PROTEST DEATH—A 22-year-old student at Seoul, South Korea's National University falls to his death in flames Tuesday. The young man set fire to himself and jumped from the fourth floor of a campus building during an anti-government protest demonstration. He is the third student to attempt suicide by burning himself in the last three week. (AP Laserphoto)

Former prisoner sues Gray County, sheriff

BY PAUL PINKHAM Staff Writer

A former Pampa Police Department dispatcher has sued Gray County and Sheriff Rufe Jordan, claiming the sheriff held him in jail after he was able to post bond and ordered him to leave town upon his release.

John Thorp, 43, Perryton, is seeking $150,000 in compensatory damages and $150,000 in punitive damages in a suit filed in U.S. District Court in Amarillo on Tuesday. The suit claims the sheriff's alleged action caused Thorp and his wife Linda emotional and financial distress, lost wages and medical and psychological expenses, the Thorps' attorney, Betty Wheeler of Amarillo, said this morning

Wheeler said Thorp was arrested May 21, 1984, on a felony assault charge involving an alleged shooting incident with a neighbor. Gray County District Court records show the case was dismissed Nov. 30, 1984, after 223rd District Judge Don Cain ruled that the speedy trial time limit had run out.

The Thorps' suit alleges Thorp was held after his wife was "prepared and able to post bond." Wheeler said. She added this was done "for the purpose of allowing him (Jordan) to issue his direc-

leased from jail until he agreed to leave Gray County

"Not since the days of the Wild West have people been permitted to be punished by those acting under the color of the law" before receiving a fair trial, Wheeler said. "John Thorp was never convicted of the charge on which he was arrested.

Thorp is only permitted in Gray County under special permission from the sheriff, Wheeler charged.

The attorney also alleged that Thorp was denied medication he had been taking for chronic headaches and low blood sugar, that he was fed only once in a more than 24-hour period and that his wife was denied her right to association in that she could remain in Gray County only if separated from her husband.

Wheeler said Thorp lost his business. Thorp's Vacuum Center, operated out of the couple's home at 1236 S. Farley, just outside the city limits, and Mrs. Thorp lost her job in Pampa when the couple moved to Perryton.

The suit also requests attorney's fees and a jury trial. Wheeler said Gray County is included in the suit because Jordan was acting in his capacity as a county tive that (Thorp) would not be re- employee at the time of Thorp's incarceration.

Thorp had worked for the Pampa Police Department as a dispatcher but quit several years ago, a police spokesman said. The spokesman could not recall the dates of Thorp's employ Jordan denied the allegations in the suit. He said county jail records show Thorp was released after his bond was reduced from $10,000 to $5,000 and Ferguson Bonding Co. made bond.

'I can't understand his contention that I wouldn't let him make bond," the sheriff said.

Jordan also said jail inmates are fed three times daily.

"It's just another suit." he said. "If they can't think of anything else to do, you know, they

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said he was served with a copy of the suit by mail this morning and had read it over. He declined to comment on the merits of the suit but said the allegations will be forwarded to the county's insurance company, which will appoint an attorney to represent the county

Wheeler said the federal court in Amarillo is currently hearing cases filed about 18 months ago. She estimated the case may not go to trial for at least a year.

Senate delays veto override vote

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan has finally vetoed a congressional resolution block ing a $354 million missile sale to Saudi Arabia, and Senate opponents delayed an override vote when they realized they couldn't defeat the White House

The veto was received late Wednesday afternoon, only minutes before the Senate adjourned for a Memorial Day recess. Had Reagan not delivered the veto by midnight Wednesday. the sale would have been halted because the disapproval resolution passed by Congress would have automatically become law.

In his veto message, Reagan said blocking the sale would "damage our vital strategic, political and economic interests in the Middle East" and also would 'undermine our balanced policy in that region.

The attempt by opponents of the sale to override the veto will be made after the Senate convenes again June 2

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., leader of the opposition, told his colleagues shortly before adjournment, "We would lose today. I have no idea how the vote will come out in June, but we will work to win.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., a supporter of the sale, agreed with Cranston's view, saying, "I believe we have the votes to sustain the veto and uphold the president's position.

But Dole said the override attempt was put off because opponents would have filibustered. Senate rules permit unlimited debate and make it difficult to muster the votes to cut off a filibuster.

Cranston and Dole agreed Reagan had picked up votes in his fight to win approval of the arms deal, but Cranston said his side faced defeat only because six opponents had already left Washington for the recess.

'We would lose because six people are absent, five of whom voted against the sale last time. The sixth would have voted with us," said Cranston, "None of the Texas church home prepares

AUSTIN (AP) - Supporters of an unlicensed Tarrant County church home are preparing for a showdown with state officials who have a court order requiring the home to be closed

We are going to go back and occupy our buildings. We are going to bring in forces there, people to come in to help us. Preachers will be coming in. We are just going to go up there and dig in," said W.N. Otwell, director of the Community Baptist Church's Boys Home in Forest Hill, near Fort Worth

"If we have to, we'll fence it. We'll put up some big fences so that they'll have to come through the gates." Otwell said Wednesday after meeting with Gov. Mark White.

State District Judge Paul Davis of Austin on March 31 ordered the home closed because school officials, citing religious grounds, refused to get a required state license. Davis also ordered $100-a-day fines for the officials who are keeping the home opened.

Elna Christopher, a spokeswoman for Attorney General Jim Mattox, said Wednesday there was no way to know when the court order would be enforced

Otwell and his supporters have refused to pay the fines, and have decided not to appeal Davis' order. They came to Austin last week to take their case to state officials and have been here ever since. They headed back to Fort Worth Wednesday after the hour-long, closed-door meeting with White at the Capitol "We were hoping that Gov. White would make a commitment to back the troops off until the 1987 Legislature meets so they could amend the 1975 Child Care Act, but he made no commitment," Otwell said.

White said he told Otwell the governor could not interfere with court orders. "I am a Baptist and a strong believer in the separation of church and state, and I would not permit for a moment any agency of this state to interfere with anyone's practice of religion," he said.

'Texas can't be our boss. God is our boss.'' Otwell said, adding that Texas will be punished for interfering with the church

"I think Texas is going to enter into some hard times. When you start oppressing church ministries and God's people, then you're in trouble. The Bible teaches that.

"Texas will pay if they oppress God's people. They'll pay dearly. God knows how to do that through different types of tragedies that God works out himself. Man has nothing to do with it. The oil situation, drought, unemployment, bad economy. You know what I'm saying. God has a way to chasten the state and bring judgment on the state," Otwell

Community pep rally aimed at showing Canadian CAN

CANADIAN - Communities usually don't hold pep rallies unless there's a football game coming up, but Canadian CAN.

The Canadian CAN rally, set for 6 p.m. Friday at the football stadium will feature the same things as other pep rallies, rousing songs performed by the high school and middle school bands and inspirational speeches. But the team being is not made up of football or basketball players. They're local merchants, businessmen and city officials

'We're holding the rally to get people enthusiastic about Canadian," said Chamber of Commerce Manager Diane Black, who added that the town needs an uplift during dropping of the oilbased area economy

Former Cleveland Indians infielder Mike Hargrove, a Perryton native, is scheduled to speak at the rally, which will be sponsored by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. A graduate of Northwestern Oklahoma State University in Alva, he was drafted in 1972 by the Texas Rangers and was named Rookie of the Year in 1974. After five years with the Rangers, he was traded to Cleveland

Other speakers include the Rev. Lewis Holland, pastor of First United Methodist Church, retired businessman Tom Abraham, Canadian Record Editor Ben Ezzell and Canadian Middle School Principal Marlon Marcum.

Just about everyone is getting into the act. A local golf course will provide golf carts to transport older and handicapped residents from the parking lot to the field. The Canadian High School and Middle School bands will perform, as will Canadian High School sophomore Amy Hester, who qualified for state in vocal music. Beef Brisket sandwiches, drinks and desserts will be served. A dance, featuring the River City Boys, will follow the

Republicans defect in droves on trade issue

House dealt a sharp blow to the Reagan administration in skirnishing on the trade issue as ozens of Republicans backed Democratic legislation calling for get-tough measures.

"There is a bipartisan majority in the House that does not adhere to the administration line that we must lie prostrate before international competitors," Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-Ohio, declared Wednesday after the House repeatedly refused to delete key provisions of the bill.

At one point, 98 Republicans de-

> A move to delete those features was buried 338-79 as GOP lawmakers from textile states of the South and the Northeast-Midwest industrial region parted company with both their administration and export-minded Farm Belt colleagues.

"This is the opening cannon shot in a new trade war," declared Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn. He echoed the administration's warning that the get-tough measures were guaranteed to bring on retaliation against American exports.

Still to come is a vote on final passage of the measure as well as a handful of amendments, including a rival Republican version. There is little doubt that Democrats, who control the House by a 130-vote margin, will win approval before the House goes on a 10-day Memorial Day recess. The main question has been how many Republicans would support the measure, which is likely to be substantially altered in the GOP-controlled Senate. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., told reporters Wednesday the measure is "viewed with alarm" and described is as "a totally political package.

"They don't know what bipartisanship is over on the House side," Dole said

House Republicans have been deploring partisanship in the debate and attempting to paint the bill, the first broad trade mea-

Both the House and Senate voted against the sale by overwhelming margins two weeks ago, but Reagan promised to veto the disapproval resolution and the sale goes ahead unless each chamber overrides his veto by a

Veto messenger had to wait as arms sale debate raged

WASHINGTON (AP) — For more than three hours, Tim Saunders remained quietly in the back of the Senate chamber, the silent center of a political storm involving the White House and Con-

In his hands, the 30-year-old White House messenger was holding President Reagan's veto of a congressional resolution halting his proposal to sell missiles to Saudi Arabia.

Congress has never before blocked a foreign arms deal, but both the House and Senate had voted by overwhelming majorities to halt the sale. Reagan promised a veto, and opponents of the sale likewise promised to try to override that veto.

Both sides agreed only that the fight in the Republicancontrolled Senate was close, and two deadlines approached Wednesday — Reagan had to veto the disapproval resolution by midnight or the sale would have been legally blocked, and the Senate was preparing to leave for a Memorial Day recess.

Saunders, who has spent six years as a White House messenger, was given the veto message in a large manila envelope and sent to Capitol Hill.

But once he entered the Senate chamber about 3:15 p.m., he stopped. Although Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., knew Saunders carried the veto message, he declined to have the Senate accept the document.

That is because under Senate rules, once the veto was formally given to the Senate, it automatically would move to the top of the agenda and the override attempt could be called up by any of the 100 senators.

So Saunders waited while Dole and White House supporters tried to line up votes for Reagan and opponents such as Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., sought to hold opponents in line.

Saunders, wearing the standard Washington male uniform of gray suit, white button-down shirt and red tie, spent more than three hours in the back of the Senate chamber.

Mostly he stood, leaning against the wall without speaking to anyone. Occasionally, he sat down in one of the large couches in the corner

Often, Dole passed by, declining to acknowledge Saunders' presence. At one point during the afternoon, Dole was asked by reporters about the messenger. Dole quipped: "I think he's out Outside the chamber, Saunders was reticent to talk to reporters. He referred them to White House spokesman Larry Speakes and repeated several times, "Larry Speakes is the White House spokesman.'

But when asked if he got tired or had to use a men's room during the wait, Saunders smiled and said, "I'm a patient man."

American currently is negotiating with the Allied Pilots Association and is supposed to negotiate later this year with the Association of Professiona Flight Attendants. The company's position is that new contracts must include so-called market rates for new hires rates similar to those paid employees on discount airlines.

Three years ago American negotiated "two-tier" contracts with all its unions that allowed it to pay new employees less than existing employees. The pilots and especially the flight attendants have said they want to get rid of the two-tier pay system.

'I think there's still an appropriate place for unions today," Crandall said. "But I do not think it makes any sense for any union in any industry to impose on an employer a wages and benefits structure which it cannot pay and continue to be competitive in the long term."

Insurance industry accused of waging propaganda war

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says insurance companies are waging a propaganda war against the civil justice system, but an industry spokesman says they are only calling attention to a serious problem.

Mattox said the industry is spending $6.5 million to try to convince the public something is wrong with civil justice as a bid to raise commercial liability insurance rates.

The ad campaign "is nothing but psychological warfare against the public. It is an insidious and well-orchestrated propaganda campaign playing on the fears of people about their churches, schools and families,'

He also said he hopes the State Board of Insurance will look into the ad campaign as part of its investigation of the commercial liability insurance situation.

Wake up, Paul Harvey!

I've been a sporadic listener, if not always an admirer, of Paul

Examiners tells why Hereford S&L investigation was launched

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The shaky financial condition of a Hereford savings association prompted federal officials to launch a major investigation into its operations in early 1983, a former Federal Home Loan Bank Board examiner testified during a fraud conspiracy trial.

The bank board decided to pore over the books of Hi-Plains Savings and Loan after a preliminary investigation revealed it had accepted time-share paper as collateral for transfers of large sums of money to a Dallas business, Charles S. Taylor testified Wednesday during the second day of a criminal trial in U.S. District Court in Amarillo

Taylor said the in-depth investigation that began in January 1983 revealed the S&L had violated federal regulations on at least two occasions in transactions involving the two men who are standing trial on charges of fraud conspiracy and misapplication of millions of dollars.

According to previous testimony, James Gentry, chief executive officer of the S&L in January 1983, ordered other association officials to transfer large sums of money to accounts controlled by W.W. "Doc" Taylor, on W.W. Taylor's promise to re-pay the association with time-share

W.W. Taylor and Gentry were charged in a Jan. 8 federal indictment returned here with conspiring to defraud Hi-Plains of money for their own "personal benefit Gentry, acting as W.W. Taylor's representative, became a member of the S&L's board of directors on Dec. 13, 1982, the indictment states.

He then misapplied $3.8 million of the institution's funds by causing the money to be transferred by wire into accounts of Southwest Mortgage Service Corp. of Dallas, a company controlled by W.W. Taylor, the indictment

W. W. Taylor, 59, of the Dallassuburb of Farmer's Branch, is charged with one conspiracy count and five counts alleging he aided and abetted Gentry in the misapplication.

Smith said Dr. Howard Mitchell, a veterinarian in Bristow, is administering the therapy in which needles are inserted into body tissue to relieve pain. Smith said there is evidence that swelling in the area of the bull's injury has gone down.

Smith said the bull does not lie down like most sickly animals.

"He maintains himself very well" in spite of paralysis in his hind legs. Smith said. He said during the acupuncture therapy, the bull is supported by a sling.

Smith said he does not know how long the bull will require treatment at Bristow, and he said he does not know how much the therapy will cost.

"There's not even any concern for how much it costs," he said. The bull came to Oklahoma for treatment because there apparently are no veterinaryacupuncturists south of the Red Riv-

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Another mystery for man to unravel

"The universe is not only weirder that we imagine it's weirder than we can imagine." We were reminded of the these words by J.B.S. Haldane upon hearing the other day of the discovery of a new mystery in space — an invisible but incredibly powerful source of gravity that appears to defy conventional explanations.

In a universe already populated with oddities of one sort or another — quasars, quarks and black holes to name just a few — is something that astronomers believe may be the most massive of all known objects. It's apparently so big that it contains about a thousand trillion times the mass of the sun, or 1,000 to 10,000 times the mass of the entire Milky Way.

The theorists are having a field day. Not since the discovery of quasars 23 years ago has a cosmic phenomenon generated so much excitement among astronomers. In fact, quasars — starlike objects that can produce massive amounts of light and other radiation

- had a lot to do with this latest discovery.

The tip-off came in studies of what appeared to be a pair of quasars whose light profiles — sort of celestial fingerprints — were astonishinly similar. But, the experts say, a single quasar could appear as two quasars if a massive object between it and earth acted as a lens, bending the quasar's light so that duplicate images are seen from earth.

Whatever it is, the astronomers are going to have a lot of fun trying to explain it. And why not? Curiosity is one of the more endearing qualities of the human species. We love mysteries, if for nothing else but the challenge of explaining them. And when we do, we add another piece of information to our store of knowledge, using it to confirm earlier theories or to rearrange pieces of the cosmic puzzle. Each new discovery inspires a renewed quest for answers to even greater

Back in the 13th century, the king of Castile, one Alfonso the Wise, declared that, "Had I been present reation, I would have given some use for the better ordering of the universe." If he had simplification in mind, the king was as unwise as he was presumptious. What intellectual challenges would we humans have to look forward to if the universe were as easily explainable as a child's toy.

It may be years before the scientists find the answer to this latest enigma. In the meantime, the rest of us are free to let our imaginations run wild as we gaze at the heavens. Maybe that thing up there is a giant planet whose inhabitants have discovered the secret of invisibility. Sounds fanciful? Maybe. But remember the notion that the earth is round would have sounded equally fantastic to Alfonso the Wise and his contem-

What makes a genuine hero?

BY BUTLER SHAFFER

I have never been one to engage in heroworship. It's not that I haven't observed many men and women whose conduct I greatly admired; it is only that hero-worship leads one to externalize qualities of courage, integrity, and principle, rather than recognizing them as being within one's own person.

When we admire the courageous stance taken by another, we tend to forget that our admiration reflects those same qualities within us; we would not, in other words, admire these "heroes" if they did not strike a responsive chord, a resonance, within our own personali-

Still, I do find myself moved by what can be called heroic acts, particularly those actions taken in the face of overwhelming odds. But what I find most moving is not the kind of John Wayne-brashness the movies have offered up to us as exemplary of courage, but those quiet, yet determined, acts of heroism carried out by quite ordinary people in extraordinary circumst-

I am reminded, in this connection, of the black woman who refused to move to the back of the bus in Montgomery, Alabama, and who touched off a bus boycott against city-mandated discrimination. The woman who refused to give up her seat to a white was not, however, trying to take a stand on principle: she was just too tired to move. This, I think, is the kind of heroism that means something: the man or woman who stands steadfast in his or her convictions, when the principal purpose of their resistance is to express their own sense of self.

We live in a time when movies and television programs seem to offer us little more than an assortment of violent, mindless brutes as hero characters, or men and women operating under the handicap of a variety of afflictions, ailments, or psychological attitudes, with whom we are asked to sympathize. Neither type of character is one from whom any intelligent, sensitive person can draw inspiration.

Oh, yes, there have been many persons with severe handicaps whose heroic conduct permitted them to inspire others — Helen Keller was a classic example. But Helen Keller is far removed from the alcoholics, bed-wetters, child abusers, and other such types with whose travails we are asked to identify and sympathize.

Nor can I find much inspiration in the umpteen movies that seem to get cranked out of Hollywood each month, offering us, as a herotype, a mindless brute with a machine-gun and bullet-belts over his shoulders, whose only response to any threat is to go in and start blasting

That is why I was delighted to discover two very interesting movies that portray two different types of heroes. The first is the movie Brazil, which could best be characterized as a Monty Python approach to 1984. The heroes of this movie are men and women who resist - albeit by violent means - the big-brother regime in power in a mythical nation. For those interested in freedom and a bit of surrealism, it is well worth seeing Brazil.

The movie I found more inspiring, however, was Turtle Diary. That it stars such quality actors as Ben Kingsley and Glenda Jackson adds to the success of the movie. Still, the principal attraction is in the story itself. It is about a man and a woman who arrive, independently of one another, at the conclusion that three giant sea turtles ought to be liberated from their cramped, unnatural surroundings in a London aquarium in which they have been housed for thirty years.

While outwardly, the movie is about the freeing of these turtles, the real liberation is that which takes place within the two principal characters. Kingsley and Jackson portray two very ordinary, somewhat shy people who know what is right for them to do regarding the turtles, and who resolve to do it.

No Rambo-style violence tactics; no machine-gunning of aquarium guards or blasting down the doors of the building; not even any of the obligatory bedding down of hero and heroine, without which most movies are unable to do. The hero and heroine, instead, spend a good deal of their time working up the courage to do what they know they must do, giving their understanding that the turtles are being forced to live contrary to their natures.

This is my idea of a genuine hero: the person who might genuinely prefer to be someplace else, or have a problem resolved by someone else, but who, when faced with the realization that they must act if the problem is to be resolved, muster the courage to do so. This is the kind of courage and integrity with which more people act than we are aware.

It is to this kind of intelligent disobedience and passive resistance to wrong-doing — rather than the mindless reaction of angry brutes with machine guns — that we ought to lend our moral support.

Introduction to a massage

I had a massage the other day. It wasn't in one of those seedy massage parlors, either. A woman with very strong hands came to my house and brought a bed and some oils and some music to relax me.

The reason I got a massage was a friend of mine got one, and he told me it loosened up his back, made his headache go away, and made him so relaxed he was able to go to sleep watching a Charles Bronson vigilante movie on cable.

You lie down on the bed. The lady covers your back with oil. You begin to smell a little like the crankcase on a Chevy pickup, but that certainly

She starts massaging your back. She pokes and rubs and squeezes and it feels good and you ask her to marry you

"I'm already married," she says. I never get

After the back, she goes to your shoulders. I have tennis shoulder. I got it after hitting approximately 8 million serves over the last 15 years. She finds the spot where it hurts the most.

'Does that hurt?" she asks. "Hurts good." I reply

After the shoulders, she goes to your neck, and then even massages your head.

"There are a number of muscles in your

I knew a lot of athletes had muscles in their heads. but I didn't know the rest of us did, too. She began massaging the bottoms of my feet. I scream again.

'Does that hurt good?" she asks.

"Hurts bad," I say. Have somebody squeeze their knuckles six inches into the bottoms of your tender little footsies and you will scream,

During the massage, the lady — who also was an expert in nutrition - asked, "Are you aware nutritionally?'

"I know where the nearest Wendy's is, if that's what you mean," I answered.
"I mean," she said, "do you know what kinds of food are best for your body?'

"I do," I said. "My body is really happy when it is eating hamburgers, barbecue sandwiches, fried chicken, country-fried steak, vanilla ice cream, French fries, doughnuts and chili dogs with fried onion rings.'

"That isn't a balanced diet," she said. "Don't you eat any green vegetables?'

"I don't eat anything green, pink, chartreuse, purple or anything I can't pronounce, or anything that still has its head and eyes, please rub my back some more," I said.

She began a series of what she called "deep massages" next. I felt like I was being worked over by Charles Bronson. I considered pulling a knife on her to make her stop, but my blade was in my pants which I had to take off in order to get my massage.

Despite the pain the massage was great. I was so relaxed afterward I went to sleep during a Playboy channel movie entitled Massage Parlor Maidens, starring Harry Reems.

I hope, for his sake, the bottoms of his feet are tougher than mine (c) 1986, Cowles Syndicate, Inc.

A peek at secret workings of

By William A. Rusher

American students who have been co-opted into the global propaganda campaign against South Africa may imagine that they have joined a highly idealistic crusade for black freedom. They are almost certainly unaware that the stage managers of these revels include representatives of some of the bloodiest tyrannies on earth.

The U.N. Special Committee Against Apartheid holds most of its meetings in secret - meetings that are euphemistically called "the working group." On May 8, however, the Special Committee held a rare open meeting, which outsiders could and did attend. The distinctive character of this particular session apparently escaped the notice of several members, and briefly opened a window for the world on the sort of thing that goes on in secret sessions at the United Nations.

In the chair was the Special Committee's vice chairman, Comrade Oudovenko of the Ukraine, who may arguably have been distracted by recent events in a Ukrainian town called Chernobyl. (If, American students have a taste for irony, they may also want to savor the notion of having a representative of a constituent republic of the USSR preside over a U.N. committee ostensibly dedicated to extending human freedoms.)

At any rate, Comrade Oudovenko incautiously advised those present that the American Committee on Africa had requested a grant of $5,000 for the purpose of bringing American students to the United Nations to appear at a public hearing of the committee on June 27 Now, the American Committee on Africa is a spectacularly left-wing organization, and there is nothing terribly surprising about its seeking financial aid from the United Nations especially from a U.N. committee chaired by a Soviet stooge. But are the U.S. Congress and State Department aware that the United Nations, which this country supports with taxpayers' money to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars every year, is in turn funneling money to a U.S. pressure group (and one with a tax exemption at that) that works hard and effectively, on campuses all over this country, to rouse public opposition to U.S.

The Algerian delegate reminded the members that in previous (presumably secret) discussions the idea of bringing college students to the United Nations had been criticized as "preaching to the converted," and declared it would be better to send U.N. representatives to the colleges

Sudan's representative then suggested, a bit nervously, that perhaps such matters ought to be discussed in "the working group" — i.e., in secret. Acting chairman Oudovenko agreed, but pointed out that it would be impossible to convene a working group session before the public hearing on June 27. Then, speaking not as acting chairman but in his capacity as the member from the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, he threw his weight behind the proposed grant.

They shook hands with Gov. Harry Hughes, Mayor William Donald Schaefer and officials of Pride of Baltimore Inc., the corporation that sponsored their voyages to promote this port city, before meeting privately with family and friends gathered inside a hangar for the reunion.

Holding up samples of biscuits wrapped in foil and cans of water, first mate John Flanagan told how the eight managed to grab two flashlights, three flares, a life raft, food, water and a first-aid kit as the ship was sucked under in about two minutes. Flanagan, of Niantic, Conn., said there was no time to send out a distress signal.

The survivors, who had about five days of rations left when they were rescued, tried but failed to catch fish by attaching safety pins to a line using pieces of underwear as bait, said deckhand Scott Jeffrey of North Linthicum.

Flanagan's voice cracked at the mention of the missing captain, Armin E. Elsaesser, 42, of South Dartmouth, Mass., and engineer Vinney Lazaro of West Redding, Conn. Both were last seen alive moments after the ship went under, and the Coast Guard was conducting an air and sea search for

"I will not give up hope until I now otherwise," said Flanagan.

Deckhand Leslie McNish, 30, of Somis, Calif., bit her lip and fought back tears as Flanagan spoke. Ship's cook James Chesney, 25, of Newmarket, N.H., held her hand.

Ship's carpenter Barry Duckworth o Georgetown, Del., and deckhand Nina Schack, 23, of Baltimore, are presumed dead as the survivors saw their bodies floating in the water.

"In every way, it was horrible, mentally and physically. It was hell," said bosun Danny Krachuck, 22, of Springfield, Pa., the youngest of the crew. "Spiritually, though, the support of everyone else seemed to almost cancel that out in a lot of ways.

When the freighter began to approach, the eight were afraid of letting their hopes get too high. Five other vessels had passed them in the previous days afloat. But they knew something felt different.

'We all had a feeling tonight was our night," said Jeffrey.

Indicted Teamsters' president wins easily

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) -Teamsters union leaders, again defying government prosecutors, have closed ranks behind indicted president Jackie Presser, voting by a nearly 99-to-1 margin to keep him in the driver's seat of the nation's largest union.

But how long he will continue to hold the reins of a union that retains its name from the days of horse-drawn wagons could be in the hands of a federal jury

Presser, the nation's highest paid labor leader with an income of more than $550,000 a year, was indicted six days ago on charges of racketeering and embezzlement involving an alleged payroll-padding scheme to siphon off $700,000 between 1972 and 1981 from a Cleveland local

There was no accusation in the indictment that Presser personally received any of the money.

The nearly 1,900 delegates at the Teamsters convention in this casino capital its pension funds helped build voted 1,729 to 24 on Wednesday to give Presser, 59, his first five-year term as president. He has been president of the union since April 1983 when he was chosen by the executive board to replace Roy Williams.

Presser used his indictment to rally support, saying its timing was designed "to embarrass the working men and women of our great union

All but two dozen of the delegates, recalling that Williams was indicted just 10 days before the last convention in 1981, apparently agreed.

'I've seen it happen at almost every convention we've had,' said Ray Schoessling, who retired last year as the union's No. 2 official. "What's new? You keep on going. If you weren't doing the job ... they wouldn't be bothering you."

nent, Sam Theodus, head of a 5,000-member truckdrivers local in Cleveland, conceded after drawing only 13 votes in the first hour of balloting

Presser's only election oppo-

But on Presser's orders, the union's first vice president, Joseph Treotola of New York, ordered a name-by-name roll call to continue another three hours until all 1,891 delegates had been polled.

'The media and the government are watching us," Treotola told impatient delegates demanding a vote by acclamation as the roll call and tallying dragged on. "I don't want to do this, you don't want us to, but I have to under the

Dozens of delegates snakedanced through the aisles when the final tabulation was announced. But, because many had tired from the long wait, the jubilation was less than the tumultuous show promised ear-

"You have just witnessed democracy in action," Presser said afterward, addressing the remarks to observers. "The fewvoices of dissent were permitted to be heard.

'They accuse us of all sorts of things," ' he told the delegates. .We will do whatever is necessary to assure that the Teamsters remain ... the largest and most powerful union in the world."

TWA flight attendants reject salary cuts overwhelmingly

NEW YORK (AP) — TWA flight attendants, faced with the same package of concessions that sent them out on strike nine weeks ago, have overwhelmingly turned down the 22 percent wage cut demanded by the company. The attendants, whose leaders decided Saturday to end the strike, voted in seven cities, and Independent Federation of Flight Attendants spokesman Michael Perri said late Wednesday that 98 percent rejected the contract

"The turnout for the vote was very, very heavy," Perri said. 'The vast majority of the membership voted.'

Approval would have signaled complete capitulation on the part of the 5,700-member union, which struck March 7 rather than accept concessions demanded by TWA chairman Carl C. Icahn. The union offered to take a 15 percent cut.

Perri said about 50 votes were in dispute, and the union would announce the final vote count at a news conference today. Votes were cast in New York, St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo., Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

"I think it was an insult to anyone with any intelligence," Joyce Bryant, a flight attendant in St. Louis, said of the offer.

"We feel ... it shows a resounding note to Carl Icahn and TWA that we will not accept their unreasonable concessionary demands," said Boston local leader Brad Bell.

Rejection of the contract means both sides by law must continue to bargain, but the company, which has hired many new staff members and is fully operational, would have no incentive to resolve the dispute quickly.

Icahn has demanded that attendants accept a 22 percent pay cut and work rule changes worth $100 million to the company. The union had said a 15 percent cut would save $30 million, and offered work rule changes worth $20 million.

The union is particularly rankled by TWA's refusal to provide the names of new hires and collect dues for both strikers and new employees, said Perri.

"It's a union shop and it will remain a union shop," Perri said, meaning the new hires would have to join the union and pay dues, and the union would remain the bargaining representative for the attendants unless they vote to

The latest proposal was made May 14 at a luncheon meeting of union President Vicki Frank+ ovich and William Hoar, TWA's top negotiator.

The union's executive board met for three days after the proposal and decided to put it before the membership. The board made no recommendation on the contract.

The vote could be a harbinger of Ms. Frankovich's future as president. Her three-year term expires in October.

Consumer price decrease biggest in past 37 years

By The Associated Press

The Reagan administration says a decline in consumer prices and a boost in Americans' personal income are more signs of economic health, but private analysts say the good news was caused largely by slumping energy costs and rising federal subsidies to farmers.

The Labor Department reported Wednesday that consumer prices fell 0.3 percent in April, following declines of 0.4 percent in February and March. It was the biggest three-month drop in 37 years. The Commerce Department said Americans' personal income rose 1.2 percent in April, the largest increase in two years.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the combination of a drop in prices and increase in income "finds American workers with a lot more money in their pockets to spend on less expensive goods and services." He said the United States, now

"enjoying an economic expansion that shows no signs of diminishing." But many private economists emphasized that the consumer price decline was caused largely

The credit markets had a mixed reaction to the economic news, and many bond prices ended lower on the day. The bond market's impact spilled over to Wall Street, where stock prices also declined.

Soviets admit to deficiencies at Chernobyl

MOSCOW (AP) - Experts dealing with the Chernobyl nuclear disaster did not have all the equipment they needed, and engineers have been brought to the scene to plan how to deal with any future reactor accidents, a Soviet official said.

'The incident has taught us a great deal,' Deputy Premier Ivan Silayev, the official, told Radio Moscow in a Wednesday night broadcast monitored in London by the British Broadcasting Corp.

His comments marked the first time a Soviet official has suggested that equipment to combat a radiation accident at the Ukrainian nuclear power station 80 miles north of Kiev had not been adequate.

Other officials, however, have complained about the initial response by on-site personnel to the April 26 reactor explosion and fire, and about the organization of radiation-warning services around

The Chernobyl accident led to the deaths of 13 people by unofficial count and spewed a huge radioactive cloud that spread over much of Silayev, who has worked as chief of operations at the Chernobyl site, told the domestic service of Radio Moscow that Soviet technology did not perform badly after the atomic accident, but said the disaster suggested "better facilities" are needed.

He appeared to be talking about equipment to handle accidents, not better safety devices for nuclear reactors

We have invited our designers and machine builders here," Silayev said. "We are showing them what is required in such circumstances, what facilities there ought to be, and they are of course to map out a program for us to use in similar or other circumstances."

Silayev said no one can rule out another accident like the one at Chernobyl, termed the worst in history by officials of the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency.

Silayev also said he was being given a leave from his post as chief of operations at the Chernobyl site, and was being replaced by another deputy premier, Lev Voronin.

Soviet newspapers, which had been carrying daily reports from the accident scene and areas where the 92,000 evacuees are living, dropped onsite coverage today and instead criticized Western reaction to the accident.

Pravda, the Communist Party daily, charged Western politicians were creating "heaps of lies" about the accident, and the Russian republic government newspaper Sovietskaya Rossiya claimed some were showing "delight in the misfortune of others."

On Wednesday, a Soviet nuclear safety official said experts were conducting experiments on Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor when it exploded.

Viktor Sidorenko, the deputy chairman of the state committee for nuclear inspection, also told reporters that authorities in Moscow were notified of the trouble in less than three hours.

The Kremlin said nothing about the accident until nearly three days later, after Sweden demanded an explanation for high levels of radiation detected in Scandinavia.

Sidorenko met with a few Western journalists in one of several interviews with government experts that have been arranged in the past two weeks. A transcript of his remarks was provided to The Associated Press.

Many celebrities to join Hands Across Americans

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Celebrities ranging from Kenny Rogers to Yoko Ono to Mickey Mouse and Goofy will be among millions of Americans holding Hands Across America on Sunday in an effort to raise money for the nation's hungry.

Mickey Mouse and Goofy will join 1,320 Disneyland employees, 20,000 people will snake through the Magic Kingdom and TV preacher Robert Schuller's flock will watch the line meander through the nearby Crystal Cathedral.

The Monkees, the revived 1960s music group, will be in Pennsylvania, Oprah Winfrey of "The Color Purple" and magician David Copperfield will be in Ohio, and Dionne Warwick will be in New Jersey. Liza Minnelli, Michael Douglas, Susan Anton, Gregory Hines and Edward Olmos will be holding hands in

Many cancer deaths predicted

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Scientists are giving varying estimates on how many cancer deaths may eventually accumulate as a result of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, with some researchers forecasting up to 40,000 deaths, according to a published report today.

Others, however, make a more conservative prediction of about 5,000 deaths resulting from radiation contamination caused by the nuclear reactor accident in the Ukraine last month, the Los Angeles Times reported.

According to figures compiled by John Gofman, professor emeritus of medical physics at the University of California at Berkeley, at least 32,900 people in Scandinadevelop cancer, with half of them dying. He also said as many as 23,000 Soviet citizens could die of HONIARA, Solomon Islands (AP) — Rescue workers today found the bodies of 65 people buried in mud and debris on the Guadalcanal plains, boosting the death toll from Typhoon Namu to at least 71, officials said.

MIDLAND, Texas (AP)- Calls are coming in from the international press to the Midland home of Roger and Diana Davids Olien.

"It's not what we expected when we got started," Diana Olien said recently.

The Oliens, a pair of historians, recently published their third book on the oil industry since 1978, "Life in the Oil Fields." A fourth is nearly finished, and a fifth is taking shape.

The recent bust in the oil economy has focused a great deal of attention on the Oliens. They have become known as resident experts on the history

Olien is a professor of regional and business history at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, and Mrs. Olien is a research consultant.

Mrs. Olien said the fact she is from New York and her husband is from Wisconsin make the venture even more interesting, because oil field history was completely new to them. Olien received his Ph.D. from Brown University, and Mrs. Olien received her Ph.D from Yale University.

"Life in the Oil Fields," an oral history, is made up of "neat stories that the oldtimers tell," Mrs. Olien said. "It's about daily life. It's the only book about the oil fields I know of that has a chapter on sex, for example.

One excerpt on the subject of prostitution: "Gus Keith: ... The gals, they had these brothels. They had a big plateglass window like a storefront, and they had a curtain behing them. There'd be two or three of those girls sitting behind there in a rocker or chair, waving and pecking on the window whenever anyone would walk down the street. It was wide open."

Other chapters cover boom towns, schooling, bootlegging and family life.

We interviewed a lot of folks out here in Odessa and Monahans and Crane," she said. What they didn't extract from personal interviews, the Oliens researched in archives. Some other boomtowns described are Burkburnett, Borger, Beaumont, McCamey and Ranger. What was life like in McCamey during the boom days?

"Allie V. Scott: In McCamey, they worked 24 hours a day. Everything stayed open 24 hours, the eating places and all, because the men worked night shifts and day shifts. I've seen my brotherin-law stay up 24 hours at the lumberyard. Businessmen usually had their living quarters at their place of business because of that. They worked Sunday."

Historic photographs accompany the written record, which brings readers from 1901 in Spindletop to the 1960s.

"It's a pretty good picture of what life was like," Mrs. Olien said.

While there are some references to New Mexico and Oklahoma, the focus of the book is Texas. The authors have retained the original grammar and figures of speech of the people who tell the stories. The Olien's next book is about land promoters in the first two decades of this century. 'They would sell you anything," Mrs. Olien said. "A membership in the League of Nations ... swamp land at the bottom of the Mississippi ... and people would buy into these guys' deals again and again and again."

Clements urges special session

AUSTIN (AP) - Future Texas Supreme Court scandals might be averted if Gov. Mark White would call a special legislative session now, former Gov. Bill

Clements says. Clements, White's Republican challenger this year, said Wednesday that a special session is needed to impose limits on liability lawsuit settlements and establish rules for plaintiff lawyers as moves to help prevent future problems on the high

White "should step forward and declare himself with respect to the Supreme Court scandal that's brewing," Clements said in an interview.

'Certainly, a piece of that is tort reform. Open it (a special session) up and do the reforms that are necessary in tort law. That in turn cures the problem of the liability insurance and also goes a long way toward restoring integrity to the Supreme Court, he said.

A Texas House committee is investigating allegations that a pending appeals court case was shifted from one judge to another at the request of a Supreme Court justice, who received a campaign contribution from a lawyer involved in the case.

The committee, headed by Rep. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, also is looking into allegations that confidential case information has been leaked from the high court to lawyers.

The insurance industry has been urging legislative action on the civil court system, which it says has granted overly large awards to plaintiffs that are driving up costs for commercial liability insurance.

Clements said he favors several legislative actions in connection with tort reform.

"It has to with limiting the size of settlements, some very explicit rules with regard to plaintiff lawyers and their conduct. There are a lot of things he (the governor) could do," Clements said.

Clements also said he favors limits on campaign contributions to Surpeme Court candidates.

Clements, ousted by Democrat White in 1982, said White should include tort reform in a special session that is needed to deal with two other issues — the $1.3 billion state budget shortfall and prison

White repeatedly has rejected Clements' call for a special budget-cutting session, saying it isn't needed at this time.

The shortfall, which was caused by falling worldwide oil prices, can be made up by agency spending cuts, White said.

Expert says running child can incite dogs to attack

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) -Dogs don't regard children as human, and a running child can incite the hunting instinct in dogs, an animal behaviorist testified in the trial of a man accused of criminal negligence in the mauling death of a 6-year-old boy.

John Donald Shipman Shipman is being tried on a charge of injury to a child by criminal negligence in the death of Steven Fiengo.

Prosecutors contend the boy was mauled by a pack of partbreed pit bull terriers Jan. 22. The boy died Feb. 2 at Parkland Hospital in Dallas.

Shipman had at least seven pit bulls at his home the day the boy was mauled, witnesses have testified. Witnesses said the boy's mother was visiting Shipman, and the boy went outside to play.

He was found a few minutes later, critically injured.

Lockwood, director of the higher education program for the Humane Society in Washington, D.C., said he has studied animals, particularly canines, for 10 years. He said he has been hired by several cities, utility companies and the U.S. Postal Service to study the behavior of bit-

"The most common factor in the fatal cases is that the victim fled, or was running past the dogs," he said.

Dogs regard small, moving objects as prey, Lockwood said.

He said dogs running in packs are especially dangerous, because they produce a "mob reaction." He said different tooth sizes shown in photographs of the wounded boy indicate four or five dogs were involved.

Bamilekes control commerce in Cameroon Many were recruited for forced

EDITOR'S NOTE - Unlike many African countries where foreigners dominate the commercial sector, Cameroon has an aggressive indigenous ethnic group, the Bamilekes, who control the majority of commerce. The Bamilekes say their entrepreneurial spirit springs from traditional tribal values.

By RICHARD EVERETT Associated Press Writer

DOUALA, Cameroon (AP) -Irene Pessonka has big plans for her future. The 17-year-old cigarette vendor looks up at the 10-and 15-story buildings of Cameroon's main port and says, "I want to get into real estate."

Her dreams are not uncommon among her ethnic group, the Bamilekes of Western Cameroon. Most of those tall buildings belong to Bamileke businessmen who have built up small empires from street-vending businesses.

Miss Pessonka scraped together about $50 to buy cigarettes, matches, chewing gum and candies, which she sells on a busy downtown street. She eventually wants to own a clothing store

Around the corner from her stand, in a dingy office over a supermarket, is a man who has lived out her dream. Joseph Kadji Defosso, a Bamileke businessman, started as a street vendor. He now owns a supermarket chain, a brewery, several luxury hotels, numerous rental properties and a myriad of other business interests.

A compact elderly man, Kadji has made his fortune by knowing who to offer what and when. "Some people know how to work, Unlike many African countries

Despite competition from Hausa traders who for centuries have controlled major trading routes and commerce in the north, the Bamilekes have spread from their mountainous region in the west to ply their trade throughout the country of 10 million

During the early years of inde pendence Bamilekes were deeply involved in political groups fighting guerrilla wars against the former government of President Ahmadou Ahidjo. Many were imprisoned or killed, or driven into exile, and the group's region received little development aid from the government.

As a result, the Bamilekes fell back on themselves and their traditional tribal structure to survive in modern Cameroon.

"The Bamilekes have always been hard workers," says Simo Hippolyte, a Bamileke who is assistant manager of a Doula hotel run by one of his clansmen. 'Each chief had a government, and people were expected to organize themselves and work hard to pay their taxes to him.' In the modern society, this banding together to pay the chief has changed into a form of lending society known as a "tontine," a group of people who meet weekly or monthly to pool a sum of money. The pot is auctioned off to the highest bidder, who will be given a limited time to pay back the loan. Other tribes are setting up similar groups, called njangis.

In addition to bidding for money, participants must ex-plain their plan, be it opening up a shop, paying customs duties on a shipment of goods, or any commercial venture requiring upront capital.

The advantage to small entrepreneurs is immediate access to large sums of money. Interest rates can run as high as 100 percent, and there is strong communal pressure to ensure the money gets paid back on time.

"We say 'there are no cadavers in a tontine," says Simo, "If your father dies you pay the tontine back first before worrying about the cost of a funeral." However, he noted the tontine participants often help members pay for funerals, weddings, etc.

College committee recommends freshman test

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) - A College Coordinating Board committee has recommended that all freshmen entering Texas' public colleges and universities be required to take a basic skills test after they have enrolled.

The reading, writing and mathematics test would be used to place students who need extra help in remedial courses.

"In no case should such a test bar entry to any student otherwise qualified; assessment should be a tool of the education process, not the selection process," said the Committee on Testing.

However, the committee said all students would have to pass the test by the time they have completed 60 hours, or approximately two years, of degreecredit work

Robert Hardesty, president of Southwest Texas State University and committee chairman. said, "Our studies indicate that a full 30 percent of Texas students entering their freshman year of college are deficient in at least one of the basic skills.

"The problem is we have no way of identifying those students or helping them early in their college careers. And yet we know, from the experience of several other states, that students who receive remedial instruction are three times more likely to be successful in college than those who need such instruction but do not receive it.

'That is why the committee opted for a freshman test. At the onset, we were looking at a risingjunior exam - a test given at the end of the sophomore year.

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) - It's not every day that one finds a bank president willing to give up all the social status and prestige that goes with that job to take over a small business, but that's exactly what Bob Gribble did earlier this year.

Gribble, 41, who says he has no regrets about the transition, gave up his job as president of Community National Bank to run Mid-Tex Auto, an automobile service business he purchased in February

"I have always wanted to be my own boss and own a business. I saw that opportunity when I heard this business might be for sale," Gribble said.

Gribble, who was not looking for any particular type of business, said he has always been a little interested in working on cars and even held a job at a service station when he was a teenager. "When this opportunity presented itself, I couldn't pass it

The banker-turned-shop-owner said that one of the main reasons he made the decision to purchase Mid-Tex was because it was a well-run business and former owner Don Hollums agreed to stay on and manage the shop for him.

"There has been no change in employees and the average daily customer will see no difference in the business since I bought it. Don's willingness to stay and work with me was a major factor in my decision to purchase this business

A born optimist who sees good times ahead for Midland, Gribble acknowledged that most people would not consider giving up the security of a career to purchase a business in today's economic uncertainty. "I just really feel that this is the right thing for me to do. The business is an established one in a great location.'

The location, on Missouri and

"A," has been an auto repair shop for more than 25 years. Some of the employees at Mid-Tex have been there for more than 20 years, and Hollums has been running things for more than five years.

Gribble admits it is a little scary to get out of a profession that he knows and understands and has been working at for all of his adult life. "But because the same employees are going to remain with me, it is not as scary. I feel less pressure now, and I'm certainly having a lot of fun with this. And there are fewer government regulations to worry about," Gribble said.

Losing the prestige of a bank president to become an owner of an auto repair shop has not phased Gribble. "Prestige has never been a very big deal with me. The main thing I liked about banking was the people contact, and I still have that here. Now I am free to move around and am not tied behind a desk all day

"I haven't been getting as many invites to the country club for lunch, though," he joked. 'And no more banker's hours. I'm usually here by six or sixthirty, and don't leave until six or six-thirty in the evening. That is one big change. I hung up my suits and got out my Levis.'

The change hasn't seemed to bother his family either. "My wife, Linda, has been very supportive of my decision. I was a little concerned about what my two teen-age daughters would think of the change, though. At that age kids are very conscious of images and those kinds of things. But it hasn't seemed to affect them at all.

Gribble thinks it all boils down to finding something you're happy doing. "People shouldn't be tied down by what someone else's image of them is. I am still Bob Gribble, whether I am sitting behind a desk at the bank or leaning over the engine of a car.

TAKING FLIGHT - After the conclusion of the fifth grade reading program at Austin Elementary School, students let more than their imaginations take flight as they launch balloons into the air one spring morning behind the school. The balloons bore tags listing their names and addresses and encouraging the finders to enjoy reading. The reading program concluded May 9. (Staff photo by Terry Ford)

Reading project ends with launch

F. Austin Elementary School recently concluded their reading program with a balloon launch. Students got to set off a balloon for each five book reports turned in during the fourth and fifth sixweeks periods.

The launching was held at 9:30 a.m. Friday, May 9, behind the Fifth graders in the program have read a book on different subjects each week of the school

Fifth grade students at Stephen read Bluebonnet Award books. In other weeks, books included Newberry Award winners, classics, biographies and non-fiction

> The wide selection of books enabled the students to read books from every section of the library. In the final six weeks, students are reading books of their own

> On each book read, students have written a book report containing a bibliography, the setting, characters, the part of the book the students found most in teresting and a recommendation to others on the book.

The reports have been turned in each Monday for the teachers to grade.

Helping the students with the Reading Balloon Launch were Beth Woefle of Bouquet of Balloons, who furnished the balloons; Four R Industrial Supply Co., which provided the helium; and Darrell Rains, Mike Thompson and Jimmy Clark, who inflated the balloons

Deck 'Dad' out

NEW YORK (AP) -Father's Day is always an opportunity to augment dad's wardrobe with a few well chosen gifts. It's also an opening to give the man in your life whether you call him dad, son, grandpa or honey — a clothes lift, says fashion expert Pat Rushin.

"Fear of fashion can crimp an attractive man's style, but you can help him expand his conservative tastes by introducing him to new colors and patterns," says Rushin, senior color and fabric coordinator, Eastman Chemical Products

She offers some suggestions for giving a gentle push in a more forward-looking fashion direction:

"Men are looking to 'Miami soft' shades in shirts, pants and jackets," she says. "These 'new neutrals' such as peach, pale yellow and mint green are ideal coordinates. You can build an entire wardrobe around them.'

Dad doesn't have to give up his gray and beige poplin and tropical weight trousers to add a little color to his fashion life, she points out.

"How about a peach or yellow shirt in lieu of white? These new neutrals work well with gray, navy and khaki. Even color-shy dads like pale came out of the closet to his father and me. It has been a traumatic year for all of us, filled with anger, tears, guilt, confusion and therapy. While we still don't pretend to understand everything about the homosexual lifestyle, we love our son and accept that he believes this is right for him. He has a friend (I can't bring myself to say "lover") and has assured us that he wants a longterm, loving, monogamous relationship, just as his brothers and sisters have. We believe he is sincere. The problem is that we both have aging parents whom we want to spare. We see no advantage in their knowing, and since my father-inlaw, in particular, has very strong anti-gay feelings, we are concerned that a rift will occur that may never be healed. Our son, however, is an activist, especially in respect to AIDS education, and he is quoted often in newspapers and magazines. He lives in another city, but we are fearful that our parents will see him on television or read about him. How can we act lovingly to everyone concerned?

Son's opening closet will close grandparents' minds

CONCERNED PARENTS

DEAR CONCERNED: I can understand your wanting to 'spare" your parents from a truth they may not want to accept, but since your son has chosen to go public, it may not be possible.

The grandparents need enlightenment—not protection—so help them by providing them with some education literature from PARENTS FLAG (Federation of Parents & Friends of Lesbians and Gays Inc.), P.O. Box 24565, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024. It should ease their anxiety and make them less judgmental.

Please enclose a long, stamped 9 cents), self-addressed envepe. The information is free.

DEAR ABBY: I am a secretary in the office of a junior high school in a small California town. It never ceases to amaze me that parents think I am a repository of vast amounts of money that I have handy to lend out to students who have forgotten to bring either money or lunch to school.

Yesterday, a parent called to ask that I lend little "Rupert" $10 so that he could stop at the store on the way home! There are 600 students at this school, and if I could recoup all

DEAR ABBY: A year ago our son the money I have lent out in the last five years, I could take a trip to Hawaii!

What prompted me to write is that today, a parent became very irate with me on the phone when I explained that I could not lend "Florence" $2 for lunch

Please print this letter; perhaps it would speak for the thousands of school secretaries who are "hit on" every day for cash! Thank you.

BROKE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BROKE: I imagine the statute of limitations has run out on most of those unpaid debts, but it might be worth your time to ring up the parents (during the breakfast hour) and remind her (or him) to give little 'Rupert" the loot you lent him.

How would you handle such a CONCERNED IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR CONCERNED: I would discreetly slip the additional money to the captain or waiter as inconspicuously as possiblebut not at the table.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for pointing out the stupid statements some wellmeaning people make concerning adopted children. One of the most stupid is to say-in front of the child-"And this is Alice, John and Jane's daughter. They adopted her, you know." Then all the information about the adoption comes flowing out like water from a fountain. Why can't they just say, "And this is Alice," and leave it at that? But the worst by far is, "I'll bet you love her like she was your own child." How dare they? She is our

day night. The Rockets advance to meet the Boston Celtics in the NBA championship finals. (AP Laserphoto)

Rockets eliminate Lakers; face Celtics next in finals

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) The team of the future, it turns out, also is a team of the present.

The young Houston Rockets, having deposed the reigning kings of the NBA, now confront the team that would seem next in line for the league crown.

The Los Angeles Lakers, meanwhile, have been reduced to a historical footnote as another NBA champion that couldn't repeat.

Ralph Sampson, who'd been the lesser-noticed of the Rockets' "Twin Towers" during their playoffs against the Lakers, provided a startling ending to the startling series Wednesday night when his hurried, off-balance shot dropped at the buzzer to give Houston a 114-112 victory over Los Angeles.

The victory gave the Rockets the series, 4-1, and sent them into the NBA championship round against the Celtics, beginning Monday in

The concluding win was particularly impressive because the Rockets won without their other "Twin Tower," Akeem Olajuwon. He was thrown out of the game for fighting with 5:14 remaining and the Lakers ahead 103-99.

But Sampson took control, scoring 10 of his 29 points in the closing moments and winning it at the end.

"It's a very gratifying feeling to beat the world champions," the 7-foot-4 Sampson said. "This may be the highlight of my basketball career.

'Right now we're just going to enjoy this win and go home to our fans in Houston," added Sampson. "Then we'll go into Boston thinking positively."

Olajuwon, who had averaged 30 points and 12 rebounds in the previous four games of the series, had 30 points and seven rebounds in the fifth when he was ejected for trading swings with the Lakers' Mitch Kupchak in a brief, bench-clearing skirmish.

"I was watching it (Sampson's winning shot) from the locker room and when I saw it go in, it was just unbelievable," Olajuwon said. "It was great that they won without me. ... I couldn't believe it."

Sampson's shot came after the Lakers' Byron Scott had missed a long jumper and the Rockets rebounded and called time out with one second remaining. When play resumed, Rodney McCray inbounded the ball to Sampson and the Houston center, his back to the basket, flipped the ball backward toward the goal. It hit the rim, bounced up for a breathless instant, and fell through.

"I knew where the basket was, but I couldn't see it," Sampson said. "I thought it (the shot) was short; I didn't see it until it hit the rim and bounced in.'

"There was a man guarding him from behind and a man guarding him in front and he only had one second to get the shot off, so it wasn't real pretty," said Houston Coach Bill Fitch. "But it went in."

"It was a miracle," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "He didn't even see the basket. You just can't beat fate."

"I was happy he threw up a bad shot," said Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who led the Lakers with 26 points and also had 13 rebounds. "But what happened just happened."

"Since he made that shot, I guess it just wasn't meant to be for us this year," said Lakers guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who scored 24 points and had 13 assists. "To be in control the whole way like we were, and to see that shot drop, it's hard to swallow."

The final score was the only time the Rockets led, and they'd been down 99-90, with 8:31 to play. But they caught the Lakers for the first time on a three-point basket by Robert Reid that tied the contest at 112 with 15 seconds left.

Reid had just missed from three-point range, but the Rockets got the rebound and he got the ball back. After his three-pointer, the Lakers came down the floor and Scott

Celtics keep practicing while waiting for Rockets

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) -Boston Celtics' Coach K.C. Jones leaned forward casually, his arms resting against the stage. He rarely spoke as he watched his players' fast-paced scrimmage on the court next to him.

One squad had a front line of Larry Bird, Robert Parish and Kevin McHale. All three played in this year's NBA All-Star game. The other had former NBA Most Valuable Player Bill Walton.

Assistant coaches Jimmy Rodgers and Chris Ford were the referees of Wednesday's intrasquad battle. Like the crowd of reporters viewing the Celtics' return to practice, Jones was a quiet observer.

The picture, however, was misleading.

"It's a myth" that coaching an outstanding team is easy, Rodgers said. "The toughest job to do is to win when everybody expects

"We do have excellent talent, but you've got to know what to do with that talent and how to handle it, how to motivate it and how to use it best game in and game out, how to keep it sharp, how to put the right offensive and defensive theories into effect.

"I'm talking about a lot of coaching and K.C. has done just a great job. Jones will be restricting his coaching to practices until the championship playoff round begins next week. Boston will take a 38-game home winning streak and a 57-9 record in its last 66 games into that best-of-seven series.

All five starters averaged more than 15 points per game as the Celtics won 11 of 12 playoff contests. Guard Danny Ainge, who averaged 10.7 points per regularseason game, has averaged 15.9 in the playoffs.

'With him playing the way he's playing right now, it's like our starting five is an all-star team." reserve guard Jerry Sichting said. "Dennis (Johnson) really should have made the all-star team this year and our front line all made the all-star team and Danny's outplayed almost everybody he's faced in the playoffs.

ence championship.

Said Rodgers: "If you watch the way these guys practice, I don't think" the layoff will hurt.

WT cuts athletic programs under reorganization plan country and golf teams, as well as anthropology and general agriculture, are among programs being eliminated at West Texas State University.

Regents cut those programs Tuesday and changed admission standards to try to improve the university and put it on a better financial footing. The dropped programs should cut about $1 million from the university's $28 million budget, said spokeswoman Mary Coyne.

Ms. Coyne said programs with little student or faculty interest or few job opportunities will be dropped.

Those programs include speech and hearing therapy, general agricultural, anthropology, French and German education, industrial education, library science, two-year secretarial studies and the masters degree program in Spanish, she said.

In athletics, regents dropped the men's and women's golf and indoor and outdoor cross-country track programs.

In athletics, regents voted to drop the men's and women's indoor and outdoor track and cross country as well as the golf program. The remaining sports are football, men's and women's basketball, women's volleyball, men's and women's tennis. Men's and women's riflery is beind added.

Under a reorganization plan, the university will merge the now-separate schools of agriculture, nursing and natural sciences and the college of education and social sciences. A single college of business and technology will be created.

The university will form a college of fine arts and humanities, and the separate graduate program will be dropped. Instead, graduate studies will be administered through each college.

Rozelle The NFL Commissioner has been the only witness during the first five days of the trial, but he is expected to wrap up his testimony today.

Rozelle was questioned Wednesday by USFL lawyer Harvey Myerson, who attempted to get the commissioner to acknow ledge he has misstated or misspoken on various points during the more than 21 hours he spent on the stand. The closest he came to achieving that was when Rozelle admitted he had mispoken when he said that Leon Hess was not running the New York Jets in 1982 — Hess actually took over in 1977. Rozelle also disclosed Wednesday that he had twice had contacts concerning Donald Trump, owner of the New Jersey Generals of the USFL.

The first was through an intermediary who told Rozelle in a 1983 phone conversation that Trump was interested in buying the NFL's Baltimore Colts. The second, he said, was in March 1984, when he met with Trump at a New York hotel for a purpose he didn't disclose.

Trump, a New York real estate enterpreneur, has been painted by NFL attorneys as a man who wants to force a merger between the leagues although Trump himself has denied that.

The disclosure of the Trump-Rozelle contacts came after Myerson attempted to get Rozel-

Rozelle has disavowed the study and said he had no prior knowledge of it.

He did acknowledge, however, having contact with two owners Trump and A. Alfred Taubman.

Rozelle said his only contact with Taubman was at a Christmas party in 1984, when Taubman, who still had an interest in the USFL Oakland Ivaders, approached him.

He described Taubman as "a man of substance, a good owner" but described it primarily as 'dinner conversation. As for Trump, Rozelle said his first contact came in a phone conversation with an unnamed intermediary in the summer of 1983, six months before the Harvard study and several months before Trump announced he had purchased the Generals. "I told the intermediary," Rozelle said, "that it would be a waste of time for Donald to try to buy the Colts. I said that two different groups had tried to buy the Colts and that in my judgement I didn't think Mr. (Robert) Irsay would sell a controlling interest.

Rozelle said he later met with Trump in March 1984, after the purchase of the Generals. Rozelle said the meeting took place at New York's Hotel Pierre after he received a call from Trump, whom the NFL maintains has

Rangers edge Royals in tenth

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)-George Wright was one of the reasons the Texas Rangers went into Wednesday night's game with an 0-2 record in extra-inning games.

And Wright is also the main reason the Rangers are now 1-2 in extra-inning contests, thanks to his hitting heroics in the bottom of the 10th in Texas' 2-1 win over the Kansas City Royals Wednesday night at Arlington Stadium.

Wright, mired in a 3-for-26 slump coming into the game, lashed a two-out triple that sent Pete O'Brien racing all the way home from first with the winning run.

That made a winner out of reliever Greg Harris, 3-6, and a loser out of Kansas City bullpen stalwart Steve Farr, 2-1.

Wright was fortunate he got a chance to be the hero, having entered the game as a pinchrunner for Pete Incaviglia in the eighth inning when the Rangers scored to take a 1-0 lead against Royals starter Charlie Leibrandt.

But the Royals tied it in the ninth, thanks to Rudy Law's leadoff double off Ranger starter Jose Guzman, a wild pitch by reliever Mitch Williams, and a fielder's choice grounder by Frank White.

Third basem in Steve Buechele took White's grounder and tried for a play at the plate, but hit Law in the back of the head with his throw.

That sent the contest into extra-innings and gave Wright a chance to redeem himself for a disastrous two innings in Boston on Sunday when he dropped a fly ball to allow the tying run to score in the ninth, then threw the ball into the dugout to allow the tying and winning runs to score in the 10th.

"I've already forgotten about that," said Wright. "I'm just happy to break my batting slump. It's hard to get out of those when you only play part of the time.

Kansas City is in a slump of its own, having scored only one run in the last 19 innings against the Rangers, who moved to within half a game of first-place California in the American League West.

AUSTIN (AP) - Coach Cliff one of the top ones," said Pan American Coach Al Ogletree.

"I wish they had given me a choice. I wouldn't have picked this one," said Southern Illinois Coach Rich "Itch" Jones.

No. 5-ranked Texas, 49-12 and co-champion of the Southwest Conference, and Southern Illinois, 39-20-2 and champions of the Missouri Valley, play Thursday night following games matching Pan American and Pepperdine and Arizona and San Diego State.

Pan American, an independent school from Edinburg, Texas, is 41-17. No. 20 Pepperdine, 35-19-2, is the runner-up in the West Coast Athletic Conference Arizona, which tied Stanford for second in the Pac-10 South, is 41-18 and is ranked No. 15, two places behind San Diego, champion of the Western Athletic Conference, which has a 42-21 record.

Gustafson said he was uncertain whether to start All-American lefthander Greg Swindell, 10-3 with a 1.79 earned run average, or righthander Mark Petkovsek, 11-1, against the Salukis.

Fletcher off to fast start

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - At spring training's end, Texas Ranger Scott Fletcher asked Manager Bobby Valentine for the starting shortstop spot, and Valentine compared the newcomer's situation to a prize fight.

Fletcher, who had been acquired in an off-season trade, had hit around .400. But Valentine said Fletcher needed to score a knockout against the champion, Curtis Wilkerson, and had managed only a unanimous decision.

Now Wilkerson is struggling at the plate with a .184 average, and Fletcher is off to the best hitting start of his career with a .321 average.

After going 2-for-6 with a walk in back-to-back victories over Kansas City Tuesday and Wednesday, Fletcher has hit safely in 12 of his past 16 games, with an on-base average of almost .400.

So does Fletcher think he has his knockout? He chooses baseball terms to reply

"We're all in this together it's a 24-man game. All I'm trying to do is be ready each and every day. I've gotten off to a great start, and I'd like to play every day, but I'm more concerned with going out and doing what I can do to help us keep winning,'

"Baseball's a game where you have to come out each day and hit the ball and contribute," he added. "What you did yesterday doesn't mean anything today You've got to go out and perform again.

Fletcher's performance in the field, with three errors in 30 games at shortstop and second, is another reason for Valentine to

"Scotty's done everything, plus exceeded our greatest expectations," Valentine said. "I never thought he'd be hitting .320 and fielding flawlessly — his statistics have been higher than they've ever been. So it's tough for me to have projected this kind of start from Scotty

"But he has run the bases well, he has gotten on base in many a big inning and he also has driven in some key runs. There's nothing more that we can ask for from Scott Fletcher.'

To show that Fletcher was no mere throw-in, the White Sox offered other players instead, but the Rangers held firm.

DALLAS (AP) — Dennis Rodman, a former schoolboy basketball star with South Oak Cliff, is battling a new and unfamiliar challenge these days. Rodman, who went on to be voted all-America three times at Southeastern Oklahoma State University, is preparing for the National Basketball Association's draft. His new challenge is a host of NBA teams which want to poke, prod and check him to see if the 6-9 center with the speed of a guard is for real Since his college basketball career ended with performances of 48 and 32 points in the NAIA national tournament, Rodman has traveled to Wyoming, Virginia. Hawaii, and other points to preform before the NBA scouts.

Can the same player who led the NAIA in rebounding the last two years and who dominated District 9 basketball for three seasons do the same in the pros? Can Rodman shoot from the outside?

Rodman was one of two NAIA players invited to the Portsmith. Va., post-season classic by NBA scouting director Marty Blake. During the tournament, Rodman played with the likes of Duke's Johnny Dawkins, North Carolina's Brad Daugherty and Georgia Tech's John Sally.

He finished by setting a new tournament rebounding mark and being named MVP. The next stop was the Aloha Classic in Hawaii, where Rodman teamed with Kentucky's Kenny Walker and Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremens and enjoyed another good week.

"In my opinion, Rodman proved his rebounding ability and enjoyed another impressive week. In my opinion Dennis Rodman has helped himself more than any player in America with the post-season games," said Dallas Mavericks' director of player personnel Rick Sund. "With his performances, Dennis has gone from nowhere to the second round," Blake added.

"I was worried at first playing with all those big college guys, but I just wanted to have a good time," Rodman said.

Southeastern fans have had a good time watching Rodman lead the Savages to a 74-22 overall record and two apperances in the NAIA national tournament.

While Southeastern coach Jack Hedden has understandably enjoyed the success he has had with Rodman, he is even more pleased to see his prize player develop over the years.

"Dennis came here with nothing and now he has a chance to play professional basketball," said Hedden.

The Southeastern coach joined the rest of the basketball world in ignoring the 5-9 senior at South Oak Cliff High School, where Rodman wasn't good enough to play on his high school team. Blake said fans and the media put the spotlight on the top NCAA Division I players, "but if you can play in the NBA, we'll find you. Dennis has a chance. He has great speed and good rebounding

There is no admission charge. The police are sponsoring the meet as a public service of the department in a move to become more involved in community

The invitational will be emceed by Matt Parsons and Mike Kneisl of KGRO-KOMX Radio in Pampa. Refreshments will be served. Committee members coordinating the event include Steve Chance, chairman; and J.J. Ryzman, Bruce Denham, Mike Wopperer, John Goes, Freda Bezner and Danny Lance with the police department.

Others are coaches Phil Hall and John Kendall, Earnestine Ammons with the Pampa Sheltered Workshop and Activities Center, Becky Myers and Michael Ehrle.

Groom High honors its athletes

GROOM — The Groom Tigers looked back on a year of success at their athletic banquet here last week and honored the studentathletes that made it happen.

It was a good year for the Tigers, who: battled Phillips for a football playoffs berth; made the playoffs in girls basketball; won district in boys and girls track and sent four athletes to state: and sent Melissa Fields to regional in tennis. In football, the Tigers were in the playoffs chase until a finalgame loss to Phillips. Six Tigers made all-district, and at the banquet coach Jimmy Duncan named Hank McConnell the team MVP.

Darron Eschle, who with Jack Britten earned loop honors in basketball, was named by coach Gary Rambo the basketball MVP

Girls coach Frank Belcher split that award among two Tigerettes who helped Groom to its third straight playoffs appearance and most wins yet: Robbie Kuehler and Melissa Fields. Both of those Tigerettes made all-district, along with Suni Barnett and Erin Eschle, and later received college scholarships

Fields, who will attend Odessa JC. was also the girls tennis MVP, while Mike Rose and Britten earned the boys award.

State mile qualifier Jowannah Ruthardt was named track MVP for Groom's girls, who won the district championship and sent Kuehler and Eschle to Austin, too. Darron Eschle, the lone boys state qualifier, won the Tigers' track MVP.

Groom's two special awards, the Fighting Tiger and Fighting Tigerette plaques, went to Ken Ruthardt and Melissa Fields.

The ship is huge — bigger than anything in the fleet except an aircraft carrier. The Navy hasn't had one since the end of the Vietnam War. It has been built in almost total obscurity, although it already has a name.

The USNS Mercy is a hospital ship. It is and 12 complete operating rooms, capable of simultaneous use — that few hospitals on land can match its facilities.

But as work proceeds on the Mercy and an identical sister ship, the USNS Comfort, so, too, does an internal debate about how and whether they can be used during peacetime.

The Navy, in part with an eye toward congressional budget cuts, has decided to place the vessels in what it calls "Reduced Operating Status 5" - capable of being activated and steaming from ports

ture is better for residential customers than the April 24 plan. Gene Kimmelman, legislative director of the Consumer Federation of America, said he calculates that businesses will benefit more than individuals from the reduction because the biggest cuts are in day and evening hours, when businesses make a higher proportion of their calls. The price cut for calls placed on weekends and after 11 p.m. local time on weeknights would be 5 percent.

Rate cuts for WATS, 800 Service and other business phone services were also proposed.

GTE-Sprint Communications Co. and MCI Communications Co. each have announced they will propose new rates sometime this summer. However, these major competitors to AT&T said their rate changes will not be ready by June 1.

"We obviously are going to lower rates," MCI spokesman Gary Tobin said. 'We want to continue to be able to say that we're less expensive than AT&T on every call."

GTE-Sprint opposed the initial AT&T price reduction plan.

Sprint spokesman Mike Furtney said the new pricing level for AT&T "is not very far away" from predatory pricing, the price level that would be so low that competitors would be forced out of busion the East and West coasts in no more than five days' time.

Even that commitment is in some jeopardy. When the Pentagon released a list of military programs last week that could be scuttled because of House cuts to the defense budget, the Comfort appeared on the list.

Dr. William Mayer, the assistant defense secretary for health affairs, acknowledges the budget pressures. He also notes the Mercy and the Comfort are too specialized as trauma surgery centers to function as floating hospitals of the type operated for years by Project Hope, dispensing general health care to poorer nations around the world.

Nonetheless, Mayer is hoping to find some way for the ships to go to sea. Among the avenues he is exploring are periodic exercises and "familiarization tours" for physicians in the Reserves, and as a "training platform" overseas for civilian and military doctors who are undergoing specialized education in emergency medicine.

The Mercy and the Comfort were born in the late 1970s of studies that accompanied the formation of what was then called the Rapid Deployment Force. Military planners were concerned that if U.S. forces ever went to war in the Mideast, wounded soldiers might not have access to surgical care.

The result was two contracts, awarded on June 28, 1983, and Dec. 16, 1983, to the National Steel and Shipbuilding Co. in San Diego, to convert two oil supertankers into hospital ships. The tankers were completely gutted, with only their hulls and engine rooms left intact, then rebuilt into modern hospitals with 12 operating rooms each; massive intensive care wards; modern laboratories, X-ray equipment and pharmacies; built-in oxygen lines to the beds; elevators between decks; and helicopter landing pads.

The Mercy — formerly the SS Worth will start its sea trials in October. The Comfort will follow next year. Each is 894 feet long and 106 feet wide. All told, the Navy expects to spend almost $510 million on the two ships.

Long distance cuts offered

WASHINGTON (AP) - American Telephone & Telegraph Co., in response to government prodding, wants to pass on to consumers an additional $450 million in savings.

In papers AT&T said it would file at the Federal Communications Commission today, the company will ask to increase its previously announced rate cut to $2

AT&T said this would mean a $1.02 drop in an average residential customer's $10 monthly bill for out-of-state calls.

The new rates will be effective June 1, unless the FCC rejects the plan. When it examined AT&T's April 24 proposal, the commission's staff said the company did not properly compute the amount of extra calling that would occur in reaction to the lower prices. AT&T was asked by the commission to recalculate the reductions.

HERO REMEMBERED — Jeane Pruett, foreground, looks at the resting place of Col. Leonard Williams who died a Texas war hero but until lately has been remembered with only a weed covered grave. After three years, Pruett and other descendants of Williams have been granted the right to restore the site. (AP Laserphoto)

Family honors Texas patriot state forgot

By ROBERT CADWALLADER Waco Tribune-Herald

MOUNT CALM, Texas (AP) -For more than a century, Col. Leonard Williams was a Texas war hero no one remembered.

Williams' contribution to Texas' battle for independence was marked only with a deteriorating grave covered with weeds and brush near Mount

Today, his descendants say he is getting some of the respect he deserves. After a three-year effort to beautify the colonel's resting place, the current property owners have granted rights for the family to visit the gravesite and are helping the family res-

"First of all, he's family," said Jeane Pruett, who is heading family efforts to upgrade the cemetery. "I would say blood is first. But also, he was a Texas hero, and something should be done for the man."

Mrs. Pruett, who founded the Pruett-Williams Reunion Association in 1982 and immediately took on the project, wants another marker placed at Williams' grave. In 1958 — 102 years after his death — the state made its first official recognition of his service by placing a Texas Historical Marker on State Highway 31 south of Mount Calm.

But the marker names only William's first wife, Nancy Isaacs, and says they had six children. Mrs. Pruett said they had eight or nine children, and he had three more with his second wife, Jane Ware, whom Mrs. Pruett wants the marker to mention.

Williams' most significant contribution to the Texas war effort. as noted by historians, was securing a treaty with the Cherokee Indians to keep them from joining the war on the side of the Mexican

The Texas Senate honored him posthumously with a resolution adopted May 17, 1965, saying Williams was "largely responsible for the success of the Texas revolution ... Knowing their language and native ways, the Colonel was trusted by the Indians and could communicate with Williams' grave is on property just south of Mount Calm across the Hill County line into Limestone County.

But after the 1958 marker was placed, the cemetery was allowed to deteriorate, like so many other historic gravesites. Although Texas law encourages the upkeep of historic cemeteries and forbids owners of surrounding property from destroying the cemetery for other uses, it does not require a landowner to grant permission for family to visit gravesites.

When the reunion association was formed, Mrs. Pruett, who is married to a fifth-generation descendant of Williams, led efforts to obtain permission to take care of the cemetery.

We really thought it was kind of pathetic to see the graveyard when we first went," Mrs. Pruett said. After some negotiations beginning last fall, the current property owners, Bouge and Ginger Lawson, agreed to allow the family access to the property.

"They were real interested in it, and it kind of got us interested in it," Lawson said during a recent work expedition to the cemetery. "We had a few people talk about the cemetery over the years, but nobody ever did anything about it."

Added Mrs. Lawson, "But no-body bugged him about it like

The work includes removing the thicket of mesquite trees from around the cemetery, creating a path to it, getting the "incomplete" historical marker changed and maintaining the cemeterv

The family still is trying to locate other descendants, suggesting that they contact Mrs. Pruett. at the Pruett-Williams Reunion Association, P.O. Box 229, Ranger, Texas, 76470.
