PTA City Council Chooses Nominating Committee, Conducts Other Business

The PTA City Council met at 9 a.m. Tuesday in the Junior High library with Mrs. L. L. Milliren, president, presiding.

Knox Kinard, city superintendent of schools, gave a brief talk to the group, regarding legislation on Senate Bill 80, which is a proposal to increase the base pay for teachers.

Mrs. James Lewis reported for the planning committee on the Spring conference to be held in Gruver, Feb. 26. She also announced that there would be a mental health workshop offered to all PTA units to be held at the Lovett Memorial Library. The date will be announced later.

A letter from Rev. Edwin Hall, March of Dimes chairman, was read expressing thanks to the PTA units for their cooperation in the Mothers' March for Folio. A certificate of appreciation has been awarded to the PTAs.

Mrs. James Cunningham reminded the group that the radio time has been changed from 11:15 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. on Saturdays.

Mrs. R. A. Mack reported on the executive meeting held at Gruver. A nominating committee was elected. Those to serve are Mrs. James Lewis, chairman, Knox Kinard, Mmes. Warren Woodard, Sam Houston; Ott Shewmaker, Horace Mann; T. C. Owen, Woodrow Wilson; J. H. Trotter, Baker, Floyd Barrett, Lamar, and Howard Brown.

Members present for the council meeting were Mmes. R. A. Mack, Phillip Grange, Bill Lovell, Buster Sublett, Hopkins, Jimmy Cox, Hopkins; H. H. Hahn, legislation; O. F. Shewmaker, Horace Mann; W. J. Woodard, Sam Houston; George Smith Jr., Baker; Jim Cunningham, Lamar; T. C. Owen, Wood-

Members Entertain Beta Phi Pledges

PERRYTON (Special) — The Beta Phi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority entertained with their annual Preferential Tea in the home of Mrs. H. C. Sanford, 1521 South Fordham, honoring their pledges.

Those honored were Mmes. Ed Tedorow, John Farnsworth, Ed Garland, T. D. Nichols, Jack Pittzer, Harold Trent and N. M. Shank.

The guests were received by Mmes. Max Wood, Bob Hallaway, Leo Shuler and Billy Hargue. Each pledge was presented with a corsage of yellow roses.

The tea table was centered with an arrangement of yellow roses flanked with yellow candles in silver candelabra. Mrs. Max Wood presided at the silver tea service.

Approximately fifty guests called during the afternoon.

Mrs. McDonald Is Feted With Shower

A miscellaneous shower was given recently in the home of Mrs. John Haggard, 1301 N. Russell, for Mrs. Jim McDowell, the former Nancy Jameson.

Hostesses were Mmes. J. C. Vollmert, A. L. Prigmore, L. B. Spriggs, Eula Riggs, Ruby Crocker, Clyde Batson, G. D. Holmes, C. L. McKinney, Paul Crossman, Calvin Whately, John Schofield, Jon Fuller, Emmett Osborne, Rufe Jordan, E. G. Nelson, C. C. Matheny, W. R. Bell, Wilson Hatcher, Floyd Yeager, E. L. Anderson, and John Haggard.

Turquoise and yellow were used in the flower arrangement of carnation and daisies on a yellow cloth with milk-glass appointments. Turquoise candles in milk-glass holders flanked the floral arrangement.

A corsage of yellow roses was presented to the honoree. While carnation corsages were given Mmes. H. A. Gilliland, aunt; I. S. Jameson, grandmother; and Paul Cain, cousin of Mrs. McDowell's.

Misses Macy Batson, Barbara Smith, Mrs. Brian Rusk, Amarillo, served the guests. Miss Barbara Spence, Shreveport, La., assisted at the gift table. Mrs. Darwin Teeter was guest registrar.

Fifty guests attended, 100 sent gifts, but were unable to attend. Mr. and Mrs. McDowell are now at home in Denton, where they are attending NTSC.

Mature Parent

BY MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

On the way home from school Joan passes the grocery store her mother trades with. Next to it is a shop that carries toys. For the past week its window display has shown a green plastic purse marked down to 59 cents. Twice Joan has enviously described it to her mother as the exact shade of her winter coat. Once she asked for it openly — and was refused.

This afternoon Joan's mother wanted something from her. Told that her husband was bringing a client home for dinner, she realized she'd need whipping cream for a company dessert. Instantly she thought, "I'll get Joan to run downtown for it by giving her the money for that green pocketbook."

But she didn't yield to the temptation to bribe the child. Controlling her impulse to buy helplessness, she asked for it. Though Joan grumbled a little at going on the errand, an explanation of its emergency nature soon got her on her way.

When she returned with the cream, her mother kissed her and said, "I am so grateful that I want to give you something in return. Here is 50 cents to buy that green pocketbook you were telling me about."

This reward gave Joan 500 times the satisfaction that a bribe of the same gift would have given her.

A bribe always expresses our doubt of a child's helplessness. It anticipates his refusal of it. It insults him, treating him, not like a human being possessing initiative and understanding, but like a vending machine that cannot disgorge our chewing gum until we have inserted the coin that starts its gears working.

Unlike the bribe, the reward is given to the child AFTER he has done us the service. It expresses appreciation instead of suspicion of his helplessness. If therefore gains for Joan not just a green plastic pocketbook but new self-respect as a person of recognized value to others.

Parents bribe children because they fear to make an unsupported demand on their helplessness. If we are a bribing mother or father, we should consider the possibility that we begrudge giving to others ourselves. It is only when we secretly feel that others are asking too much of us that we feel obliged to bribe Joan not to resist our demands on her. We expect from her the resistance that is in ourselves.

This resistance is something to know about, not to be ashamed of.

WSCS Completes 2nd Mission Book

WHITE DEER (Special) — The Women's Society of Christian Service of the local Methodist Church has recently completed the mission study, "Missions, U.S.A."

The textbook for the course was written by James A. Hoffman, noted teacher and free-lance writer, who is, at present, assistant editor of "Presbyterian Life."

Circles number 1 and 2 attended the four sessions of the course, which was presented by various members of the group. Planning and organization of the material was done by Mrs. Oluf Bertrand, who is secretary of Missionary Education of the Society.

This is the second mission book study of the year for the group. Among the actions taken as a result of the studies, the group has sent boxes of clothing for Hungarian Relief, has sent a CARE package, and an offering for the Hong Kong Education Program.

On February 26, members of the local group will meet with all other churches of the district for an all-day mission study to be presented by Mrs. Eugene Slater, who has recently returned from a tour of South American mission work.

The next local study will be on "Letters of Paul" and will begin March 8.

Pot Paint Piddle Club To Present Program For Senior Citizens

The Paint Pot and Piddle Club will present a workshop for the Senior Citizens at their weekly meeting, 2:30 p.m. Thursday in the Lovett Memorial Library.

Mmes. W. L. Heskey and Harvey Nestie will give demonstrations of working with enamelled metal ware and other materials.

All Senior Citizens having birthdays in January will be honored.

Atrius Club hostesses will be Mmes. Emily Coston, Adrienne Foster, Gertie Foster, Fred Lard, and J. Flanagan. Transportation will be furnished by Gray Ladies for Senior Citizens who wish to attend.

TEEN-AGE PAINS DISAPPEAR WHEN CAUSE REMOVED

Pretty teenage girls are not really Dresden china dolls. They are just as human as you and I. These pretty doll dresses cover up a lot of aches and pains you would never suspect. They are actually a brave lot and hide their pains behind a teetly smile.

A seventeen year old girl was brought to the Miller Chiropractic Clinic complaining of chest pains, frequent headaches and colds, low backaches and irregularly with bad cramps, which caused her to lose a couple of days school each month.

Dr. Gordon Miller D.C. found that our spinal analysis and spinal X-Rays located nerve interferences her previous doctors had overlooked.

When we made our comparative examination to check progress she reported all symptoms and pains had been gone for some time. No. 2345.

A twelve year old lad suddenly decided she couldn't study and began to complain of pains and nausea. Prevalently she had been a meticulous "A" student.

Her mother brought her to the Miller Chiropractic Clinic for an examination into the cause of her trouble. In a short while our corrective adjustments did the work and this little lady was back making straight "A" grades.

When your son or daughter changes suddenly — begins to get careless or complain a lot — just remember that they play hard and might be suffering from an unexpected injury to their central nervous system.

Don't try to wait out your pains. For health sake, be good to yourself, INVESTIGATE.

Girl Scout Activities

MIAMI (Special) — Girl Scout Troop 7 met at the Methodist Church. The meeting was opened by the Pledge of Allegiance.

Election of new officers was as follows: Jacque Gill, president; Margot Gill, vice-president; Karen Lyons, reporter.

During the business meeting, a skating party and a Valentine's party were planned. Planning committees were appointed: Ruth Ann Cunningham, Cheryl Gill, Dea Morris, game committee; Margot Gill, Sue Lyons, and Marilyn Murphy, refreshments.

Discussion was held on making items for use in summer camp.

Miami Brownie Scouts met at the Methodist Church and elected officers to serve for the month of February. New officers are: Lynda Ratliff, president; Debbie Thompson, vice-president; Martha Paris, secretary; Wanda Setts, treasurer; Joy Lynn Flowers, reporter.

During the activity period, the troop worked on felt purses and sang songs. Debbie Thompson served refreshments.

Intermediate Troop 36 met at Girl Scout Little House with 16 members present. The meeting was opened with singing Girl Scout songs.

A radio skit will be taped by the troop Saturday morning at KPND. After practicing on this skit Coke refreshments were served.

The troop has added one member, Miss Nancy Crites.

Intermediate Troop 67 with their leader, Mrs. W. E. Reger, met in Lamar School cafeteria with 19 girls present. Requirements of second class rank were discussed and plans were made to begin work on this rank.

Girl Scout Neighborhood chairman and cookie chairmen met briefly following the board meeting Friday morning.

It was announced that a meeting for troop organizers would be held Feb. 11, 10 a.m. in the Girl Scout Office for the purpose of planning a recruitment drive in March.

It was also discussed whether to hold a six-day camp or an eight day camp from Monday through Thursday for two weeks; also, whether to hold separate camps for Brownies and Intermediates.

The need of more leaders for Brownies and Intermediates was discussed. It was announced that Brownie Leaders are badly needed at the Parochial school.

Cookie chairmen received their kits, the use of which was explained by Mrs. Marian Osborne.

Taste includes four qualities: sweetness, sourness, saltiness and bitterness.

Manners Make Friends

No matter how much you love cats, if you own one you should realize that some people are afraid of them. If you see a guest draw back when your cat approaches, get the cat out of the room.

And if you want to be charming about it, don't say in a tone of surprise, "Oh, don't you LIKE cats?"

Firemen Controlling Explosion-Torn City

By CLARK BIGLER
United Press Staff Correspondent
RENO, Nev. (UP) — Firemen shot high-pressure jets of water today into the smoking rubble of what had once been a prosperous street in the heart of Reno—until leaking gas destroyed it in three fiery blasts.

A series of three explosions and the ensuing fire Tuesday killed two persons and injured 42 others. At least five big buildings were destroyed and a score of others were damaged in varying degrees. The dead were identified as Mrs. John DuPratt, 60, of Reno, and Frank Spina, 48, owner of a shoe factory that was gutted in the blast. Spina apparently was blown clear across the street and under a parked car by the force of the explosion.

Victims in Streets
City officials estimated the damage at $3 million.

Reno's famed gambling casinos remained open for business during the holocaust. One witness, Margaret Jones, an airline stewardess, said patrons in the Riverside Hotel "were still gambling and didn't seem concerned at all."

But a block away across the river was a fearful scene. Flames spouted from the windows and roofs of buildings, broken glass littered the street and scores of men and women lay in the streets. Many screamed in fright or agony—or both.

Police said the blast was the result of a leak in an underground gas main. The leak had gone on for at least an hour and a half before the first explosion, allowing a dangerous quantity of natural gas to collect in the area.

Windshield Blown Out
"I was just driving by the store when I thought someone had hit me on the head with a rock," she said. "I couldn't understand how, because all the windows were closed."

W. A. Paterson, owner of the two-story department store where the explosion occurred, said he smelled a strong odor of gas an hour and a half before the first explosion. He called the Sierra Pacific Power Company "Get the hell over here and turn it off."

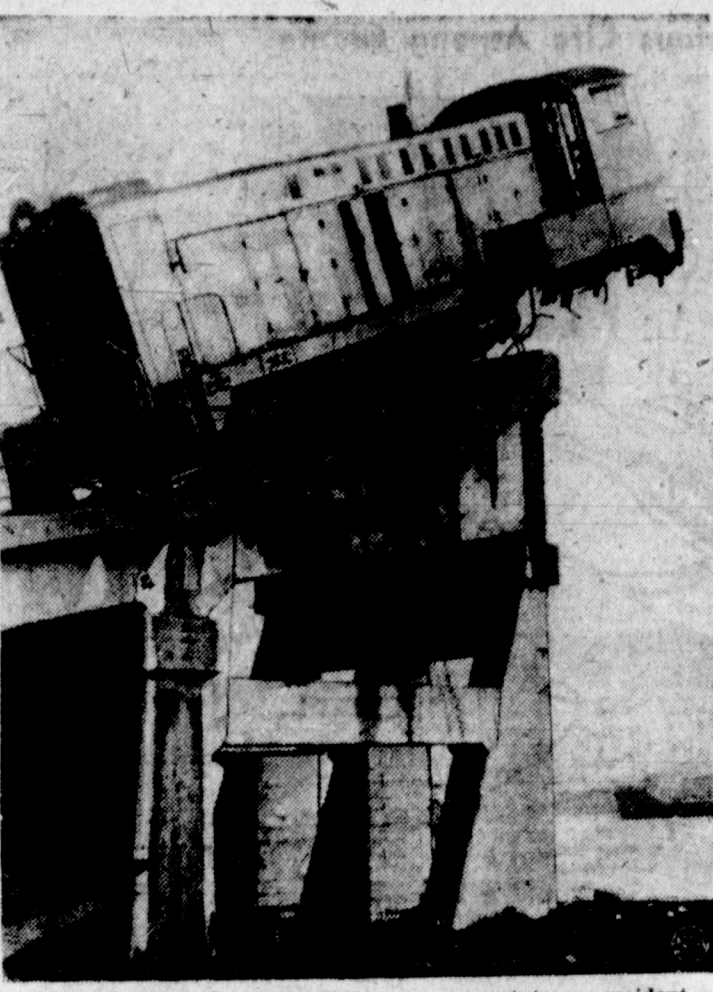

Appointment of directors, committees and other business was conducted at the meeting.

Officers Named For United Fund
Clifford C. Whitney Jr., personnel director of the Celanese Corp. plant here, last night was named president of the Pampa - Lefors United Fund organization.

Directors Named For Knife, Fork
Recent appointments of Knife and Fork officers and directors, as listed in the last meeting for a three-year term have been announced by Dr. Joe Donaldson, president of the club.

When Saud Likes 'Em, They Know It

WASHINGTON (UP) — When King Saud likes the service at a restaurant, he lets 'em know it. In fact, sometimes the tips cost him as much as the bill. For example, the Saudi Arabian monarch and a party of about 50 dropped by the Normandy Farms Restaurant in nearby Maryland for a bit of lunch. The check ran to nearly $750. But the tips ran as high if not higher. First the king tipped his waitress with a gold wrist watch. Then he presented another gold wrist watch to the restaurant's manager. And then he left $500 to be scattered about among the rest of the restaurant's employees.

CANADIAN (Special) — Funeral services for William W. Lewis, 84, retired Hemphill County farmer - stockman, were held at 2 p.m. Monday in the First Christian Church in Canadian.

Mr. Lewis died at 9:30 p.m. Saturday in the Thurmon Convalescent Home in Amarillo where he had been a patient for several months. The Rev. Jim Mitchell, pastor of the First Christian Church, officiated. He was assisted by the Rev. Burr Morris, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Canadian. Masonic rites were conducted at the graveside in Miami Cemetery.

Mr. Lewis was born Nov. 25, 1872, in Des Moines, Iowa, and came to the Panhandle in 1887 when his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Lewis, brought their emigrant car to what was then the end of the Santa Fe line at Miami. When he was 15 years old, Mr. Lewis took a job as horse wrangler with the Bar C ranch. As wrangler, he made one-trail drive to Montana for the Bar C, later worked as a cowboy on two drives to Montana. He also took part in the run to the Cherokee Strip in Oklahoma when the land was opened to settlement.

In 1900 he married Minnie Phillips and settled on a claim in the Washita community where he continued to make his home. He was an early day commissioner of Hemphill County, also served as county tax assessor and a member of the school board. He was a Mason and a charter member of Khiva Temple in Amarillo. Mrs. Lewis died in 1934, and in 1940, Mr. Lewis married Mrs. Carolyn Howell, who is among survivors.

Other survivors include two sons, Marvin of Abilene and Wesley Lewis of Pampa; two daughters, Mrs. Dan Witt and Mrs. Malour Abraham, both of Canadian; three sisters, Mrs. Nell McCarty of Amarillo, and Mrs. J. F. Meers and Mrs. Marvin Williams of Pampa; two brothers, Earl and Joe, both of Pampa; nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Russia's Plan For U.S.A.

I want to continue to quote from Bela Hubbard's book, "Political and Economic Structures." Under his chapter on communism, he pretty clearly describes how Russia is attempting to take over our economy. He puts it this way:

Russian plans for conquest of the United States unquestionably involve use of the peaceful penetration method. Use of either of the other methods would be doomed to failure, and the clever policy makers in the Kremlin know this. Whatever else they may be, they are not stupid. It follows, therefore, that the role assigned the Communist Party U.S.A. is one of peaceful penetration and gradual subversion. Our official United States policy to ward the Communist party and its members is based on the assumption that they advocate and teach the overthrow of our government by force and violence. This has been the legal basis of all federal court actions against Communist party officials and members. Both the assumption, and the laws based thereon, rest on very thin ice, because of our misunderstanding of the true role of the Communist Party U.S.A.

Recent federal legislation has rendered more difficult the open operations of the Communist party in this country. Although the effects of this legislation have been beneficial, no regulatory measures of this nature can ever provide a satisfactory or final solution of the problem. Communist party members no longer carry cards. Bona fide rosters of membership doubtless exist only in the sanctuaries of "Iron Curtain" embassies in Washington, unavailable to United States officials. The Communist party activities in this country have been and will continue to be largely concealed or underground, financed and guided through agents in these "Iron Curtain" embassies.

"It would seem that a more substantial basis is available on which to terminate Russian subversive activities in this country. That basis is the fact that Russia and the United States are, in truth, at war with each other. It is true, of course, that this "cold war" is not war in the historical sense. Diplomatic relations continue; our government has made no formal declaration of war; there are no massive military operations in progress. But it is war nonetheless. Russia has recently declared her purpose to be the political and economic conquest of all countries, including the United States of America. That is just as valid a declaration of war as the old-fashioned kind, which used to be delivered through diplomatic channels. Not only has military science been completely altered during the twentieth century; the art of diplomacy, including the methods of defining a state of war and a state of peace, has been revolutionized. We can not continue to deal with twentieth century international situations by using nineteenth century methods and theories.

"A possible solution of the problem would be the official United States recognition that a condition of suspended hostility exists between the United States of America and the U.S.S.R., and the legal classification of Russian nationals in this country as enemy aliens. This formula would be applied equally to all the Russian satellite countries which are, in fact, subservient members of the Russian empire. With such official recognition of a state of "cold war," the severance of diplomatic relations with all these countries would follow logically. The closing of all "Iron Curtain" embassies would remove the main centers of Russian subversive activity. Known members of the Communist Party U.S.A., who are United States citizens, could be arrested, tried, and convicted as enemy agents, not as "communists."

"A large percentage of those Americans who are commonly referred to as "liberals," "progressives," "fellow travelers," or "leftists" are advocates of the communist economy, but are not consciously Russian agents. Some are individuals whose minds have become confused by the Russian subversion technique, and have no clear conception of the true nature of communism. Among these are certain members of the clergy who have become so befogged mentally as to preach sermons identifying Christian ideals with what they describe as the "purer aspects of communism."

"These "liberal" dunes and followers of the Communist party "line" are a real danger to this country. They are, consciously or unconsciously, rendering valuable aid to the Russian program of conquest by intellectual subversion.

"Those who are sincere advocates of the socialist or communist economic system are innocent of any illegal practice. They are guilty only of stupidity. Without the guidance of Russian infiltration and intrigue, these false liberals would become harmless. With exposure of their fallacies, their influence will die. Americans have nothing to fear from communism. They started experimenting with it forty-two years before Karl Marx was born. They tried it out here and there during more than a century, and abandoned it because they found it far inferior to our own free enterprise. Our real enemy today is Soviet Russia and her spies, propagandists, and innocent dupes. Our danger is primarily political, not economic.

Public Empire Dream Has Finally Turned Into Bonanza

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — The original New Dealers' grandiose dream of a public power empire to benefit suffering consumers has finally turned into a bonanza for a few private corporations and the hated "power trust" which Franklin D. Roosevelt sought to drive out of business.

In the great Northwest, as well as along the Niagara and St. Lawrence Rivers in New York, the construction of huge dams and transmission networks had not brought the blessings and benefits forecast by apostles of cheap power in the prewar thirties.

It has not, for instance, lowered consumers' costs appreciably. It has not attracted industries of the kind that need or employ large working forces, for most of them are now served as a "yardstick" to force down electric light and service bills to the general public.

Where private industry and utilities have not enjoyed most of the benefits from plants built with the taxpayers' money, including contributors residing far from their location, they have cut the costs of conventional fuels — coal and oil — so that they can compete with firms using government power.

Such a public power enthusiast as Senator Richard L. Neuberger of Oregon recently complained to the Senate about this strange twisting of his high hopes. Despite the vast public power expenditures in the Northwest, he said, the labor force in that area has increased by an average of only 1.1 per cent in the last five years, whereas the nationwide average is 2 per cent.

The aluminum and allied industries buying most of the power need a minimum of personnel for their operations. It is estimated that they have not added more than 20,000 to the area's working total. The great increase has been in the aircraft factories.

Several great industries have passed up the Northwest to build along the Ohio River, where they will rely on coal for fuel instead of hydroelectricity. They will also

Love That Ike

The Saturday Evening Post, now that it has lost some of its competition (Collier's, Women's Home Companion, etc.), will undoubtedly exert greater influence on the American mind than it has been capable of doing within the past decade or so. And, generally speaking, we have been encouraged by the trend being taken in the Post, especially by some of its editors.

For example, in recent issues it has carried editorials by Felix Wittmer, a distinguished rightist, and in its January 19th issue it has a comment by no less a figure than Anthony Bouscaren, professor of political science at Marquette University, a very clear and well informed member of the anti-communist right wing.

Unfortunately, this sprinkling of ideas from men of sound and discerning mind, is frequently offset by articles published in the body of the magazine which tend to give credence and support to all manner of nonsense fostered by our political henchmen. The latest of these is the above named January number and comes from the pen of Robert J. Donovan, a devout Ike worshiper.

We have no quarrel with Mr. Donovan's conclusions. His piece is frankly a sort of Pearson "I predict" and he has every right to make any kind of prediction he fancies. Additionally, we could say in Donovan's defense that he has sound reason for loving Ike. His book, "Eisenhower, the Inside Story," has long run up an impressive cash register roll of tape.

What distresses us is that in his article "What Ike Will Do" we can note no hint of moral or ethical concern. The President will do this and thus, he says. He will not do this and so. Well and good. But the overall indication from Donovan is: "The king can do no wrong; blessed be the name of that king."

As a responsible writer, and one conceivably to be concerned with the future of his country, he might have evinced some sadness at the implications his story carries. He might even have shed a brief tear for the passing of freedom and the emergence of the political savior, deady determined to uproot the last vestiges of Constitutionalism, conservatism, right-wing Republicanism and, in short, any sort of opposition.

The new Eisenhower, according to Donovan, is no one's man but his own. In his first administration he took a great deal of advice. In his second he emerges as a "strong" man who will brook no contrary view. Ike is revealed as sort of a regent from 1953 to 1956, but as Emperor Ike he stands crowned with success and crowing with confidence, from 1956 on through.

Now Donovan is a competent reporter, one of the nation's best. The type of article he prepared for the Post granted him the admission of opinion. The only opinion discernible is that Ike is good and Ike will rule as he should.

What are the principal things Mr. President will want to see accomplished in his new term in office? Donovan lists them:

The purging of all senators and congressmen, particularly Senators McCarthy and Jenner, who have opposed him. The revision of the Taft-Hartley Act to give greater power to labor bosses. The admission of Red China into the U. N. An increase in foreign aid. A mammoth intervention by the federal government to the extent of $2 billion into the educational field. Re-establishment of the prestige of NATO. Full reliance on the United Nations. Close alliance with Nehru and India.

And Donovan lets it be known that Ike will not hesitate to go around Congress if his will is thwarted. He will reinstitute the famous Roosevelt fireside chats and take his case directly to the people whenever there is a slight breeze of obnoxiousness from Capitol Hill. And all of this, in distinct contradiction to freedom, the American principles and heritage, is "good" in Donovan's eyes.

We hope that the editors of Post, in future editions, will give us more on the other side of the story. This love of government control, government taxation, government bigness and one-man rule is the problem we face.

It would be heartening to see writers like Bouscaren with full articles to their credit and equally heartening if such stuff as Donovan's was relegated to a few paragraphs.

Talk About Ethics, Harry Never Hollered For Help

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

CHICAGO — A long time ago, over in the West Side region now called skid row, Neg Cochran, of Toledo, started an ad-less paper called The Daybook with half dozen young rag-tag reporters who were always dregging up characters from the swirls and boils of the flophouses.

One night a skinny red-head, named Don McGregor, who had "the consumption" and always carried a slab of rye, came in with a ragged Scandinavian named Andy Furuseth, the first labor leader I ever met and the only one that I recall who actually was consecrated to the cause of the poor, ignorant stiff.

When the weather closed down and the lake boats were boarded up for the winter, the sailors, who were mostly Scandinavians, all called Swedes, headed for West Madison and South Clark and South State, to hole up until the next grass. Bohunks and Polaks from the wheat country and the railroad gangs boomed in and they all drank panther and got retching drunk.

McGregor disappeared in Mexico and we heard that Pancho Villa had shot him.

Andy Furuseth died destitute in San Francisco and Harry Lundeberg, "popeye the sailor," who died of a heart attack a few days ago, was, in his way, a monument to Andy. In the hearings under old Bob La Follette, who put through the Seamen's Act, Andy said sailors were the rakes and scrapings of hell. They were and he fought for them so well that nowadays they feed like passengers on the liners and spend so much time toting up their overtime and wind-jamming over laws and regulations that a great deal of the work which used to be done at sea by sailors now comes into the dock and is parcelled out to guys in the Hall as chores. Still, there were more sailors than jobs so Lundeberg's sailors of the Seafarers' International Union developed a sideline of street-fighting for hire for garment workers, and for ordinary union racketeers out to win "elections."

"If Andy had had a few more years, Popeye would have given him rich rewards, but Andy ran out of time. That was too bad, but as Popeye used to say, "That is the name of the game!" Meaning that life was a rough proposition and that people had to expect to get dumped once in a while. But, of course, there was compensation in dumping the other bumps.

When Lundeberg died, I got a note from Hugh Gallagher, of the Matson Line in San Francisco, who had been on the other side of the table during most of Popeye's career. They had a mutual admiration for Lundeberg praised Hugh as a man, and Hugh's note read: "We will miss old Popeye. I hope Curran doesn't try to take over." Curran may try, for he is a scamp who was as Red as Earl Browder when it paid him to run with the Soviet cult, but hung out a shingle as a Red-baiter after the war. He recently got a seat on the grotesque Committee on Ethics of the AFL-CIO. Lundeberg hated his stripes and his last issue of the West Coast sailor carried a studhorse head across page one: "Meany pegs Curran as a phony! (Something we have known ever since the punk was pushed into the union movement.)"

There followed a long letter in which George Meany belted Curran all over a whole page for throwing in with the old Joe Ryan outfit of longshoremen and against Meany's new rival racket, called a brotherhood, on the east coast.

Popeye reveled in wild brawls not only on the waterfront but far inshore where he thought he was just reinforcing Dave Beck's teamsters to chase the Communists out of the fruit fields and back to the waterfront. But he saw no sign of Beck, and dam few teamsters, either, so he and his guys, who wore white caps to identify themselves and still wear them as insignia when they hire out to dump guys, took charge and out-gutted the bums. One time Harry loaded his car with ball-bats and drove to a beach where a cop saw—the bats and Popeye yelled that they had been planted by the Communists to discredit a high-minded labor statesman. The New York cops impounded bundles of bats on the Brooklyn waterfront when white caps drove up concealed in big freight vans to dump some of Ryan's men. In these missions they were fighting to install the rival racket organized by the ethical AFL-CIO.

Once, Harry was stabbed in the back so deep that the handle stuck out, twitching. After that they arranged a formation, back-to-back. He never wore a tie because a tie was a handle for a guy to grab in the heat of a beef and when Gallagher took him to lunch in a New York restaurant where John D. Rockefeller usually sat, he had to raid a junior in the shipping office to get Harry a tie. Harry didn't see why Rockefeller couldn't take his tie off if uniformity was all that counted.

Popeye honestly believed unions ought to settle their own beefs. When two of his white-caps went down to San Diego to help the butchers beat the retail clerks for jurisdiction over a lot of jobs, they overdid things and were sentenced to prison. Popeye was furious. He said they just went down to walk around with the butchers' guy so he wouldn't get lonesome. But anyway, what the hell was the idea, hollering for the cops? No. They never heard Harry Lundeberg holler for help. Talk about ethics!

The Doctor Says

By EDGAR P. JORDAN, M. D.

More than one child born with a club foot, webbed fingers, a cleft palate or some other malformation has risen to fame. This has been done in many fields and speaks well for the ability of human beings to overcome handicaps.

Such conditions as those mentioned—and many other physical variations from normal—may be present at birth and naturally cause great shock to the parents. All, or most of them, are the result of incomplete development inside the womb of the mother and are not truly inherited.

The cause of these congenital abnormalities is still not entirely clear. However, it now seems that infections of the mother with German measles (and possibly other diseases) while she is carrying the child greatly increase the likelihood of this sort of trouble.

Certainly it is a good idea for prospective mothers to dodge exposure to infections and particularly German measles just as carefully as possible. The danger seems greatest during the first three months of pregnancy.

A newborn baby with a club foot or other malformation almost certainly does not suffer any pain, but the parents are acutely distressed. They want to know if it is their fault, what can be done for it, will it interfere with the child's physical or mental development, and how likely it is to happen again if they have other children.

What can be done is something else. Much can be done for harelip, cleft palate, club foot and several of the other congenital malformations, especially if they are attacked early. For this reason parents should consult someone who knows about these conditions promptly. The more that can be done, of course, the less will be the interference with the child's normal development.

As to the chances of having a later child with a congenital defect, one has to deal with average figures. The parents of one malformed child have about seven chances out of eight that the next child will be normal, whereas taking all births, a congenital defect occurs only about once in 213 births.

From the physical standpoint the disadvantages can often be largely overcome by modern treatment. It is equally important to battle the mental or emotional effects. The sympathetic understanding of parents, teachers and other children helps, but the will to overcome obstacles on the part of the youngster himself is of vital importance. Every effort should be made to avoid making a child sorry for himself.

A congenital malformation is not the fault of the parents. There is nothing they could have done to prevent it (except to try to avoid contagious diseases during pregnancy).

Cooking Homecooked Meal Is Hard Without A Home

By HENRY McLEMORE

HEBERG — A man can go EDL. HEIDELBERG — A man can go just so long without a homecooked meal, and by a homecooked meal I don't mean one at a friend's house, or at a restaurant that advertises such things, but one cooked by your wife at your own place, and tasting as you're accustomed to having it taste.

I chose yesterday as the day that Mary, come hullo-bello or hot water, should cook dinner for us. There were a few drawbacks, one being that we don't have a kitchen. But we found a communal one of sorts up the hall that has an electric stove and about fifty cents' worth of pots and pans.

I had my heart set on a pork roast with all the trimmings, and if not that, a baked chicken with dressing, or a leg of lamb. One look at the utensils and that was out, so we settled for a meat loaf, and I volunteered to go to town and shop on the Hauptstrasse for the meat, green peppers, onions, mustard, salt, pepper and what ever else Mary puts in a meat loaf.

I don't know why it is, but a German butchershop, or "Fleischer," is always packed and jammed. They're like bus stations on the day before the Fourth of July. By the time I got waited on, I had forgotten all the German I had memorized before leaving home.

The butcher stared at me as I stood dumb before the counter, and so did the impatient customers I was holding up. I finally had to say something so I said, "Ich moechte a lot of ground tenderloin." He got the "Ich moechte" (I want) but the ground tenderloin left him cold.

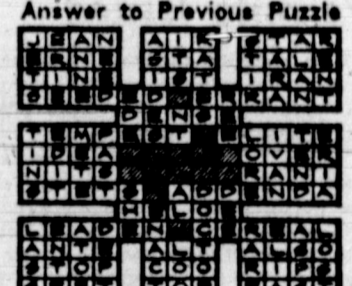

I had to drop out of line and keep asking customers who came in if they spoke English until one did and he got me a pound and a half of "hackfleisch," which was what I wanted.

I was pretty shaken up by this time, but managed to remember the name of the shop I had to visit to get vegetables and the other items I needed. It was a "Gemuese."

I forgot all my German again when I got in the Gemuese, and before you say I'm dull-witted just remember that mustard is "senf," onions are "swibel," and lettuce is "kopf salat."

Saud Visit Is Big Diplomatic Success

(Foreign News Commentary)
By CHARLES M. MCCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent
The visit of King Saud of Saudi Arabia to President Eisenhower promises to be a big diplomatic success. There seems to be good reason to believe that the Arabian monarch's conferences in Washington may lead to improvement in the entire Middle Eastern situation. Saud appears to have been convinced, for one thing, that the Eisenhower Doctrine aimed at combating Communist penetration of the Arab countries is a real contribution to Middle Eastern stability. He has intimated strongly that he will tell the leaders of other Arab countries that the President's plan should be accepted. More Cooperation Seen As regards the direct United States-Saudi Arabian part of the Washington talks, it seems certain that agreement for cooperation between the two countries will be worked out. Under this agreement, the United States would sell Saudi Arabia a large quantity of arms. The figure of $250 million has been mentioned, but is said now to be too high. In return, Saud would renew for five years the agreement under which the United States maintains a big air base at Dhahran on the Persian Gulf. There was strenuous opposition by many people in the United States to King Saud's visit. Blasted By Wagner Mayor Robert Wagner of New York City in a d. himself the spokesman for some of these opponents by announcing publicly that he would refuse to extend the usual courtesies to the President's guest. Wagner based his opposition on the allegation that Saud is anti-Jewish and anti-Roman Catholic. The existence of slavery in Saudi Arabia also was cited. But Saud seems to have made an excellent impression personally in Washington. But regardless of any opposition, the President's decision to invite Saud to Washington appears to have been well-advised. Saud is a big figure in the Arab world. He may well become a bigger one than President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt.

As Soldier, Elvis Would Get Crewcut Like All The Rest

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—If and when Elvis Presley becomes a soldier, he'll get a crewcut like any other GI, and rumors he'll fight to keep his sideburns, he says indignantly, are mean "a hound dawg." "People have been makin' such a big to-do about my keepin' my hair," groaned Elvis while he treated me to a lunch at the Paramount commissary. "I don't want any impartiality," said Elvis. "I don't want to go into the service and have the rest of the boys in short hair and me in long hair. All GI's get crewcuts and I'm not askin' them to keep my hair." "I'm goin' into that service and do the best I can. If they want me to sing for the boys, I'll sing; if they want me to march, anything they want me to do is all right." Elvis looked disgusted when I inquired if he's keeping his sideburns and droopy ducktail for his second movie, "Loving You," a modern story about a rock 'n roll singer which he's doing for Producer Hal Wallis at Paramount. "My hair is my trademark," he explained carefully. "I never meant to offend anyone with it." When Elvis joins the Army depends on when his draft board needs a draftee, "and it might be next month, next year, or never," he said. "I don't mind goin'," he added. "I was going into the service two years ago when I got out of school. Then I wanted to be an electrician and then a truck driver. "And look how I ended up—a bum!" laughed the singer—now a wealthy movie, record, nightclub and TV star.

A New Matinee Idol Is Hungarian Refugee

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP)—A new matinee idol is in our midst. He can go to town with the appropriate amount of publicity... for he and his family were among the thousands of refugees welcomed to the United States after the revolts last October in Hungary. Since his arrival, however, Sandor Szabo has been living in such obscurity you would hardly suspect that he is—or was—Hungary's leading actor. Szabo, his actress wife, Kato, and their two sons—Berne, 15, and Balags, 13—fled to Vienna in mid-November; and were among the refugees brought to Camp Kilmer, N. J., Dec. 8. "It was necessary that we leave," said Szabo, through an interpreter. "I had a part in the revolution... I was on the Russian blacklist." Now, he and his family will become U.S. citizens. And the actor will hurry his English studies. "Not very many roles in Hungarian here," laughed the actor, who is a ruggedly handsome man of 40. Szabo said he had played both romantic and character roles in Budapest, but perhaps is best known there for his interpretation of Cyrano. Like most of the other refugees, Szabo and his family came to America without funds and with only the clothes they wore. And, like most of the others, they are finding Americans warm and generous. The boys already are enrolled in a Friends' school in Providence, R. I., and the Szabos have free room and board at the City of New York YWCA, which has provided 50 rooms for refugees. And, the Szabos are studying English free—at the American National Theatre and Academy (ANTA). In a few days, they will move to a small apartment, paid for by a Rockefeller scholarship, which also will help the couple with food and clothing bills.

REAL GONE GATOR
NEW YORK (UP)—Three Columbia University coeds are carrying on an experiment in co-existence. Linda Green, Claire Delage and Irene Curtis live with a 12 and a half inch alligator and their cat, Pushkin, in a small, off-campus apartment. The gator, named Gorki, is Linda's and was the Christmas gift of a boyfriend in California. Gorki is kept in the bathtub until the girls want to take showers. Then he is moved to a pressure cooker—regularly scalded before use in cooking dinner. The girls say they have had nervous indigestion since Christmas.

NEWS BRIEFS

By UNITED PRESS
WASHINGTON: Former President Hoover on a warning of a depression "that will curl your hair": "Mine has already been curled once—and I think I can detect the signs."
WASHINGTON: Alfred Lillenthal, counsel to the Committee for Security and Justice in the Middle East, charging that a weakness of the Eisenhower Doctrine is that force can only be used in instances of Communist aggression: "So long as one million Arab refugees remain homeless, so long as the Holy City of Jerusalem is severed by barbed wire, and so long as Israel continues to flout existing resolutions of the United Nations, there will be new Suzes and more bloodshed."
NASHVILLE, Tenn.: Geneva Allen, an eyewitness to the collapse of a 1,200-foot tower of television station WSM-TV, describing the accident: "It was there and then all of a sudden it started collapsing like an accordion."
WASHINGTON: Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-NY), chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil rights bills, supporting a self-sponsored bill that goes beyond the administration's civil rights proposals: "Just as we can't do back the hands of history, we can't hold back the idea that one color is as good as another."
WASHINGTON: Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn reluctantly agreeing to delay a vote on the Democratic grazing lands plan following objections by Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson: "I think that Secretary Benson and his crowd down there want to get credit for whatever is done about the drought."
