County's decision to seek opinion may kill golf course construction

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

A decision by Gray County commissioners to seek an attorney general's opinion on a proposed public golf course ends any hope of golfers hitting the greens this year, Pampa City Manager Bob Hart said today.

Meanwhile, Pampa Public Golf Association President Buddy Epperson said he hopes the commissioners decision hasn't sent the project to a sudden death.

"I don't think it's possible that we can start the golf course this year," said Hart, who had hoped to break ground by now on the proposed site north of Pampa. "Obviously, this thing is going to move it back to a spring construction date."

County commissioners voted 3-2 Wednesday to table any further action on the project until they can receive a state attorney general's opinion. County Attorney Bob McPherson will be asked to request the opinion when he returns from vacation next week.

Commissioners Jim Greene, O.L. Presley and Ted Simmons voted to table the issue, while County Judge Carl Kennedy and Commissioner Gerald Wright opposed the motion.

"I am very much opposed to this motion," Judge Kennedy said. "It serves no purpose but to delay and perhaps kill a public golf course for this county that the people voted on."

Taxpayers have voted twice in non-binding elections to allow county commissioners to donate $300,000 and equipment and manpower to construction of the course. Under a recent agreement, the city would have run the course once it was constructed.

But an opinion sought by state Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, from the Texas Legislative Council said the agreement might be unconstitutional because it would constitute an illegal gift from the county to the city. TLC attorney Mark Brown recommended county commissioners seek an attorney general's opinion or risk being removed from office if the contract proved to be illegal.

County and city officials decided instead to amend the contract to address Brown's concerns. Under the revised agreement, already approved by city commissioners, the county would continue a limited role with the golf course after construction.

"This changes the whole picture to me," Commissioner Simmons said.

Simmons said he has never wanted continued county participation in the project after construction. He said he could only vote for the original agreement, under which the county would between Dec. 8 and Dec. 16, Derr disposed of five vehicles in which First National Bank in Pampa had a security interest. The vehicles are a 1986 Oldsmobile, a 1983 Ford, a 1984 Lincoln, a 1985 Dodge and a 1985 Chevrolet.

Derr is former owner of B&B Auto Co., 400 W. Foster Ave., and is currently a salesman for Marcum Chrysler, 833 W. Foster.

Because the value of the five vehicles totals more than $10,000, the offense is a third-degree felony, meaning Derr faces two to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine if convicted.

were:

■ Edgar Lee Dyer, charged with burglary of a habitation, $20,000 bond;

■ Michael Dan Boyd, charged with forgery, $3,000 bond;

■ Arthur Ray Short, charged with driving while intoxicated, subsequent offense, $1,000 bond;

■ Christine M. Vespestad, charged with burglary, $5,000 bond; and

■ Steven Neil Williams, charged with criminal trespass, $500 bond. Williams' case was transferred to Gray County Court.

Sheriff won't promise to join drug task force

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Although he may be "as much against drugs ... as any man in Texas," Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan says that doesn't mean he'll join a narcotics task force that lacks only Gray County in the Panhandle.

Jordan told about 60 citizens gathered in the county courtroom that he hasn't ruled out joining the Panhandle Regional Narcotics Trafficking Task Force but maintained he wants to know more about the Panhandle-wide effort before signing on.

"I'm as much against drugs and narcotics as any man in Texas or anywhere else," Jordan said. "I will not say that I will never join this organization, but I make you no promises at this time. I need to know just how good a job they can do."

The task force is being organized by the Amarillo Police Department and is funded by a grant being channeled through the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission in Amarillo.

Lt. Robert Francis, who heads the operation, said the task force is designed to assist Panhandle counties in eradicating illegal drugs by providing undercover narcotics agents. The task force has already led to several narcotics busts in the region.

Sheriff Jordan has said he has not joined the task force because he:

■ worries about a potential lawsuit if undercover agents err in Gray County;

■ wants to be aware when outside agents are operating in the county;

■ fears that grant money funding the task force will dry up; and

■ doesn't want to contribute to the national debt by accepting grant funds.

Citizens upset about Gray County's absence from the effort approached county commissioners May 13, demanding to know why. Commissioners then scheduled Wednesday's meeting with Jordan.

Jordan told the crowd that 13 counties aren't participating in the effort, not merely Gray County as Lt. Francis told reporters from The Pampa News and the Amarillo Globe-News. Jordan said he had met earlier Wednesday with PRPC director Gary Pittner, who told him he expected the other 13 counties to join this month.

Contacted in his Amarillo office by a Pampa News reporter during Wednesday's meeting, however, Pittner said all Panhandle counties except Gray have signed resolutions agreeing to join the task force. Jordan has never presented commissioners with a copy of the resolution.

Pittner said the confusion probably resulted from the fact that PRPC representatives are now in the process of traveling to each county in the region to execute agreements. He said they have traveled to roughly half of the counties participating.

Grand jury indicts car dealer

A Pampa car dealer accused of disposing of five vehicles in which First National Bank in Pampa held a security interest was one of seven people indicted Wednesday by a Gray County grand jury.

Bill M. Derr, 1800 N. Wells St., was named in a five-count indictment alleging hindering secured creditors. Bond was set at $5,000 by 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany.

Judge McIlhany scheduled arraignments on all of Wednesday's indictments for 8:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The indictment charges that

Miami ready to call cows home

MIAMI — Miami is gearing up for its 39th Annual Cow Calling Contest, Pioneer Roundup and Frontier Follies this weekend.

The festivities will officially begin with the Frontier Follies on Friday at 8 p.m. in the Miami School Auditorium.

On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Miami E.M.S. is sponsoring a softball tournament at Baseball Park.

The Old Timers Registration is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Saturday at the Community Center. The barbecue lunch begins at 11:30 a.m. in Roberts County Park, and at 1 p.m. the steer roping will begin in Roping Arena.

But at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, all ears will be tuned to the National Cow Calling Contest at Roberts County Park. The competition is divided into Men's, Women's and "Grandma's" categories.

The calls are rated by judges who stand approximately 250 yards from the contestants. Volume seems to be the key ingredient in concocting a winning cow call.

Miami's Wiley Bailey took home last year's first prize in the men's division, and Haley

Clark sounded the winning bell for the women's award. In the grandma competition, Jane Bright and Doris Wilkins tied for top wailing honors.

Following the Cow Calling Contest, there will be a reunion and reception for the Miami High School Class of 1938 at 3 p.m. in Legion Hall. Saturday's activities will conclude with a dance, sponsored by the American Legion, in the county barn at 9 p.m. Music will be provided by Frankie McWhorter and the Over the Hill Gang.

Come on out and join the fun. You can bet they'll be out there till the cows come home.

Reagan heads home after summit ends

MOSCOW (AP) — President Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev said goodbye at the Kremlin today, ending a summit long on good will but short of achievement.

Reagan told his host he had been "truly moved" by the reception he got in the Soviet Union. Gorbachev took the occasion to prod Reagan to move faster on the issues facing the two superpowers.

The talks completed the most frequent superpower summits in history, four in just 30 months, underscoring the dramatic turnaround in U.S.-Soviet relations since the first meeting in 1985. Dwight Eisenhower and Richard Nixon each had three summits with their Soviet counterparts.

Air Force One took off from Vnukovo Airport in a light drizzle at approximately 11:15 a.m. local time. Reagan was heading to Great Britain and talks with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Gorbachev faces, by month's end, the convening of the first Communist Party Congress since 1941.

The meetings here produced renewed vows by leaders to improve East-West relations and put into force the first-ever treaty to eliminate nuclear weapons. But tensions over regional conflicts lingered, and Reagan and Gorbachev did not advance prospects for a long-range missile treaty in any substantive fashion.

The Reagans said goodbye to the Gorbachevs in the same Kremlin hall where America's first couple was greeted on Sunday. Walking along the saffron carpet in the Hall of St. George after brief remarks, the four chatted amiably and then parted company a moment later.

Raisa Gorbachev presented Nancy Reagan a bouquet of roses in what perhaps will be the last encounter for two first ladies whose relationship never was warm.

"This is an emotional moment for Mrs. Reagan and me," the president said, telling the Gorbachevs he had seen and learned much about "this Moscow spring."

Reagan said he was impressed with the Soviet people he encountered.

"At first they were curious faces, but as time went on, the smiles began and then the waves," he said. "And I don't have to tell you, Nancy and I smiled back and waved just as hard."

Gorbachev thanked Reagan for "cooperation, openness and a businesslike approach to the talks that we have had here."

But the Communist Party general secretary also said there were missed opportunities at the Moscow summit.

"Our dialogue has not been easy," Gorbachev said, "but we mustered enough realism and political will to overcome obstacles and divert the train of U.S.-Soviet relations from a dangerous track to a safer one. It is, however, so far, been moving much more slowly than is required..."

Their work done, on their final night in Moscow, the Reagans went to the Bolshoi Ballet with the Gorbachevs and dined privately with their hosts at a dacha in the countryside outside Moscow. Then, the Reagans took an impromptu stroll through Red Square, which was brightly illuminated by mobile floodlights brought in by networks to provide a backdrop for their evening newscasts.

"I didn't want her to miss it," Reagan said, holding hands with Nancy.

Reagan and Gorbachev actually concluded their formal talks Wednesday — reporting scant progress on arms control and none on human rights disputes.

After five days in Moscow, Reagan will have tea with Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace and dine with Mrs. Thatcher at No. 10 Downing Street. On Friday, Reagan will deliver a post-summit speech summing up East-West relations, then return to Washington.

Despite the lack of major agreements, Gorbachev called their meetings a "blow to the foundations of the Cold War." Reagan went to extraordinary lengths to praise the Soviet leader, seemingly absolving the Kremlin leadership for erecting barriers to emigration. He blamed the emigration walls on the Soviet bureaucracy, saying any government has that kind of problem.

Reagan and wife Nancy land in London.

Area cyclists to bike for MS

AMARILLO — MS Wild West Bike tour, sponsored by the Panhandle chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, is set for July 30 and 31. This two-day event begins in Amarillo and ends at Lake Marvin near the Oklahoma state line.
"What's so wonderful about this bike tour," said Cindy Dawson, coordinator, "is that it is a chance to see parts of the Panhandle, such as the old wagon train and military trails that have made the west what it is today."
Everyone regardless of age can participate in the tour that begins in Amarillo and ends at Lake Marvin near Canadian. The tour is open to individuals and teams. Teams are comprised of four cyclists.

A $15 registration fee and a minimum of $150 in pledges are required from each participant. Participants receive a T-shirt, a water bottle and a cycling cap, as well as other prizes.
More than 150 area residents have registered for the tour to date, including seven bicyclists from Pampa.
Pampa participants include Rutley Chalk, Freda Debrick, Fran Kludt, Kevin Taylor, Larry L. Turcotte, Berinda Turcotte and Dan Williams. Registered from Canadian are Jesse Hanes, Laina Kirkland, Ray Kirkland and Van Morrow. Also registered is Dean Wheeler of White Deer.
Funds raised go towards national research for the cause and cure of multiple sclerosis and help provide patient services in the Panhandle area. MS strikes the central nervous system of young adults between the ages of 20 and 50, causing difficulty in walking, talking and seeing. More than 250,000 Americans have this disease, with 200 new cases being diagnosed each week.

More than 85 bicycle tours are conducted by chapters of the Multiple Sclerosis Society throughout the year across the United States.
For more information about the Amarillo to Lake Marvin tour, write the Panhandle Chapter at 1416 W. 8th, Amarillo, 79101. Or telephone the chapter office at 1-(806)-372-4429.

Judge Boyd to speak at Kiwanis

Justice John Boyd of the 7th Court of Appeals in Amarillo is scheduled to speak to the Downtown Kiwanis Club on Friday.
The club meets at First United Methodist Church, Ballard and Foster, at noon.
Boyd has served on the appeals court since 1981 and was chairman of the Texas State Commission on Judicial Conduct from 1983 to 1987. The commission investigates allegations against judges in Texas.

A graduate of Baylor University in Waco, Judge Boyd also holds a degree from the University of Virginia. He served as 64th District Judge in Plainview before being named to the appellate court.
In addition to his service with the Commission on Judicial Conduct, Boyd has served as chairman of the judicial section of the State Bar of Texas and vice chairman of the Supreme Court Committee on Code of Judicial Conduct.

Among the cases Boyd has helped decide since being named an appellate judge is the Albert Branscum murder case, in which a Pampa man was brought to trial in 1987 for his wife's 1964 murder.
The appeals court freed Branscum last month, ruling that he hadn't been afforded a speedy trial.

Father saves children from fire

BAYTOWN (AP) — A Baytown man, his clothing ablaze from a fiery explosion in a his garage, broke down the front door of his home and rescued his two children from a back bedroom, authorities say.
Nino Parrino, 30, a landscaper, was in critical condition Wednesday night at at Hermann Hospital in Houston, where he was being treated for first and second degree burns over 65 percent of his body, officials said.
His daughters, Lisa, 6, and Nina, 8, were unharmed. Two other members of the family also suffered burns.

"I heard a loud explosion. It shook our restaurant pretty bad," said Mark Simotas, the chef at Goose Creek Inn, located next door to the Parrinos' home.
"Flames were gushing from the Parrinos' garage door almost to the street, lapping onto the roof and looking like they were going to spread to the restaurant," Simotas told the Houston Chronicle.
"Then I heard a little girl screaming, 'Daddy, daddy, I can't breathe!' I started to run to help when I saw someone rushing inside," Simotas said.

Two units of the Baytown Fire Department extinguished the fire after about two hours Tuesday night.
The family's pet dog and parrot were killed in the blaze; the garage and laundry room were destroyed; and the rest of the home sustained heat, smoke and water damage.
Authorities said Parrino had opened a small side door to the garage to check on the source of gasoline fumes just seconds before the blast engulfed two cars and spewed flames over him and his 13-year-old stepdaughter.
The man raced through the fireball into his front yard, and then, without stopping to extinguish his clothing, crashed through the locked front door of the wood frame home to reach his daughters, authorities said.
He removed the children from the burning home by handing them out of a bedroom window.
His stepdaughter, Jamie Poss, 13, who had gone with Parrino into the garage, was in stable condition with first and second degree burns on her face, arms and legs.

Drive safely — school's out!

LUBBOCK — Major V.J. Cawthon, regional commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety, is calling on Texas motorists to drive with extra care now that school is out for the summer.
"School's out and there's no cares or worries for tomorrow's lessons," Cawthon said. "Many children get excited while playing and forget the rules of life."
Cawthon advised motorists to "expect the unexpected," particularly when driving in residential areas, and be prepared to surrender the right-of-way to a child that may run into the street.
Cawthon also offered advice for vacationers.

"Long, tiring trips across the West Texas Plains can be nerve racking on all occupants in the car," he said. "Frequent rest periods should be used so the children can run off that excessive, pent-up energy."
"In order to make this an accident-free summer vacation, we need to take a more mature attitude towards safe driving," he added. "Let us all remember to slow down a little and live a lot by driving defensively each and every day this summer while school is out."

Golf

have no continued role in the golf course. He asked that both the original and revised agreements be sent to the attorney general.
Judge Kennedy argued that the revised agreement doesn't obligate county commissioners "to spend another dime."
"That's not what we wanted, but life is full of compromises," Kennedy said.
Kennedy said county commissioners promised citizens the course would be built if it passed the non-binding referendum in 1987.
"For us to back up on our commitment to these people ... then I feel that we are going back on our word," Kennedy said. "I, for one, don't intend to go back on my word."
"Part of this is a little political," Kennedy said the county has twice requested attorney general's opinions in the past and never heard a word back from Austin, a prospect Epperson said bothers him. Epperson said he fears commissioners' decision may essentially kill the project.
Commissioner Wright agreed. "I think the motion killed the golf course," Wright said, calling the issue an "endless ordeal."

Kennedy accused Greene of placing the county in a no-win situation by prodding Rep. Whaley to seek the TLC opinion. He said Greene essentially forced the county to revise the agreement, giving the county a continued role which commissioners had opposed.
Greene said he merely wants to make sure the county is operating legally before proceeding.
Citizens at Wednesday's meeting expressed varying viewpoints. In addition to Epperson, Pampa retiree W.A. Morgan called the move a "delaying tactic" and said commissioners are seeking "just another lawyer's opinion."
But fellow retiree James Cook urged commissioners to seek the opinion.
"You need all the information you can get," Cook said. "A few golfers don't run this county. There's a lot of us folks in the county that we ain't never played golf and we ain't even got enough money to buy a set of golf clubs."
Cook said he also would like to see an environmental study done on the course.
City Manager Hart said today that city commissioners will probably reject bids that had been sought for grass seed and pipe for the course. He said commissioners also will decide which direction to take.

Hart didn't rule out the possibility of the city proceeding without the county's input but added that continuing alone would require yet another vote in the form of a bond issue.
"We don't have the funds available to do a project of that magnitude without some form of debt financing," Hart said.
In other action Wednesday, county commissioners:
■ tabled a request by Rural/Metro ambulance service to raise its $52,000-a-year county subsidy by $228 per month, double its mileage charges to customers and increase the price of oxygen by 50 percent;
■ met with volunteer fire department officials from McLean and Mobeetie to discuss charging those responsible for setting fires to pay for firefighting costs if the blazes get out of control, but took no action;
■ purchased a truck and trailer for Precinct 3 at a cost of $68,000;
■ allowed County Treasurer Scott Hahn to attend a meeting of the state treasurer's association in Austin;
■ agreed to advertise for health insurance bids to be received July 15; and
■ decided to allow General Telephone Co. to install lines within a county road right-of-way.

Sheriff

the anti-drug group's spokesman, Jimmy Free, Jordan said he would make no apologies for his department's handling of the drug problem in Gray County.
"We feel like that we do a very good job in enforcement of the law ... We just don't talk about it all over the country," Jordan said. "The Gray County Sheriff's office takes a back seat to no one."
Jordan also read a letter from Assistant 31st District Attorney Harold Comer, expressing reservations about the task force, despite the fact that four of the five counties in Comer's jurisdiction are participating. Hemphill County Sheriff Billy Bowen even serves on the task force advisory board.
Comer had grand jury proceedings Wednesday and did not attend the meeting.
Free said after the meeting that he was disappointed but won't give up. He hinted that the group may field a write-in candidate to oppose Jordan in November's general election.

Jim," Jordan responded. "I will take care of that."
Other citizens also had questions for the sheriff and commissioners.
Mary Alice Jones of Pampa asked if commissioners could override Jordan's reluctance to join the program, but County Judge Carl Kennedy said commissioners don't have the authority to order the sheriff to participate. Kennedy said commissioners will consider the task force whenever the sheriff presents them with a copy of the resolution.
Jones also asked the sheriff why he wants to be aware of undercover activities in the county.
"Someone needs to know that they're here," Jordan replied.
Later, when questioned by Pampan W.A. Morgan, Jordan admitted that the undercover aspect is one advantage of the task force.
Gray County Juvenile Probation Officer Ed Barker said the county would benefit by having undercover agents specializing in narcotics. Barker noted that two thirds of the youngsters brought to his office for any crime are there due to drug use.

Free's wife, Cheryl, added: "Our children are worth every effort we can make to stop the drugs in Gray County."
Several citizens said they agreed with Jordan. Don Reed of Pampa praised Jordan for his years of law enforcement experience.
"I would support Sheriff Jordan's judgment," Reed said.
Reed said county citizens would have no control over the undercover agents if Jordan and commissioners signed the agreement.
But Barker criticized the opinion that the task force would "just kick doors down and exert authority" over the sheriff and Pampa Police Department.
"That is absolutely not the truth," Barker said. "They have to work within the guidelines of county, state and federal law."

Teacher fired in video case

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Members of the Grapevine-Colleyville school board have voted to fire a middle-school teacher accused of showing three of her students a sexually explicit videotape.
Board members listened to seven hours of testimony during a closed-door hearing and deliberated 30 minutes before unanimously voting Wednesday to dismiss teacher Melissa Gibson in connection with what the board called immorality.
Superintendent E.A. Siglar Jr. was instructed to file a complaint against Gibson, 30, with the Texas Teachers Professional Practices Commission.
Gibson, who lives in Bedford and was a choral teacher at Colleyville Middle School, had requested the hearing closed hearing to appeal her May 9 suspension without pay.
Gibson has said she did not show the video to three seventh- and eighth-grade students.

The school board voted to make her termination effective May, costing her $1,900 of her $21,350 annual salary.
"It's kind of sad, but she had to be terminated," said the mother of a student who said she viewed the video at Gibson's apartment. The student told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram the video depicted two men and a woman having sex.
Gibson cried after the board's decision, but would not comment on the action.
No criminal charges have been filed, but Tarrant County prosecutor Marshall Hines said Wednesday that his office has decided to present the case to a grand jury.
Colleyville Police Chief D.F. Steele says a complaint was filed April 25.

Lewis: Don't give up on reform of state taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Although the comptroller says a tax increase won't be needed to maintain a consistent level of state services in 1990-91, House Speaker Gib Lewis says tax reform ideas shouldn't be abandoned just yet.

"It remains my opinion that revamping our tax system could best be approached in a non-crisis environment when our efforts could be focused on devising the fairest and most equitable tax structure possible," Lewis said.

Releasing his first revenue estimate for the state's next two-year budget period, Comptroller Bob Bullock said Wednesday that sufficient money should flow into the Treasury despite a loss of $972 million in temporary taxes, fees and one-time bookkeeping maneuvers the 1987 Legislature passed.

Bullock's estimate said the state's major tax funds should grow by 4.8 percent, from the current budget period's $28.57 billion to $29.94 billion for 1990-91.

The news was hailed by Gov. Bill Clements, who said it is further evidence that the battered Texas economy is turning around.

"This is the best budget news for Texas in a long time," Clements said. "Today's revenue forecast is concrete evidence that the Texas economy has turned the corner and is driving ahead."

The comptroller's estimate did not include any additional spending that might be needed to solve the dilemma surrounding the public school funding system, which has been declared unconstitutional by a state judge. Officials have said the pricetag on that could run into the hundreds of millions.

The new revenue projection came as preparations have begun for the 1989 legislative session, which will write the 1990-91 state budget. In addition, the Select Committee on Tax Equity has been working for more than a year to review the entire state tax structure and recommend changes.

Some legislators had predicted that at least $1 billion in new revenue would have to be found for 1990-91 to maintain state services at current levels. Lawmakers raised taxes in 1984, 1986 and 1987.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he believed that Bullock's forecast doesn't mean the state should abandon the idea of tax reform.

"While the comptroller's message is good news, I am not going to rule out the possibility of tax reform being addressed by the next Legislature before I see the tax equity committee's report and have an opportunity to discuss it with legislative leaders," Lewis said.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, also noted that the state could lose up to $1.9 billion in revenue if it loses a variety of pending challenges to the state's corporate franchise tax, insurance tax and utility taxes.

According to the comptroller's new estimate, sales tax income is expected to increase by 7.9 percent per year during the next budget cycle, while the motor vehicle sales tax is expected to grow 6.2 percent per year.

"The sales tax gain will be spurred by an increase in consumer spending and an economic recovery led by manufacturing," said a statement released by Bullock's office.

The general sales tax and motor vehicle tax today make up about two-thirds of all tax revenue, compared with about half five years ago, Bullock said.

Natural-gas tax revenue is expected to be up 5.7 percent in the next budget cycle, but oil-tax income will increase only 1.2 percent per year as production continues to decline, the comptroller said.

His revenue estimate included the prediction that the average oil price will rise to $20 per barrel in 1990 and $21.61 in 1991.

The comptroller did sound some cautionary notes.

While the revenue picture looks bright now, Bullock said, "It has no money to handle any increased spending by the Legislature."

Besides that, he said, the forecast could change if there is a national economic recession, a steep drop in oil prices or further successful challenges to the state's current tax structure.

Juan Palacios scrapes mud and water out of a carpet store in Comanche Wednesday.

Residents survey damage from heavy rains, dam-burst

COMANCHE (AP) — About 60 residents who were evacuated when an earthen dam burst returned to find flood damage and debris in their homes from a 4½-foot wall of water that whisked downstream.

"We had to leave out the back door when the water came pouring in," Maida Godfrey said. "As long as I'm wading, I'm all right, but this water was really getting too high."

Mrs. Godfrey pointed to grass and mud stains 4½ feet high on the white walls of her home, downstream from Lake Eanes in Comanche County.

The private lake was gorged to twice its normal size during up to 14 inches of heavy rainfall that fell Tuesday and early Wednesday in Central Texas.

Jailer Hazel Carouth of the Comanche County Sheriff's Department said the immediate flood emergency was over by Wednesday night.

"It's all clear now," Ms. Carouth said. Rain had not fallen Wednesday afternoon or Wednesday night, she said.

The heavy thunderstorms damaged homes, businesses and bridges and flooded the 4,100-person town of Comanche, briefly shutting down some highways and obliterating the dam on 100-acre Lake Eanes.

Wednesday morning residents were told they could return to their homes. The sun came out Wednesday afternoon while residents picked through the muddy debris.

Mrs. Godfrey said she and her 18-year-old son, Sheridan, ran up a hill to the home of Earl Wadelle, Lake Eanes' owner, at about 3 a.m., near the flood's apex.

About two hours later water surged through the middle of the earthen dam that was built in the 1930s.

The dam on Lake Comanche held but water spilled over its lip, said Duane Ogle, a teacher at Comanche High School where approximately 60 residents stayed until the floodwaters subsided.

Lake Comanche is about four miles southeast of Comanche and downstream from Eanes Lake, which is now completely drained, authorities said.

"We've lived here 22 years, and it's never gotten this high before," said Mrs. Godfrey, 40. "It came up to the porch only one other time."

She said that from the top of the hill, she heard a loud roar about 5 a.m. as the dam on Lake Eanes burst.

All that remained of the lake at daylight were acres of mud, tons of debris and fallen trees. Godfrey estimated damage to their home at $30,000.

In Comanche, about 3 miles from Lake Eanes and 90 miles southwest of Fort Worth, floodwaters pushed Indian Creek above its bank, tearing through homes and businesses and knocking large chunks of pavement from bridges.

Loreno Prado, 18, was asleep in her house on South Houston street about 2 a.m. Wednesday when the screams of her younger cousins jarred her awake.

Water was rushing into their stucco home, lapping onto the children who had been sleeping on the floor. "It was almost two feet deep," Prado told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

As much as $100,000 in inventory at Comanche Carpet and Tile was ruined by the floodwaters, and "I don't know what we're going to do yet," said owner Randy Martin.

North along U.S. Highway 377, the floodwaters blocked several underpasses and bridges with logs and other debris. The driver of an 18-wheeler reportedly swam to safety as floodwaters washed his truck off the road.

In neighboring Erath County to the northwest of Comanche, many roads were flooded in Dublin, Stephenville and Lingleville, with some streets impassable, the National Weather Service reported.

Rains also flooded streets in Tarrant, Denton, Dallas and Hamilton counties.

Ralph Yarborough testifies at oil hearing

AUSTIN (AP) — Ralph Yarborough, former U.S. senator, returned to state court to talk about a Pecos County oilfield case that he was involved in as an assistant attorney general in 1934.

The state subpoenaed Yarborough to appear as a witness Wednesday in an injunction hearing in the lawsuit, which involves a 3.97-acre tract in rich Yates Field that has yielded $161 million dollars in profits.

The state says although it is entitled to half the royalties, it only has received $10 million, in part because state officials in 1934 were not aware of all the circumstances surrounding development of the field.

In the 1934 case, a partner of Fred Turner Jr. of Midland was sued by the state, with Yarborough claiming the bonus paid on an oil and gas lease negotiated by Turner's partner was insufficient and the lease was invalid.

The 1934 court judgment in that case validated a lease on the tract negotiated by Turner. That lease gave the state an unusually large bonus payment.

More than 50 years later, the state has brought Turner's estate and 24 other defendants to court. According to the state, Turner kept most of the profits from the tract for his interests through a complicated series of transactions.

Under a Texas Supreme Court ruling reaffirmed in 1932, the state as owner of mineral rights gets half of bonuses, rentals and royalties from oil and gas leases. The surface landowner also gets half in return for acting as the state's agent and to compensate for damage to soil.

Death row inmate believes new trial will mean freedom

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A convicted killer whose sentence was thrown out by the U.S. Supreme Court says his first trial was filled with errors and he believes a new one will not end in a conviction and death penalty.

"To be frank with you, I think I'll walk out of the courtroom free," death row inmate John Satterwhite said.

Satterwhite was convicted and sentenced to die for the March 12, 1979, slaying of Mary Frances Davis, a San Antonio convenience store clerk. But his death sentence was overturned by the Supreme Court on Tuesday because he was not allowed to visit with a lawyer before taking a psychiatric test.

During an interview on death row Wednesday, Satterwhite said he would refuse a life prison term and opt for a retrial because he believes it would result in his freedom.

"It's errors on top of errors," Satterwhite said of his case. "To me, it's a big fabrication. Going through another trial would straighten this all out."

William Harris, the Bexar County assistant district attorney who handled Satterwhite's case, said Wednesday he was disappointed in the high court ruling but defended the procedures used in the investigation.

"That was just the way we did things back then," Harris said.

Satterwhite, 42, said he remembered being with the psychiatrist for 20 to 30 minutes.

"We was alone. He tried to get me to talk to him. I made a few statements," Satterwhite said. "I told him I was told not to talk to him."

The inmate also accused Harris of using the case to further his political ambition.

"He can look up for years and years and be proud of something that he knocked down a killer," Satterwhite said.

"Absolutely not," Harris responded. "I've been in the same position for 19 years and I don't have any political gains for myself."

Satterwhite, who dropped out of school in the ninth grade and last worked as a mechanic, contended there was not enough evidence to bring him to trial and not enough even to get an indictment.

Harris said Satterwhite was convicted on the basis of testimony from an alleged accomplice, Sharon Bell, and that authorities also recovered the murder weapon from the glove compartment of a car rented by Satterwhite.

Ms. Bell was sentenced to 20 years for aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. She was paroled in 1986.

Harris said her whereabouts were unknown. According to Harris, she and Satterwhite were involved in a string of robberies in San Antonio, including another where a clerk was killed. That case, however, never was brought to trial because of lack of corroborating evidence.

Satterwhite did acknowledge Wednesday being involved in at least three shootings, including the robbery of a liquor store. Other shootings were the result of what he said were misunderstandings.

"You probably wouldn't want to see me when I get angry," he said. "It takes a whole lot to get me calmed down."

Governor dismisses the Texas job drain from maquiladora businesses

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says it is nonsense to believe that maquiladora businesses — straddling the U.S.-Mexico border — stock up on cheap foreign labor at the expense of Texas jobs.

The maquiladora industry employs more than 12,000 Texans, and Clements predicted approximately 34,000 new jobs will be created if Texas captures 25 percent of the maquiladora parts and supplies market.

"For every 100 maquiladora jobs in Mexico, there are an estimated 20 new jobs in Texas," Clements told leaders from both countries Wednesday at the Governors' Conference on Maquiladoras.

Clements said American businesses "would move to the Pacific Basin if they weren't along our border."

Low production costs in countries such as Singapore and Taiwan match maquiladora figures, Clements said.

According to the Texas Department of Commerce, which co-sponsored the conference with the Texas Association of Business, there are between 450 and 500 joint businesses, or maquiladoras.

The joint production arrangement has drawn the fire of critics who argue that twin plants take away American jobs and exploit Mexicans who earn far less than their U.S. counterparts.

But Nuevo Leon, Mexico, Gov. Jorge A. Trevino said he joined Clements in support of the maquiladora concept.

"Maquiladoras solve problems of both countries' states," Trevino said through a translator. "We have adequate resources in Mexico, we have universities, we have the desire and we have the capacity."

In the last two years, Trevino said, 48 maquiladoras have been created in his state and 13 more are in the works.

"Studies show that maquiladora employees from Mexico spend about 35 percent of their wages in Texas for an estimated $150 million annual investment in our state," Clements said.

Maquiladora-made products such as car parts are made in the United States, assembled in Mexico and sent back to the United States for sale.

Mexican states across the Texas border host plants for many Fortune 500 companies, including General Motors, Ford, Zenith, Chrysler and General Electric.

Construction of an international bridge at Colombia, Mexico, also got Clements' nod of assent at the conference. He said he supports the span into Texas 20 miles northwest of Laredo.

Laredo officials critical of the bridge plan have asked for it to be built closer to their city. But Clements said Nuevo Leon needs its first bridge along its slender 10-mile spur that meets the United States.

"The permit in the State Department is on hold until we reconcile the situation in Laredo," Clements said. "I fully expect the City Council and the mayor in the near future to announce their sponsorship of the Colombia Bridge."

Implementing maquiladora programs and the bridge may require additional legislation, Clements said.

"As we develop a road system, for instance, for the bridge at Colombia, we may need some legislation because of the mutual interest of our problems on both sides of the river. To talk about that legislation is premature at the moment, but if we need it, we'll do it."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

We shouldn't pay for anti-U.S. films

The United Nations is at it again, mangling the hand that feeds it. American taxpayers provide 25 percent of the international nuisance's budget. This time the United Nations is spending that money to make anti-American propaganda films to be shown throughout the world.

Here's how Mark Huber, a journalist in Washington, D.C., describes a recent UN film he watched: "Picture this: It's nightfall. Flowers float on a reflecting pool as mourners softly weep. We're witnessing the annual Hiroshima memorial service. ... The narrator builds his measured crescendo as he decries humanity's 'awesome genius for death.' Half a world away, eight jet engines spool up on a grounded U.S. B-52 bomber. The film's title then explodes onto the screen: This Is Nuclear Countdown.

"If the viewer doesn't get the message, plenty of helpful visual cues follow: a parade of mostly outdated U.S. military hardware — B-25, B-36, B-47 and B-52 bombers; F-104, F-106 and F-14 fighters; Polarix missiles and Trident submarines. An aging British Vulcan bomber makes an overflight.

"The scene fades to the premier peacemaker, the late Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev, railing against nuclear arms before an enthusiastic session of the Supreme Soviet.

"Viewers are told 'there aren't any' peaceful applications of military technology. The film closes as a U.S. nuclear submarine's periscope pops out of the water and the narrator intones, 'In a world calling for a New International Economic Order, isn't this a mad perversion of priorities?'"

The propaganda message of Nuclear Countdown is clear: The United States is the world's major warmonger, the Soviet Union is the major advocate of peace, and we need worldwide socialism, in the form of the UN's New International Economic Order — a vast plan for robbing free nations' wealth to prop up Third World dictatorships.

For a Heritage Foundation study, Huber viewed 46 UN films. His conclusion: "Most UN films are a soapbox for those who prefer to blame their problems on the United States and those who believe in the forced redistribution of global resources and centralized government planning and control. These opinions are mainstays of UN ideology."

What should be done? Huber calls for an investigation by the General Accounting Office and says, "Congress should suspend all funding for UN films and the UN's Department of Public Information until the GAO ... certifies that U.S. funds are not underwriting anti-U.S. propaganda."

That's a good idea, yet it would cost money for the GAO investigation. A better plan would be to cut off, for good, U.S. funds for all UN projects. It's obvious the United Nations can't be reformed. Why pour more of our tax dollars down this rathole of anti-U.S. agitation and propaganda?

Hard heads still turn mushy

The humorist Dorothy Parker, when she was working alone in an office that never had visitors, found a cure for her solitude. She had a sign put on the outside of her door which said "Gentlemen."

Like Parker, the authors of the welfare reform bills moving through Congress refuse to make a fetish of accurate labeling. These measures owe much of their political support to the impression that they would change the way we help the poor. In fact, they are heavy on the welfare and light on the reform.

One of the reasons the war on poverty has failed is that it puts all the obligations on taxpayers and none on the poor. Treated as helpless victims, many of them have responded by acting the part. Instead of taking responsibility for working themselves out of poverty, millions have made welfare a way of life.

When Congress turned its attention to reforming Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), the main federal welfare program, there was a lot of brave talk about changing the rules. Welfare would be replaced by workfare. A revolutionary notion emerged: If the government is going to help the poor, the poor ought to do something in return.

The point was not to punish the poor. The point was to deter them from behavior that punishes themselves. Work requirements would have three useful results. They would teach the poor how to function as employees; they would discourage long-term dependency; and they would provide society something in return for its welfare spending.

Somewhere, though, the hard heads turned mushy. Both bills would expand eligibility, making welfare more enticing than ever. The worse of the two bills, passed by the House in December, would raise costs by more than $7 billion in the next five years. The lesser of the evils, approved by the Senate Finance Committee, would increase costs by $2.8 billion.

Never mind the money. What's worse is the approach to workfare, which is treated as if members were afraid it might be imposed on Congress. Neither proposal forces anyone to work. Both hinder state from making recipients do anything more strenuous than endorsing their checks.

Washington has always pretended to mandate work of AFDC clients. But the pretense is convincing only to those who aren't on welfare. Two out of three recipients are thoughtfully excused from the requirement that they work. Of the few who are sternly commanded to work, only one in three does.

The problem, contrary to myth, is not a lack of jobs. The unemployment rate is now at the lowest level in 14 years. New York University political scientist Lawrence Mead has found in his studies that the local job situation is irrelevant. Where welfare recipients are expected to work, they find jobs. Where they aren't, they don't.

Congress' version of welfare reform would probably make the situation worse. Recipients are supposed to participate in work programs, but the definition of work is comfortably elastic. They can avoid actual labor by going to school, by looking for a job or by enrolling in job training — any of which is more pleasant than scrubbing floors or chopping weeds.

Government job training is also legendary for its ineffectiveness. Charles Murray, author of a distinguished book on poverty, notes that the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) cost billions, but raised its female trainees' subsequent earnings by just $100 a year. It somehow reduced its male graduates' earnings, an achievement they could have done without.

There are plenty of other ways to elude the work net. Mothers with small children can't be forced to take a job unless the state guarantees them child care, even though millions of poor women manage to find their own. No one can be forced to take a job that pays less than welfare.

Those compelled to find gainful employment will be the exception, not the rule. Under the House bill, the rare dimwit who can't find his way through one of these oversized loopholes could only be made to work for six months. Single parents who still refuse to work would lose only part of their check.

All these rules reinforce the central message of the existing system: Work is optional, not mandatory. That not only denies taxpayers what they have a right to expect of those they help, but shields poor people from the choices they have to make if they are ever to escape from destitution. Being undemanding of the poor isn't the same as being kind.

Welfare reform was supposed to repair the system's defects. The unexpected accomplishment of these bills is to find ways to make them worse.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, June 2, the 154th day of 1988. There are 212 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On June 2, 1953, the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II took place in Westminster Abbey, four months after Elizabeth ascended the British throne upon the death of her father, King George VI.

On this date: In 1851, Maine became the first state to enact a law prohibiting alcohol.

In 1883, the first non-league baseball game to be played under electric lights took place, in Fort Wayne, Ind.

In 1886, President Grover Cleveland married Frances Folsom in a White House ceremony. (Cleveland is, to date, the only president to marry in the executive mansion while in office.)

In 1924, Congress granted U.S. citizenship to all American Indians.

In 1946, the Italian monarchy was abolished in favor of a republic.

Vultures picking on old folks

Aunt Fannie, who's 90, never got married and never had any children. For the past several years, she has lived as a recluse in an apartment in Charleston, S.C.

Relatives tried to visit, but Aunt Fannie would refuse to open the door for them.

"She was living," said a grandniece, Beth Speaks, of Stone Mountain, "on powdered milk and cereal. A man who lived next door to her called and said when she walked to the mailbox, she was in shreds."

Beth Speaks' father, Aunt Fannie's nephew, finally talked to her landlord and was able to get inside the apartment, which he found in shambles.

He also found that Aunt Fannie, who was thought to be quite comfortable financially, was nearly broke.

"She had been eaten up," said Beth Speaks, "by religious vultures."

Beth's father obtained power of attorney for his aunt and found she had been giving away up to $500 a month in donations to religious organizations.

Most of her money had been sent to Feed My People out of Phoenix, Ariz., which is headed by a Rev. Don Stewart.

"Aunt Fannie still thinks this Stewart is the most wonderful wonderful person who ever hit this earth," Beth Speaks explained. Here is part of the sort of letters Don Stewart has been sending out to the Aunt Fannies of the world:

Lewis Grizzard

"Dear Fannie: I must talk to you. I must talk to you NOW. Please listen. If I can't talk to you, who can I talk to?"

The letter continues with a discussion of how Feed My People needs $86,000 to pay off a contractor who has built something called an Emergency Relief Headquarters.

"Now, here is what I am asking you to do," Stewart's letter goes on.

"Rush $300 back to us today for this need. Just think, your $300 will be working for you long after you have gone to heaven."

Someone should appraise the appraisers

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — For most buyers and sellers of property, the methods and procedures relied upon by real estate appraisers are mysterious — but the importance of their work is universally acknowledged.

Because virtually all real estate purchasers rely upon borrowed funds for their financing, the appraiser's indispensable contribution to the transaction involves establishing the fair market value for the property that constitutes the collateral for the loan.

"It is the real estate appraiser," explains Rep. D. Douglas Barnard Jr., D-Ga., "who provides lenders and investors with assurance that, in the event of default, the (value of the) property ... will be sufficient to cover all or most of the outstanding loan balance."

But Barnard fears that too many appraisers are willing to accommodate the demands of both unscrupulous borrowers and dishonest lenders to improperly inflate property values. "Appraiser ineptitude, negligence and misconduct are widespread," says a report issued by the House Government Operations Committee. "Faulty and fraudulent real estate appraisals have become an increasingly serious national problem. Their harmful effects are ... pervasive and costly."

The committee's report, based on an extensive investigation conducted by a subcommittee Barnard chairs, offers this description of a typically corrupt transaction:

"In exchange for an implicit or explicit promise of future business, so-called 'advocacy appraisers' provide the numbers needed 'to make the deal work,' instead of the independent value estimate they are supposed to furnish."

Borrowers press for inflated appraisals because they can obtain larger loans. Overly aggressive banks and other financial institutions also encourage the fraudulent practice because it enables them to lend more money, the report says.

The subcommittee's probe of the industry found that phony real estate appraisals "played a crucial role in the gradual weakening and ultimate collapse" of banks in Texas, Oklahoma and Tennessee.

The congressional report cites similar problems affecting commercial banks in California, Illinois and other states, while reporting that savings and loan associations in Florida and Maryland "failed in large part due to appraisal problems and abuses."

Contributing to the scandalous situation is the lack of professional standards governing the work of the 150,000 to 250,000 people who perform real estate appraisals on a full- or part-time basis.

Only about one-third of them are affiliated with a respected trade association that relies upon professional standards, certification criteria, codes of conduct and disciplinary procedures. The remaining two-thirds are unaccountable to any professional organization for their conduct.

The industry has come a long way since the depression of the 1930s, when an almost complete lack of property valuation standards wreaked havoc in the residential, commercial and industrial real estate markets.

But only 12 of the 50 states now have licensing or certification procedures — and most of those standards are pitifully weak. In most states today, notes Barnard, "anyone can perform real estate appraisals without having to demonstrate basic competency and without having to obtain a ... license."

He has advanced a sensible proposal that, while keeping the oversight of appraisers primarily a responsibility of the states, would establish uniform national certification requirements and standards of conduct.

They would be invoked by a Federal Interagency Appraisal Council only in those cases in which the government had a substantial interest in a real estate transaction.

"If appraisers want to be recognized as the professionals they truly are," says the congressman, "they have to be willing to assume the obligations of professionalism."

Tobacco firm cites rights as trial nears close

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Lung-cancer victim Rose Cipollone had a right to smoke knowing the risks, just as the manufacturer of her cigarettes has the right to say smoking doesn't cause cancer, a tobacco company lawyer argued.

Attorney Donald J. Cohn repeatedly stressed those themes Wednesday in closing arguments in a four-month trial of a lawsuit filed by Mrs. Cipollone's widower, who claims that three tobacco companies contributed to her 1984 death at age 58 after 40 years of smoking.

"Mrs. Cipollone enjoyed smoking, and that was why she continued to smoke, and she didn't want anyone to tell her not to do it," Cohn, who represents Liggett Group Inc., told jurors in the courtroom packed with about 150 spectators.

In the U.S. District Court lawsuit against Liggett, Lorillard Inc. and Philip Morris Co., Antonio Cipollone contends they misled the public about the dangers of cigarettes.

If the jury awards the 64-year-old retired construction worker damages, which are not specified, it would be the first time a tobacco company has been ordered to pay liability claims brought by smokers and their families.

Attorneys for the other companies were scheduled to present summations today.

The case, filed in 1983, is one of fewer than a dozen smoker liability lawsuits to reach a jury, and other lawyers bringing similar actions say a Cipollone victory could spur a new wave of litigation. Smoking opponents argue that a defeat for Cipollone might permanently stifle such lawsuits because of the effort, time and expense put into the case by his side.

The case was expected to go to the jury Monday.

Cohn called Mrs. Cipollone an intelligent, strong-willed person who "was used to making decisions for herself and family. ... She did what she wanted to do."

The case rests on "the simple proposition that if you believe the testimony of Rose Cipollone and her family, that she smoked cigarettes because she wanted to and because she liked to, even though she knew the risks," then the jury "should return a verdict for Liggett and Myers," Cohn said.

Cohn returned often to her own testimony, given in 1984 and read to the jury, and noted her response during an interview with an addiction expert who reminded her of the first Surgeon General's report on smoking in 1964: "I didn't want to hear it. I liked to smoke. I liked the way I looked. It gave me something to do."

Cipollone says the companies, through inadequate research and a failure to publicize what they knew about the dangers of smoking, should be held liable for damages in his wife's death.

However, Cohn asserted that the companies had a First Amendment right to express their belief that smoking has not been proven to cause cancer.

"There was a raging controversy about smoking and health in the press, and in a free country, people are entitled to express an opinion, and that was what was going on," he said.

Through a series of pretrial rulings and a major decision last month by the trial judge, H. Lee Sarokin, most of Cipollone's claims were cut from the lawsuit.

The jury must still determine whether each company intentionally misrepresented claims about the health consequences of smoking and whether each conspired to do so. As for Liggett, the jury will consider claims that the company failed to warn the public about the risks of its products, and whether Liggett violated its warranty duties.

Mrs. Cipollone smoked Liggett's cigarettes before 1966, the year warnings were put on cigarette packs. The courts have ruled that the warnings pre-empt failure-to-warn claims after that year.

Both sides presented dozens of witnesses, including company executives, company researchers, physicians, medical experts, advertising and marketing experts and Cipollone family members.

144 contestants resume quest for National Spelling Bee title

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 144 survivors of the first day of the National Spelling Bee breezed past words like "stolkjaerre" and "taiaha," but now things might actually get challenging.

Three rounds Wednesday of the 61st annual renewal of the contest, which ends today, began with relatively simple words but quickly moved into tougher ones. Fifty-six contenders out of a record field of 200 were winnowed out.

Donald R. Surratt, 13, of Coalwood, W. Va., found himself spelling "ego" in Round One and successfully negotiating his way two rounds later through "stolkjaerre," a two-wheeled cart used in Norway. Kanika Bahl, 12, of Beavercreek, Ohio, tackled "upright" as her first word but had to master "taiaha," a club used as a weapon in New Zealand, to survive.

While Wednesday's selections came from study lists the contestants were given previously, most of today's words will not, said Alex J. Cameron, an English professor at the University of Dayton who is the event's master of ceremonies.

"There will be a drastic shift in the mortality rate," said Cameron, who has been reading the words to challengers for the last eight competitions and in bee parlance is the contest's pronouncer.

Still alive in the bee is Iris Liu, a third-grader from Muncie, Ind., who is the youngest contestant in the tournament's history. Iris does not turn nine until June 20.

Eleven-year-old Robert Pryor of Washington, D.C., made it through the first three rounds despite stomach cramps so severe that he had to be helped to the microphone by his grandfather and a contest aide.

Wednesday's rounds featured a spelling error by bee officials themselves.

They began distributing to reporters a list of words that had been asked in the first round when one journalist pointed out that a word appeared to be misspelled. Indeed, "hitchhike" had come out "hitchike" on the bee's list, and officials stopped handing it out while they penned in the missing "h" on all 300 copies.

When the event began Wednesday, there were 102 girls and 98 boys from 47 states, the Virgin Islands, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam and Mexico in the running.

None of them was yet 15 years old, even though contest rules permit entrants who have not reached their 16th birthdays, are not yet in the ninth grade and have not won previously.

Last year's winner was Stephanie Petit, 13, from Bethel Park, Pa., who correctly spelled "staphylococci," a bacteria. In that contest, in which there were 185 entrants, it took 876 words before a winner was declared.

There were 485 words offered Wednesday.

Webster's Third New International Dictionary, copyright in 1986, which seemingly weighs as much as some of the contestants, is used as the final authority by the judges.

Competitors are eliminated as soon as they misspell a word. A judge clangs a desktop bell to let each error-maker know that for him or her, the contest is over.

When only two contenders are left, the rules change. If a contestant misspells a word, his or her opponent is asked to spell it correctly. If the opponent can correctly spell the misspelled word and one additional word, a winner is declared.

Contest officials estimate that 8 million to 9 million children competed in local tournaments that produced the 200 hopefuls who traveled to Washington for the finals.

The event offers $1,500 and other prizes to the winner.

The sponsor, the Scripps Howard newspaper chain, also gives $1,000 to the second place finisher, $750 for third place, $500 for fourth, $400 for fifth, $300 for sixth, $200 each for seventh through 10th, $100 each for 11th through 20th, and $50 to each of the other 180 entrants.

Arizona Supreme Court asked to dismiss charges against Mecham

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — With opening arguments in former Gov. Evan Mecham's criminal trial just hours away, the Arizona Supreme Court was deciding today whether to let them begin.

Attorneys for Mecham and his brother, Willard, made a last-minute bid Wednesday for dismissal of charges that they concealed a $350,000 campaign loan.

The high court was asked to otherwise return the charges to a state grand jury or delay the trial so the justices could consider the matter further.

The court was expected to issue a decision before today's scheduled start of opening arguments in Maricopa County Superior Court.

The Mechams' attorneys argued Wednesday before the Supreme Court that the grand jury that indicted the pair Jan. 8 was misled and was discouraged from calling witnesses or reviewing transcripts of earlier testimony.

Assistant Attorney General William Schafer III countered that the grand jurors were neither misled nor discouraged from seeking any information they wanted.

Chief Justice Frank X. Gordon Jr., who presided over the state Senate trial that resulted in the first-term Republican governor's impeachment, did not participate in Wednesday's proceeding.

Mecham was removed from office April 4 because of his Senate conviction on two unrelated impeachment charges.

He faces up to 22 years in prison if convicted on all six counts of perjury, willful concealment and filing false documents. Willard Mecham, his brother's 1986 campaign treasurer, faces three similar counts and up to 9½ years in prison if convicted.

Lower courts have refused previous defense motions to dismiss or remand the charges for a new determination of probable cause.

Mecham long has contended the $350,000 loan in 1986 from Tempe developer Barry Wolfson was properly reported as part of a $465,000 lump sum that was listed as a contribution from himself.

Accountant Roger Brown told a lower court Tuesday he testified before the grand jury that the $465,000 was the only instance in which contributions from different sources on different days were lumped together on financial reports.

"That man lied before the grand jury," Mecham's attorney, Michael Scott, told the Supreme Court on Wednesday.

Willard Mecham's attorney, Joe Keilp, said there were other instances in his client's "primitive, manual bookkeeping system" where various contributions were lumped together.

Schafer responded that Brown had said those were contributions made either from the same source or on the same day. "There are no inaccuracies" in Brown's testimony, he said.

Debris lies scattered around destroyed buildings at Borken brown coal mine. (AP Laserphoto)

Rescuers dig feverishly but hopes fade for trapped miners

BORKEN, West Germany (AP) — Workers digging feverishly through tons of debris pulled 35 bodies from a coal shaft rocked by a fierce explosion and officials said today that they were certain 22 trapped miners had also died.

Gottfried Milde, the Hesse state interior minister, said rescue workers discovered six bodies late this morning.

Family and friends had kept an all-night vigil in this mining town 70 miles northeast of Frankfurt, waiting for the latest word on Wednesday's disaster, which officials attributed to a methane gas buildup.

Today, rescue workers used extra-sensitive listening devices, searching without success for any signs of life or tapping.

"The chances of finding any survivors have sunk to zero," said Hesse state mining director Wolf Boettcher.

Mayor Bernd Hessler said he did not believe survivors would be found because oxygen had probably run out for the miners the blast caught 330 feet below ground.

Erwin Braun, head of the Hesse state mining board, told reporters today that the explosion was caused by a methane gas buildup and said he feared none of the 57 miners who were underground during the blast had survived.

"Rescue work is being hindered by heavy damage, and rescue teams can proceed only with oxygen masks," he said, explaining that there was still the danger of a methane gas buildup in the mine.

Braun said carbon monoxide levels inside the mine had receded, but were still severe.

Some of the dead were found with their miners' breathing masks on, he said, which means they survived the blast and apparently ran out of air. The breathing devices provide about three hours' of oxygen.

Other miners were killed by the explosion itself and will be hard to identify because of the extent of their injuries, Braun said.

The blast blew the roofs off at least three work buildings at the mine, knocked down sheds and shattered windows. Eight miners on the surface were critically injured by flying debris.

"My son Dieter is down there. He's been a miner for 20 years," said Werner Henke, an elderly man who was waiting overnight at his son's house.

In a building not far from the mine shaft, wives and other relatives of the missing workers were consoling each other, but even they expressed little hope their loved ones would be saved.

"That was an incredible explosion," said 60-year-old Gerhard Hettmanczyk, whose son-in-law Alfred Wiremba was among the missing.

About 30 rescuers worked inside the mine through the night. Hundreds of others worked under floodlights above ground, pumping fresh air into the shaft and acting as support for the rescue teams.

Most of the miners in the shaft at the time of the blast were in their 30s and 40s and some of them were Turks, officials said.

About 170 people had been employed at the brown-coal mine owned by Preussen Elektra of Hanover, one of the largest West German utility companies.

The mine is set in a field, with the nearest residences about 500 yards away.

Duarte seriously ill with cancer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The acting chief executive says President Jose Napoleon Duarte is "on the verge of death," that one of the hemisphere's staunchest U.S. allies has cancer of the stomach and liver.

The 62-year-old Duarte is in Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington D.C. for diagnosis and treatment.

With prospects for his return to the presidency dimming by the hour, Salvadorans face additional uncertainty heaped upon an already confusing national panorama of war and economic stagnation.

Vice President Rodolfo Castillo Claramount, the acting chief executive, told journalists Wednesday "it has been confirmed that President Duarte has a cancerous bleeding ulcer in the stomach. Today's (Wednesday's) examination... showed that the liver is also affected by cancer."

Castillo Claramount said an official prognosis would be issued today by doctors at Walter Reed, where Duarte has been hospitalized since his arrival there Tuesday night.

The vice president read part of the 41st Psalm, which talks of people hoping for their enemy's death, then added: "Unfortunately in the past days, this kind of situation has come up in the country."

"I ask for a minimal expression of humanity, of charity. A fellow man's pain cannot be toyed with. No one can doubt the word of a man on the verge of death, who has had the courage to say it," he said.

Duarte is in the last year of his five-year term and his image and influence have been so eroded that his absence is expected to have little impact on El Salvador's already staggering problems.

When he assumed the presidency in 1984, a popular and dynamic Duarte was hailed as a figure of historic proportions who would lead the country out of decades of conflict and widespread misery. But very little of what he promised has been wrought.

An 8-year-old civil war between U.S.-backed government forces and leftist guerrillas continues unabated.

The economy is in a shambles. The average Salvadoran's real income is almost 40 percent below what it was at the start of the war. About 500,000 people — 10 percent of the population — has been displaced to squalid shantytowns and refugee camps.

Because of the lack of security, investment is virtually nil.

Duarte's absence "could even make things easier. In himself, because of the way he is, he is an obstacle," businessman Tomas Pineda commented Wednesday before word came of the gravity of Duarte's illness.

"Duarte leaves the country with an incurable political disease, because of the failure of the counterinsurgency plan. Duarte leaves and the people remain to carry out the revolution," the guerrillas said in a broadcast on one of their clandestine radio stations.

Human rights activists: Widespread army brutality in occupied lands

ARURA, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli human rights activists accuse their nation's soldiers of widespread brutality in the occupied lands and say such tactics are prolonging the six-month-old Palestinian uprising.

In one case, an Arab resident of this isolated village said soldiers pelted him with rocks for two hours last month as he sat handcuffed in a pit. Two hand-sized spots of dried blood were visible in the pit several days later.

In another village, Arabs alleged troops forced them to remove roadblocks as they tried to evacuate a 15-year-old shot by soldiers in a clash — intentionally wasting crucial minutes of the boy's life. The youth died the same day.

In a third case, a 70-year-old man claimed troops threw him into a 12-foot-deep well in his garden and closed the lid. The man, who suffered sprained ankles and a fractured lower back, said he sat in two feet of cold water for six hours before being rescued.

The army said initial investigations proved the allegations in all three cases to be unfounded, adding that soldiers were cleared of wrong-doing.

Army officials acknowledged that some soldiers have brutalized Palestinians, but described these cases as "exceptions."

Parliament member Dedi Zucker of the liberal Citizens Rights Movement disagrees: "There are too many cases to describe them as exceptions."

Such incidents, he said this week, deeply affect the Palestinians. He quoted an unnamed senior defense official as telling legislators "harassment and maltreatment by soldiers" were to blame for prolonging unrest.

Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip have been protesting Israeli rule since Dec 8. More than 200 Palestinians and two Israelis have been killed in the upheaval.

Zucker has asked the Defense Ministry to check 10 complaints, including three in which troops are accused of beating Arabs to death in the Gaza Strip. And Israel's Civil Rights Associations have forwarded 17 complaints, mainly concerning brutality.

Neither received detailed responses, and the Justice Ministry is now reviewing army and police investigation methods.

One widely publicized case occurred May 18 during an army raid of Arura. Mohammed Awad, 23, said he was arrested and handcuffed in nearby hills, where soldiers placed him and two other villagers into four-foot-deep stone pits.

"There were about 20 to 25 soldiers who pelted me and the others with stones," he said in an interview at his home. After two hours, a soldier yanked him up by his hair when he couldn't stand up because most of his body was covered by stones, Awad said.

Ambassador's car hit by gunfire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. Ambassador John Kelly's car was hit in a brief exchange of gunfire between his bodyguards and a Christian militia patrol in east Beirut today, but the envoy was not hurt, police said.

A police spokesman, who cannot be named under standing regulations, said only one bullet hit the hood of Kelly's armor-plated limousine.

The spokesman said the shooting occurred when Kelly's bodyguards in two escort cars fired in the air with automatic rifles, "apparently to make way for the ambassador's convoy" in a traffic-jammed street in the Sin Fil neighborhood.

The ambassador's motorcade was heading for the heavily guarded U.S. Embassy compound in the suburb of Aukar.

The police spokesman said Kelly was in a dark blue bullet-proof limousine driving between the two escort vehicles.

A militia patrol from President

Amin Gemayel's right-wing Phalange Party, which was in the area, "opened fire in the air, too, in an effort to stop Kelly's convoy to check what was happening," the spokesman said.

"Kelly's bodyguards fired three bullets at the Phalangists in a white Mercedes-Benz and the patrol fired back," the spokesman said.

"Kelly's car was hit by one bullet in the hood and the convoy continued on its way to the embassy," the spokesman added. He did not elaborate.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said: "The ambassador and all his escorts are fine." He refused to elaborate.

In another development, police said three members of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, were wounded in a brief firefight with rival Shiite Moslem of the Syrian-aided Amal militia in south Beirut on Wednesday night.

A police spokesman said the five-minute firefight in the Shiyah district ended when Syrian troops intervened.

The clash was the first reported between the two sides since Syria deployed 2,400 soldiers in Beirut's southern slums on Friday and Saturday to end three weeks of street battles between the two militias in which nearly 300 people were killed and 1,000 wounded.

Amal accused Hezbollah of provoking the clash and said the three wounded militiamen were armed with silencer-equipped pistols.

Hezbollah said Amal militiamen opened fire on the three "unarmed" Hezbollahis as they drove to Shiyah to check on their apartments.

Lightning has struck over a thousand times since 1966 at "TEXAS," the musical drama that plays nightly except Sundays in Palo Duro Canyon from July 15 through Aug. 27.

Singing and dancing are an important part of the "TEXAS" production, as in this opening scene at Pioneer Amphitheatre.

'TEXAS' begins 1988 season June 15

CANYON — "TEXAS" begins its 23rd season at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 15 in the open-air Pioneer Amphitheatre beneath the cliffs of Palo Duro Canyon.

The musical drama will play nightly except Sundays through Aug. 27 in the state park near Canyon and Amarillo.

Opening night festivities this year will honor previous and current board members of the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, the non-profit producer of "TEXAS."

A reception in honor of the board is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the flag area on the patio prior to the first performance. The group will also be recognized during the show.

This is part of a continuing effort this year to reward the 150 persons from 40 surrounding communities of the Texas Panhandle who make up the foundation.

One-half million dollars in renovations during the past three years can be seen in the show's costumes, sets and sound and light equipment.

The famed thunderstorm scene takes on a new dimension, while the favorite fire ballet is danced through a haze of realistic smoke.

Cowboys and Indians mount horses as the story of early Panhandle life unfolds. A romantic triangle brings the struggles between a farmer and rancher to life while they battle the fierce elements of nature.

An eventual collaboration produces a railroad and a new town for the area.

Written by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Paul Green, "TEXAS" is the dream of founder Margaret Harper. Having read about Green and his outdoor dramas in Reader's Digest in 1960, she wrote the famous letter that drew Green to Palo Duro Canyon.

It took six years to raise the money, build the theatre and for Green to complete the script. Today, the script remains virtually unchanged, but talent and the latest sound and light technology have been added. Ideas that Green envisioned in 1966 but were technically impossible are now a reality.

Top talent from across the Southwest has become a trademark as "TEXAS" offers semi-professionals the opportunity to play to near-full houses each night with an average of 1,600 persons in attendance. This year the cast of 80 comes from 13 states and one foreign country.

Last year, 100,000 persons traveled from every state and 84 foreign countries to see the production. Over 1.8 million have seen "TEXAS" since its beginning.

Reservations are encouraged and may be obtained by calling the "TEXAS" office at 665-2181 or by writing "TEXAS," P.O. Box 268, Canyon, 79015.

In the event that all seats have been reserved, it is still possible to get tickets. Be at the canyon box office at 6 p.m. to sign a waiting list. Cancellations occur, and in addition some 250 step-seats are never sold in advance.

The waiting list is called at 7:45 p.m. to distribute tickets in the order names were signed.

An optional chuckwagon barbecue is served by Sutphen's of Amarillo before each performance from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Reservations are not necessary, and dinner is not included in ticket prices.

Amarillo hospital to participate in telethon

AMARILLO — Northwest Texas Hospital will again be part of the 1988 Children's Miracle Network Telethon, announced Lynell Larue, hospital spokesman.

The 21-hour telethon will air live from Disneyland, Walt Disney World and Tokyo Disneyland on June 4-5, benefiting 160 hospitals for children worldwide.

Having raised $41 million from 1987 efforts alone, the Children's Miracle Network Telethon is the largest television fund-raising event in the history of telethons. In just five years, the telethon has raised more than $110 million for children.

KAMR-TV will air the national telethon as well as broadcast the NWTN local effort: Each hour of the telethon is made up of a 40-minute national segment and a 20-minute local appeal hosted by Mary Hughes and Steve Oakley.

Established in 1983, the Children's Miracle Network Telethon is unique in that 100 percent of the money raised stays in the community of the donor, to benefit the local children's hospital. In 1987, 1986 and 1985, over $300,000 has been raised locally to benefit the children's hospital at NWTN.

NWTN treats children of all afflictions, including birth defects, accidents and muscular and cardiovascular diseases. NWTN has also been responsible, through the Children's Health Foundation which sponsors the telethon, for sending doctors and nurses to area hospitals to teach new techniques. The neonatal division at NWTN is the only facility of its kind between Lubbock and Denver.

More than 100 television, recording, movie and sports personalities will appear on the 1988 show June 4-5. Some of these include Bob Hope, Marie Osmond, John Schneider, Merlin Olsen, Marilyn McCoo, Mary Hart, Rich Little, Jim McMahon and Malcolm-Jamal Warner. All celebrities donate their time and talent to the telethon.

Theme of this year's show is "Make a Miracle Happen." The telethon originated from the Osmond Studios in Orem, Utah. It is produced by the Osmond Foundation, which is a non-profit organization founded by the performing Osmond family.

Through the efforts of dedicated physicians and staff in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit at NWTN, the mortality rate has been reduced from 25 per 1,000 in 1978 to seven per 1,000 in 1986.

The Children's Health Foundation was established to promote and foster maternal and child health care in the Texas Panhandle. Gifts and grants are used to provide equipment, education and supplies to augment and expand the services rendered by NWTN.

Local sponsors of the 1988 telethon are Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Burger King, Plains Creamery, Coors, Toot 'n Totum, Amarillo Imports and Dairy Queen, including the Pampa Dairy Queen.

Items purchased with donations from previous telethons include a noninvasive blood pressure monitor, cardiac monitors, a neonatal/pediatric monitor with recorder, fetal monitors, Sechrist ventilators, apnea monitors and a life pack, used to treat EKG of infants and adolescents in cardiac distress.

The NWTN 1988 wish list includes a neonatal/pediatric monitor, strip recorders for existing monitors, printer and monitor, special crib, youth intensive care unit bed, Level 1 fluid warmer, neonatal high frequency oscillatory ventilator, oxygen analyzers, ultrasonic instrument washer and sterilizer, burning stabelet, fetal monitors, dinamaps, labor beds, transport incubator, cardiac/apnea monitors, autosyringes, isolettes and blanket warmers.

Woman's driving is less than desirable

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when you know you're a terrible driver but have to drive? I can't afford to take a cab everywhere, and the bus system where I live is inadequate.

I am 22 and have been driving for four years. In that time, I've had one major accident (both cars totaled, no serious injuries, thank God), and three minor but expensive accidents — and I can't count the number of near hits. My insurance rate is sky-high and my reputation as a driver is terrible.

Abby, I'm an intelligent, competent woman, but when I get behind a wheel, I tend to screw up. I never drink and drive. I do play the radio — only moderately loud — but I never fiddle with it while the car is moving. I almost always drive alone, so it's not that I get involved in conversation and take my mind off the road. I can't figure out why I make such awful errors in judgment.

Dear Abby

Please help me before I kill somebody!

LORETTA

DEAR LORETTA: Even though you have a license to drive, I think you should take a course in driver's education in order to improve your driving. In the meantime, you could minimize your risk by riding to and from work with a co-worker and anywhere else with a friend when possible. And when you absolutely must drive, concentrate 100 percent on your driving. (P.S. Have you checked out your vision? Your reflexes? Your depth perception? My hat is off to you for recognizing a serious problem and wanting to do something about it. Our hospitals (and cemeteries) are filled with people who are there because somebody shouldn't have been driving — but did.

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Appalled in Colorado" that I'm just as surprised as he was that the high school principal flew the high school flag at half-mast.

Normally on dry land, flags are flown at "half-staff" because most masts are on ships.

Pistons bounce back for overtime victory

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — The cold-shooting Boston Celtics are struggling to find the basket. Isiah Thomas and Adrian Dantley can show them where it is.

The Detroit duo's marksmanship and Boston's off-target tosses have put the Pistons a victory away from the NBA championship series and the Celtics in big trouble.

Boston, which has reached the final in each of the last four seasons, won't get there this season unless it wins on the road Friday night and at home Sunday when a seventh game will be played, if necessary.

With Thomas scoring 35 points and Dantley adding 18, Detroit overcame a 16-point deficit and beat Boston 102-96 in overtime Wednesday night to take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final.

"It could have been our biggest win, but we have a lot of hard work ahead of us," Pistons' center Bill Laimbeer said.

With Boston leading 70-61, Detroit scored the next 14 points to go ahead 75-70 with 9:25 left in the fourth quarter. Thomas took four shots in that stretch and made them all.

"I said, 'if we're going to lose, I'm going to go down shooting,'" said Thomas, who had 29 points after halftime.

With Boston leading 94-92 on Dennis Johnson's layup with 3:52 left in overtime, Dantley made a free throw with 3:37 to go and a three-point play that gave the Pistons the lead for good, 96-94, with 2:52 remaining. On both plays he was guarded by Fred Roberts, who took over when Kevin McHale fouled out with 1:59 left in the fourth quarter.

"We wanted the ball in his (Dantley's) hands down the stretch because he had Roberts on him and we knew he could get to the basket," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said.

Thomas hit two free throws and a layup, making the score 100-94 with 1:17 to go. Boston came no closer than four points thereafter.

The Pistons, who broke a 21-game losing streak in Boston in the series opener, have won two of three games there in the series. The Celtics lost nine straight at the Pontiac Silverdome before winning Game 4 Monday. The home team won all seven games in last year's conference final between the same teams.

"No matter where we play, we have to play better than we've been playing," Boston guard Jim Paxson said.

Mavs confident of victory

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — In an NBA Western Conference final series where home warriors turn into road wimps, the Dallas Mavericks will try tonight to extend the defending world champion Los Angeles Lakers to a seventh and deciding game.

The Lakers lead 3-2 in a best-of-seven series that has had five straight blowouts.

The Mavericks are so confident they can "hold serve" on their home court that Dallas owner Donald Carter said, "We're not worried about tonight. We're worried about Game 7 in Los Angeles on Saturday."

Los Angeles mauled the Mavericks 119-102 on Tuesday night as Magic Johnson's "showtime" fun included 20 assists, two of them his no-look specials, and 41-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar ran the court like a young man and scored 21 points.

The 17-point spread was typical of the way the series has evolved.

The Lakers have won by 15 and 22 points in other yawner games at the friendly Forum while Dallas has inflicted 12- and 14-point losses on Los Angeles in rowdy Reunion Arena.

"I really believe this game in Dallas will be different," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "I hope we learned our lesson the last time we were down there. Our players know what's at stake. We'd like to end it in Dallas."

The Lakers faded badly in the fourth quarter in both games in Dallas, looking like a leg weary team.

However, the Mavericks were sent reeling by their sound defeat on Tuesday night.

"We let them get away from us early and you can't do that against the Lakers, especially in the Forum," Mavericks coach John MacLeod said. "They just ran us into the ground."

Dallas is 0-9 at the Forum in playoff games.

"We just hope we have to worry about that problem again," MacLeod said. "We have to take care of business first. The Lakers sense a knockout. We can't let it happen."

Dallas forward Mark Aguirre called the Lakers' performance on Tuesday night the finest he has seen.

"I don't think I've ever seen them play that well," Aguirre said.

Dallas guard Derek Harper, the hero of Game 4 with 35 points, said the Mavericks should bounce back at home.

"We haven't lost our confidence," he said. "Los Angeles just played an exceptional game. We just have to win two straight. We can do it."

Dallas has never been as far as Game 6 of the Western Conference finals and the Lakers are seeking to become the first team in 19 years to win consecutive NBA titles.

Triangle drops Lions

Triangle Energy improve to 6-2 on the year with a 7-3 win over Lions Club in a Babe Ruth (13-year old) game last night.

Despite a good pitching performance by Mitch Spence, the Lions trailed 2-0 after four innings and Spence was lifted in favor of Jason Johnson, who completed the game for the Lions.

Although Spence and Johnson allowed only one hit each, untimely errors and seven walks proved to be the Lions' undoing.

A good defensive effort was turned in by Triangle in holding the Lions to only three runs. In the bottom of the fourth with two out and the bases loaded, Will Winborne hit a drive to the outfield, but John Bilyeu came on to make the catch and preserve a 2-0 Triangle lead.

John Donnelly and Jason Brantley each pitched three innings, holding the Lions to four hits. Mark Woelfle was called on in the seventh inning and picked up the save.

In the seventh, the Lions' Justin Johnson reached first on a throwing error, then was thrown out by catcher Dave Davis on a steal attempt of second. Woelfle then struck out the next two batters to end the game.

Donnelly, who was the winning pitcher, struck out three, walked two and gave up one hit; Brantley struck out five, walked three and yielded three runs on three hits.

Brantley with a triple and Micah Brooks with a single were the top hitters for Triangle. Spence had a double for the Lions while Brad Smiley, Jason Johnson and Kevin Savage had one single each.

Signups tonight in 16-18 league

Signup for the Babe Ruth 16-18 year-old league will be held from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. tonight at the Optimist Club.

Coaches are also needed and interested persons should be at the Optimist Club during the signup time.

Duncan, Dunlap whip up on foes

Duncan and Dunlap Industrial picked up lopsided wins in Major League (11-12) baseball action Wednesday night at Optimist Park.

Duncan pounded out 13 hits in an 18-2 win over Celanese while Dunlap shut off Glo-Valve Service 10-0.

Rene Armendariz led Duncan at the plate with two doubles and a single. Shawn Hays had a double and two singles and Jason Soukup added a pair of base runs.

Winning pitcher was Dennis Graham, who furthered his own cause with a three-run homer and a single. Also collecting hits for Duncan were Pedro Montoya with two singles, Richard Williams, a two-run single, and Jason Warren, an RBI single.

Armendariz picked up a save in relief of Graham on the mound. Graham struck out five, walked two and allowed one run on one hit. Armendariz struck out six, walked one, and allowed one run on three hits.

Greg Campbell, Danny Frye, Jason Cochran and T.J. Crawford each had singles for Celanese.

Dunlap improved its record to 5-3 in the win over Glo-Valve.

Andy Elsheimer limited Glo-Valve to just two hits while Justin Long and Seth Heiskell provided the hitting punch for Dunlap.

Elsheimer struck out six and walked two in pitching his second shutout of the year.

Long had a triple and single while Heiskell drove in two runs with a sharp single in the first inning.

Walks contributed to Glo-Valve's downfall as three pitchers couldn't keep Dunlap off the bases. David Potter took the loss on the mound.

Chad Dunnam with a double and Dale Noble with a single led Glo-Valve, which dropped to 4-5 for the season.

In a battle of unbeaten, Wayne's Western Wear slipped by Warner & Finney, 15-14, in Rookie League (7-8 year olds) action Wednesday night.

Both teams were 4-0 going into the game.

The lead changed three times in the first four innings, but Wayne's took the lead for good in the fourth inning with a seven-run outburst.

Top hitters for Wayne's were Josh Dumas and Matt Evans with three singles apiece. Chad Lloyd, Kyle Gambling, Marc Covalt and Scott Rose each had a single and double, and Brandon Campbell, two singles, for Wayne's.

Top hitters for Warner-Finney were Preston Reed, Amos Valmores and Leo

Ramirez with three singles apiece; Logan Stinnett, two singles and inside the park home run; Shawn Young, single, triple and inside the park home run; Kory Nichell, Josh Franklin, Brandon Hill and Chad Epperson, two singles.

In Bambino Minor League play last night, unbeaten Chase Oilfield dropped Thomas Automotive 16-9.

T.J. Davis with a triple and Matt Utzman with a double had the extra base hits for Chase, who improved to 4-0.

Others with hits for Chase were Bryan Waldrip, Brandon Strickland and Devin Lemons.

Billy Thomas had a triple and double for Thomas while Tim Kincannon had a triple and Brian Cota, a double.

Winning pitcher was T.J. Davis, who struck out five, walked five and yielded three hits and six runs in three innings.

Lefors launches coed little league baseball program

June is the month for baseball, softball and T-ball in Pampa and the area towns, and I decided to use this space for a general roundup today.

Lefors has come up with an interesting answer to the Little League program. Larry Franks, president of the Youth Club, has organized a baseball program for boys and girls in Lefors, ages 8-13.

That's quite a mix, if you can imagine both boys and girls with a five-year range in age, playing together on the same team. It makes for some interesting and high-scoring games.

They've fielded three teams, the Yankees, Giants and Cardinals, that play each other twice during the regular season.

Although Lefors was a member of the Little League Association last year, they have chosen to develop their own program this year, independent of Little League.

In addition to the baseball teams, Lefors has fielded T-ball teams for kids from ages five to seven.

According to Franks, there are a couple of advantages to not being sanctioned by the Little League. "Although we can't play the area teams, we can play within our own program and keep the money here. Also, we don't have to travel so far all the time."

The Yankees defeated the Giants 35-32 last week in seven innings. At the end of six regular innings of play, the score was tied at 26, but the Yankees rallied during the extra inning to walk away with the win.

That game marked the end of the first half of the season. The Yankees lead the league 2-0, followed by the Giants 1-1, and the Cardinals 0-2.

At the end of the season, on June 16-18, the Lefors league will hold a tournament in which all three teams will be awarded medals for their participation.

Franks says the Lefors teams, both baseball and T-ball, would like to play the area teams in informal games following the regular season. Any teams interested in playing can contact Franks at 835-2354 or 835-2224.

Franks also wants to express thanks to Cabot Carbon Black, Adams and Franks Contractors, Frank's Steam Service, Curly's Roustabout and Backhoe, H. G. Padgett and Lefors I.S.D. for sponsoring the games.

day, B & B Solvent squeaked past Hall's Stereo Center, 25-24.

During the four-inning game, Josh Grissom and Steven Soto each hit a homerun, and Nick Pack hit two homers.

The Beginners League features youngsters who have never played before. Their games start every Saturday morning at 9:00 and 11:00.

On June 10, 11 and 12, Shamrock is hosting a USSSA men's softball tournament, sponsored by the Shamrock Varsity Cheerleaders.

The tournament will be governed by USSSA rules. Competitors must bring their own tournament blue-stitch softballs.

The entry fee is $100 per team, and the sign-up deadline is June 6.

Team trophies will be prepared to 1st, 2nd and 3rd place finishers. T-shirts will be given to individual players on the top three teams.

Interested parties should contact tournament director Kenneth Campbell at 256-3020 or Dee Reeder at 256-3676.

And speaking of softball tournaments, Miami is hosting one this weekend in conjunction with the Cow Calling Contest.

The tournament, sponsored by the Miami E.M.S., is scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Baseball Park. Come on out and have some barbecue, but watch out for those stampeding cows!

I sometimes feel obliged to defend the Rangers, but there's not a whole lot to say about Wednesday night's game against the Twins in the Metrodome.

When you say Frank Viola, you've named the Twins' defense. Minnesota's starting left-hander pitched a five-hitter and held the Rangers to one run as he earned the victory in a 7-1 romp over Texas Wednesday.

It started out scoreless for the first four innings. But Guzman's pitching broke down in the fifth, or the Twins' bats came alive, however you like to look at it. Apparently, Rangers' Manager Bobby Valentine chose the latter, because he left Guzman on the mound until the sixth. He gave Guzman a chance to pull himself out of the hole, but to no avail.

The Twins collected six hits and four runs in the fifth. They grabbed four more hits and three runs in the sixth before Guzman was relieved by Ray Fossas, who pitched to two batters. Valentine then brought in McMurtry, who held the Twins scoreless for the remainder of the game.

The Rangers picked up McMurtry in December as a free agent and just recently brought him up from their Oklahoma City farm team. McMurtry was named Rookie of the Year in 1983 while playing for the Braves. He did a fine job last night for two and one-third innings, but by then it was too late. The Rangers all ready trailed 7-0.

Pete Incaviglia scored the Rangers' lone run in the seventh on an RBI single by Steve Buechele.

Minnesota's Kirby Puckett drove in three runs on three hits. I always hated to see him in centerfield when I went to the Ranger games. He inevitably spells trouble for his opponents. He sure can run for a short, stocky man. Wednesday's game marked the 11th straight in which Puckett has hit. The Twins collected 13 hits on the night.

Viola lasted all nine innings, bringing his record to 9-1 on the year. He was called in the seventh for his first balk of the year, but unlike Kilgus the previous evening, he chose to allow Umpire Ken Kaiser's call to go uncontested. I guess balks are like speeding tickets. The umps have to meet their quotas.

The Rangers lost the series with the Twins 2-1, dropping to third in the AL West in the process. Minnesota moved into second, one and one-half games in front of Texas. The Twins have won 10 of their last 11 games.

The Rangers begin a series tonight against the White Sox in Chicago.

Jim Abbott is drafted by Angels.

Angels pick one-handed hurler

Baseball draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Abbott, the one-handed pitcher whose achievements as an amateur earned America's highest sporting award, doesn't think of himself as being special.

The California Angels thought he was special enough to spend the eighth pick in the first round of baseball's pitcher-rich amateur draft Wednesday on the left-hander from the University of Michigan.

"They talked to me about my situation, having one hand," said Abbott, who was born without a right hand. "They said it didn't matter to them, that they just needed a left-handed pitcher."

"I don't think of myself as different," added Abbott, the 1987 Sullivan Award winner as the nation's best amateur athlete. "I don't think of myself as courageous. I grew up learning to do things within my capabilities. I've had a good time doing what I've done."

What he's done is earn Big Ten Player of the Year honors and star for the United States at the Pan American Games. He will try out for the U.S. squad for the Seoul Olympics.

Abbott faces not only the usual struggle of trying to make the major leagues, but he must convince doubters he can pitch despite his handicap and protect himself from balls hit back to the mound.

Before going into his windup, Abbott balances his glove on the nub of his right wrist. He delivers the ball and jams his left hand into the glove by the time the ball reaches the plate. When he catches the ball, he jams the glove under his right arm and the ball rolls into his left hand. It takes about a second.

"We've watched him and we felt he's been able to make the adjustments necessary. He has no fear of the ball. Once we were convinced he could handle that part of the game we knew he'd be able to play. He's a remarkable young man," Angels scouting director Bob Fontaine Jr. said.

Abbott was 9-3 with a 3.32 earned run average and 82 strikeouts in 97 2-3 innings. He was 8-1 with a 1.70 ERA for the Pan American team, and was the first U.S. pitcher to beat Cuba in 25 years.

Abbott was 26-8 in three seasons at Michigan after turning down a $50,000 offer from the Toronto Blue Jays, who took him on the 36th round in 1985, when he finished high school.

Fourteen of the first 26 players chosen were pitchers, with Andy Benes, a right-hander from the University of Evansville, taken by the San Diego Padres as the No. 1 pick.

Pete Rose II, son of baseball's all-time hit leader and manager of the Cincinnati Reds, went to the Baltimore Orioles. The younger Rose is a third baseman for Oak Hills High School in suburban Cincinnati.

"I think I went in the 12th round," said Rose, 18. "We haven't heard anything from Baltimore or anybody really. My mom knows some scouts and she called them."

The clubs do not have to reveal their selections past the first round. The teams also have up to seven days to contact the players selected.

Rose hit .440 with four home runs and 41 RBI as a senior. He had hoped to be drafted in the first three rounds and several teams, including the Reds, had shown interest in him. He said he wanted to be picked by another club because playing for his father would have meant too much pressure.

Benes, a 6-foot-5 right-hander, was 16-3 with a 1.42 earned run average, 187 strikeouts and 36 walks in 146 innings. He had eight shutouts.

Cincinnati's Rose back on the job

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — Pete Rose came out of the dugout and headed for an umpire the first day he was back on the job after a 30-day suspension for bumping one.

But the Cincinnati Reds manager had only a brief and uneventful discussion Wednesday with umpire Bruce Froemming.

"Froemming is one of my favorite ump's," Rose said. "I get along with ump's."

Rose approached Froemming after shortstop Barry Larkin injured his finger and left the game. "I wanted Dave Concepcion to get in a few more throws," said Rose, who wanted Concepcion to get extra throws as relief pitchers usually do.

Froemming told Rose that Concepcion would get only four throws and then walked away laughing when Rose asked him, "Did he get in a few more throws while I was talking to you?"

It was Rose's only trip out of the dugout. Meanwhile, he watched the Reds fall to the Chicago Cubs 6-3 for their fifth straight defeat.

"I'm happy to be back but not happy to lose another game," said Rose, who was suspended by the National League and fined $10,000 for bumping and shoving umpire Dave Pallone in an April 30 game against the New York Mets.

"I can't complain," Rose said. "The guys hustled and tried to make things happen, but the opposition got more hits and more runs."

During his absence, the Reds were 12-15 under acting manager Tommy Helms. They were 11-12 before Rose was suspended.

Rose said he was putting the suspension out of his mind.

Pampa golf clinic continues

A second session of Frank McCullough's golf clinic is scheduled for June 6-10 at Clarendon College-Pampa Center.

Enrollment fee is $40 and interested persons can call Clarendon College at 665-8801 to enroll.

The morning session (8 to 10 a.m.) will be primarily for junior golfers, 10 to 14 years old. The evening session (6 to 8 p.m.) will be confined to adults.

Golf clubs will be provided if students don't have their own.

The basic fundamentals will be taught in addition to a video lesson once a week.

McCullough coaches the Pampa High boys and girls golf teams.

Pastorini arrested

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Houston Oilers quarterback Dan Pastorini was involved in a brief scuffle with a police officer and was jailed after being arrested on a public intoxication charge, a police spokesman says.

Houston Police spokesman Dan Turner said Wednesday that Pastorini, 39, had to be subdued and handcuffed after grabbing an officer during a dispute over who would count the money he was carrying when police arrested him and another man on public intoxication charges.

Turner said Pastorini insisted on counting the money himself and grabbed at it when an officer began to count the more than $500.

Another officer subdued Pastorini and handcuffed him and placed him in a holding cell.

Officers decided not to file additional charges against Pastorini because he was intoxicated and the incident was not considered serious enough, Turner said.

Pastorini, who live near Richmond in Fort Bend County, was released after posting a $100 bond.

A statement issued by a public relations firm representing Pastorini said the former NFL player had been celebrating the birthday of a close friend at the time he was arrested.

"This was a complete surprise to me," Pastorini said in a news release. "Unfortunately, public figures sometimes get more attention than they want or deserve."

The former quarterback, who played for the Oilers and Los Angeles Raiders, now races top-fuel dragsters.

Cowboys sale may be off

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Negotiations between Dallas Cowboys majority owner H. R. "Bum" Bright and billionaire Marvin Davis have stopped and the sale of the NFL team to the Los Angeles oilman now appears in doubt, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

The newspaper quoted a source with knowledge of the negotiations as saying that Davis had not contacted Bright or anyone else with the National Football League club in nearly a month.

That has led Bright to believe that Davis no longer is interested in purchasing the Cowboys and Texas Stadium Corp., the source said.

DEA offers reward for Mexican drug lord

EL PASO (AP)— Reputed Mexican drug lord Gilberto Ontiveros no longer faces criminal charges in his country, but the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration hasn't lost interest in him, an official says.

The DEA is offering an unspecified reward for Ontiveros' arrest, said Phil Jordan, special agent in charge of the DEA's Dallas division.

Ontiveros was released last week from a Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, jail after a judge dismissed drug-possession charges against him. The alleged trafficker faces a federal racketeering count in the United States, Jordan said.

Under the continuing criminal enterprise statute, Ontiveros could lose all his property and go to prison for the rest of his life if convicted, Jordan said Tuesday.

Ontiveros, nicknamed "Grenas," which loosely translates as "Shaggy," is assumed to be somewhere in northern Mexico.

"We have put the lookout all over the U.S.-Mexico border in the event that Ontiveros is spotted and turned over to U.S. authorities," Jordan said Tuesday.

Extradition would be difficult, he said, because Mexican law requires almost absolute proof of guilt before someone can be extradited.

Jordan called Ontiveros' release a setback for all law enforcement agencies, and said he has asked officials in Mexico City to find out the technical reason for the alleged drug trafficker's release.

Ontiveros, considered by U.S. authorities to be one of two major drug traffickers based in Ciudad Juarez, had been in jail since 1986 on a drug possession charge. Ten ounces of cocaine and small amounts of hashish and cocaine were found in Ontiveros' Juarez home two years ago.

Supreme Court agrees to hear farmworker case

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has agreed to decide whether the state should pay $47,000 in fees to the lawyers who represented farmworkers in their challenge of a state law that barred them from collecting unemployment compensation.

The high court on Wednesday set June 22 as the hearing date for the case.

Texas Civil Liberties Union attorney Jim Harrington, who represented the farmworkers, said the decision could set a precedent that would make it easier for attorneys in civil rights cases to collect fees from the people they sue.

The 1935 state law barring farmworkers from collecting unemployment compensation was ruled unconstitutional by State District Judge Harley Clark of Austin.

While the case was pending on appeal, the Legislature in 1985 changed the law and made "farm and ranch labor" eligible for unemployment benefits.

The 3rd Court of Appeals at Austin ruled in April 1986 that the lawsuit was moot because of the legislative change. The farmworkers appealed to the Supreme Court, claiming that it should affirm Clark's decision in order to prevent the Legislature from changing its mind and again excluding farmworkers from the unemployment program.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday refused to get involved in the mootness question.

City covers up law's loophole

EL PASO (AP)— City Council members cleared up a loophole in a pornography ordinance that specified topless dancers had to cover up, but didn't say the cover-up had to be opaque.

City Council amended an ordinance Tuesday to make sure adult entertainment establishments are at least 1,000 feet away from homes, schools, churches, parks or other adult businesses.

Before it was altered Tuesday, El Paso's pornography ordinance specified what parts of dancers' bodies had to be covered. But the ordinance didn't specify what kind of covering was acceptable.

"Some of the girls ... were covering their breasts with Vaseline or grease, because the ordinance did not say what type of covering was needed," said

Brenda Nichols, assistant city attorney.

There were reports that other women used see-through fabric and clear adhesive tape to skirt the ordinance.

After Tuesday's City Council action, coverings such as tape, see-through clothing and petroleum jelly are banned.

The amendment went into effect immediately.

Those who still want to see strippers can easily cross an international bridge to Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, where nude dancing and prostitution are legal.

Mike Gibson, an El Paso lawyer who represents some of the adult businesses, said City Council simply is trying to stamp out adult businesses in El Paso.
