases or reductions, although it repeats Reagan's earlier proposal for Congress to enact a tuition tax credit for parents of students in private schools. Reagan said he would submit a tax simplification plan later in the year.

Social Security benefits for 65 million Americans would be left untouched, although the budget would cancel cost-of-living increases built into a number of other federal programs. Reagan said earlier he would consider freezing Social Security benefits only if Congress insisted.

An item-by-item glance at proposed budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, at a glance, are highlights of President Reagan's proposed budget for the 1986 fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1:

Spending: $973.7 billion, up by $14.6 billion.
Revenues: $793.7 billion, an increase of $56.8 billion.

Deficits: The budget projects a fiscal 1986 deficit of $180 billion, down from this year's estimate of $222.2 billion.

The national debt: Outlays for interest on the public debt are estimated at $198.8 billion, up from $180.3 billion this year.

Defense: $277.5 billion in outlays for the Defense Department, up from this year's $246.3 billion. Research money for "Star Wars" would be increased from the current $1.4 billion to $3.7 billion.

Foreign Aid: Nearly $14.5 billion in foreign military and economic aid next year. Compared to this year, military aid would drop $900 million and economic aid $200 million.

Housing: A two-year halt in housing subsidies for the poor and elderly. An increase in fees paid by veterans and Federal Housing Administration borrowers.

Agriculture: Massive cutbacks in farm commodity programs as part of a 15 percent cut in Agriculture Department spending, to $38.5 billion from a near-record $45.1 billion.

Transportation: An end to government support for Amtrak, the national passenger railroad. An $800 million cut in operating subsidies for mass transit.

Space: Increase the nation's civilian space budget by $425 million to $7 billion, including $230 million in design funds for a 1990s space station, and $25 million to begin developing an "Orbital Maneuvering Vehicle" to snag satellites from high orbits.

Energy: Nuclear weapons development increases from $7.3 billion to $8 billion or 82 percent of the proposed $9.7 billion Energy Department budget. Government energy spending in all agencies declines 40 percent to $5.1 billion.

Social Programs: Freezes or cuts for many health and welfare programs, including a freeze on Medicare payments to hospitals and physicians. A 4.1 percent cost-of-living increase next January is budgeted for those getting Social Security and Supplemental Security Income benefits.

Jobs: The president wants to kill the $600 million-a-year Job Corps program to train disadvantaged youth, a legacy of President Johnson's war on poverty launched two decades ago.

County learns JP precinct boundaries weren't changed

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

When Gray County drew new territories for county offices in 1978, somebody forgot to change the voting districts for the county's justices of the peace and constables.

Now, three elections later, the error has been pointed out to the county clerk and commissioners.

The error made in the county's redistricting came to light recently when several retailers inquired about "wet-dry" elections based on the JPs' precincts. County Clerk Wanda Carter told commissioners in their regular meeting Friday. The retailers, interested in seeking approval of liquor sales in the JP precincts, checked into the boundaries for those districts and found that they were never changed, Carter said.

In response to a threatened lawsuit, the county changed the commissioners' districts in 1978 to more accurately reflect the county's population. The redistricting was approved by the U.S. Justice Department. The JP and constables' districts inside the old boundary lines never were officially changed, however, and three elections have been held for offices that county officials incorrectly assumed were for the new districts.

"I just assumed those boundaries changed automatically," Commissioner Ronnie Rice said.

"I did too," added Commissioner Ted Simmons.

"We all did," County Judge Carl Kennedy agreed.

But officially, the districts for the county's JPs and constables remain the same as they were before redistricting, Carter pointed out.

The county's justices of the peace and constables elected in the "new" districts will be able to finish their terms, Carter said.

"Anyone elected will serve," she said, a check of the state law indicates.

Kennedy said elections based on the incorrect boundaries are valid, because the mistake was made "in good faith."

Precinct 2 is the only "wet" commissioner's precinct in Gray County. Parties wanting alcohol sales in McLean, Lefors and at a KOA campground in Precinct 3 have inquired about local-option elections that would permit liquor sales in the presently "dry" districts. The local option election can be countywide or in a commissioner's or JP's district, or in an incorporated city.

Commissioners now must decide how to change the JP and constable districts before the next election. Commissioners discussed officially changing the districts to reflect the new commissioner's districts, thus making the assumption a fact. They also talked about abolishing some of the districts and perhaps combining others.

Carter said state law mandates that the county have from two to five JP precincts.

The county currently has three elected JPs in Precincts 1, 2 and 4. Precinct 3 has no JP but has an unfunded constable. The other three precincts have salaried constables.

Commissioners discussed doing away with the Precinct 3 JP position. The office is presently vacant, but unless it's abolished, a candidate could file and win election to the post. The panel hopes that won't happen, indicating the position isn't needed, according to Friday's discussion.

Any new boundaries must get the justice department's approval, Carter said.

Basketball dispute triggers gunfight

At 11:30 p.m. on Jan. 12, 1985, a fire was discovered at the Rustic Inn Restaurant, 318 West Brown, in Pampa. The fire raged throughout the building and was finally brought under control about 5 a.m.

An investigation was conducted by the Arson Investigation Unit of the city of Pampa. After much effort and laboratory testing of materials recovered at the fire scene, investigators determined it to be an arson fire.

Crime Stoppers of Pampa will pay $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this crime.

If you have information about this arson, or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222.

DALLAS (AP) — A disputed call turned a basketball game at a neighborhood recreation center into a gunfight that left four men wounded, police said.

"It was like something out of the Wild West," said Ricardo Allen, a maintenance worker at the center who drove into the parking lot just after the shooting began.

Officers said the gunfire erupted Saturday after the men argued about a call made during a game at the Skyline Recreation Center.

Witnesses told police the center was filled with people when the fight began. They said basketball games at the center occasionally are volatile.

"One guy made a call, and the other said it was wrong," said

Ryan Collins, 12, who was playing basketball nearby when the argument started.

Gene Barfield said he was outside the center when about 10 men came out into the parking lot.

"They were cussing real loud and yelling and screaming," Barfield said. "All of a sudden, it was bang, bang, bang."

The wounded included Billy E. Ingram, 25, an off-duty Dallas firefighter, his brothers, Benny Ingram, 25, and Hardy Ingram, 21, and Gordon Thurman, 21, police said.

Witnesses told police that Thurman was not involved in the game dispute. They said he was shot in the leg as he walked into the recreation center.

School, city slate

Tuesday meetings

The Pampa Independent School District board of trustees and the Pampa City Commission have scheduled public meetings for Tuesday.

The school board meets at 5 p.m. and the city commission will hold a special meeting at 8:30 a.m.

School trustees will consider a resolution for support of a local master of education degree program at their regular meeting.

Wayland Baptist University has established relations with the Pampa Center of Clarendon College to provide the master's program for teachers in the Pampa area.

In other matters, the school board will consider a policy update on first reading, study a one-year term contract form update and have a possible executive session on personnel matters.

City commissioners will hold a special meeting to conduct a public hearing on a request for annexation of a tract of land near Coronado Community Hospital.

The hospital has asked the city to annex a tract from the west half of Section 100, Block 3, I&GN RRC Survey. The land will be used to provide medical and health care related building sites.

In their workshop session following the public hearing, the commissioners will discuss a workshop on a proposed plan of actions submitted by the city staff.

SNOWY MORNING — Pampa students such as this young miss arriving at Stephen Austin Elementary School, made it to school today despite a heavy snow. But continued snowfall and freezing temperatures may make getting to area schools more difficult Tuesday. Forecasters expect snow accumulations of more than four inches. Complete forecast, Page two (Staff Photo by Cathy Spaulding)

Report Britons' release postponed

LONDON (AP) — Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy's regime today postponed for at least 24 hours the release of four Britons held there for nine months, citing "unforeseen circumstances," the British consul in Tripoli said.

Hours earlier Terry Waite, the archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy who negotiated the men's release, was quoted by the British Broadcasting Corp. as saying he was "cautiously optimistic" they would be released early today.

But Consul Hugh Dunnachie said in a telephone interview with Press Association, the British domestic news agency: "The statement from the Libyans said it was due to unforeseen circumstances and I don't know any more than that."

"This is only a 24-hour delay in a nine-month wait, so it is not that bad."

The Church of England press office said it had no information on the delay. The British Foreign Office called it "disappointing news." A spokesman who declined to be identified said: "... this has very much been a wait-and-see operation."

On Sunday, the Libyan government expressed anger at Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher for unveiling a memorial Friday to a policeman allegedly shot by a gunman in the Libyan Embassy last April.

The four Britons were arrested weeks after the shooting and the ensuing Libyan Embassy siege.

Two of the Britons have held on charges ranging from communicating with the British news media to carrying letters defaming Libya. The other two men were held without charges. They have been held in a villa outside Tripoli.

The four men are engineers Malcolm Anderson and Robin Plummer and teachers Michael Berdinner and Alan Russell.

Waite flew to Tripoli on Saturday on his fourth attempt to persuade Libyan authorities to free the Britons.

Russell, 49, an English teacher, was arrested May 13, 1984 on charges of possessing state secrets, communicating with the British Broadcasting Corp. and being in Libya without proper documents. Four weeks ago, a Libyan court ordered him jailed for three months.

Anderson, 27, an engineer with the Arabian Gulf Oil Co., was accused of trying to leave Libya with letters containing defamatory information about the country. He was arrested at Tripoli Airport last June but was not charged until December.

North Korea got US-built choppers

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Korea has received more than 80 U.S.-built helicopters — similar to military models provided to South Korea — through a West German exporter who allegedly diverted them there illegally, the Commerce Department says.

Commerce's deputy assistant secretary for export enforcement, Theodore Wu, said Sunday that the aircraft, if modified for military use, would be enough "to give close air-to-ground support for a whole regiment of troops."

The transactions involving Hughes model 300 and 500 helicopters "is probably the largest illegal diversion of U.S.-manufactured aircraft, of helicopters, that we know of," Wu said in a telephone interview.

U.S. policy provides for an embargo against any goods being shipped to North Korea, with the sole exception of non-commercial quantities of humanitarian items.

On Friday, Customs and Commerce Department agents armed with search warrants seized documents from two Los Angeles-area freight companies that Wu said were allegedly involved in packing and forwarding some of the helicopters. He identified the companies as Unitrans International Corp. in Inglewood and Associated Industries in North Hollywood.

Also on Friday, the department revoked the export licenses of two West German companies, an official of one of the firms and eight related parties, most of them in the Los Angeles area. That step made it illegal for anyone to deal with them in transactions involving goods of U.S. origin, Wu said.

Wu said the evidence indicates that Kurt Behrens, managing director of Dela-avia Fluggerate GmbH, had ordered at least 85 helicopters from Hughes for delivery in 1983 and 1984, and at least 80 of the craft were delivered.

But instead of going to Behrens in West Germany, the helicopters were shipped to North Korea, he said.

The latest shipment, involving 15 helicopters and repair parts, was shipped from Los Angeles on a Panamanian-flag vessel, the Westwood Merchant, Wu said.

They were unloaded in Antwerp, Belgium, trucked 75 miles north to Rotterdam, the Netherlands, and put on a Soviet vessel.

Soviet defector says he spied for U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — A top Soviet diplomat who claims to have spied for the CIA for 2½ years before defecting to the United States in 1978, says he's convinced that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is seeking to restore détente.

"Western speculation has given Gromyko the dubious honor of being the single most influential initiator of the Kremlin's ultrahard line toward the U.S. in the 1980s," Arkady Shevchenko writes in a new book. "This speculation seems to me far wide of the mark." Shevchenko, 54, who was a protege of Gromyko, says the chilly relations between Moscow and Washington are not the result of one man's policy.

"Gromyko shares power with other key partners in the collective leadership that runs the Kremlin," Shevchenko writes. "And all of them, including Gromyko, are just now more belligerent and hypersensitive than usual."

Shevchenko's book, "Breaking With Moscow," is being published later this month, but an excerpt appears in the Feb. 11 issue of Time magazine. He wrote it with help from his American wife, Elaine.

Shevchenko, who was the highest-ranking Soviet defector since World War II, first approached the United States and asked to defect in 1975, when he was an undersecretary general at the United Nations.

Shevchenko gave the United States information on Soviet positions in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, told of frictions inside the Kremlin, and provided secrets on Soviet plans for Europe, Africa and Central America.

Only a handful of top American officials knew he was working for the United States, among them Daniel Patrick Moynihan, now a Democratic senator from New York, but in 1975 the American ambassador to the United Nations.

Residents says cleanup threatens animal habitat

HOUSTON (AP) — A neighborhood group is organizing a cleanup of a vine-choked wooded area near downtown Houston but one resident is upset that the well-intentioned effort is destroying a natural wildlife habitat.

"I can understand them wanting to clean out the trash and clear up any sanitation problem," says Robert S. Smith. "I just don't understand why they have to chop down all these big vines and clear out all the undergrowth."

Dawn Shumway, co-chairman of the White Oak Parkway Enhancement Committee, said the group is raising its own money and doing its own work.

Victim's families waiting for justice

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — For the families of the victims of a series of disappearances and killings, it is an agony intensified by not knowing.

It is an agony made more acute by an investigation, conducted in the glare of publicity, that twice has followed seemingly promising roads to disappointing dead ends.

But while the survivors are not critical of law enforcement efforts to find the killer or killers of their loved ones, some are frustrated by a criminal justice system they say favors the accused instead of the victim.

"I just want the man in jail," said Sharon Hayden, who found her 18-year-old daughter stabbed to death in their southwest Fort Worth apartment on Sept. 5.

Ginger Hayden's case is among eight slayings and one disappearance under investigation by an unprecedented 40-member police task force, now in its fourth week of operation.

"For five months, (I was tempted) to ask people, 'Did you kill my daughter?'... I suspect everyone. I really do," said Ms. Hayden, a postal worker. "I even suspected myself."

In the past three weeks, two suspects have been arrested and later released after being questioned about the disappearances and slayings, most involving young women who vanished from the city's southwest side since September.

On Jan. 12, investigators for Tarrant County Sheriff's Department arrested Timothy Paul Volkmar, a 25-year-old maintenance man and the son of a Fort Worth minister, and charged him in one of the killings.

Volkmar was released four days later after authorities admitted that a fingerprint on a victim's car wasn't Volkmar's, as they'd first thought.

Remsen Wolff, a 44-year-old free-lance photographer, was arrested Jan. 24 in connection with a 1984 rape and questioned about two slayings and a disappearance.

Again, evidence failed to materialize, and authorities released Wolff two days later.

"It causes us a great deal of frustration," said Ried Grover of Olympia, Wash., whose 21-year-old daughter, Regina, was found strangled in a creek two days before Christmas.

"It just lingers on," he told the Dallas Times Herald. "I'd just like it to end."

Since their daughter, Kathryn, was found slain on Nov. 26, William and Dorothy Jackson of Brady have been talking almost daily to a detective following their daughter's case.

Recently, they started subscribing to the Fort Worth Star-Telegram to keep up with the task force.

"We're most interested in getting it solved," said Jackson. "Of course, you're disappointed when it turns out they have the wrong person... (The person who did this) has been living 65 days longer than our daughter... If we could just find that person, it would really help."

Training, ingenuity helped, former Vietnam POWs say

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Training and ingenuity enabled American prisoners of war to survive their harsh captivity in North Vietnam, two former POWs say.

"What we were able to do points out how well the American military man is trained," Col. Joseph E. Milligan said. "When you get in a situation like that, it's amazing how far you can reach back into your training."

Col. Donald R. Spoon, a fellow POW with Milligan, said time and time again he saw "the sheer ingenuity of my fellow man with limited resources."

The two men were honored recently for their elevation to colonel in a ceremony at the headquarters of the Aerospace Medical Division at Brooks Air Force Base in San Antonio.

Both men were shot down over North Vietnam in 1967 while flying combat missions in F-4C aircraft and spent six years in the same POW camp until they were released in 1973.

Spoon said that Milligan graphically demonstrated the creativity of the POWs when he healed his burned arm without receiving any medical treatment from his captors.

Milligan's arms were burned when his plane crashed. His wounds were dressed, but the bandages were never changed.

When his arms got badly infected, "I started to smell so bad the guards wouldn't even walk into my cell," Milligan told the San Antonio Light.

Using techniques taught in survival school, Milligan took off his bandages and let maggots get into the wound and eat away the infection. Once they had done that, he used his own urine — "the closest thing I could find to a sterile solution" — to wash the wounds, he said.

"What he just described is a fairly efficient medical therapy," Spoon said of Milligan's unusual treatment. "Maggots are some of the world's best surgeons, because they get to the infection on a microscopic level."

After returning to the United States, both men completed advanced medical degrees.

Thoughts on 'good ol' days'

Something happened last week that started me to thinking about the "good ol' days."

This occurrence brought to mind the times of the nickel cola and the 25 cent hamburgers — you could get five for a $1.

But, those prices weren't so low when compared with the wages paid then.

These thoughts were brought on when I learned that the hourly salary paid the first group of operators hired at the then new Celanese Chemical Company plant in Pampa in 1952 was $1.83. Compared to today's salaries, this was extremely low was my first reaction.

But then it suddenly dawned on me that I was only paid $1 per hour when I first started out with The Pampa News as a combination photographer-reporter nearly 30 years ago. I have worked on several other papers in the Freedom group of newspapers since then and my salary is somewhat better. But that isn't the reason for this column.

As I continued to think about the ol' days I began to realize that confusion can reign when several generations get together. One person's good ol' days can be another's spoiled times. The frames of reference often get jumbled.

For instance, many middle-aged people recall the early days of television with affection. But a lot of us older folks consider the development of television as a dark day in history.

The new fangled boob tube pushed old Gene Autry right off the radio and let Roy Rogers get an advantage because he looked better in front of the cameras.

The squeaking door sounded much more scary on radio horror shows than it does when viewed on television.

The trick then, according to an acquaintance of mine, is to come up with universal remembrances that everyone can cling to as examples of moments that would be worth reliving.

That is not always possible. The good days for people in their 20s are merely ulcer-dodging days for most of the rest of the adult population.

So the best that can be done is to pick a few universal irritations and go back to the days when no one had to deal with such nonsense.

Remember when:

— Ronald Reagan was an actor, John Glenn was hanging out in space and Jack Kemp was throwing passes?

— there was no worrying about what major effects all those scary initials out there like GNP, OPEC and FDO were having on our "quality of life"?

— amateur photographers didn't have to know a thing about f-stops and shutter speeds, only how to point one end of the box in the general direction of the subject?

— a computer was known only as that weird-looking contraption that shuffled all the cards on "The $64,000 Question"?

— toys were built to last more than a week and didn't devour batteries like a hungry hog?

— "heavy metal" was something used to make cultivators and trailer hitches, and "punk" was some small-time hood that hung around no place 'till all the time?

— no one had to overwork their brains trying to figure out pollen counts?

— drive-in customers could flirt with the carhop instead of screaming at a faceless speaker?

— the owner of an automobile could undertake repairs on his own vehicle?

— the launching of a space vehicle created nationwide excitement instead of a chorus of yawns?

— contraband in schools consisted of horrible items like cinnamon toothpicks and chewing gum instead of drugs?

— bureaucrats hadn't decided to place a tax on everything we do except breath?

— television sports consisted of football, baseball and boxing instead of programs like the Fourth Annual Chicken Flying Race?

— laboratory rats hadn't got around to catching cancer from everything humans touch, inhale, eat or drink?

— the federal government hadn't decided it was necessary to tell us what we could and couldn't do every second of our lives?

— goofy newspaper columnists didn't spend so much time living in the past?

Ice, snow expected to pay return visit

By The Associated Press

Freeways in San Antonio were closed and residents were urged to stay at home until midmorning today because of a layer of ice left on the highways by a freezing rain that fell throughout the early morning hours.

Major highways out of the city were open, "but potentially hazardous," state highway officials warned.

A traveler's advisory was in effect for all of the Hill County and South Central Texas today because of the icy road conditions, caused by freezing rain and light snow throughout the region.

Light snow was also reported in scattered areas or Northeast Texas, the South Plains and the Panhandle, and weather officials warned that the state probably will be hit by another round of snow and ice before it can thaw out from last week's winter storm.

Another surge of very cold air approached the Texas Panhandle and North Texas this morning and was expected to begin moving across the rest of the state late tonight and Tuesday.

For the most part, the precipitation was expected to be in the form of scattered areas of rain throughout today.

"After the cold air reaches North Texas tonight, however, the rain will change to freezing rain or sleet and then to snow by late tonight," said officials at the National Weather Service office in Fort Worth.

Weather service meteorologists said it was "too early at this time" to predict how much snow and ice the state would receive from the new storm.

Early morning temperatures today were in the teens in the Panhandle, in the 20s in North Texas, in the 30s in Central Texas, and in the 40s along the coast. At 4 a.m., the mercury ranged from 19 at Amarillo to 42 at Brownsville.

The forecast for today was for snow in the Panhandle, with highs in the 20s; cloudy with rain in North Texas, with highs in the 30s and 40s; and cloudy with occasional light rain or drizzle in South Texas, with highs in the 40s and 50s.

Texas stands to lose half billion in fed funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas lawmakers already facing a $1 billion deficit would likely lose another $440 million in federal grants if Congress approves budget cuts proposed by the Reagan administration, state analysts said.

The rug could be pulled out from under aid programs for the economically depressed Rio Grande Valley, and other changes proposed in the fiscal year 1986 budget could have far-reaching effects on Texas agriculture and the petrochemical industry.

The administration wants Congress to eliminate general revenue sharing, the Small Business Administration, economic development assistance grants and urban development action grants.

SBA and EDA programs had been offered by the administration to help the Valley. The area suffered continuing severe unemployment because of peso devaluations and a freeze last winter that killed crops.

Under the proposal to base Medicaid payments on a 1984 base instead of 1985, as Texas officials had wanted, Texas would lose about $98 million in benefits, state officials said.

Analysts at the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations, after a quick appraisal of the proposed budget over the weekend, were not sure of the extent of the effect on Texas of proposed cuts in farm programs or the loss of SBA disaster loans.

The administration proposes to cut farm commodity support prices while it phases out agricultural dependence on federal programs and wants to increase guaranteed private loans for farmers and phase down direct loans from the Farmers Home Administration.

An increase in the Environmental Protection Agency's "Superfund" for cleanup of toxic waste sites could benefit Texas, which has the third largest number of hazardous waste sites in the country.

But the administration wanted $874 million of the $900 million for the fiscal year 1986 Superfund budget to come from special taxes, and it was not clear if that would mean proposed increases in taxes on the petrochemical industry.

In fiscal year 1985, $271 million of the $620 million Superfund budget came from taxes on raw materials purchased by petrochemical companies.

Community development block grants would be reduced by 10 percent, but at the same time take on the FmHA rural development program.

Education impact aid would be frozen at 1985 levels, and aid to students for higher education would be reduced by $2.3 billion.

Federal aid for highways would be frozen at the 1985 level.

Mass transit would be cut $770 million and the amount of money local governments have to put up would be increased.

Police continue probe into family's slaying

HOUSTON (AP) — A warrant authorizing police to hold a 20-year-old man being questioned in connection with the slayings of four members of his family was set to expire Monday morning.

Reginald Lewis was taken into custody Friday. Police questioned him throughout the weekend after obtaining permission from a judge to hold Lewis without charges until 9 a.m. this morning.

Lewis told investigators that when he came home shortly after 2 a.m. Friday, he found his father's body in flames on the hallway floor and ran outside the house to get help, police said.

Neighbors said they helped Lewis snuff the flaming body of his father, Henry Lewis Sr., 42. Authorities said the man apparently had been shot and strangled.

Mary Lewis, 42, and sons Henry Jr., 22, and Byron, 13, had been shot at close range in different parts of the house, police said.

Police said the family either let their assailant in or left the house unlocked. Officers said no weapon was found in the house, which is located in a Missouri City subdivision.

Fort Bend County Justice of the Peace R. George Molina on Saturday granted a request to hold Lewis another 48 hours. State law forbids authorities to hold a person in custody for more than 24 hours without charges or unless a judge grants an extension.

State Sen. Craig Washington, a Houston attorney representing Lewis, said he met with his client Saturday at the police station.

Washington said Lewis knows "absolutely nothing" about the deaths or why anyone would want to kill his family.

Rockwall sheriff serves leaner cuisine at jail

ROCKWALL, Texas (AP) — Pork chops, ham and rib-eye steak aren't on the menu at the jail anymore. Rockwall County has a new sheriff and now inmates are eating tuna, hamburger and oatmeal.

Sheriff John McWhorter, the first Republican sheriff in county history, says he was stunned to see prisoners eating better than he ever did at home.

It all started with a pair of hunk pork ribs he spotted in one of the inmates' meals month soon after he took office.

"I said, 'Where did that come from, the restaurant across the street?'" McWhorter recalled. After learning that it was jail food, "I said, 'My word, I never ate pork chops that big at my house.'"

The 31-year-old sheriff said he was amazed to find that prisoners were being fed three hot meals a day that included regular servings of pork chops and ham — and occasionally rib-eye steak.

"I thought maybe the sheriff needs to eat in the jail," he said.

But instead of eating at the jail, McWhorter decided to order leaner cuisine for the inmates.

He hired a new chief jailer to plan the meals. He said she is trying to cut jail food costs in half by serving more hamburger, chicken, tuna and sandwiches.

"They were a little too extravagant," he said. "I want the meals to be appealing. I want them to be nutritious. But I think they can be both and still be cost-efficient."

New chief jailer Shelley Jett, who worked at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center in Dallas about 20 miles west of Rockwall, said, "I've worked in jails for a long time, and I've never seen jail food that good."

Ms. Jett said she still makes sure the prisoners are given a hot meal and two vegetables at lunch. But at night, they're usually fed bologna or peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Smoking harmful to your pocketbook

In the midst of all the talk about tax reform and budget deficits, Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler announced that Congress made a mistake last year when it reduced a tax.

Mind you, now, this is a Reagan administration official complaining about a tax reduction. The tax in question is the one on cigarette sales, which is scheduled to be halved from 16 cents a pack to 8 cents Oct. 1.

The logic Heckler uses to justify her position in beguiling. Accepting the premise that smokers run greater health risks than non-smokers, she would have us regard the cigarette tax as a user fee and would earmark about half of its $4 billion a year for the Medicare hospital insurance fund.

That trust funds spends some $6 billion a year on elderly and disabled persons with lung cancer and related illnesses. Why not, Heckler argues, have smokers pay now for services they are likely to use later? Especially since the trust fund currently gets its money from payroll taxes that make no distinction between smokers and non-smokers.

It is, statistically at least, true that smokers face much greater health risks than non-smokers. Nor do we dispute the idea that smokers should be the once to pay for the health care needed to correct their self-abuse. But if you accept, as we do, that forcing someone to pay for a program they may never use is immoral, then the cigarettes tax has no justification.

While smoking may be hazardous to your health, other practices like overeating, not getting enough sleep and exercise, eating the wrong kinds of food (or being born with genes that are less disease-resistant than other people's) also affect your health.

It's all very complex and it's difficult to avoid the impression that Heckler is zeroing in on cigarettes in part because they look like an easy target for the tax men.

The choice to accept or reject the consequences of smoking must be left to individual smokers. Far better that they should face a greater health-insurance premium imposed privately than one forced on them by a government that remains willing, at the same time, to continue price supports for the tobacco industry, itself.

Reagan must look forward

Rarely has one speech been so crucial to a nation's future course as President Reagan's second State of the Union Address scheduled for Wednesday 6. Its tone and substance can, alone, make the difference whether the nation under President Reagan will be a soaring eagle or merely a limping duck.

Americans of all political and ideological persuasions have a vast economic and social stake in the effectiveness of this message. Its importance has been even more heightened by the seeming chaos, languor, and disarray since November 6 of an administration which seemingly does not know what to do with its 49-state, 59-percent landslide mandate. So much so, that, heaven help us, Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole looks more and more like THE man in charge.

As a result, President Reagan is dangerously close to being drawn into the partisan quagmire of the deficit swamp, where his casual wisecracks would quickly be drowned out by an Aristophanes-like chorus of croaking "budget experts" whose agenda has neither Reagan's nor the nation's best interests at heart.

It is, of course, possible that all this cacophonous chaos was deliberately orchestrated to set the stage for a melodic symphony of strategy on February 6. More likely, however, it was the inevitable result of running a national political campaign with no agenda for the future.

Reagan chose to run on his record - on the State of the Union as it was, so to speak - not on a vision for the future. He must not repeat the mistake now.

This is in no way to denigrate past accomplishments. The U.S. economy is undeniably one of the World's two strongest, with the fabulous combination of an explosion in new business formation, strong growth, and remarkably low inflation, fueled by falling energy prices, thanks to deregulation and the Reagan dollar, up 65 percent from the Carter low of 1980.

The present State of the Union - in short - is strong. But, the future is precarious, and the margin between massive success and colossal failure is precisely thin.

Nations and peoples have always risen or fallen, not on past accomplishments, but on future visions. "Where there is no vision," the Preacher in "Ecclesiastes" warns, "the people perish."

Fortunately, Reagan and Congress must face up to one irresistible fact: No matter what we do to the budget, either through spending cuts or thinly veiled tax increases, the size of the federal deficit is ultimately determined by economic GROWTH. The economic slow-down, deliberately engineered by the Federal Reserve last summer, added over $55 billion to the deficit since June, even though $54 billion in new taxes were passed in July!

Growth has always been the essential unifying thread of the American dream - the soaring eagle, rising higher and higher from a boundless base, not the muddy duck, mucking around in the Doleful swamp of line-item lamentations. The "city set upon a hill," not the city beside the Foggy Bottom, must be the Reagan message - and its vision for the future must derive its theme from the '60s song, "We've Only Just Begun."

Budget cuts, for example, should be presented not as pain, but possibility. Deregulation has taken Americans out of 1979's dismal gas lines - and reacquainted us with 1985 gasoline price wars, at 95 cents a gallon, all the while the Energy Department budget was CUT 40 percent. Now, it's time to abolish this agency.

Education performance is rising, even as the Education Department's spending has plummeted. Make those scores rise faster by abolishing this whole bureaucratic interference.

Small business formations are at all-time highs (2.4 million since 1980), even as the Small Business Administration's budget has been cut 77 percent from $1.9 billion to 440 million. Abolish this bonodoggle agency, not to save money, but to promote more growth! This kind of budget-cutting theme has infinite potential.

Tax reform is crucial, not to fix the deficit, but for the glorious growth potential of a fair, low-rate, economically neutral system, that would again make us the envy of the world.

We need a positive monetary policy, not only to protect our gains against inflation but, also, to expand the economy and create new job opportunities - and incidentally cut the deficit.

Today, European countries are rushing to copy the once-scorned Reaganomics model, cutting taxes, deregulating, privatizing, all seeking growth, like ours. In the last two years, the U.S. economy, alone, has created more new jobs than the rest of the free industrial world has created in the last fifteen.

In his State of the Union address, President Reagan should take even firmer hold of that growth-through-opportunity initiative, and show Congress, the nation, and ultimately the world, that the American eagle has only begun to soar.

Today in History

Today is Monday, Feb. 4, the 35th day of 1985. There are 330 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Feb. 4, 1945, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Soviet leader Joseph Stalin began a wartime conference at Yalta.

On this date: Ten years ago: Former British Prime Minister Edward Heath yielded the leadership of the Conservative Party after losing the first round of a party election to former education official Margaret Thatcher.

Five years ago: Congressional leaders promised full investigations of charges that some members of the House and Senate had accepted bribes in the FBI's Abscam undercover operation.

One year ago: U.S. space experts were searching for a missing Westar 6 communications satellite that disappeared after it was launched from the space shuttle Challenger the day before.

America cheers good guys

Americans are cheering for the good guys again.

In Clinton, Ill., the "good guy" is Thelma Chamberlain.

When a robber smashed her kitchen window and started to crawl in she drove a knitting needle through his hand.

Now she has equipped herself with a long extension cord on her electric knife!

In an apartment hallway in St. Louis...

To prevent the rape of a 12-year-old young girl...

A young mother aimed a shotgun at the rapist...

And clicked off the safety...

And cocked the gun...

And stopped him...

And held him for the police.

Monica Jones is deluged with congratulatory phone calls.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., when supermarket workers saw an elderly woman knocked to the ground by purse-snatchers...

They got on a loudspeaker, mobilized a chase, until shoppers joined clerks in chasing down and capturing the two.

Half of all Americans now have guns in their homes; one in 10 carry guns for protection.

Thirty-seven states have resumed capital punishment.

Perhaps the co-relation is not yet provable, but our nation last year enjoyed a 10 percent decline in violent crime.

In the green jungle or the asphalt jungle predators are turned back only by superior force.

Bernhard Goetz, New Yorker, opened fire on four would-be muggers in a subway and felled all four.

Goetz, remember, had been robbed and beaten once before in a New York subway. That time he did not resist.

This time he did.

Goetz bailed himself out of jail, returned to his West 14th Street apartment to be greeted by a huge sign in the lobby: "WELCOME HOME BERNIE!"

My own mail is overwhelmingly in support of Goetz.

Surveys reveal most New Yorkers approve of what he did.

And the respondents to the polls were male and female, young and old, black, white, yellow and all shades in between.

The muggers were black, yet the director of the black organization, CORE, offered to pay defense costs for the white guy.

Paul Padgett spoke to the almost-consensus when he said, "What Goetz did was wrong and I hope he gets a medal for it."

New York's Mayor Koch does not approve of what Goetz did. Koch says people cannot take the law into their own hands.

Though he once did.

Koch, himself, wrestled an attacker to the ground a few years ago.

Either he has changed since then or the fact that he now travels with bodyguards makes it easier to pontificate about vigilantism.

Goetz says he hopes something good will come from what he did.

Perhaps it has.

Illinois has a new Victims' Bill of Rights, for one thing; allowing the families of victims to testify about the "impact of the crime."

In the next issue of the Fordham Law Review you will read something no jurist ever expected to read.

Judge Irving Kaufman - pleading guilty - to hip shooting.

Admitting that he and other "activist judges" have for years been applying their own ideas of the "social consensus," resulting in all manner of judicial inconsistency.

In North Hollywood the other day a blind man, attacked by a mugger, picked up a rock and beat the mugger to death.

What do you know; the blind man will not be prosecuted - was not even arrested.

Rhetoric can't hide pork barrel waste

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - There's never a shortage of sanctimonious rhetoric about austerity and frugality when members of Congress expound upon the need for fiscal responsibility in government.

But thriftiness inevitably gives way to profligacy when those same legislators have an opportunity to advance "pork barrel" projects - frequently of dubious value - for their home states and congressional districts.

Observers of government here have been aware of that double standard for years, but a new study provides a wealth of fascinating information about the extent to which congressional hypocrisy contributes to bloated federal budgets.

The tale of how the report came to be published is equally intriguing. In mid-1982, the White House established the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, headed by New York business executive J. Peter Grace.

But the commission deleted every specific criticism of a legislator as a spendthrift from its reports. The two journalists who conducted that research, Randall Fitzgerald and Gerald Lipson, then took the uncensored version of their work to the Cato Institute, a libertarian-oriented think tank here.

Cato, now has published "Pork Barrel: The Unexpurgated Grace Commission Story of Congressional Profligacy," which vividly describes how the political commitments to economic conservatism are overwhelmed by the special concerns of lawmakers anxious to please their constituents.

"Two members of Congress were mentioned most frequently... as perpetrators of the parochial imperative," the authors report. They are Rep. Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., and Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho.

Others cited in the book as notably reckless spenders include the Democratic leaders of both houses of Congress - Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia and House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts.

Also on the list are Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska; Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass.; and Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Texas.

The spending schemes they and their colleagues promote and protect range from extravagant water diversion projects to senseless defense contracts justified on the grounds that they provide employment for the lawmakers' constituents.

Dear Abby

Lost-and-found policy makes woman a weeper, not a keeper

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I had brunch on the 12th floor of the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Chicago on Nov. 18, 1984. In the bathroom, on the floor near the commode, my sister found a gorgeous diamond ring. Without a moment's hesitation, she took it to the manager's desk and gave it to the manager. (He did not take her name and address.) After leaving the hotel for the airport, I decided to call the manager and give him my sister's name.

Since then, we have gotten a lot of static from people we've told this to about our "stupidity."

My sister called the hotel manager a week later and was told that nobody had claimed the ring, that the hotel would hold it for a year, and if it was not claimed, it would be turned over to the Chicago police! When my sister asked why wouldn't it be returned to her, since she had found it, the manager replied, "This is our policy; all you will get out of it is the satisfaction of knowing you did the honest thing."

Question: What should one do if one finds a valuable article in a public place? I have always believed that a found article, if not claimed, should be returned to the finder after a reasonable amount of time. I feel very uneasy about this, because I am sure that the person who lost this beautiful ring is heartsick, and I have the feeling that she will never see it again.

I am signing my name, address and phone number in case you need it, but sign me ...

UPSET IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR UPSET: Write to the American Bar Association and ask what the laws of Illinois say about finding and returning valuables. (Laws vary from state to state.)

The address for the American Bar Association is 1155 E. 60 St., Chicago, Ill. 60637. Include in your letter what you told me, and be sure to enclose a business-sized, self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply.

DEAR ABBY: To clarify what has become a confusing issue concerning the tomato: If an edible part of a plant comes from the flower (ovary), it is a fruit. If it comes from any other part of the plant, it should be considered a vegetable. Therefore, from a botanical standpoint a tomato is not "both a fruit and a vegetable" as was stated by Mr. Griesman in your column.

Abby, in regard to your question, "Where do the nuts fit in?": Nuts that come from the flower are fruits. This includes filberts, pecans, chestnuts and walnuts. Others that are not true nuts, but are actually seeds, are Brazils, cashews, almonds and peanuts. (I assume that we are talking about the same kind of nuts.)

BIOLOGIST,
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR BIOLOGIST: You would not believe the number of letters I harvested on the tomato controversy.

A Tucson botanist wrote more about the tomato than I (or you) really want to know, but this sign-off was thought-provoking:

"Abby, I would like to believe this letter has cleared up the confusion, so in closing may I say, nuts to you!"

John Weins, Botanist

DEAR ABBY: Here it is, long after Christmas, and I feel like a jerk. The problem? When I was taking down my Christmas decorations, I found a stack of some 20 Christmas cards with my annual newsletter—all addressed, stamped and ready to be mailed before Christmas, of course.

I thought they had been mailed with another batch of cards I had written, but nope, here they are, sitting on the table, bursting with Christmas cheer and last year's holiday news. Some were not very important, but many were to faraway relatives, who by now probably consider me an ol' "Bah-humbug!"

Should I mail these embarrassingly late Christmas cards with an apology—or just toss them out? Sign me ...

SNAFU

DEAR SNAFU: Mail them with an apology. Better late than never.

American Revolution, and DAR Regent Mrs. P.R. Britton. Nebraska is American History Month.

Art selected for history book

A logo depicting the petroleum, cattle and agriculture industries of Gray County within the lone star state has been chosen for the front cover medallion of the Gray County History Book. The 9" x 12" bound volume is to be published for the sesquicentennial year, 1986.

Creator of the winning art is Richard Thompson, a former Pampa now living in Amarillo. He is recognized for his oil painting and sculptures of wild life. Thompson designed the art for Gray County's bicentennial coin in 1976. He is currently working on a book, "150 Years of the Texas Cowboy," to be published this fall by the Texas Christian University press for the sesquicentennial. The book will feature art work and research by members of the Texas Cowboy Artists Association. Thompson is serving his second term as president of this group.

Thompson has exhibited in the area and in nationally juried shows, including the National Sculpture Society Show in New York and the National American Sculpture Exhibition in Colorado. He has won gold and silver medals in sculpture and a gold medal in oil painting from the Texas Cowboy Artists Association.

The logo is to be featured on brochures to be sent to Gray County residents next week. The brochures contain information about the county history book and about how to write family histories. Those not receiving a copy may pick up a brochure at stores and museums in the county.

The book will also display sketches by area artists, including Thompson, Jerry Richardson and Jackie Kastor. Family histories, a general history, county and organizations' histories, as well as hundreds of photographs, will also be included. Photographs, features, and family histories may be mailed to P.O. Box 2196, Pampa, or taken to the White Deer Land Museum from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. each afternoon except for Mondays.

Beauty Tips

By late winter, the lips can become really dry, with the thin skin cracking. Lipstick may no longer give enough protection.

Use a "lip ice," available in every drugstore, either alone or under lipstick.

Carry the stick with you so that you can renew its application frequently. In lipsticks, choose only those with built-in moisturizer.

You will be more fortunate than usual this coming year where friendships are concerned. Be nice to people from all walks of life because you never know who could be of help.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) One-on-one relationships must be managed in a thoughtful manner today. Be careful not to do anything that another could find offensive. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you what signs you are best suited to romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Important objectives can be achieved today, provided you take the line of least resistance. Make a quick U-turn if you get on a dead end street.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against tendencies to be a trifle arrogant or come on a bit too strong in social situations today. Be pleasant, not pompous.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you and your mate have a disagreement today, make an effort to resolve the matter on the spot even if you feel you're the wounded party.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll resent having anyone dictate to you today, yet you may unconsciously use these same techniques when dealing with friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A failure to handle your material affairs intelligently today may lead to losses that can be avoided. Don't jump into anything without thinking.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your mate might be a trifle unreasonable today, yet your wisest course of action will be to try to appease, rather than oppose, him.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do the best you can today, but do not make unrealistic demands of yourself. Everyone, including you, has limitations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You'll be eager to be with people today, but you might not feel comfortable in a strange gathering with lots of new faces. Stick to your familiar crowd.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your self-interests will be advanced today, not because things will be easy for you, but because you'll be ingenious and resourceful in facing challenges.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you're pretty good at sizing up situations quickly, but today your initial impressions may be faulty. Wipe off your spectacles and take a second look.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not be hesitant to speak up today if you feel you're getting a bum deal. You can turn the arrangement around if you point out the inequities.

Caller says group will keep up attacks on Americans

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — An anonymous caller, blaming the United States for the Turkish occupation of Cyprus, claimed his group planted a bomb in a crowded tavern that injured 78 people, including 69 Americans, and said the group would keep up attacks against Americans.

Thirteen injured U.S. servicemen and dependents, among the Americans wounded when the bomb exploded Saturday night, were airlifted Sunday to a U.S. base in West Germany for treatment, U.S. and Greek officials said.

Greek police said seven Greeks, a West German and an Ethiopian also were reported injured when a "powerful time bomb" went off under one of the tables at Bobby's, a bar in the seaside Athens suburb of Glyfada.

The bar is popular with many of the 1,500 U.S. Air Force personnel stationed at Hellenikon Air Base next to Athens Airport. The blast was the first reported terrorist attack on a facility frequented by U.S. military personnel in Greece.

An anonymous caller claiming to represent the "National Front" asserted responsibility for the blast in a call Sunday night to the Athens daily Eleftherotipa. He criticized the United States for the "continuing situation" on Cyprus, where Turkish troops occupy 33 percent of the island.

Some Greeks feel Washington has not done enough to pressure NATO ally Turkey into removing its troops from Cyprus, which Turkey invaded in 1974 following a coup by the Cypriot national guard, led by Greek army officers. Turkey claimed it was protecting the ethnic Turkish Cypriot minority against the Greek Cypriot majority.

The caller said the group would "strike again where Greeks and Americans frequent." The call was believed to be the first claim of terrorist activity by the "National Front."

Earlier, police searching the wrecked saloon found "traces of a timing device," showing the explosion was caused by a time bomb, said a police spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The bomb went off at 11:36 p.m. when about 200 people were packed into the bar.

"There was an ear-splitting blast, a cloud of smoke and the lights went out," bartender Yannis Kaptanis, 24, told The Associated Press.

The concussion collapsed part of the ceiling, smashed chairs and bar stools, blew the doors off their hinges and showered the street with glass. Some patrons, their clothes scorched, were trampled in the rush to get out.

A spokeswoman at the Hellenikon base said 32 Americans, the Ethiopian and a Greek were released after treatment at the base hospital.

Thirteen servicemen and dependents were airlifted to Ramstein Air Base in West Germany and taken to the nearby U.S. Army hospital in Landstuhl, a hospital spokesman said.

One victim was in "very serious" condition, seven were in "satisfactory" condition and five appeared to be out of danger, a spokesman for the Army's 7th Medical Command said.

The spokesman, who declined to be identified, said most of the 13 were treated for burns.

A spokesman at Hygeia Hospital identified four of the injured Americans as Charles Curmutt, 23, and his wife Carla, 20, who were burned; Mark Kromer, and Attile Downing, 21, of Fayetteville, N.C.

Two women, Celeste Smith, a policewoman assigned to the Air Force's 7206th Support Group stationed at the base, and Brenda Burg, 30, wife of a U.S. serviceman, underwent surgery to remove fragments from their legs, officials at the clinic said.

Unabated weapons buildup proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today sends Congress a $313.7 billion defense budget that continues full-scale procurement of major weapons systems such as the MX missile and B-1 bomber, boosts research spending on "Star Wars" projects and increases the size of the armed services.

The fiscal 1986 spending plan also reflects the administration's continuing emphasis on modernizing conventional forces — although the number of planes and ships to be bought has been reduced compared to last year's projections — and contains funds for defensive biological weapons and a military pay boost.

Presenting the proposed budget to the Senate Armed Services Committee today, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger cautioned against cuts by Congress.

Because of a well-publicized fight within the administration two months ago, the gross totals for the Pentagon's fiscal 1986 spending plan have been known for some time. The Reagan budget asks Congress to authorize programs totaling $313.7 billion during the 12 months starting Oct. 1.

More than 38 percent of next year's spending total, or $106.2 billion, is for programs that were authorized in previous years. That reflects the huge defense buildup initiated by Reagan four years ago.

According to long-range forecasts included in the 1986 budget, the Defense Department expects its spending to climb even more over the next five years, rising to $354 billion in fiscal 1987 and to $477.7 billion by fiscal 1990.

While Weinberger's annual report to Congress spoke glowingly of the improvements to be made next year in conventional forces and readiness levels, it is the president's so-called strategic modernization program that receives the highest budget priority.

For example, the plan calls for the procurement of 48 more MX missiles, at a cost of $4.04 billion, and completing the planned acquisition of 100 of the 10-warhead nuclear weapons.

The 1986 spending plan also calls for $6.2 billion to acquire the last 48 B-1B bombers, bringing the total acquired to 100.

Further, the budget asks for $1.7 billion to acquire a 13th Trident missile-firing submarine, as well as another $2.86 billion to continue research and development of a larger, more accurate Trident 2 missile.

The budget calls for a major increase — from $1.4 billion to $3.7 billion — in research money for Star Wars and other futuristic weapons programs. Star Wars research is aimed at developing a strategic defense system in space that could shoot down Soviet missiles.

As for conventional forces, the new budget provides for:

—An increase in uniformed and civilian personnel. Active duty forces would rise by 25,600 to 2.178 million, while civilian employment would rise by 19,000 positions to 1.107 million. Civilian employees would face a government-wide 5 percent pay cut, but active duty personnel would receive a 3 percent pay raise in July before facing a freeze through 1986.

—The start of production of modern chemical weapons for the Army. A total of $161.9 million is earmarked for a "retaliatory stockpile" of modern chemical weapons, most of it for binary-gas artillery rounds.

—Purchase of 840 M-1 tanks, 716 Bradley Fighting Vehicles and 325 M-113 armored personnel carriers.

—Purchase of 22 ships for the Navy besides the new Trident submarine. Included are four new attack submarines and 3 Aegis guided-missile cruisers. Advance funds are being sought to begin the reactivation of the battleship Wisconsin.

—Purchase of 48 F-15 and 180 F-16 jet fighters for the Air Force, along with 18 F-14, 84 F-A-18 and 46 AV-8B jets for the Navy and Marines.

SMU, Arkansas meet in another showdown

By DENNEH FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - The fourth-ranked Southern Methodist Mustangs take a two-game Southwest Conference lead into their showdown with the Arkansas Razorbacks in Fayetteville on Wednesday night.

"We're looking forward to going to Arkansas because we've always played pretty well in Barnhill and it ought to be a great game," said Mustang center Jon Koncak, who scored 22 points, blocked 5 shots and collected 9 rebounds in a 68-52 victory over Rice on Sunday.

SMU may have played well there recently but SMU hasn't won at Arkansas since 1976.

The Mustangs hold a two-game lead over Arkansas and Texas A&M, who are tied for second in the SWC standings.

Arkansas fell 56-39 to Georgetown on Sunday while Houston lost 77-76 to Illinois in another intersectional game.

Rice did the only thing it could against SMU - slow the ball down - but it worked only a half.

Then the Mustangs pressed the Owls into mistakes and Koncak got hot.

"It was not a pretty game," said SMU Coach Dave Bliss. "Rice tested our patience by working on the 45-second clock. I don't think we got caught overlooking Rice. We did a good job defensively.

"We were just too impatient on offense."

Rice Coach Tommy Suits said the Owls had to try to lull SMU to sleep.

"We had to play slow and passively because it was our only chance against them," Suits said. "That was our only chance against them."

"The faster they play the better they are."

Bliss said it took the Mustangs a full 20 minutes to settle down.

"Sometimes we get going so hard that it just doesn't turn out right," Bliss said.

Koncak said, "It seems everybody really gets pumped up to play us. That's what happens when you're ranked as high as we are."

"Rice played awfully hard."

SMU increased its overall record to 18-2 and the Mustangs are 8-1 in the SWC.

The Owls, losing their seventh consecutive game, fell to 8-11 and 1-8.

SMU, leading by only a point at halftime, outscored Rice 18-2 to start the second half behind Koncak, the seven-foot Olympian, and Scott Johnson, who tied a season high with 14 points.

Rice's slowdown tactics worked perfectly in the first half as frustrated SMU led only 21-20.

The Owls worked down most of the 45-second clock before shooting. Freshman Jeff Crawford of Bardwell, Ky., making his first start, scored six straight baskets and a career-high 12 points for Rice in the first half.

Crawford was scoreless in the second half and Greg Hines came on to score 14 points to lead the Owls in scoring.

Bliss started Terry Williams in place of forward Larry Davis to experiment with a several defenses.

"We worked on the defenses Friday and Larry missed most of the work because he was getting new contact lenses," Bliss said. "Terry had worked on the defenses and Larry didn't."

Davis came off the bench to score 14 points including four slam dunks.

Suits said he will pick SMU over Arkansas in the game.

"I like SMU's chances," Suits said.

Michigan's Lewis scores against Houston

Controversy follows Lewis

Brisco-Hooks sets world standard

DALLAS (AP) - Valerie Brisco-Hooks still has that golden Olympic winning touch.

But Carl Lewis still has his problems being understood.

Brisco-Hooks, who won three gold medals for the United States in the 1984 Olympic Games at Los Angeles, served up some high drama in the fifth annual Dallas Times Herald Invitation Meet Saturday night.

She established a new world indoor best in the women's 440-yard run of 52.99 seconds.

Even more remarkable, she said she did it without practice.

"I was just too tired to work out," she said.

She added "I'm not in halfway shape yet and I'm still learning how to run the boards."

It was only her third week of indoor competition and she didn't even practice during the week.

The old world indoor best of 53.29 was set by American Lori McCauley in 1983.

Brisco-Hooks ran away from Romania's Olympian Christinana Cojocaru, who was second in 54.32.

Lewis gave a 60-second interview after winning the 60-yard dash.

Lewis ran a 6.10 time, well off his world best of 6.02 established at this meet in 1983.

"I felt I ran a good race and I feel I was well received by the crowd," said Lewis. "I'm flabbergasted by the continued media mistreatment. I don't feel very much respect for the media."

"Whether people like it or not I am what I am and I will continue to keep on truckin'."

Lewis never got specific about his complaint.

He had been booed at the Millrose Games after passing up some jumps and was late for a press conference in Dallas, which no media attended.

Sister Carol Lewis, who increased her American indoor best in the long jump, said her brother was upset by an article but she doesn't know who wrote it.

"It was very unfair," said Carol Lewis of the story. "Carl strained a groin muscle in the Millrose Games and that's why he didn't continue to compete. Nobody asked about that."

She said the media treatment of her brother "makes me want to laugh. It's amazing how people can write stories about Carl and not know anything about him."

Olympian Roger Kingdom clocked the third fastest time in the 60-yard indoor hurdles in 6.87 seconds.

The world best record is 6.82 by Renaldo Nehemiah which was set in Dallas in 1982. He also has run it in 6.84.

Kingdom was the Olympic gold medalist in the 110-meter hurdles. Greg Foster, the Olympic silver medalist, was a no-show because of Superstar competition in Florida.

Carol Lewis, who failed to win a medal in the Olympic Games, broke her own American indoor best in the long jump with an effort of 22-feet, 3-inches.

Lewis set the old record of 22-2-1-4 at this meet in 1984.

Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan, owner of the indoor mile world record, ran his first indoor two mile and won it in a meet record 8:20.84.

Flowering of Flutie may not be immediate

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The greening of Doug Flutie is set for Tuesday in Donald Trump's Fifth Avenue Tower, a magnificent glass and steel monument at an appropriately expensive Manhattan address.

It has taken more than a week to write the 40 to 50 page document which will serve as Flutie's $7 million contract. Two teams of attorneys from the city's most prestigious law firms have been involved day and night.

This is a Big Deal. Now, it naturally follows that if the New Jersey Generals and Trump are spending that kind of money on the little quarterback from Boston College, they expect immediate returns. The United States Football League, hungry for a flamboyant star with a grab-you-by-the-lapels style, is rooting for nothing less.

But the flowering of Flutie may take longer to accomplish than the greening did. Last month, quarterbacks Joe Namath and Roger Staubach were voted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Neither, it should be remembered, was an instant hit on the field.

Namath, for all his swaggering self-confidence and $427,000 contract, spent the first half dozen games of his professional career on the bench, watching less-glamorous Mike Taliaferro quarterback the New York Jets.

Staubach was in a revolving door situation at Dallas, sharing the job for a long time with Craig Morton while Coach Tom Landry, who felt strongly both ways, tried to make up his mind. The situation was much like the Cowboys' current Danny White-Gary Hogeboom affair. There was a time when Staubach and Morton even alternated from play to play.

Terry Bradshaw took the Pittsburgh Steelers to four Super Bowl championships but he wasn't quite an immediate hero, winning the job only after a difficult three-way quarterback struggle with Terry Hanratty and Joe Gilliam.

The day after Flutie signs with the Generals, Joe Montana will stop by New York to pick up his second Super Bowl MVP car from Sport Magazine. Like the other quarterbacks, Montana waited his turn with San Francisco, playing behind journeyman Steve DeBerg before staking his claim to the job.

So, stepping in cold is no simple task for a freshman passer. But that at these prices, that's exactly what Trump must expect of Flutie.

The USFL has to feel the same way. Flutie, whose stature was enhanced by his no-contest romp in the Heisman Trophy voting, is not only this year's top glamour guy in college football. He also is the only really big name guy who has chosen the young league so far this winter, a fact that warms the hearts of National Football League scouts.

After him, the best known players the USFL has enrolled from its January draft are Alabama running back Paul-Ott Carruth, signed by Birmingham, and Florida place-kicker Bobby Raymond, who went with Tampa Bay. And that's all.

So the faster New Jersey gets some production from Flutie, the better off the league will be.

The Generals reached the playoffs last year with NFL-dropout Brian Sipe, a $2.1 million Trump pickup, at quarterback. Coach Walt Michaels, perhaps more concerned with poise than publicity, did not press the Flutie pursuit. Trump, who builds towers, not bungalows, did.

For his part, the 35-year-old Sipe was bemused by the excitement the signing has created. "What happens is out of my hands," he said. "What better way to end a career than with a quarterback controversy in the media capital of the world?"

Trump, recognizing that his coaching credentials are somewhat slimmer than those of Michaels, does not suggest that the signing of Flutie carries with it a must-play order, especially with the more-experienced Sipe already on hand.

"There will be a competition," the owner said. "We'll just have to see. Brian and Doug are going to make that decision." And maybe even Walt will, too.

Carner dances to coax drive

Special win for O'Meara

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Mark O'Meara said there was a special value in his victory in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament.

"It shows that last year was not a freak of nature," O'Meara said Sunday after winning the event.

Last season O'Meara was universally regarded as the most improved player on the PGA Tour.

After playing three seasons without particular distinction, he put together one of the more enviable records in the game. He won once, was second five times, finished in the top 10 in 15 events, led the Tour in birdies and was second only to Tom Watson in money-winnings with $465,873.

With an early-season triumph to his credit this season, the sturdy 28-year-old appeared poised to make another run at the top rank of golf's leading performers.

"I'm becoming a good player," he said. "But there's a lot of room for improvement."

O'Meara had a chance to win this title a year ago. He had an 8-foot eagle putt on the 18th hole that would have won it. But the young man, in a position to win for the first time, 3-putted and eventually finished third.

This time it did not escape.

And it was his pressure putting on bumpy greens that turned the trick.

Leading by one and under a three-man attack, O'Meara had to drop a 6-foot putt to save par on the 15th. He missed the green and again faced a 6-footer for par on the 16th.

On the tough 17th, a par-3 jutting into Carmel Bay, he buried his tee shot in a bunker and came out long, 10-12 feet from the cup.

He needed that putt to save par and the lead.

A routine 2-putt par on the final hole finished off the round of 73, one over par on the rain-dampened Pebble Beach Links. The 283 total, 5-under, was good for a one-shot victory and a $90,000 first place check.

Curtis Strange missed on a 6-7 foot birdie putt on the final hole that would have tied it and forced a playoff.

Carner records a one-armed win

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — JoAnne Carner, after getting rubdowns, ultrasound treatment and pain-killers, showed why she's among the most feared golfers on the LPGA tour by whipping the competition one-armed.

Despite a pulled muscle in her left shoulder, Carner fired a 2-under-par 70 in the final round Sunday and coasted to a six-stroke victory in the $200,000 Elizabeth Arden Classic women's golf tournament, bumping defending champion Patty Sheehan and Jane Blalock, who took second place.

Carner, with a record-tying total of eight-under 280, picked up the winner's purse of $30,000. The 45-year-old Lake Worth, Fla., resident pulled the muscle Saturday, when she tried to hit a three-iron out of a fairway bunker. That made her hit an incredible 41 on the back nine in the third round.

"Playing with pain is no fun," Carner said. "I feel like I played 100 holes today. It's tough to get old."

Sheehan's 5-under 67 was the low score for the final round, while Blalock had a 1-under 71 on the 6,092-yard Turnberry Isle course.

Carner, who had won this LPGA event in 1982 and has 41 LPGA victories, felt assured of the title after No. 15 when Janet Coles triple-bogeyed the par-4 hole — although the champion bogeyed the hole herself.

Tied for third place at 287 were Lauri Rinker, after a closing round 69, and Coles and Alice Miller with 72s.

Debbie Austin, who finished far back in the pack with a 300, shot a hole-in-one at the par-3 third hole and took a 75 in the final round.

Shakeup helps Mavericks knock off division leaders

DALLAS (AP) — With his team struggling through one of its worst stretches of the season, Dallas Mavericks' Coach Dick Motta decided it was time for a shakeup.

He made some surprising lineup changes Sunday, inserting second year center Wallace Bryant into the starting lineup for the first time in his career and moving last year's top draft choice, Sam Perkins, back to his natural position of forward.

The result was a 114-106 win over the Midwest Division leading Denver Nuggets that snapped a two-game Maverick losing streak.

"I made the decision about a week ago but I've been thinking about it for a long time," said Motta, whose team had lost six of nine games coming into the Denver game.

The key change appeared to be moving Perkins, the 6-foot-9½ rookie, from center to forward, and starting him ahead of Jay Vincent. Perkins responded with a career high 16 rebounds and 18 points, while Vincent had 24 points and 13 rebounds coming off the bench.

"It was a surprise to all of us," said Perkins, who hit seven of 11 shots including a stuff and a free throw with 4:53 left that gave Dallas, 25-23, a 99-95 lead they never lost.

"We were in a slump and starting some of our games kind of sluggish," said Perkins, who opened the game with seven rebounds and seven points in the first quarter.

He said the move to forward, the position at which he starred at North Carolina was a welcome one.

"It lets me roam more freely, facing the basket," said Perkins.

Denver, losing its second straight after winning eight in a row, got 20 points from Alex English. But the Nuggets, 30-19, who lead the National Basketball Association in scoring, went cold in the fourth quarter, hitting only six of 18 shots.

"When we started to miss from the outside, it really hurt us," said guard Bill Handlik. "I guess it's like they say, 'you live by the jumper, you die by the jumper.'"

Motta said he will stay with the new lineup for at least a few games, although that puts Vincent, who averages 18.5 points and a team-leading 10.3 rebounds a game, into a reserve role.

John Stallworth considers retirement

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Wide receiver John Stallworth says he may retire from the Pittsburgh Steelers despite enjoying his finest pro football season in 1984.

"I may have played my last game for the Steelers," Stallworth said Sunday before being honored as the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette Dapper Dan Club's man of the year for 1984.

He made the announcement from his Huntsville, Ala., home because weather conditions prevented him from attending the annual sports award dinner.

Stallworth, 32, recovered from a pair of injury-filled seasons to catch 80 passes for 1,395 yards and 11 touchdowns during the National Football League season and was named to the American Conference Pro Bowl team.

Stallworth told the Post-Gazette he will make a retirement decision before the Steelers' mini-camp in May.

Report on AIDS: status report

NEW YORK (AP) — Science has made a remarkably rapid advance toward understanding AIDS, raising hopes that the deadly and mysterious disease will be conquered, researchers say.

The work has become more urgent each day. It's estimated that as many as 300,000 people have been infected, and one researcher expects 40,000 new cases in the next two years.

On Thursday, researchers at the National Cancer Institute and Massachusetts General Hospital announced that they had found an antibody that neutralized the retrovirus believed to cause AIDS — an encouraging step in the search for a vaccine.

"There has been more progress with this virus than with any other retrovirus in a short period of time," said Dr. James Curran, director of AIDS activities at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Retroviruses, types of viruses which have been known for some time to cause cancer and other illnesses in animals, have only recently become appreciated as important causes of disease in man.

Last year, researchers at the National Cancer Institute and the Pasteur Institute in Paris reported independently that they had found retroviruses that appeared to cause acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS.

Now, said Curran, "AIDS is reasonably well understood. The virus has been discovered, and progress in understanding the mechanism of the virus and the genetic code of the virus is proceeding very rapidly."

In recent weeks, advances reported include:

— A chemical used in many spermicide creams and gels on the market can kill the AIDS virus in the laboratory.

— Researchers have identified the exact spot where the AIDS virus latches on to certain white blood cells of the immune system, thus weakening the body's defenses against disease.

87-year-old hunter still serving up raccoon

DELAFIELD, Wis. (AP) — Tom McNulty and his raccoon-hunting buddies first started getting together to share the fruits of their hunt in 1926. What began as a small private gathering is now the biggest social event of the year in this village of about 4,000 people.

About 450 people — many who traveled 25 miles from Milwaukee and some from as far away as Peoria, Ill. — jammed the American Legion Post on Saturday for Tom McNulty's 59th Annual Coon Feed.

"When we started, there were just eight of us and our wives," said McNulty, an 87-year-old World War I veteran who not only dishes up the roasted meat but helps a handful of friends hunt the necessary 90 raccoons.

Half-an-hour before the feed was to begin, dozens of people had stomped the snow from their boots and were hungrily eyeing the steaming trays of raccoon, so the white-haired, blue-eyed McNulty, the only one left of the original group, began serving.

The Rev. Boone Porter, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in nearby North Lake, and David Mertens, 26, who's been hunting with McNulty since he was seven years old, dished up stuffing, sauerkraut and mashed potatoes with gravy.

Within 30 minutes, 'coon eaters sat at folding tables, elbow-to-elbow and chairback-to-chairback, and a line stretched around the hall and outside into near zero-degree temperatures.

The meat is chopped into pieces and roasted for eight hours with carrots, celery, onion and garlic, but McNulty refuses to divulge the exact mix of seasonings.

Names in News

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor says she took sleeping pills two at a time for 35 years and mixed the painkiller Percodan with alcohol before family and friends finally convinced her to enter a rehabilitation program.

Miss Taylor spent seven weeks in the Betty Ford Center, a drug and alcohol rehabilitation facility near Palm Springs, Calif., where actresses Liza Minnelli, Mary Tyler Moore and country singer Johnny Cash also have gone. The center was named for the former first lady, who has also undergone treatment.

In an interview in today's New York Times, Miss Taylor, 52, said she entered the center after members of her family and actor Roddy McDowall visited her in a hospital.

"Then they sat down and each read from papers they had prepared, each saying they loved me, each describing incidents they'd witnessed of my debilitation, and each saying that if I kept on the way I was with drugs, I would die," she said.

The actress said she had taken sleeping pills — at least two at a time in order to sleep — for 35 years, and "I was taking a lot of Percodan. I'd take Percodan and a couple of drinks before I would go out. I just felt I had to get stoned to get over my shyness. I needed oblivion, escape."

Miss Taylor also told the Times that she had just decided to break off her engagement to Dennis Steff, who would have become her eighth husband. The paper did not elaborate on the reported breakup.

BOSTON (AP) — Some critics say Garry Trudeau's Pulitzer Prize-winning comic strip "Donesbury" has gotten too big for the funny pages, and now some editors agree.

Universal Press Syndicate, which distributes the strip, has pulled it from at least three newspapers that refused to run it at the 44-pica width — about 7 1/3 inches — Trudeau wants.

The newspapers, The Standard-Times of New Bedford, The Daily Transcript of Dedham and the Central Maine Morning Sentinel of Waterville, Maine, want to use the strip at the industry standard of 39 picas — a difference of about five-sixths of an inch.

"No foreign force shall intrude on what I publish or how I publish it," said James Ragsdale, editor of the Standard-Times, which will stop getting the comic on April 1. "What troubles me is why the newspaper industry has taken this so quietly. We've fought for our freedom for a long time and now we've been cowed by Garry Trudeau."

When the syndicate canceled "Donesbury" in the Waterville paper, general manager Bob Moorehead countered by dropping all other features his paper took from the distributor, including Dear Abby and the "Herman" cartoon.

Trudeau said last year that he was acting as the champion of cartoonists, who he said had been helpless in protecting their work against lessened readability and impact resulting from smaller display.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rocker David Lee Roth, stepping out on his own to produce a mini-LP without the rest of Van Halen, says he "always wanted to be exactly what I am now — Al Jolson for the '80s."

The new disc, "Crazy from the Heat," features sendups of pop standards "Easy Street," "Just a Gigolo," "Coconut Grove," and the Beach Boys' "California Girls."

"These were songs I grew up listening to, and now, hey, I get to pretend I am a Beach Boy or Louis Prima," Roth, 29, says in the current issue of People magazine.

BOSTON (AP) — New York Mets

RON DARLING

pitcher Ron Darling, one of 71 Massachusetts residents named in a federal complaint for unpaid student loans, says that no one told him he was in default and he "wasn't trying to duck anything."

The complaint, filed Friday by U.S. Attorney William Weld, seeks $223,000 in unpaid federal loans. Darling, 24, of Millbury, owes $4,951 that he used to get through Yale University, it says.

Darling, a 12-9 rookie last year who received a reported $100,000 for signing with the Mets, said by telephone from Virginia that he would take care of the overdue loan today.

"I wish I had been notified personally instead of through the media," he said. "I don't appreciate the fact that someone is trying to make a name for himself at my expense."

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret, who underwent lung surgery last month, looked fit and relaxed as she boarded a British Airways flight to Barbados for a holiday on the Caribbean island of Mustique.

Margaret, the 54-year-old younger sister of Queen Elizabeth II, left Heathrow airport on Sunday.

The princess, who has a history of bronchial illness attributed to her heavy smoking, had some lung tissue removed at London's Brompton Hospital Jan. 6 but no malignancy was found, doctors said.

News in brief

CHICAGO (AP) — Two men charged with murder and arson for profit and held on $1 million bail apiece had an accomplice who may have fled to Korea after a blaze that killed three firefighters, authorities say.

Suk J. Kim, 36, of Skokie, and Jang Han Bae, 35, were charged Saturday with three counts of murder and one of arson in the Friday fire. Cook County Judge James Meehan reduced bond Sunday for both men from $5 million.

Bae, of Streamwood, owned Vicstar Electronics, which was housed in the building that collapsed during the fire, killing the three firefighters and injuring a fourth, said Detective Lawrence Poli.

NEW YORK (AP) — Medical Examiner Dr. Elliot Gross has accused his predecessor of "conducting a malicious campaign of slander" that led to allegations Gross participated in a cover-up involving autopsy reports.

Reagan suggests 15 percent cut in spending by USDA

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department spending would drop by 15 percent in the 1986 fiscal year, mainly through huge cutbacks in farm commodity programs, under the budget President Reagan proposed today. Overall, the department's spending for the year beginning Oct. 1 would be reduced to $38.5 billion from a near-record $45.1 billion estimated for 1984-85. The budget for the department's Commodity Credit Corp., which finances price support operations for major crops such as wheat, corn and cotton, along with dairy supports and others, would account for $4.5 billion of the $6.6 billion in

USDA cuts. Other big reductions would include cutbacks in soil and water conservation, rural electric and telephone financing, rural housing and community development, overseas food aid and some child nutrition programs. Although much of the cutback in commodity programs will be handled under present authority — no payments for idling land are expected in 1986, for example — some of the Reagan blueprint will require new legislation or at least a tacit nod from Capitol Hill. In this area would be the virtual elimination of some long-standing programs. One of the administration's main targets is the basic apparatus under which federal price supports are carried out. This includes "loan" rates, which tell farmers how much they can borrow from USDA by using their crops as collateral, and "target" prices, which are goals used to compute federal subsidies when market prices fall below the targets. Another of Reagan's pet peeves has been the practice of paying farmers cash "diversion" payments for taking part of their land from production when surpluses develop. If the current farm programs are not changed, the budget report said, commodity spending could total $73 billion in the 1986-89 period.

Reagan proposes $425 million increase in civilian space budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, proposing a $425 million increase in the nation's civilian space budget, is earmarking $25 million for development of an "Orbital Maneuvering Vehicle" to be parked in space, ready to retrieve satellites for repair. Reagan's budget proposal of $7 billion for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration also calls for increasing the design funds for a 1990s space station to $230 million — $75 million more than last year, but not as much as NASA asked.

For space flight, Reagan is requesting about $4 billion, which provides for an increase in shuttle missions from 10 in the 1985 fiscal year, to 13 or 14 in the 1986 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. Science programs would receive more than $600 million.

NASA did not get all it wanted in the budget proposal presented today. An aeronautics research program on using composite materials in aircraft structure would be terminated if Congress accepts the budget. The agency would spend $83 million less by cutting its administrative operations.

And two proposed science projects were dropped: $20 million for work on an ocean-observing satellite called Topex, and $12 million on an experiment called a gravity probe, which would have tested Einstein's theory on measuring gravity deviations.

The only new start was $25 million to begin development on an orbital maneuvering vehicle that could be carried up in the space shuttle, capture a satellite some distance away, and bring it back to the shuttle's cargo bay for repair or return to Earth.

The vehicle, which would be guided from the shuttle or the space station, could also be used to boost satellites to higher orbits. It is expected, eventually, to cost $375 million.

NASA, which at one point wanted a fifth orbiter to join its shuttle fleet, will have to settle for $120 million for structural spares that might avoid some of the parts swapping that goes on between ships when something goes wrong.

Currently, NASA is down to one operating shuttle, Discovery. Columbia is in the shop for modernizing, Challenger is undergoing extensive tile repair, and Atlantis is not yet off the assembly line.

The budget proposes another $850 million in the shuttle production category, much of it for engines that don't need overhauls or new parts as often.

Another big item in the budget proposal is $800 million for spacecraft tracking.

Health, welfare programs are facing freezes or cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health and welfare programs — including Medicare, food and drug safety, health research and disease control — face spending freezes or cuts under President Reagan's 1986 budget.

The budget, sent to Congress today, also calls for a cap on Medicaid payments to the states for health services to the poor, a change the administration says will save $16.6 billion over the next five years.

The administration allowed for a 4.1 percent cost-of-living increase next January for recipients of Social Security and Supplemental Security Income, the federal assistance program for the very poor, although the actual amount will depend on inflation over the next year.

Medicare payments to hospitals and physicians, to pay for medical care for the elderly and disabled, would be frozen at current levels. The administration says that would save $2.3 billion from projected cost increases.

And recipients would face an increase in Medicare Part B insurance premiums, which pay for doctors' bills. The premiums will increase $1.30 per month next year over the current $15.50 and continue to rise for the next five years.

The budget also proposes a cap on Medicaid expenditures at $22.2 billion, an increase of $400 million over 1985 but a reduction of $1.3 billion from current 1986 cost estimates for the medical insurance program for the poor.

It would begin a six-year staff reduction within the Social Security Administration that would cut the federal payroll by 17,000 people by 1990, leaving the agency staff at 62,945.

The budget also calls for freezes in programs of the Food and Drug Administration; a $287 million reduction in spending by the National Institutes of Health, most of it in cuts for research grants.

Federal pay cut won't affect the president, Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — To help ease the blow of his proposed budget cuts, President Reagan and Republican congressional leaders said in December they would be willing to lead the way by taking a 10 percent cut. But no pay cuts for them show up in the administration's fiscal 1986 spending proposals released today.

Now that Reagan is in his second term, his personal offer to help slash government spending can't be fulfilled. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said administration officials discovered it is unconstitutional to diminish or increase the compensation given the president during his elected term of office.

Yet the budget does not include the proposal discussed for paring 10 percent from the paychecks of other top government officials.

"Nobody ever stood up" to volunteer for the pay-cut plunge, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said.

The budget, however, does include a 5 percent pay cut for federal workers as a means of gleaning $1.6 billion in savings.

The cut, as proposed, would not affect uniformed members of the military.

The pay-cut plan was discussed at a Dec. 6 White House meeting between Reagan and the GOP congressional leadership as a means of bolstering support for the administration's $40 billion in spending cuts.
