Marathon Steel Dispute Is Settled

Nixon, Mitchell In Role Of Mediators

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The great 1959 steel strike was settled today after union and management negotiators bargained all night with the aid of Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell.

Both sides adopted a settlement recommended by Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Secretary Mitchell.

"The contents of the settlement are being withheld pending ratification by the appropriate bodies of the parties," Mitchell announced at a jammed news conference.

He said the agreement was reached as a result of behind-the-scenes conferences over the past several weeks conducted by Nixon and Mitchell with top officials of the United Steelworkers of America and management.

R. Conrad Cooper, chief management negotiator, said the agreement "represents a compromise which goes beyond what the companies had previously offered."

Cooper added the companies felt their "best course of action" was to accept the government recommendations.

Steelworkers President David J. McDonald said he would meet with the union's wage policy committee Tuesday to give them "a message of peace, prosperity and lasting happiness for the steelworkers."

"Their union is sound, safe and secure," McDonald said. Approval of the new contract by the wage policy committee was considered virtually certain. McDonald said his meeting would be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Settlement of the dispute eliminated the possibility of a renewed strike when the 60-day back to work Taft-Hartley injunction expires Jan. 26.

The ground-the-clock negotiation session which ended the dispute started at 11 a.m. Sunday and broke up shortly after 3 a.m. today.

Mitchell said he and Nixon arranged private talks to mediate the historic dispute under instructions from President Eisenhower.

"As a result of these conferences the differences between the parties were narrowed to a point where a recommendation for settlement was made by the vice president and the secretary of labor which was accepted voluntarily by both parties," Mitchell said in his statement.

Stubbles of whiskers were evident on the faces of Cooper, union attorney Arthur J. Goldberg and others who took part in the round-the-clock talks. Mitchell, smiling broadly, appeared clean shaven.

McDonald, who had kept in touch with the negotiators by phone, smoked a new black pipe and boomed a cheery "good morning" to the newsmen.

Cooper said he hoped union officials would join hands with management in a campaign to eliminate waste.

"The degree of such cooperation will bear heavily upon the extent to which this settlement may inflate steel production cost," Cooper added.

He led off his statement by saying, "Naturally we are relieved this controversy is over and that the nationwide fear of another steel strike on Jan. 26 has been removed."

The settlement came two days before Congress reconvenes. Informal sources said Nixon had warned both sides that the lawmakers might approve legislation disfavorable to both union and companies if the record-breaking 116-day strike were resumed.

Mitchell gave Nixon a hearing measure of credit for bringing the dispute to an end.

"Without the vice president we would not have had a settlement," Mitchell said.

He disclosed that he and Nixon met eight or ten times at Nixon's home with Cooper, McDonald and Roger Blough, chairman of U.S. Steel, the largest of the steel companies.

Mitchell said Nixon met with the heads of the 11 biggest steel companies in New York last Thursday night before going to California.

Mitchell said he and Nixon made a settlement recommendation in economic terms to both parties. But he would not discuss its substance or say if it was identical with the terms hammered out in the dark hours of this morning.

Nixon's "influence, prestige and leadership were very significant in this settlement," Mitchell said.

The companies' last offer to the union involved a three-year contract and a wage-benefit package.

Garden City Massacre Solved

Con Admits Quadruple Slaying

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — An ex-convict confessed Sunday night that he and a former cellmate had murdered a wealthy Kansas farmer, his wife and two of their four children in an attempt to steal money that did not exist.

Richard Eugene Hickock, 28, Johnson County, Kan., told police he and Perry Edward Smith, 31, Las Vegas, believed that Herbert W. Clutter kept a large sum of money in his $40,000 farm house. There was no money there.

Agents of the Kansas Bureau of Investigation said a former employe of Clutter's, who apparently had told Smith and Hickock of the money, gave them the tip that resulted in the arrests Wednesday. The suspects were picked up on charges of parole violation and passing bogus checks.

Authorities would not identify the informant.

"If anyone of (Hickock's and Smith's) friends find out he is our star witness he won't live a minute," said an investigator in Las Vegas.

Hickock made his confession seven weeks to the day after the discovery of the bound and gagged bodies of Clutter, 48, his wife Bonnie, 45, Nancy, 16, and Kenyon, 15.

The bodies were found Nov. 15 by two teen-aged girls who had stopped off at the Clutter home to pick up Nancy on the way to church. Clutter and his son were in the cellar. Mrs. Clutter and Nancy were in their beds. All had been killed by short range shotgun blasts in the head, and it appeared that Clutter's throat had been cut.

Hickock told police that he and Smith had crept into the Clutter home between midnight and 1 a.m. Sunday through an unlocked door. They awakened the family and searched for the money— which Clutter denied was there.

Finally, Hickock said, they killed the family to prevent any identification.

The Clutters' two other children, Mrs. Beverly English and Mrs. Eveanna Jarchow, were not at the house on the murder night.

Clutter, a former Eisenhower appointee to the federal Farm Credit Board, was known in Garden City as a "book farmer" who kept little cash on hand and transacted almost all his business— including small purchases of less than $2 — by check.

Plot Hatched By Prison Talk

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (UPI) — Prison gossip was the beginning of the grim plot that killed rich farmer Herbert W. Clutter, his wife and two of his four children. From the same prison came the tip that caught their accused slayers.

An inmate of that prison worked for Clutter in 1948. He spoke once, on the inside, of the wealth he thought was in the Clutter's prosperous home, and from that information fellow convicts hatched the robbery plot which ended in the murders Nov. 15. He spoke again in stricken conscience during the Christmas holidays, this time to the law.

This broke the investigation into seemingly clueless murders. It culminated Sunday in a detailed confession by Kansas parole violator Richard Eugene Hickock, 28, who implicated his former cellmate, Perry Edward Smith, 31. Their seemingly perfect crime fountered on another convict's conscience.

Highly authoritative sources gave this account today of the solving of the Clutter case, a mystery which had baffled Kansas authorities because there was no clue and no visible motive.

It turned out that the actual motive — robbery — was a mistake, for the hidden wealth in Clutter's home was only the imagining of a hired hand who later went to prison.

To protect the informant, his name was kept secret and special precautions were taken.

Herbert W. Clutter, 48, was a successful, modern farmer who had no enemies. He had served from 1954 to 1956 on the federal Farm Credit Board, but declined a reappointment offered him by the administration.

He owned 1,000 acres of prime wheat land and also had herds of cattle and sheep. But he didn't like to keep or carry large amounts of cash — he dealt almost entirely through checks.

On Saturday evening, Nov. 14, 1959, Clutter, his wife Bonnie, 48, and their son, Kenyon, 15, spent a quiet evening in their comfortable farm house. At about 10:30, 16-year-old Nancy came home with her date, Bob Rupp.

Bob sat down a while and watched television, then got up to leave. Just before the family went to bed, Clutter made a phone call to his old friend and business partner, Gerald Van Vleet. They talked business.

Anti-Semitism Wave In Germany FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer will discuss the growing wave of anti-Semitism with his cabinet on Wednesday, informed sources said today. There also was the possibility of a debate in Parliament.

The anti-Semitic campaign, marked by the slanders of swastikas and anti-Jewish slogans on synagogues throughout Germany, also has spread to other West European countries and similar incidents were reported in England, Scotland, Austria, Norway, Belgium, France, Sweden and the United States.

Rogers, in a report to President Eisenhower, said that what has been exposed so far "makes it likely that the known instances of payola are more than isolated cases."

Payola or any other type of paid announcement not identified as a commercial is illegal under the Communications Act of 1934. Anyone found guilty of breaking this law could face a maximum penalty of $10,000 or one year in prison or both.

FCC members have said that violation also could lead to loss of broadcast license by stations which sanction payola or speak commercial practices.

Workers Sigh Relief Upon Hearing News

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Steelworkers expressed profound relief today on learning that negotiators in Washington had resolved the marathon steel contract dispute.

"There's no question about it — we all wanted to see it done," said Robert Walsh, who works for Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. here.

"You can be sure that if Dave McDonald got it, it will be good for us."

Phillip Wilding, a supervisor at the same mill, was on management's side in the bitter dispute. Settlement to him was just as sweet.

"There's no better New Year's gift for me than this," he told a UPI reporter. "One-hundred and fifteen days was long enough," he said.

Most of the workers filing through plant gates on the 8 a.m. shift smiled and joked. They knew a settlement was in the air before the actual announcement.

But several were passing out anti-bills. The bills urged the workers to vote down the companies' latest offer in a then-scheduled National Labor Relations Board election.

When word finally came that agreement had been reached, they crushed the handbills in a mad and threw them to the ground.

The majority of workers questioned by UPI admitted they had been concerned about mounting debts, especially those incurring the recent holidays. And were apprehensive about starting resumption of the walkout.

But at least one, Eugene Smith, 5, a welder at J&L, said "money wasn't the big thing in this life."

"Money didn't mean anything — not even 50 cents an hour," Smith said. "The main issue was work rules."

Ike Back Of Steel Talks That Jelled

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — President Eisenhower "instructed" Vice President Richard M. Nixon more than a month ago to try to mediate the steel dispute, the vacation White House reported today.

Since the initial move, Eisenhower has conferred with Nixon a number of times in person and by telephone, along with Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, who worked closely with Nixon in preparing for a settlement.

Nixon "initiated meetings at the top level on both sides," the White House said.

These details of the administration efforts to avert a resumption of the steel strike were disclosed by White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty coincident with the Washington announcement of the settlement.

Hagerty made no comment on behalf of the President and said Mitchell's statement "will speak for the administration."

Before Eisenhower left Dec. 3 on his 11-nation tour, he had a long conference with Nixon and Mitchell and then publicly expressed hope for an early settlement in a radio-TV speech on the eve of the trip.

"31 YEARS OF WORK" — Mr. and Mrs. L. F. (Cotton) Alexander tried to find something to salvage this morning from the gutted interior of their home which was ravaged by flames at 2:15 a.m. today. Alexander said the home held everything the family had worked for the past 31 years. Two other persons escaped the fire in their night clothes in below freezing weather. See story on page 2.

Holiday Deaths Climb Rapidly

By United Press International

The nation's highway death toll for the New Year's holiday soared past earlier predictions and appeared likely to set a new record today.

A United Press International count at 8 a.m. e.s.t. showed 261 persons died in traffic accidents, 59 in fires and 83 in miscellaneous mishaps for an overall toll of 303.

Michigan counted 32 traffic deaths, more than any other state, to lead the nation's most unpopular contest. Texas was second with 27 and Florida third with 25. Pennsylvania and California had 21, Ohio 20 and New York 19.

The toll was sure to climb as late reports trickled in.

"We are almost sure to pass the previous three day New Year's record," a spokesman for the National Safety Council said Sunday night.

The old mark of 359 was set over the 1955-56 New Year holiday. The all-time record for a New Year's period was set in 1956-57 when 423 persons were killed in a four-day period.

Invasion Plot Trials Called Off HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) — The trials of nearly 200 men in connection with last August's "invasion plot" was postponed without explanation today.

The trials had been scheduled to start this morning in Havana's Cabana fortress prison.

But a spokesman for the revolutionary tribunals said they would be delayed. He said the date for their start has not yet been fixed, but probably will be set this week.

Deadline For Clean-Up Of Broadcasting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Today is the deadline for the nation's radio and television stations to report to the government on what controls they have set up to police payola to their employes.

The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) directed the 5,236 radio and TV broadcasters to report on "internal controls and procedures" being used to keep tabs on payoffs to staffers outside their regular salary.

By Feb. 5, the radio and TV stations also must disclose any payola or "push money" either they or their personnel have taken since Nov. 1, 1958, for hidden commercial plugs.

The FCC's demand for disclosure of undercover payments to disc jockeys to push certain records (payola) and to broadcasters to deceptively cloak plugs for products on the air is unprecedented.

It stems from the congressional inquiry into the TV quiz show scandals and a coming payola investigation. Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers last week recommended that payola be made a federal crime.

Rogers, in a report to President Eisenhower, said that what has been exposed so far "makes it likely that the known instances of payola are more than isolated cases."

Payola or any other type of paid announcement not identified as a commercial is illegal under the Communications Act of 1934. Anyone found guilty of breaking this law could face a maximum penalty of $10,000 or one year in prison or both.

FCC members have said that violation also could lead to loss of broadcast license by stations which sanction payola or speak commercial practices.

Four Escape Flaming House In Early Morning Fire Here

Four persons escaped injury early this morning when a four-room home at 112 N. Starkweather was gutted by fire.

Escaping through a rear door in night clothing were Mr. and Mrs. L. F. (Cotton) Alexander, their daughter-in-law Mrs. D. F. Alexander, of Phillips, and a six-month-old baby boy.

Mr. Alexander, an employe of the J. D. Wright Trucking Co., said everyone awoke at about 2:15 a.m. to discover the front room of the small wooden house ablaze.

"I tried to get to the phone but the flames pushed me back and I ran out the back door," Alexander said today. Mrs. Alexander was sleeping in a room next to the front room, while their daughter-in-law and the infant were in the rear bedroom.

Pampa firemen called at 2:20 were unable to save the ravaged interior but kept the blaze from spreading to adjoining units.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander both had their hair and eyeslashes singed by the blaze. They managed to save only Alexander's billfold and the clothing they wore.

"We're wiped out," Alexander said. "Thirty-one years of work is gone."

Destroyed were the family's clothing, furniture which included a piano and living room suite, a television set and cooking utensils.

Firemen said the fire started from an overloaded wire behind the television set.

they valued at 30 cents an hour over present earnings which average $3.10 an hour. The unions valued this proposal at 22 to 24 cents an hour.

Cooper refused to discuss the question of a possible increase in steel prices.

Mitchell was asked if the dispute could have been settled sooner if he and Nixon had begun their efforts earlier. He said he doubted it. Asked why, he smiled broadly and pointed to Cooper, on his right, and McDonald, on his left.

McDonald said he wanted to commend Eisenhower, Nixon and Mitchell for their efforts, "the same goes for me, too," Cooper put in.

The talks were held in the Washington headquarters of the Bethlehem Steel Corp.

A spokesman for Mitchell said the Sunday-Monday session was the first bargaining session to run through an entire night and into the next day. President Eisenhower asked for round-the-clock bargaining in December.

Some 20 or more industry and union representatives were reported to have been in the all-night session. Many took off their jackets and worked in shirt sleeves. They sent out from time to time for coffee, milk and sandwiches.

Iron Age, a trade publication, reported that a secret agreement to end the dispute had been hammered out by Mitchell and Nixon in meetings with the two sides.

The magazine said the package agreement would cost the steel companies 41 cents an hour over a 30-month period. It said that a "moderate" price increase by some steel companies would be forthcoming.

But Mitchell's spokesman said that "no agreement has been reached at this time." A union spokesman also said no agreement had been reached and added: "There is no basis for undue optimism."

Despite the hopes raised by Mitchell's side for an early settlement, both sides continued their ballistics outside the conference room. There were these developments:

The Steelworkers planned to go into federal court in Pittsburgh today to ask Judge Herbert P. Soreq for an order directing the companies to pay the workers a four-cent hourly cost-of-living increase. The union contends the hike is required by Soreq's order sending the strikers back to work under their old contract.

The steel companies were ready to take their case to the public in a nationwide telecast. Board Chairman Roger Hough of U. S. Steel scheduled a half-hour address on NBC-TV at 7:30 p.m. e.s.t.

Union President David J. McDonald was scheduled to speak at a Steelworkers' rally in Buffalo, N. Y. today in his campaign to get workers to reject the companies' last offer in a government-conducted vote on Jan. 11-13.

New demands arose in Congress for a settlement. Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) and Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) said Congress might have to pass new labor legislation unless an agreement is reached.

Bandit Trio Captured

Three Ft. Sill, Okla., army men, positively identified as the ones who held up the Vaughn and Roth Truck Terminal here at gunpoint Dec. 20, are in custody in Wichita Falls.

Captain Denny Roan said the three, whose names could not be learned at this time, were arrested Saturday and admitted robbing the truck terminal and two customers of $290.

He said the three also admitted the armed robbery of an Amarillo bank store Dec. 19.

Roan said the three have waived extradition proceedings, and Chief of Police Jim Conner and Texas Ranger Bill Henslee have gone to Wichita Falls to investigate the possibility of returning them to Pampa for trial.

The three young men entered the station at 3:05 a.m. Dec. 20 and lined up the station attendant, Cleo Huff, and two bystanders. Two of the bandits brandished pistols, while the third carried a paper sack. After emptying the cash register of $175.48, they took billocks from the three men and escaped in a gray pickup truck.

Pistols were in their possession when they were arrested.

PLOT

Mrs. Eveana Jarchow, who was living in Illinois, and Beverly, who was attending classes at Kansas University Medical Center in Kansas City, Kan., Eveana would be coming home soon for Beverly's wedding.

The Clutter family went to bed. They didn't lock the doors.

Sometimes between midnight and 1 a.m., according to the confession signed by Hickock Sunday night, two figures stole up to the darkened house, softly opened the door to Clutter's office, and crept in.

They located Clutter's bedroom and shook him awake. At gunpoint, they prodded him up the stairs, where they woke Mrs. Clutter, Nancy and Kenyon.

"Where is the safe with the money in it, they demanded.

Clutter told them there was no safe — and no money. They didn't believe him. Finally, the two men gave up. They bound their captives' hands and feet and stuffed rags in their mouths. They tried to scare them into saying where the money was. Then — in this order: Kenyon, Clutter, Nancy, Mrs. Clutter — the strangers pointed a shotgun barrel at a head and pulled the trigger.

"The very enormity of the toll is a more effective warning than anything we could say," the Safety Council commented.

"The highway carnage was marked by a rash of multiple-fatality accidents. Five young women and two young men died in a two-car collision near Baginaw, Mich., Sunday, and nine were killed in a head-on crash near Miami, Fla. on Saturday.

The President's budget message calling for spending of about 80 billion dollars in the fiscal year starting July 1 will be submitted on Jan. 18. His economic report will go to Congress on Jan. 20.

Senate Republicans plan to hold their first party conference Wednesday afternoon. But the Democrats may switch their normal schedule and not hold their caucus until after they near the President's State of the Union Message. This would enable Johnson to tailor his program with the advantage of knowing the President's proposals.

Son Slays Father In Fit Of Depression

WEATHERFORD, Tex. (UPI) — Kenneth Ray Fisher, 14, who still carries part of a bullet in his head from a hunting accident 18 months ago, stabbed his father to death with a six-inch hunting knife Sunday night.

"Ever since I got shot," the youth told police, pointing to his head, "my nerves have been ragged and I don't think straight."

The stabbing victim, Earl Lee Fisher, 48, died about five minutes after Kenneth drove him to Campbell Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Fisher said Kenneth had been "mentally ill" since the hunting accident. But she also said "Kenneth had had it in for Earl so long, I don't believe he is fully realizes what he has done."

According to Sheriff John F. Young, the boy killed his father because he "kept butting in" to a conversation Kenneth was having with his mother. After he drove his father to the hospital, young Fisher drove back home and started putting articles — including a .22 caliber rifle — into his car.

It was then that the sheriff and police patrolman Earl Keenum arrested him.

He told the officers he didn't intend to run away, but he "had to get away somewhere, where I could think."

Four days ago, the sheriff said, Kenneth pulled a knife and threatened to kill his mother, but the parents did not file a complaint.

The prosecution, which will lead off with opening arguments, contends the motive for the fatal shooting was a desire, by Finch, 42, to wed his 23-year-old former receptionist without having to split an estimated $750,000 in community property with his 33-year-old wife, Barbara.

The prosecution further contends that Finch and Miss Tregoff carried a "murder kit" July 18 to do away with Mrs. Finch by medical means, but shot her instead.

Mrs. Finch instituted a divorce action against her handsome, tennis-playing husband May 20, less than two months before her body was found shot through the back on the lawn of the 65,000 home in nearby West Covina.

Daniel Decision Is Due In Radio Talk

By LLOYD LARRABEE United Press International

AUSTIN (UPI) — Gov. Price Daniel goes on the radio tonight to announce whether he intends to seek re-election, and Atty. Gen. Will Wilson probably will be an interested listener.

If Daniel announces that he will seek a third term, Wilson may decide to run again for attorney general. But if Daniel announces that he will not run, Wilson is expected to seek the governorship.

However, most observers believe Daniel will run again. His speech will be carried over a 29-station radio hookup at 7 p. m.

Wilson already has an opponent if he runs again for attorney general. He is House Speaker Waggoner Carr, 41, of Lubbock, who announced last Wednesday that he will run for attorney general.

To Ask Death For Dr. Finch

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The state today was expected to ask the death penalty for Dr. R. Bernard Finch and his paramour Carole Tregoff, accused of killing the physician's estranged wife to get her share of the family fortune.

The prosecution, which will lead off with opening arguments, contends the motive for the fatal shooting was a desire, by Finch, 42, to wed his 23-year-old former receptionist without having to split an estimated $750,000 in community property with his 33-year-old wife, Barbara.

The prosecution further contends that Finch and Miss Tregoff carried a "murder kit" July 18 to do away with Mrs. Finch by medical means, but shot her instead.

Mrs. Finch instituted a divorce action against her handsome, tennis-playing husband May 20, less than two months before her body was found shot through the back on the lawn of the 65,000 home in nearby West Covina.

Speed Mark By Airlines

Jet airlines helped again by tail winds up to 120 miles per hour set four east-bound transcontinental speed records Sunday.

Nixon was aboard an American Airlines Boeing 707 Sunday that raced 2,300 miles from Los Angeles to Washington-Baltimore Friendship Airport in three hours 39 minutes.

Nixon's flight with a capacity load of 412 passengers broke a previous American Airlines mark of four hours flat for the run.

Another American Airlines jet set a Los Angeles-Boston record of four hours 24 minutes, carrying 114 passengers and a crew of eight. The plane made the 2,750-mile flight at an average speed of 655 miles per hour, eclipsing a one-day-old record of four hours, 39 minutes also held by American.

A Trans World Airlines 707 carrying 114 passengers averaged 600 miles an hour for a 2,451-mile Los Angeles-New York run. The three hours, 57 minutes flight trimmed six minutes from a mark that TWA set Saturday.

An Eastern Airlines Douglas DC8 flew 2,338 miles from Long Beach, Calif., to Miami in three hours, 58 minutes and 55 seconds, an average speed of 554 miles an hour, which Eastern said was a record for the southern transcontinental route.

Car Theft Suspects Held

Two Cushing, Okla., youths are under arrest in Taos, N.M., today in connection with the theft of a 1959 station wagon in Pampa Saturday.

Police Captain Denny Roan said 18-year-old Roy B. Copenhaver and a 16-year-old companion also had "several" guns in their possession that have been identified with a burglary in Cushing.

In re-constructing the movements of the two, Roan said they are believed to have burglarized a hardware store in Cushing Friday and stole a car which they drove to Pampa. They then stole the station wagon here and drove it to Taos where they were arrested by New Mexico State Police.

Roan said the two boys face five possible charges. Two of the charges could be federal for transporting an automobile across a state line; two in Oklahoma, one for car theft, the other for burglary, and one in Pampa for car theft.

FROM OUT OF THE PAST — The Santa Fe Hotel and annex, looking much like the setting of a "wild west" movie, will soon be only a memory as workmen this week dismantle the 40-year-old building. When built in the early 1920's it was considered one of the finest buildings in Pampa. The Santa Fe housed drillers, roughnecks and adventurers of all types during the oil boom years of the twenties. Located in the 100 block of E. Tying, the hotel is being razed by its present owner, John Pitts. (Daily News Photo)

Parker Trial Delay Angers

BLOOMING, Miss. (UPI) — The Justice Department — angered by lack of state action against the lynchers of Mack Charles Parker — began efforts today to bring the accused members of the mob to trial.

A 23-man federal grand jury was to be picked to investigate the murder of Parker, a 23-year-old Negro truck driver who was accused of raping a white woman.

A mob dragged Parker from the Pearl River County jail in Poplarville, Miss., last April 25 and lynched him. His beaten, bullet-riddled body was found in the Pearl River a month later.

The grand jury was to be selected from a panel of 44 men, possibly including several Negroes. The jury is expected to spend at least two weeks hearing testimony from more than 40 witnesses subpoenaed by the Justice Department.

RUTH MILLETT

If you don't want to call attention to your age, don't. Begin remarks with, "At my age..."

—Wonder out loud what the world is coming to. —Talk about how awful young people are today. —Begin remarks with, "I guess I'm old-fashioned but..." —Resist anything new just because it is new and you only trust the old and familiar. —Spoil the effect of a pretty, new dress with some remark such as, "I hope it isn't too young for me."

—Talk a lot about the good old days. —Point out to young people how easy they have it today and how much harder you had to work when you were young. —Turn up your nose at everything of modern design without ever trying to see if it has any merit. —Talk about the state of your health continually, not falling to add, "At MY age I guess you just start falling apart," or, "But I guess I'm lucky at MY age not to be in worse shape."

—Feel free to offer advice to anyone, making good use of the phrase, "I'm old enough to know..." —Figure there's no point in putting a bright face on things if a sigh will get your sympathy. —Talk about the things you've had to give up as you have grown older. —Keep reminding folks that you don't expect to be around in a very long time.

—You can make sure that others will think of you as "old" if you want to. But why do you want to emphasize your age?

MUSIC LOVER

Dear Music Lover: Excellent idea! And for those of you who don't know anyone who could put a piano to good use, don't forget the youth centers, clubs for the handicapped and underprivileged, and civic recreation centers.

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column where women want to know what to do about a husband who snores. You always say, "If that's all that's wrong with him, you are lucky."

That doesn't help me, Abby. I am 18 and my father snores so loud I can hear him in my bedroom, which is upstairs (his is downstairs). I don't know how my mother has stood it for 19 years.

Snooring is the worst sound in all the world to me. Is there anything known to be a sure cure for snoring? If there isn't, I don't know what I'll do if I marry a man who snores.

MARY JO

Dear Mary Jo: There is no sure cure for snoring. Find out if the gentleman snores before you get romantically involved with him. But be careful how you find out!

Just 12 Little Ballet Terms Will Give You Dancing Figure By Summer

By GAY PAULEY UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—'Tis the season for nostalgia, and if you yearning is for a figure that used to be, help is on its way.

Just add 12 little terms, taken from the world of ballet, to all those other New Year's resolutions, says Olga Ley, a former dancing star who now teaches privately. Miss Ley promises that the 12, put into faithful practice, will give you the figure of a dancer by summer.

The terms are: Pile, battement tendu, port de bras, developpe, modern stretch, chest stretch, grande ronde de jambe, grand battement en cloche, more port de bras, releve, arabesque, and echappe.

Each spells out some exercise which any ballerina can do with ease although I eased into a couple and found muscles being used which hadn't budged in years. So go slowly until the kinks are out.

Miss Ley has compiled the 12 in illustrated folder form for Capesio, the concern which since 1987 has made shoes for dancers and in recent years has branched into footwear for non-dancers.

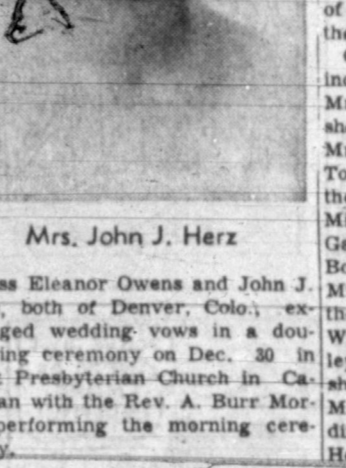

The pamphlet is available from the firm, but here are some of the highlights. —The spine must be held straight—chest up—shoulders relaxed, and held down, advises Miss Ley. —At no time must the derriere be allowed to push out, or the small of the back be

California Will Try To Avenge Upset

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press International
California, Indiana and Iowa of the nation's basketball are looking to climb of their own conference tonight as well as restore of the prestige they lost during wave of week-end upsets.

The second time within 48 hours Southern Cal engineered one of the season's biggest upsets Saturday night by defeating previously unbeaten California, 65-57. The Golden Bears may be the 1959 NCAA champs and recent winners of the Los Angeles Classic, but they are tied for last place in the West Coast's Big-Five Conference and no longer need worry about their snapped 25-game winning streak.

Operation Textbook

One of the most serious problems that we face today is the textbooks from which our children are being taught. The young folks are sent to government schools, supported by millions of our tax dollars. In these government places they are exposed to textbooks which raise some most questionable points as to how they were prepared.

For example, many of the textbooks now in use suggest that capitalism is an outmoded and rather vicious system of economics; that governments properly are supposed to look after their citizens; that freedom is a highly dangerous commodity which should not be available to the public generally; that labor unions have raised the standards of living of the people in this nation; that social security is a "right," and any number of other totally fallacious concepts.

For a long time this problem has been recognized in many quarters. At last, an organization has decided to step in and do something about it. This organization is called "America's Future," which is the same organization that has handled the radio broadcasts of John F. Flynn and published a number of anti-communist books and periodicals.

"America's Future" has come forward with the idea of setting up a textbook evaluation committee the purpose of which will be to examine textbooks in use in various parts of the country in our government school systems.

We rather like the way R. K. Scott, president of America's Future, writes about the project and how it will be undertaken. He says: "Functioning in a temperate and proper manner and carefully avoiding any pronouncement that might smack of censorship, this committee will provide parents, school officials and the public generally with constructive documentation and information regarding the textbooks now in use in the high schools of the nation."

There is no doubt at all that such a procedure could be a valuable one. Without a doubt there are literally thousands of parents utterly unacquainted with the taints in their children's studies, and a program of this sort could certainly be an enlightening one.

It can be seen that a textbook evaluation committee would, if successful, become enormously influential and powerful. And, in the interests of wiping out communism and socialism, this is highly to be commended. It is patently obvious to those who have familiarized themselves with this field that in the last two or three decades nearly all

Trouble In Paradise

Quite a number of socialists point with pride at Sweden. This nation, geographically about as large as the state of California and tucked in between Norway and Finland, with a fair portion of its terrain above the Arctic Circle, is a socialist paradise.

One of the big advantages the Swedes have had is that they have managed to stay out of war since 1814. Yet, their suicide rate is high and is growing higher.

The list of Swedish "welfare benefits" cannot even be equalled in the United States. 29.1 percent of their current budget goes for handouts to the people in one form or another. But the worm in the apple is seen in rising taxes, which have driven the price of a pack of cigarettes to 60 cents. Drunk driving has increased by 50 percent in recent years. In Stockholm, arrests for non-driving drunkenness have almost tripled in recent years.

The Swedes make cash payments to mothers of fifty-four dollars per child. They furnish tax-supported lunches and college education to youth; provide state-supported hospitalization, including state-paid treatment for alcoholism.

But against this is a mounting crime wave, with robberies and burglaries having doubled in the 1950's and with juvenile delinquency sweeping forward to become a national menace.

In a connection between the socialist "security" offered by this welfare state and the depressing and alarming symptoms of human decay? Probably most socialists would deny it, but some thoughtful persons are looking rather more deeply at the problem.

Better Jobs

The Illusion That Corporations Provide Employment

The American Economic Foundation issues a pamphlet under the heading of "The Things We Know That Are Not So," or sometimes called "Economic Fallacies." The pamphlet is written by Fred C. Clark and Richard Stanton Rimanoczy.

Since so few people really understand that business is just an exchange of the products of labor and the purpose of business is to save labor so that we can all live better, it is of the utmost importance that more and more people come to understand what causes full employment and an ever-increasing wage.

Under the heading of "The Things We Know That Are Not So" — That Corporations Provide Employment," Clark and Rimanoczy write:

"Employment is measured in payroll."

"Payroll comes from corporations."

"Looking at these two facts, it is easy to conclude that employment comes from corporations."

"But if we back away a little bit and look at more of the picture, we will quickly see that we have not looked far enough."

"Payroll does come from corporations, but where do the corporations get the payroll?"

"You can answer this question yourself — they get it from the customers who buy their products."

"This puts a different light on the matter."

"We now see that corporation managers are responsible for employment only to the extent that they are responsible for finding customers."

"But this is not solely the responsibility of management; the other people on the payroll must help."

"They must cooperate in carrying out the policies and plans which management has found to be necessary in winning and holding customers."

"This means that employment security which comes only from customer security, is a team-work proposition: if the non-management people on the payroll will not cooperate in the task of pleasing the customer, and cannot be prevailed upon to do so, there is no way in which management can prevent unemployment."

"We must not think that big corporations, because of their size, are exempt from strict control by the customer."

"The classic example is the tidal wave of customer disapproval that swept over the giant Ford Motor Co. when Mr. Ford decided that the Model 'T' was still good enough."

"In a matter of weeks the biggest automobile company in the world was forced to lay off most of its people until the new Model 'A' was made ready for production."

"No corporation, big or little, has enough cash to long maintain payrolls when sales fall off."

"But we have another question to answer before we have the whole picture — where do the customers get the money with which to make the purchases that provide the payroll?"

"In most part they get it by working for corporations."

"This means that as a nation of workers we supply our next month's payroll (and employment) by spending this month's payroll."

"If, for any reason, we stop buying some of the things other people make, somebody will be unemployed."

"There are two reasons why we sometimes slow down in employing each other."

"It is either because we don't need what the other fellow makes, or the amount of payroll being asked per unit of production is more than we are willing or able to pay."

"For those who might question the importance of payroll as the principle cost of production, we would like to point out that about 85 per cent of the selling price of the national product is paid out to the people who produce and exchange it."

"Profit amounts to only about 5 per cent."

"So the key to our employment security is to be sure that the payroll we ask for represents good value — that the unit cost of production will permit our goods to be sold at prices satisfactory to our employers — who are our fellow workers."

"Our income could go up forever and without danger to employment if we keep unit prices down."

"This is a job not just for management — it is for everybody."

Swedish picture is provided in the Saturday Evening Post for December 19. "Sweden: Paradise with Problems" was written by Peter Wyden and gives a pretty fair account of the situation there at the moment.

But in addition, Dr. F. A. Harper, one of this nation's better economists, spent some time in Sweden recently and provided us with even more figures and statistics than are contained in the Wyden article.

The sum total of the findings appear to be substantially in agreement. The Swedish economy

KENNEDY MAY LEAD UMW BACK INTO AFL-CIO IN '60

WASHINGTON — There is a real chance the United Mine Workers will return to the AFL-CIO fold in the coming year, for these reasons:

That is personally favored by Thomas Kennedy, long-time UMW vice president who is slated to succeed his old friend, John L. Lewis, when he retires early in 1960.

This would give the powerful union, which Lewis peremptorily "disassociated" from the AFL in 1942, a big voice in the selection of its next president. AFL-CIO president George Meany, who is concerned about his health, has been talking increasingly of retiring in "1960 or 1961."

Albert Hayes, head of the Machinists, is Meany's private choice to replace him. Insiders claim he is already "grooming him" for that.

Also favoring Hayes are influential building trades leaders. The Machinist chief has been in the forefront of the drive to houseclean the AFL-CIO, and played a key role in the expulsion of the racketeer-plugged Teamsters.

Walter Reuther, stormy Auto Workers president, also aspires to Meany's job. But while he has supporters, Reuther also faces very tough opposition.

While Kennedy personally favors rejoining the AFL-CIO, his elevation to UMW president will not mean immediate action on such a move. The 72-year-old, soft-spoken one-time Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania does not operate that way. He never rushes nor thunders.

He will proceed quietly and slowly, letting the AFL-CIO take the initiative, and with the timing and staging of the "reunion" being carefully set.

AFL-CIO leaders are more than willing to extend a welcoming hand. In fact, they have already discreetly started the ball rolling on that. It's been made very clear to Kennedy that the door is wide open for the UMW to "re-associate" whenever it's ready.

Unlike Lewis, who has bitterly clashed with some of them, Kennedy has been on cordial terms with AFL-CIO leaders. He has never rowed with them. So there are no personal barriers to their talking freely about this and other mutual issues.

A voluminous encyclopedia on Communism is being published by the House Un-American Activities Committee. Titled "Facts on Communism," the detailed study will deal with Communist history, organization, ideology, strategy and tactics. Copies can be obtained from the Committee or the Government Printing Office.

First major legislation to be considered in the Senate is the bill, by Senator Pat McNamara (D., Mich.) for $1 billion federal aid for school construction over a two-year period. McNamara has the assurance of Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon Johnson on that. The Eisenhower Administration will oppose this measure with another calling for $50 million in federal school aid for five years.

Senator Mike Monroney (D., Okla.), ranking member of the Interstate Commerce Committee, has a bill all ready to offer to require radio and TV stations to report weekly to the Federal Communications Commission on the amount of time allotted to public service programs. Under Monroney's measure, these weekly reports would have to be considered by the FCC in renewing station licenses.

Senator William Fulbright (D., Ark.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, has formally requested the State Department to "spell out" its policy towards the increasingly dictatorial Castro regime in Cuba. Fulbright also plans to summon Secretary Herter before the Committee for a detailed discussion of this thorny problem.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN? (Christian Edition)

Deputy Soviet Premier Kozlov was permitted to inspect the University of California's radiation laboratory at Berkeley but newspapermen were excluded "for security reasons." The newspapermen have a right to be unhappy over this situation and to insist upon an investigation. There is double reason for concern and protest on the part of the American people: first, that this Soviet leader was allowed to inspect the laboratory and, second, that newspapermen were excluded. If the latter were ruled out for security reasons, will someone please explain why the Communist official was admitted?

Along the same line — will the State Department and the officials of the Convair Aircraft Co. tell us just why Soviet jet builder, Andrei Tupolev, was allowed to inspect the Convair plant, including the new 80 jet transport?

The newspaper story recording the above also announces that Tupolev will inspect recent developments in the Lockheed and Douglas aircraft plants in Long Beach and Santa Monica. It is announced that he will see the Thor missile, Electric turboprop and DC-8 production line.

Looking Sideways

by WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK—The face is like a moon untouched by anything but sunlight. The voice that comes from it is modulated, British and warm. The hands move like dragonflies, flashing and darting. She is, by any standards at hand, young. She is, actually, 18 years old and has been an actress for seventeen years, eleven months and one week. She made her debut at the breaking age of three weeks when her father, the distinguished actor, John Mills, carried her on a scene in "In Which We Serve," a war-time film. If these dates do not add up arithmetically, take it up with her or her father. Maybe she's only 17.

And she is shocked by American teen-agers.

Juliet Mills, because of her shock, is in a long queue. Literally thousands who are not teen-agers queue up in print, on TV and in radio to express their shock. Many, with no access to these public platforms, are shocked in private. Miss Mills is among the first in the age group to say it out loud. She must, nonetheless, queue up with the hordes in protest.

Miss Mills is currently on Broadway in a British play called "Five Finger Exercise," and a very good play it is. But it seemed to me that the area in which she might be most valuable was the area of teen-age commentary. Being one herself, and all that.

"They are different in every possible way from British youngsters their age," she said, once the question was asked. "I can't even tell their ages. They all look so much older than they are. They are all so big. I had been told that the California beaches abounded in adolescents ranging around six feet tall or taller, and of both sexes. But I see it right here in New York and I saw it in Washington, D. C., when we tried out there. I was stunned to see boys no more than 16 or 17 parking Cadillacs and unfolding their six-foot lengths as they stepped out. I even saw cigars in some of their mouths."

"Those I have met are terribly sophisticated, and I don't mean it is a pose. They are genuinely sophisticated. When 14-year-old girls wear lipstick, glisten stockings and stand with enormous poise on still-high heels, I say they are genuinely sophisticated. They even have steady boy friends at that age. It is — well, startling."

I told her that I knew girls of 11 who were going steady. She burst into long, loud laughter.

"Going steady with whom?" she gasped between laughs. "Weedy, reedy little boys of 11, it's too ridiculous. I am not an uptight young brat from London taking a starchy view of things American. It would be in the worst possible taste. Actually, I find that part of the United States I have seen to be tremendously exciting, greatly stimulating. It's such a vital country. It is everything my father told me it would be — and more. But I have to say that the young people of my age are a revelation to me."

Was she a prude?

"No, oh, no," she protested. "Never. Far from it. But I think British upbringing still is more severe, more Victorian, than the American way. We do not have the freedoms your young people have. I certainly cannot tell you or anyone else that yours is worse and ours better or our worse and yours better. That is a complex matter. I can say only that our ways differ. Perhaps we are more disciplined. I do know we have more modest allowances. The young here seem to have so much money to spend. There is, too, more co-education here. Most of our schools are all boys or all girls. In this way we have less juvenile delinquency at home? I cannot answer that accurately."

Did she find any other astonishment here?

"Yes, one. The matter of analysis for the young. So many of your teen-agers seem to be going to psychiatrists. I met a girl of 15 here the other day who had been going since she was 11. Four years. Yet she is not a mentally disturbed child, or doesn't seem to be. She is alert, has great humor, speaks with wonderful ease and I found her enchanting. Why should she require four years of analysis? I'm asking, not making comment. This kind of thing is almost unheard of in England. We'd be thought terribly queer which, of course, we would be."

Fair Enough

Backwoods College Spawned Full Kennel

by WESTBROOK PEGLER

A new challenge to Walter Reuther's political aspirations arises out of the weedgrown ruins of a backwoods communist blockhouse called Commonwealth College, at Mensa, Ark. Reuther has managed to outlive the defunct exhortation of the notorious "Vic and Wal" letter which is spread on the records of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. That war-cry, written from Soviet Russia in 1933, was "carry on the fight for a Soviet America."

By the process of time and by the continuing power of the Roosevelt machine, this slogan has been reduced almost to nullity.

But in Little Rock, Ark., John F. Wells, a bare-knuckle editorial crusader, has picked out of the varsity publication of Commonwealth College accounts of Victor Reuther's appearance at a seminar held in 1936. Victor's subject was "the economic causes of war and the effect of the system on workers." At Commonwealth the title had abnormal meaning. Commonwealth was a real communist hive. Ella Bloor, a heroine of the treason, was a resident dignitary. Her son, Harold Ware, often was there. Whitaker Chambers named Ware as the one who organized the Washington communist apparatus in which he was a Soviet agent.

Chambers wrote of Ware: "He would affect the lives of millions of Americans who had never heard of him. For he had organized in the United States government one of the most formidable fifth-columns in history, whose influence for evil would be felt in the crash-mangling of all Europe. He was a birthright member of the communist party. His mother was Ella Reeve Bloor, a kind of fertility goddess. At 60 she was frolicsome as a schoolgirl and her vitality provided unlimited droll stories."

Commonwealth was closed by an Arkansas court in 1941 as a public nuisance. In 1948, the attorney general of the United States put it on "the list" of "subversive" institutions.

In passing he noted that Governor Orval Faubus, the center of the miscalled "integration" fight which made Little Rock, was a notorious member of the world-wide, merely a student but a student leader at Commonwealth. He was active when Victor Reuther went to Mensa to lecture a mysterious student body of unspecified numbers, few of whose names were mentioned.

There was only one known file of the student paper, The Fight. Two years ago, Mr. Wells made footnotes. The file has vanished. Mr. Wells's only forum is a small weekly paper, The Record, which in November published an article entitled: "Victor Reuther anti-war lecturer at Commonwealth after trip to Russia in '30's."

In small part, the text of the Fightingly on Vic Reuther's seminar said: "The discussions are being led by Victor Reuther, of Detroit, who is visiting the college for three weeks. For six months he has been national organizer for the labor division of the Emergency Peace Campaign, sponsor of the School Against War. He taught a similar course at Brookwood Labor College at Katonah, N. Y., with his brother, Walter, who recently completed a tour of Europe and Asia."

This journey took 18 months and produced the letter signed "Vic and Wal," singing about Red banners and huge pictures of Lenin flying from the cranesways of the factory where they worked.

Victor's connection did not end with his lecture course in 1936. In

In one respect, I'm a luckier man than Ike. I got to the lovely gardens at the Taj Mahal (where the night birds sing in the moonlight and the night blossoms give off a rare perfume; just 30 years before he did. It was there I asked my girl to marry me. And she said, "Yes." I've had her with me and a living memory of that place with me ever since.
