Reds, Asia Would Cripple Canal Plan

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG
LONDON (UP)—The Soviet Union joined Asian neutrals today in a pro-Egyptian diplomatic offensive to cripple or kill the Western plan for international operation of the Suez Canal.

They were backed by Cairo reports that Egyptian president Gamal Abdel Nasser would not accept the plan outlined Thursday by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and by reports of new Arab moves against Britain and the West.

Egypt's semi-official Middle East News Agency reported formation of an underground Arab army to sabotage British oil fields and pipelines "when the signal is given." There also were reports of big new Communist arms shipments to Egypt.

Soviet Foreign Minister Dmitri Shepilov was expected to take the diplomatic offensive one step further when he speaks in the second day session of the conference. French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau was the first scheduled speaker.

Already there was growing evidence Russia and such Asian nations as India would try to prevent any decision at this London conference and throw the issue into the bigger conference demanded by Egypt and Russia.

Wing commander Aly Sabri, Nasser's political chief, flew here from Cairo Thursday night and scheduled meetings today with Indian Minister V. K. Krishna Menon and Indonesia's Foreign Minister Ruzaim Abdulgani, both proponents of a bigger conference.

Indonesia already was sounding out other nations on another Afro-Asian conference to study the canal crisis. Informed sources said Krishna Menon had made it plain he believed any decision would have to come at a later conference.

France and Britain were enthusiastic about the four-point plan put forward by Dulles and the influential Daily Telegraph commented, "it is already clear that a substantial majority will be found." But conference sources expressed doubt Russia and the Asians would accept a majority decision here.

O'Daniel Tells Intention To Run As Independent In Nov.

By UNITED PRESS
The announced intention of former governor and U. S. Senator W. Lee O'Daniel to run as an independent for governor in the Nov. 6 general election didn't cause Sen. Price Daniel or Ralph Yarborough to break stride today in their Democratic runoff race for that post.

O'Daniel called a news conference in Dallas late Thursday and told of his plans. At the same time, he accused WBAP-TV, in Fort Worth, of violating his "right of free speech" by refusing to let him broadcast on a "legal technicality."

O'Daniel scheduled a state radio early today and planned to go on from there to Wichita Falls and other Red River Valley towns. He pitched his Lobbeck talk on old age pensions and the drought.

Yarborough flew back to Dallas from an old settlers convention in Quitman. He was scheduled to make his first Fort Worth television appearance over WBAP tonight, and then planned to speak after that in Arlington.

Reached in Quitman Thursday night, Yarborough told the United Press that he had no comment on O'Daniel's announcement other than to agree with him on his charge that "Daniel is a candidate of the greedy millionaires and the big capitalists."

The legal technicality that kept O'Daniel from televising his announcement, he said, was that the station's lawyers doubted that he can run as an independent in November after running third on the Democratic ticket in the primary.

Officials of WBAP — TV said they refused to let him get on the air because, as they see it, he is a private citizen—not a political candidate — now and they might be open to libel suits because of some of his charges.

Demo Convention Starts Fight For Second Spot

What Is Harry Up To?

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO (UP)—The old man went down with his ship in the tradition of the sea. But that is not exactly the tradition of politics and there are politicians hereabouts who wonder just what the old man is up to.

The old man, by the way, is Harry S. Truman's own description of himself. He was saying on Thursday: "The old man never stops in the middle of a fight."

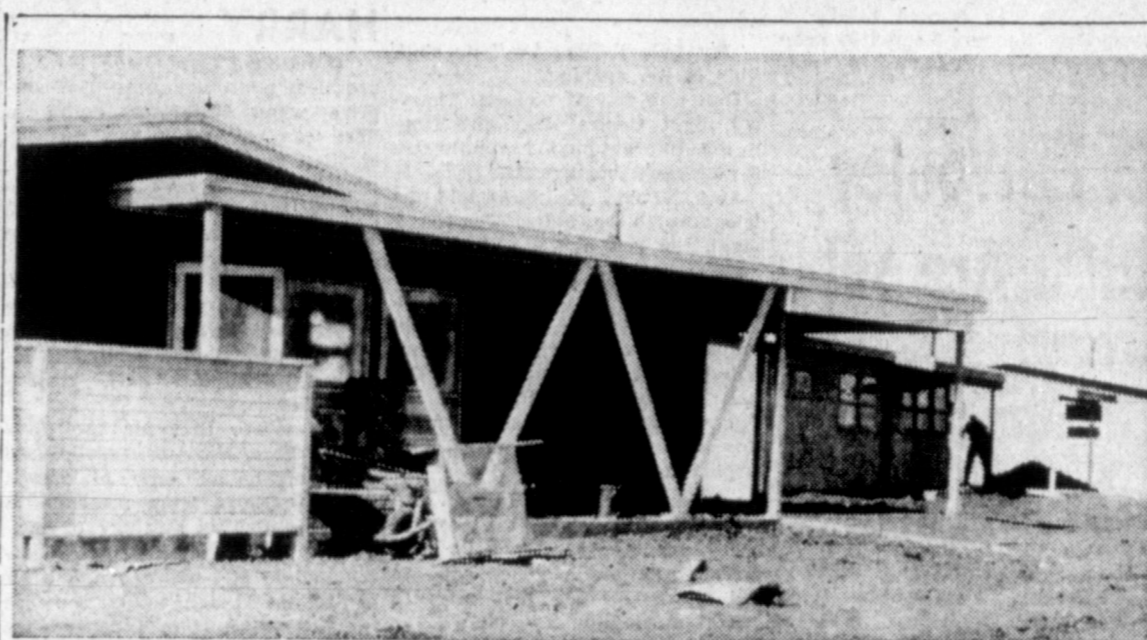

To begin the story at the point where it becomes truly confusing: Gov. Averell Harriman's top strategists began some 48 hours ago to admit to their best friends that Harriman was licked. The United Press had its contacts with the Harriman organization, of course, and got the word along with the others.

Not one, but several of the Harriman high command at one time or another conceded defeat. Some were quoted by name to that effect, others were protected against the governor's possible anger. But these private and public concessions of defeat stopped suddenly with Mr. Truman's abrupt announcement Thursday that the fight would go on.

The United Press tabulation at that hour already showed Adlai E. Stevenson an easy winner with more than 100 votes to spare and more coming his way by the hour. Mr. Truman continued publicly to insist his man could win. The manager of Harriman's pre-convention campaign was Carmine DeSapio, boss of Tammany Hall and well on the way to being boss of the Democratic party in the state of New York.

DeSapio invented Harriman, politically. He picked him as a 1954 long shot to run for governor and put him across by a whisker. Sen. Irving M. Ives, the Republican candidate, could not have been more surprised if a little green man from Mars with two heads.

MORE HOMES — More homes are in the offing for Pampa as construction on the first section of the new North Crest addition moves along. The entire addition will include 545 lots, containing three-bedroom homes of contemporary design. An open house to show two model homes is planned for late September. Shown above is one of the nearly-completed houses. (News photo)

Gray County In Disaster Area

A telegram to The News from Congressman Walter Rogers today revealed that Gray County had been designated a disaster area by Agriculture Secretary Ezra Benson.

His wire said, "Gray County designated today as disaster area by Secretary of Agriculture which permits grazing on acreage reserve put into soil bank."

Construction On North Crest Underway

Construction on the first section of Pampa's new North Crest addition is moving along. Jay Thompson of the Hughes Development Company stated today, with the sewer lines completed, the water lines installed and paving in process.

Two or three houses have been completed, he added, with about 15 under construction. The homes now being built are about "middle size," with larger and some smaller ones to be built later.

Plans are underway to show two model homes, furnished by Foster's Furniture, the latter part of September, Thompson pointed out. The houses will be located at the corner of Primrose Lane and Crane Road.

Also to be featured during the September open house will be displays of pictures of actual street scenes of developments in other areas like North Crest, Thompson stated, adding that there will be no monotony in street design.

The houses in North Crest will be of contemporary design to fit the people's modern tastes and needs, he continued. Nearly all will be air-conditioned, and washer-dryer combinations and disposal units will be standard equipment. Built-in ovens and refrigerators will be offered on an optional basis.

All of the homes will have three bedrooms, and a greater part will have family rooms in addition to the bedrooms, Thompson pointed out.

Although only the first section has been planned as yet, a total of 545 lots are planned in the whole addition. Space has been set aside for a shopping center at the corner of 23rd and Hobart Streets, to be built as the area develops and the need arises, Thompson explained.

Stassen Heads For G. O. P. Meet

By WARREN DUFFEE
United Press Staff Correspondent
SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Harold E. Stassen headed for the Republican national convention today to wage his personal, last-ditch fight to dump Vice President Richard M. Nixon from the GOP ticket.

Nixon also headed the "California Here I Come" convention call and left for Whittier, Calif., where he and his wife will spend the night before flying to San Francisco Saturday.

Stassen, who visited the White House twice Thursday, appeared discouraged in his drive to replace Nixon with Gov. Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts despite what was conceded to be virtually impossible odds by party strategists.

Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall declared that the Democrats' renomination of Adlai E. Stevenson was "just fine with us." He said "I don't know what I can say about Mr. Stevenson that (Averell) Harriman and (Estes) Kefauver haven't already said."

Hall predicted to newsmen that Stevenson will "go down to more devastating defeat than he experienced in 1952," partly, he said, because of the Democrats' "split" on the civil rights issue.

Race Through Hearings
In marked contrast to the Democrats battling in Chicago, the Republicans Thursday raced through almost perfunctory hearings on their platform with little or no controversy.

The actual platform drafters retreated behind closed doors today, amid clear indications that the broad outlines of the document already have been determined.

The steady arrival of big GOP names sharply increased the feelings of convention atmosphere as the Democrats went into their final sessions at Chicago.

Without exception, they expressed confidence in Nixon's renomination.

Former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the party's 1944 and 1948 standard bearer, said he saw "no likelihood of any other possibility" than Nixon's renomination. Dewey foresaw "not a chance at all" for success of Harold E. Stassen's effort to replace Nixon with Massachusetts Gov. Christian A. Herter.

Arriving shortly after Dewey were Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell Jr.; Deputy Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers, one of Nixon's closest friends and advisers; Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams and Presidential Appointment Secretary Bernard M. Shanley.

Friends of Nixon, who will arrive Saturday said the vice-president plans no campaigning for delegates but will leave things as they appear now — which is good from his viewpoint.

Counties Named Drought Areas

AUSTIN (UP)—Sen. Price Daniel announced Thursday federal designation of 25 additional Texas counties as drought disaster areas, bringing the total to 185 counties.

Recommendations for inclusion of 11 other counties are under study.

Daniel said his Washington office informed him counties added to the 180 already carrying the drought disaster designation included:

Hansford, Ochiltree, Hutchinson, Roberts, Gray, Wheeler, Randall, Armstrong, Castro, Swisher, Floyd, Wichita, Kaufman, Rockwall, Navarro, Limestone, Freestone, Robertson, Leon, Madison, Brazos, Lee, Grimes, Washington and El Paso.

Counties on which applications are pending include Fannin, Lamar, Red River, Bowie, Cass, Martin, Upshur, Harrison, Gregg, Smith and Belton.

Community Council Wheels Roll

The organization of a Pampa Community Council moved one step nearer completion today with a meeting of the special sub-committee of the Chamber of Commerce this morning in the C of C conference room.

The sub-committee decided to hold a meeting on Thursday, September 6, in the Palm Room at City Hall at which time representatives of each of the community organizations of Pampa are requested to express the views of their club.

The sub-committee is preparing a letter to be sent to each club, along with a copy of the recent Youth Activities Survey, for the clubs to study so that their representatives can make known whether or not they are willing to participate.

It is the plan of the sub-committee to form a permanent organization known as the Community Council with representatives of the various community clubs as members. The sub-committee is only acting in an advisory capacity and as soon as the organization is formed all of the functions will be turned over to it.

Delegates Brace For Marathon Battle

By RAYMOND LAHR
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO (UP)—The Democratic National Convention today plunged into a free-for-all fight for second place on the ticket headed by Adlai E. Stevenson. Three senators and a mayor led the pack in the first wide-open vice presidential race of modern political history.

Convention delegates, who nominated Stevenson for president by an overwhelming first ballot majority, braced for a marathon battle over the selection of his running mate. Party leaders predicted many roll calls will be needed. Some forecast a political donnybrook.

The convention was called into session at 1 p.m. EDT to begin the long process of nominating speeches, demonstrations and, eventually, balloting for a vice presidential nominee. The original schedule, which called for Stevenson to deliver his acceptance speech tonight, seemed likely to go out the window.

Stevenson set off the mad scramble for the vice presidential nomination in a dramatic speech to the convention Thursday night, shortly after he had won first place on the ticket by polling 905 out of the 1,372 votes on the first ballot. His nearest rival, Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, drew only 210 votes.

Upsets Tradition
The smiling nominee strode to the rostrum of the stockyards convention hall and informed the thunderstruck delegates that he had decided to forego his traditional right to handpick a running mate, and would leave the decision to the "free processes" of an open convention.

It was a bold move, designed to focus public attention on President Eisenhower's health and the expected Republican renomination of Vice President Richard M. Nixon—the main Democratic issues in the coming campaign.

Stevenson made that clear by saying that the choice of a vice-presidential candidate has become "almost as important as the choice for the presidency." He recalled the seven times in U.S. history when a vice president has succeeded to the White House and said "each political party has the solemn obligation" to nominate a vice president who is "fully equipped" to be president.

Starts Turmoil
His surprise announcement threw this convention city into a turmoil that continued right through the night.

Developments included:

—Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee declared himself a candidate and began an all-night tour of hotels to round up delegates (See DEMO, Page 2)

Texans Like Clement For Veep

DALLAS (UP)—Bob Tripp, news director of WFAA and WFAA-TV said today one of the station's representatives in Chicago, Malcolm Couch, had informed him by telephone that the Texas delegation would back Gov. Frank Clement of Tennessee for Democratic vice president.

Tripp said Couch reported that House Speaker Sam Rayburn at a special caucus of the Texas delegation today had instructed the delegation to nominate and support Clement who made the keynote speech earlier this week at the national Democratic convention in Chicago.

Earlier Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon Johnson said he would not permit his name before the convention as a vice presidential candidate.

Johnson, at an impromptu news conference in his hotel suite, named Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.), Sen. John F. Kennedy (Mass.), and Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) as the "three top runners" in the convention's wide open sweepstakes for the second spot on the ticket.

Johnson said Speaker Sam Rayburn and Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) are not in the least interested in becoming the running mate with Adlai E. Stevenson to challenge the Republican administration in November.

Earlier the Texas delegation had expressed a desire to push Johnson for the nomination.

Johnson, Rayburn At Party

By TOM NELSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO (UP)—Adlai E. Stevenson played host to Democratic bigwigs in the early hours of the morning today at a victory party which featured urgent huddles on the vice-presidential race.

The party packed Stevenson's Sheraton-Blackstone hotel suite from just before midnight until 3:30 this morning when he passed the word that he wanted to retire.

The suite began filling with Democratic notables shortly after Stevenson returned from the convention hall where he won the presidential nomination on one ballot. They came not only to congratulate him but to confer on his precedent-shattering move in throwing the vice presidential nomination open to a convention fight.

Two of the party's most powerful figures — Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson and Speaker Sam Rayburn — emerged from the suite at 2 a. m. They spent an hour with Stevenson at Stevenson's invitation.

Rayburn, chairman of the Democratic convention, was asked for his view on Stevenson's call for an open vice presidential contest. "That's it!" he said. "It doesn't make any difference what I think."

His answer indicated that he was not enthusiastic about the unusual procedure.

Jacket is hipbone length and skirt is back-panneled. The Empire silhouette (center) appears in down coat of imported English tweed with high-waisted effect defined by a narrow leather belt. Suit in deep red wool (right) has hipbone length jacket with envelope shoulder fold that extends from a soft scarf collar to a slightly bloused effect in the back. RUTH MILLET

We hear a lot these days about dissatisfied wives whose husbands work themselves into an early grave trying to give their wives more and more of the things money can buy.

Always it's the women who get the blame for this sad state of affairs.

But are they?

Why are there so many dissatisfied wives killing off these husbands in an endless struggle to keep up with the neighbors and get ahead of their friends?

Could it be that wives are dissatisfied because their husbands are giving them so little of what it takes to make a woman feel happy, needed, loved and protected?

How many husbands today bother to listen to a woman's small talk about her day and its problems?

How many husbands express their appreciation for a well-run home, a wife who is doing her best to bring up their children right, attempting to play a part in community affairs and be companionable to her husband?

Don't a great many husbands take all this for granted and even talk big about how little women have to do these days?

How many husbands today have a protective manner toward their wives or ever give their wives a chance to lean on their strength? How many husbands bother to

BABY

Children's toys may have some practical value, too. One smart mother bought an extra set of four plastic toy pails with shovel to use for various small-size wash-up jobs. The pails are lightweight, pliable to make pouring easy, and can be hung over the wrist.

For shampooing upholstery, this housekeeper beats up a thick lather of soap or detergent suds, applies this with a sponge, and then "scrapes" the soiled suds off the fabric surface with the plastic shovel.

A handy item is a new "baby valet" cabinet that has divided compartments for storage, and a pull-out hamper for used diapers. It stands about 30" high, and is faced with quilted plastic that can be wiped clean with soap or detergent suds.

make their wives feel secure in their love?

How many are there among today's husbands who aren't ashamed to let their wives and the world know how important their wives are to them?

When so many men give so little to marriage, it is no wonder the country is full of unhappy, dissatisfied wives.

Behind most dissatisfied, unhappy, demanding wives there are arrogant, indifferent or selfish husbands.

But it's the wife who gets the blame, not the husband who is responsible for her dissatisfaction with life and marriage.

Waistline Wanders In Styles For Fall

By GAILE DUGAS

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The waistline wanders from high to low in both suits and coats this fall but wherever it stops, it creates a pretty, flattering line.

But whether the waistline settles easily at the hipbone (as in many suits) or is belted just under the bustline (as in many coats), it's likely to be coupled with slim lines. In both suits and coats, this slimmest is frequently softened by use of a back panel. The panel both creates grace in motion and makes a departure from the severe slimmest of other seasons.

Clothes generally have an elegant look this fall and both suits and coats are treated to touches of satin and fur to heighten this look. Some get mink collars; others have satin ascots or satin collars and cuffs.

Suits have a soft, feminine look dependent both on styling and fabric. Colors tend to be romantic and there are soft greens, violets and even rose color. These are colors ordinarily not seen in autumn but the gentle influence of 1912 is bringing them out.

Fur-trimmed coats carry on the autumn theme, some of them fur-lined in the favorite pelts of grandmother's time. But these are 1956 versions, sleek and soft and shining with true chic. There are shawl collars of brown fur seal, black and brown tweed, the other shawl collar for the great coat and luxurious white ermine or mink for the elegant black.

A 1956 make-up for World War I styled hats is the fall paradox Max Factor, Jr. sees in his crystal ball. Why a paradox? The Hollywood expert answers a question: "Do you remember how lipstick and eye make-up looked during World War I? If not, ask your mother. Or for laughs, look at photographs showing Hollywood's glamorous movie stars during the 1914-1918 era."

SO HOW does he propose to solve this paradox? By using make-up aids and techniques 38 years more advanced in quality, suavity and skill to make a woman look fair and lovely.

First step is to get rid of your tan, then make up to your natural skin tone. Remember, that skin fairness was as coveted by American beauties during World War I as it was by Snow White and the evil queen.

The prettiest faces under Irene Castle bonnets, tall fur toques, ostrich-feathered dinner hats, coquettish turbans, and Alexandrian veils will have the "hol-house look" of Edwardian roses.

Shortest cut to coddling, especially if your skin is paying the price for summer follies, is to use a fluid make-up foundation with natural high fidelity colors. It can be as pampering as a facial, as flattering as a veil of fluid silk.

To make each feature worthy of hat, finer fabrics — flower-embroidered velvets, satin brocades, brilliant paisleys, colored sequins, white mink — here, in a nutshell, are Factor's tips.

Eyes? Blue or green eyeshadow, sparingly spread, can do as much to make them sparkle as a love-light.

If you use an eye-liner — and Factor urges you to — follow the natural shape of your eyes. Hong-kong Hanah's slanty-eyed look of last fall yields this fall to Irene Castle's starchy-lashed look of 1914. Julie Andrew's open-eyed fair-ideal look of 1912.

To make eyes look more full-orbed, extend eye-liner about a quarter of an inch beyond lower and upper lashes. But halt your pencil just before the two lines meet.

Arch brows gently: gentle curves are your keys to a lady-like look. Lips? Arch the cupid's bows softly, also. Under tall hats, lips can usually be more widely drawn to help offset height above the face. To widen a mouth, brush color on flush with the corners. To stop short of the corners will make your mouth look smaller.

Brilliant high fidelity lipstick shades with new fall hat colors. Here are Factor's capsule color-schemes: If the hat color is yellow-green; (Loden, saffron, curry shades) use flaming orange lipstick; if blue-green, (Emerald, Green ink) use clear, clear red; if purple; (mauve, black tulip)

MATURE PARENT

The pink paint which covers the top half of the bathroom walls contrast beautifully with the blue tiles that cover its lower half.

I chose the shade with care. To it, I matched the curtains, face cloths and towels. I chose the pink-striped tumbler in its blue enamel fixture just as I selected the toothbrushes under it. Even the pink-wickered hamper beside the washbasin was my special choice.

When I clean this bathroom, I do a bang-up job on it. I never forget to scrape the soap dish clean. I always remember to wipe clean the toothbrushes and fasten the hamper lid.

But when my 14-year-old daughter is told to clean the bathroom, she never does a bang-up job.

If she remembers to tidy the cabinet shelves, she's sure to leave her soiled pillowcase draped over the open hamper. If she folds the towels, she forgets to wring out the face cloths. No matter how I complain, she seems incapable of doing a thorough job on the bathroom.

In the beginning this seems like evidence of an irresponsible nature. I contemplate the dirty window sill she has forgotten to wipe — and envision a life of failure for this child I can't make do things.

I see her fired by bosses who admire efficiency. I see husbands turning from her with loathing for her unwashed breakfast dishes. I see her a beggar and burden on other people's responsible nature for the rest of her life.

So I go to the head of the stairs and scream, "Come up here, you lazy girl! Do you call this bathroom finished? Can't you ever do anything thoroughly? Come up here this minute..."

The fact that my daughter's responsibility isn't equal to mine scares me to death.

The J. M. Fosters Hosts To Reunion

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Foster, 1813 Hamilton, held a family reunion recently in honor of Capt. and Mrs. Leo Houck, Lonnie and David, who have returned after spending three years in Germany.

Among the special guests were Mrs. Laura Brown, Capt. Houck's grandmother; and his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Robinson, Pat and David, of Hobbs, N.M.

Other relatives attending were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Corbin of Skellytown; Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Hoppe of Elmore City, Okla.; and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wilcox and Gary, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Hoppe, Janina and Rick, all of Oklahoma City, Okla.

After a while, I get used to it. Gradually, it dawns on me that her interest in a clean bathroom is naturally less than that of its planner and owner. So when she leaves it less clean than I would, I no longer make a fool of myself by screaming.

I no longer demand that she equal my interest in maintaining a home which she has not planned, chosen or paid for. If she leaves a chore undone, I just go downstairs and say pleasantly, "When you go upstairs, please remember to fasten the bathroom hamper."

Home chores can be agony for both parents and children until we face reality — and accept the fact that our responsibility for the home they share with us is much, much bigger than theirs.

The Weekly Message Of Inspiration

T. C. OWEN, Branch President of Pampa Branch of Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S., Pampa, Texas

Choose you this day whom you will serve . . . as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

This statement, made by Joshua thousands of years ago, is one that would be well for each of us to consider this day.

We have been put upon this earth to prove ourselves. We have been given all the materials with which to work, but we must be the builders. If we would serve the Lord we must build lives that are honest and meaningful. We must form habits; habits of honesty, forgiveness, service, and love.

Horace Mann once said, "Habit is a cable; we weave a thread of it every day, and at last we cannot break it."

If a man has formed the habit of complete honesty it is very hard for that man to be dishonest. And what is honesty? Few employees would actually steal money or goods from their employers, and yet there are those who think nothing of stealing time, when the boss is elsewhere; time for which they are paid in money. Is there a difference?

There are those who apply the Golden Rule and still make a profit, yet some still maintain that to be soft would surely bring bankruptcy and that all is forgiven in a "sharp" business deal.

Little things we do every day may seem unimportant but they add up: being a good neighbor or a poor one; working for the good of the community or being an "aginner"; noticing the good in people or always finding fault; being willing to share with those less fortunate than we are or being "stingy." There are the threads that make up the cable that eventually will bind us.

We can go to church every Sunday and still be of no service to mankind, and if we are of no service of mankind we are of no service to the Lord, for Jesus said: "Verily I say unto you, in as much as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matthew 25:40)

We believe that one truth is always consistent with another truth. We endeavor to be consistent with truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence.

Should we at any time, be inconsistent with these truths, we would appreciate anyone pointing out to us how we are inconsistent with these moral guides.

On The Zany Side

There have been any number of screwball suggestions calculated to "regulate" political spending in election years. About the zaniest of the lot has recently come from the fertile brain of that crusading advocate of government dams, Senator Richard Neuberger of Oregon.

Senator Neuberger has the answer to all campaign ills. Everyone knows that some politicians get lots of financial assistance from friends and associates, while others run a pauperized campaign. But Neuberger has the answer. Put the whole thing on the taxpayers, is his cure as expressed in the current issue of Coronet Magazine.

Of course, in his projected sinicure, Neuberger isn't thinking about primary campaigns particularly. He is thinking of those hardy contestants between the two selected champions of the major parties. To this end the Democrat from the Oregon holdings has already introduced legislation which will provide 15 to 20 cents per voter per party depending on the election. The taxpayers can foot the entire bill for both major parties, and anything resembling financial favoritism can be written off.

Neuberger, who carries national forests on one shoulder and walled up water on the other, has a good reason for this proposal, or at least he says he has. It turns out that he's against lobbying. Washington lobbyists are a "third house of Congress" and their campaign spending has become "the dark continent of American politics," he says.

This whole thing, campaign spending and lobbying, ties together in Neuberger's mind in the area of the big payoff. While a lobbyist cannot legally buy a congressman's opinion, there is nothing in the world to prevent him from making a sizable campaign contribution when the congressman again runs for office. And this, says our solon, is in effect a bribe.

To stop it, he wants the costs of all campaigning to be borne by the taxpayers. This would, he feels effectively stop any necessity for legislators to listen to the blandishments of those who represent what Mr. Truman keeps calling "special interests."

While there may be something to the business of clamping a brake on the most obvious exchanges of money for votes via campaigns, the cure is certainly not in the realm of putting the onus on the poor benighted taxpayer. Such a procedure would compel all citizens to support both parties equally from a financial standpoint, even if they didn't want to have anything to do with either party.

Instead of curing what could be construed as a felony, it would be compounding it. Such compulsive robbing of the citizenry, all in the interests of "good government," would be comparable to sending the voters to the polls with a shotgun at their backs.

As things stand, any American can exercise his rights in one of two ways. He can go to the polls and select his champion. Or he can wash his hands of the whole business and stay home. Today, with more and more people washing their hands after they come in contact with politics, it isn't unlikely that the stay-at-homes will make the major decisions from here on in. But not if Mr. Neuberger has his way. Under his scheme we might as well vote, since we would have contributed to the national delinquency willy-nilly.

Whatever happens to his opponents, Neuberger obviously figures that if his bill goes through, he's got it made. Perhaps he has good reason to feel that when it comes time for him to run again there will be a noticeable vacuum in his campaign kitty. If so, we suspect that it will occur because of his undiminished zeal for socialist schemes and not through any abhorrence of lobbyists on his part.

If the people who want certain things done or not done, continue to disturb his slumber in his "once peaceful office," we could not care less. No one compelled him to become a senator. Besides, if Neuberger is seriously upset by lobbies, he could do something about government mental lobbying, the biggest and worst of the lot.

If he would really like to stop some of the graft and plundering going on, let him devise ways and means of leaving the taxpayers alone. Goodness knows there is no lobby protecting their interests. As their champion, Neuberger could really make a name for himself.

BETTER JOBS

Trustworthy Test Wanted

What I believe we need more than anything else is more trustworthy people. A trustworthy person is more than an honest person. An honest person can be mistaken, and thus do a lot of harm. Probably most of our trouble comes from honest people who do not recognize that they are advocating things on a collective basis that would be dishonest if done by an individual.

"Trustworthy" means to me, worthy of trust or confidence; reliable. Thus, a trustworthy man must have developed his mental faculties sufficiently to know the difference between right and wrong. A child, of course, could not be trustworthy about things he knew nothing about. Thus, a trustworthy person is not only an honest person but one whose judgment can be depended upon because he judges by eternal moral law.

I have repeatedly contended that about all there is in material or spiritual success in life is knowing whom to trust. Man is almost helpless without trusted associates.

If this be true, then we should have some test or means to determine who is worthy of being trusted.

My "Yes" or "No" Test
My test is an acid test and shouldn't be used by persons who do not want to "know thyself." Here is my test:

If a person will not answer questions about what he is advocating or doing or opposing with a "yes" or "no" answer that some other person can answer with a "yes" or "no" answer without contradicting himself by succeeding questions then that person is not trustworthy if he continues to go to believe.

Note that the questions are limited to what the person is advocating or opposing or doing. All men advocate or oppose something. If not by words, then by deeds.

This "yes" or "no" test is also a way of determining whether a man is guided by moral law, principles, eternal verities, everlasting truth or whether he is an unprincipled man — a man who is a law unto himself. A man who is a law unto himself is one who tries to prove a point or reason by simply saying "I do not agree with you" without pointing out the moral law that would be violated by agreement.

Testing Socialistic Persons
This test would bar out as being trustworthy all persons tinged with socialism, communism, pragmatism or collectivism. In fact, it might be a test to determine whether a person is tinged with any form of state socialism. If a man will not answer "yes" or "no" to questions about what he is advocating that can be answered "yes" or "no" without embarrassing a man who is anchored to moral law, then that man is tinged with some form of state socialism. He is not a true libertarian. It seems to be the only way I know of separating the real individualists from the collectivists. No matter what that man says, he is not a man who believes in the Decalogue and the Golden Rule are guides for human conduct. He is not a man who believes in the private competitive enterprise system. He is not a man who really believes a man should get all he produces.

It seems this would be a test as to whether a man believed in liberty — the absence of aggressive force, or some form of tyrannical force. It would be a test as to whether the man loved light or darkness.

Remember, the Great Teacher said, (John 3:19): "And men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." (John 3:21) "But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God."

If voters knew who were trustworthy then we would not be afraid of long periods of unemployment because we would not be drafting soldiers. We would not have graduated income and inheritance taxes. We would not have protective tariffs or immigration quotas. We would not be forcing people to pay for what is called education that the majority believes is education. We would not have government subsidies of any kind. We would not be in almost continuous wars.

In short, we would have an ideal society where men would have much happiness, much higher standard of living and goodwill in their hearts.

If we would have all these advantages, then by all means we should have a test to determine whether a person is trustworthy. The employer should have a test to determine whether his associates are trustworthy, and an employee should have the test to determine whether his employer is trustworthy.

Better Test Wanted
If anyone can suggest a better test so that an individual may better know whether this man or that man is trustworthy, I would be glad to have it and publish it.

Truman's Revenge On Adlai Has Gloomy Result

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

CHICAGO — When the swirl and stridency of Harry Truman's revenge on Adlai Stevenson had abated and the truculent little man had importance, the result of his coup was not at all decisive in the nomination of the Democratic candidate for 1956, but a negative and gloomy result.

Truman may have ditched Adlai Stevenson and broken up the factious into fragments which, when finally pieced together, might cause the nomination of Stuart Symington, Lyndon Johnson or Happy Chandler. That is as it may be.

But he certainly had proved that the Democrats, in the four years since the end of the Roosevelt-Truman reign, had developed nobody with enough authority and political personality to challenge a has-been who wasn't even a delegate in his own party. Truman was sore at Stevenson and the party managers for the paltry reason that they hadn't given him all the badges and tickets he wanted.

The only other personage in town who could match Truman was the dowager empress Eleanor Roosevelt, who had barged into the melee unbidden but unabashed and immediately held a "press conference." A professed friend of Alger Hiss, who enjoyed also the friendship of Stevenson in the Roosevelt-Truman bureaucracy in peace and war, La Boga Grande then lunched, and with a long spoon, with Harry Truman.

By sheer force of the drab inferiority of all the others, these two were able to command top billing through half a day's editions of the local journalism.

These were relics of a bygone day. Truman, incurably addicted to publicity, had fed his own appetite with snarling memoirs in which he attacked Gen. MacArthur, called Jimmy Byrnes a liar, and the United States Marines an overrated creature of expert propaganda. Here in Chicago, he was reduced to his fundamental and unerring knack for unbridled petulance and, though he made a formal pretense of more respectable motive, he could hold his tongue only a few minutes until he let out the truth that he was mad because he couldn't make good for all the ribbons who always try to march tickets and brass medals with ribbons dangling.

There was no Democrat in town from Stevenson down to the Faceless Man who may be chosen by compromise, who could drive these two back into the shadows of the past.

The weird inconsistency of those concerned in this confusion was all but lost by reason of that confusion. Truman and such inferior pundits as were able to grab microphone or wrangle a fudge of newspaper space, attacked the rich while they extolled as men of spiritual splendor two subsidized precursors, life-long amateurs, Harriman and Stevenson, and bowed their heads in solemn mockery in the memory of Roosevelt, who graduated from nurse to governess to Groton to Harvard and thence into a mansion bought and furnished by his mama when he married.

They bawled at the cruel greed of the Eisenhower party and the poverty of labor while the very ground beneath them surged and swelled with waves of a losing inflation based mostly on alms of war inherited from Truman at Potsdam.

And they were all frantic at the Eisenhower band for Ike's clever strategy in planting Earl Warren as chief justice to write a political decree against segregation which nullified in a few days all of Truman's cunning connivance with David K. Niles, the late Walter White of the NAACP, and Charlie Wilson, then of General Electric, through the apparatus called the President's Commission on Civil Rights.

That was done way back in the 'forties, and the Democrats had a book to prove to the colored brother that they were his only friend. But then, with artistic timing, Warren brought in his coup and Dick Nixon was able to remark that this had been done in a single stroke by a Republican Supreme Court.

The day of the national political convention as we have known it is plainly drawing toward the dusk. The routine has become so familiar that the delegates and even the spectators, like cagey backs in a football game, size up the play and spare themselves. They do not waste time, energy and cab fare on futile safaris through old streets sadly sinking into slumdom to hear inarticulate juke-box belly-achers wall person-al "arrangements" of "That Strangled Banner."

Unidentified congressmen from Ohio or Missouri may remind them as well by electronics that social security, the 40-hour week, the minimum wage and other abrogations of the constitution were gifts of Roosevelt II, with no discordant reference to World War II, Korea, and the permanent imposition of the military draft on a nation which had known it only in time of great national alarm, if not peril.

If Truman found tickets hard to get, that could have proved only that he was lazy or too proud to get out and hustle. For tickets were abundant to all who went after them and were being pressed on nondescripts to enable them to fall in line carrying banners and placards in spontaneous demonstrations to come.

The crowds, including delegates, had learned in 1952 that TV gave the whole show except for the seductive reek of the hot dog and in much more convenience whether on skid row or in the gentle comfort of a hotel cubicle. The unimportant, barren hours of these affairs are spotted now and then by a sign to attract a quorum through the traffic with its noises and sweetly poisonous stinks which per-

Demo Strategists Face Hard Job Of VP Choice

WASHINGTON — With Adlai E. Stevenson assured of the Democratic Presidential nomination, the 1956 strategists will face a hard choice in selection of a running mate in a year when the voters may pay more attention to the Vice Presidential candidates than ever before. They must decide whether to try to capture the farm states or the urban commonwealths while retaining the Southern and Border electoral vote.

Stevenson's statement favoring incorporation of the Supreme Court integration ruling in a Civil Rights plank would, but probably will not, upset the Southern picture. It is sure that the Republicans will take an even stronger stand on this issue.

Here is their precise dilemma: at the Chicago Convention: It is obvious that a combination of the South, Border and farm states would give them the electoral ballots necessary to elect, likewise, a coalition of the Dixie title and several of the great industrial and electorally decisive commonwealths would land their man in the White House.

In short, although they surrender in advance no territory to the GOP, they must decide whether to direct their principal appeal to the rural or urban population. It is generally conceded that both Stevenson and President Eisenhower are weaker among the farmers than elsewhere.

The Democrats must start with that premise concerning the Chicago lawyer. He did not carry a single farm state in 1952. He virtually bypassed them in his primary campaigning. He was defeated badly by Senator Estes Kefauver in the Minnesota test. His strength lies chiefly with the city bosses and their allies.

Stevenson just does not appeal to farmers, according to all soundings of sentiment. His speeches and mannerisms, especially his airy witticisms, associate him in their minds with the "city slicker" type. He does not impress them as a warm, sympathetic, down-to-earth being. He does not "talk our language." The new Stevenson may be able to overcome these handicaps, but there remains a doubt in the politicians' minds.

Strangely, Senator Kefauver and Governor Averell Harriman appear to be more popular down on the farm and at the crossroads. Both, of course, have made more lavish promises on price supports than the moderate Stevenson dared to offer. Their halting speech, seeming simplicity and lack of oratorical ability or delivery give them a more human appearance.

The key Governors and State Chairmen openly backing Harriman hall from the farm, cattle and mineral country. More than one-third of his claimed total of 348 delegates represent the wide open spaces. Leaders from six wheat, corn, and dairy states, where Kefauver has a show of strength, want him as Stevenson's associate.

Stevenson has developed considerable bitterness toward both men because of their charges against him, especially Harriman's taunting of his demand for "moderation." But he will not permit his feelings to interfere with the second-place selection, if his advisers differ from him.

Senator John F. Kennedy and Mayor Robert F. Wagner's associates consist largely of their "liberal" appeal to the great mass of urban voters, especially to the so-called "Catholic vote," but also to labor and racial blocs.

If this premise is sound, and many Democratic strategists believe that it is, the nomination of the Bostonian senator might tip over many of the states where the outcome usually determines the election — all of England — save Maine and Vermont — New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, California, and a few others.

Stevenson deplors a selection based on religious factors or personalities. He says that he will not be guided by such considerations. Despite his commendable attitude, he may be forced to give weight to them when he huddles with his advisers over the identity of his No. 2 man.

Should the Democrats deem it advisable to avoid a clear-cut choice, as embodied in the philosophy and personalities of this quarter, the result will be a meaningless and colorless compromise among Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri, Senator Albert C. Gore of Tennessee, Senator Robert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, or Governor Frank G. Clement of Tennessee.

There now is a new RIDDLE OF THE SPHINX growing in Egypt and that is "What does Premier Nasser expect to get out of an alliance with Soviet Russia?" It is true that Russian arms may help him overthrow the small state of Israel. But once this has been done, is he mad enough to imagine that the Communists will refrain from taking over the whole Arab world and Egypt along with it? The Egyptians are permitting a man — eating camel to get its nose into the Arab tent.

Mr. Nasser is a man of many talents. He is a warm, sympathetic, down-to-earth being. He does not "talk our language." The new Stevenson may be able to overcome these handicaps, but there remains a doubt in the politicians' minds.

Strangely, Senator Kefauver and Governor Averell Harriman appear to be more popular down on

Egypt's Nasser Is Blind

By HENRY McLEMORE

CAIRO — Colonel Nasser is blind. He has the Aswan Dam right at home, all built for him, and he can forget all about begging the World Bank or Russia to build it for him.

I saw it, or rather, her, when I visited a night club the other night in search of material for the Master's thesis I am coining on the origin and influence of the belly dance. Her name is Kati, and she is one of the star attractions of a garden apt a building near the center of Cairo.

I have read the dimensions of the proposed Aswan Dam, which, if ever built will be the largest in the world, and it is safe to say that Kati is every bit as big.

Raised into position, and thrown across the Nile, she would dam the waters of that mighty river even at its widest point. Kati is mammoth, even for a country that prides itself on super-ample women.

As the star of the show — and well she deserves the rating — Kati didn't make an ordinary entrance as did the other belly dancers. The curtain went down, and there was a long flourish of trumpets and much beating of drums to emphasize the importance of what was about to be seen.

Then the curtain was raised. For a moment, I didn't realize it had gone up, because it was a white curtain, liberally sprinkled with sequins and brilliant of all sorts. Kati was just back of it, also very white and liberally sprinkled with sequins and brilliant of all sorts. And as Kati was almost as wide as the stage, give or take a few inches, she looked exactly like the curtain.

It was not until she began her first wiggle that it was apparent that we were looking at Kati, not the curtain. The most apt work for describing Kati in motion is "awesome." It was just that. To watch her

El Paso Wins Third Tiff, 8-2

The El Paso Texans were victorious in the rubber tiff between the Pampa Oilers, Thursday night at Oiler Park, 8-2. Pampa had taken the opening tilt while El Paso captured the second game.

Right-handed Buddy Woods started on the mound for the Oilers but proved ineffective as he was tagged for six hits for six runs in the 2-14 innings he hurled. Woods received the loss with his record now being 15-7. The second of three Oiler hurlers, Chuck Bogan, "crafty lefty, who had been troubled with a pulled arm muscle for the past few days was outstanding in his relief appearance for Pampa, as he gave up only one hit in the 5-2-3 frames he twirled. Another lefty, Ernie Bartolomeo worked the last two innings for the Oilers giving up a two-run homer by Scott Hughes in the top of the ninth.

El Paso's right-handed artist Anderson kept the Oilers well in check for the night as he gave up

LEN TUCKER, fleet-footed center-fielder for the Oilers, banged a two-run homer in the initial frame which were the only tallies the Oilers could muster across against El Paso, Thursday night. The Texans won 8-2.

He will scattered hits for two runs.

Pampa pounded out to a 3-0 lead in the opening frame as Len Tucker slammed the only extra base blow off Anderson being a two-run homer.

El Paso's second pitcher over the center field barrier with Jim Robinson. Robinson had previously walked.

The Oilers could only score in three innings but gathered up eight runs in those frames firing home two in the second and ninth innings, with their biggest scoring spurge occurring in the third as they sent home four.

Pampa's biggest scoring threat was staged in the eighth as the Oilers managed to get two base runners on as Bartolomeo got on base due to an error by the first sacker John Warren. Kempa then fired a drive to the shortstop Scott Hughes as he bobbed the ball with Kempa beating out the delayed throw to the first baseman. But the next three Oiler hitters, player-manager A. B. Cross, Robinson and Tucker filed out to dim Pampa hopes of a rally.

Canadian night will be observed today when the Oilers and the Hobbs Sports battle in the first of a three game series. Also residents of Miami are invited to attend tonight's Pampa-Hobbs classic.

Braves Stagger Cards, 8-0; Snider's Homer Nips Giants

By TIM MORIARTY
 United Press Sports Writer

Curve-balling Larry Jansen, who never ducked a tough assignment when he was with the New York Giants, will be on the spot again tonight when the Cincinnati Redlegs open another vital four-game series against the Milwaukee Braves.

In his first comeback start last Friday night, the lantern-jawed right hander pitched Cincinnati to an 8-1 triumph over the Braves.

Facing the 35-year-old Jansen tonight will be the Braves newest pitching "phenom," Taylor Phillips. Only 23, Phillips was still in knee-pants when Jansen started his pro career in 1940, but he looked like a seasoned pitcher in beating the Redlegs with a seven-hitter last Monday night.

Burdette Shuts Out Cards

The Braves warmed up for this latest trip into the Rhineland by topping the St. Louis Cardinals, 8-0, Thursday night on Lew Burdette's five-hitter. The Dodgers remained three games back of Milwaukee by edging the Giants, 10-9, on Duke Snider's 13th inning homer, while the Redlegs dropped 3 1/2 games off the pace by falling before the Cubs, 4-2, in a day game.

Burdette aided his own cause against the Cardinals by knocking in two runs during a five-run burst in the opening inning. Stan Musial collected three of the five hits off Burdette, including a double which enabled him to set a new National League career record of 1,072 extra-base hits.

Snider's game-winning homer off Dick Littlefield was his 33rd of the season but his first off a southpaw. It came only two minutes before New York's 12:50 a.m. cure. The Giants had tied the score at 9-9 in the sixth inning a three-run, pinch-homer by Hank Thompson. Willie Mays also hit a three-run homer for the suddenly-aroused Giants.

Sam Jones struck out 13 Cincinnati batters while his Chicago mates racked Brooks Lawrence for 12 hits. The Cubs broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh with a two-run rally, highlighted by Solly Drake's key double.

Jackie Jensen's two-run homer in the sixth inning provided the Red Sox with their margin. Nixon held the Yankees hitless until the eighth inning.

Carlsbad Moves Into Tie For S'West Fifth Spot

By UNITED PRESS

The Carlsbad Potashers, currently the winningest team in the Southwestern League, today moved into a tie with San Angelo for fifth place as the league race tempo picked up going down the home stretch.

Carlsbad edged Ballinger 5 to 4 Thursday night to sweep the three-game series. It was the Potashers' fourth straight win and their 11th in the last 14 games.

Vince Magi was the goat of the game, dropping a fly by Potasher Howard Perkins in the seventh inning which opened the gates for three unearned Carlsbad runs.

The hottest race in the league with under three weeks to play was among the four teams occupying third, fourth and fifth place — or berths in the first division.

Only two games separated third-place Pampa and Carlsbad and San Angelo, tied for fifth.

The leading Hobbs Sports, meanwhile, edged fourth-place Plainview 8 to 7, Midland defeated San Angelo 10 to 9 in 10 innings, El Paso downed Pampa 8 to 2 and Roswell clouted Clovie 14 to 3.

Nichols Thinks U. S. Running 'Miss' Business Into Ground

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — If I may be pardoned, it seems to me we are carrying this "Miss" business more than a little too far.

If a young lady isn't a Miss something or other these days she winds up sitting on a camp chair, waiting for a forlorn swain to ask her to dance.

The gamut has been run. We now have a Miss Corn Tassel, Miss Anti-Freeze, Miss Feather Duster, Miss Pony Tail, Miss Honey Dew and even a Miss Prune Juice.

On the top level, of course, we have Miss America and Miss Universe. On the other side of the aisle is Mrs. America.

Queen (at the University of Maryland).

Sunday Margo will put on another crown — as Miss MG National at a sports car show in the Washington neighborhood.

No 20-year-old girl has a head big enough to wear that many crowns.

Humble To Give Scholarships

HOUSTON (UP) — Twenty graduate students at nine U.S. colleges will receive fellowships sponsored by Humble Oil and Refining Co. during the 1956-57 school year.

The grants, totaling $41,000, will enable selected students to do graduate work in geology, chemistry, accounting, physics, law and petroleum, chemical, civil and mechanical engineering.

Chosen schools are Rice Institute, University of Texas, Texas A&M College, University of Oklahoma, Louisiana State University, Georgia Institute of Technology, University of California at Los Angeles, Alabama Polytechnic Institute and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Humble has presented similar scholarships for the past nine years.

Perky Margo Lucey, who will represent the Capital at the Miss A thing in Atlantic City next month, is a cute 5-8 brunette (35-23-36 from top to bottom). She has more trophies than the law allows, almost.

Nobody with any sense would want to do away with a miss like Margo. She has fine talent in dramatics; she does a bit which her mother wrote and does it well. And I don't have to tell you that she fills out a bathing suit with what the swim suit people had in mind when they invented swim suits. (See measurements above.)

For a long time the 20-year-old has been busy winning "Miss" titles. First off was Miss Exquisite Form, which was appropriate.

Before that, when she was 15, rushing 16, she was in Egypt where she picked up three medals in the national swimming championship.

Other Margo laurels in the "Miss" category take a bit of listing: Miss Drum Point, Miss Old Dominion Speedway, Miss Langley Park, Miss Auto Show, Miss Cloak and Dagger, and Miss Sophomore.

Soldier To Get Austrian Record

VIENNA (UP) — An American sergeant whose letter "deeply moved" Austrian President Theodor Koerner will receive a record of the music that made Vienna most famous.

Attached to the "Blue Danube" waltz will be a card, saying: "To Sgt. Robert J. Gillespie, Waco, Tex. With many thanks, the Austrian president."

"I am writing this letter with tears in my eyes for I am thinking of the wonderful time I experienced in that city," Gillespie's letter, addressed to Austria's 83-year old head of state, said.

"I visit many countries during my 16-year service with the U. S. Army. Austria I like best of all."

Gillespie stated that to him "the Austrians are the happiest people on earth." He added this "did not surprise me since they have the most wonderful music I ever heard."

DONKEY BUSINESS—A midget Sardinian donkey makes an impression with two-year-old Kathy Gyory, but of the wrong kind. Unhappy Kathy, of Parma Heights, Ohio, broke into tears when the fully grown 31-inch Jenny licked her nose. The animal was one of five midget donkeys imported from Sardinia in 1950 by William Wright of nearby Broadview Heights.

Here's One Way To Fight Juvenile Delinquency

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP) — Juvenile delinquency begins on a street corner... in a neighborhood.

Teenage gangs roam through a city and finally their unrest becomes a national problem. How should we try to prevent it?

Begin on the street corner, a unique neighborhood association here believes. Let the people who approach the youngsters be their neighbors.

"We use housewives, business people — anyone who will work," said Helen Hall, a gentle-mannered social worker who has headed a settlement house located in the tenements of the Lower East Side for 23 years. More recently she became co-chairman of the Lower East Side Neighborhood Association, referred to as Lena.

ing so tough," Miss Hall said. "But a bus trip outside the city is exciting for them."

Neighbors who volunteered to work with the association have spent 18 months building up confidence and respect for their organization. One man who owns a grocery store locks his shop door four nights each week and joins one of the youthful gangs. From his own pocket he has paid for athletic equipment.

A coach who lived in the area offered to help form a football team. Some of the toughest boys who had been lounging on the street corners volunteered. Donations bought uniforms. They played teams from other sections of the city. When they won, a Lower East Side bank gave a banquet for them.

SPEAKING CROSS—Against the sky over Frankfurt, Germany, looms this lofty cross of steel scaffolding. It was erected for the closing ceremonies of the German Evangelical Church Rally. More than 100 loudspeakers in the vertical section enabled speakers at the foot of the cross to be heard for miles away.
