WHO'LL BE THE WINNER? — Judging swine occupied the forenoon session of the Junior Livestock Show at Recreation Park today. Shown here is Judge Homer Brumley, Hereford livestock feeder, as he checks and double-checks entries in the Hampshire Class 5 division while the proud owners parade them before him in the ring. Barbecue Will Highlight Livestock Show Tonight

The Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show got into full swing today at Pampa's Recreation Park this afternoon after a weekend of unending, weighing and sifting of fatners and pigs.

Today's activity began at 9 o'clock this morning with the judging of some 185 hogs entered in the swine division. Entries in this event came from EFA and 4-H Club boys and girls from Gray and six neighboring counties.

Most of the forenoon was taken up with the judging of the swine. Livestock Show officials said shortly after noon today the swine judging, because of the many entries and numerous classes, was running behind schedule and the grand champion had not yet been picked.

This afternoon judging of calves was set for 1:30 p.m. The judging in both the swine and calves divisions was done by Homer Brumley, prominent livestock breeder from Hereford.

The highlight of the stock show tonight will be at 7 p.m. when the Top-O' Texas Rodeo Assn. will be host to all the junior exhibitors and their parents at a barbecue to be held in the Recreation Park sales arena.

Tomorrow's program offers a full day of activity at the stock

Heavy Snow Cripples Upper Midwest Areas

By United Press International. Heavy snow barreled into the upper Midwest today above a broad band of freezing rain, sleet and hail across the nation's mid-section.

The storm spread northeast from central Nebraska into South Dakota and Minnesota, crippling Minneapolis with nearly a foot of snow and dumping 6 inches of new snow in Wisconsin.

Doctor Reports Elizabeth Taylor Holding Her Own

LONDON (UPI) — Movie star Elizabeth Taylor is winning her fight for life against one of the most virulent types of pneumonia known to mankind, her doctor said today.

Her husband Eddie Fisher said it is "fantastic, unbelievable—it's a miracle."

The 29-year-old actress, suffering from staphylococcus pneumonia, was rushed to an exclusive London clinic Saturday after doctors had given her possibly one hour to live. She was reported "resting comfortably" today.

Miss Taylor's breathing was helped by a British-developed electronic lung after she underwent a tracheotomy and had a tube inserted in her windpipe. She is being fed intravenously through her ankle veins, according to hospital sources.

"She is conscious but cannot speak, although she mumbles words," one source said. "When she wants to say something she scribbles it down on a pad which lies beside her bed."

Fisher said he was "in ecstasy" at the treatment his wife was receiving.

Dr. Carl H. Goldman, the star's physician, reported after an examination this morning that she was "holding her own and had a fair night."

"We do expect her to recover but how long it will take, we cannot say," he said. "She may be in the hospital another 10 or 15 days, but after that..."

Goldman termed "distorted and nonsensical" reports that it might take Miss Taylor a year to recover fully.

Unruly Congo Soldiers Seize Port Town After Defenders Cease Firing

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo, (UPI) — A battered United Nations force returned to Leopoldville by train today after surrendering the vital supply port of Matadi to prevent the spread of warfare in the Congo.

A U.N. spokesman said the 124-man Sudanese force and a nine-man Canadian signal detachment gave up Matadi after a short battle Sunday with a 1,000-man Congolese army force.

The spokesman said 1,000 U.N. Moroccan reinforcements ordered to go to the relief of the beleaguered Sudanese and Canadians were pulled back when the entire 2,000-man Congolese garrison led by Belgian officers at the military base of Thysville near Matadi threatened to intervene.

"In this way we avoided a large-scale conflagration," the spokesman said.

But the crisis was far from ended. It seemed evident that U.N. forces were determined to talk or fight their way back into the Congo's only major port, a key to the entire U.N. supply operation here.

Reliable sources at U.N. headquarters in New York said Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld had ordered "resolute action" to return the port to U.N. control. His first step was to order Lt. Gen. Sean McKeown, Irish commander of the U.N. force in the

President Facing New Opposition On School Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy today faced new opposition in Congress over his refusal to include assistance for parochial schools in his aid-to-education program.

House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack of Massachusetts split with Kennedy on the issue Sunday. McCormack proposed that construction loans for private schools be written into the measure.

Kennedy, like McCormack a Catholic, already is at loggerheads with the leaders of his church on the issue. The U.S. Catholic hierarchy has said it will fight to have parochial schools included.

The President told his news conference last week that parochial schools could not be included in the $5.6 billion program because of the cost.

Nine Airmen Killed When Plane Crashes, Explodes

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — A KB50 tanker airplane that usually carries enough fuel to supply several planes may have run out of fuel when it slammed into a sand dune Sunday night, killing all nine airmen aboard.

Air Force investigators today planned to study the charred bits of wreckage splattered across a half-mile of barren desert to check out the plane's last radio message that it was low on fuel.

The huge, six-engine plane exploded in a terrific burst of red and orange flame only nine miles from the runway at Biggs Air Force Base near El Paso. The aircraft was returning to its home base from a three-week training mission to the Pacific.

The plane, already in its landing pattern, belly-landed in the desert, skidded 300 yards, crashed into the sand dune and exploded. Rescue workers recovered the

Dirksen Asks Democrats To Quit 'Gloomy Talk'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen has called on the Kennedy administration to "fling away the crying towel" and show confidence in the nation's economy.

The Illinois senator said the business recession would come to an end if the Democratic administration would "cease talking like doomsday."

In a speech prepared for delivery today to the ninth annual Republican Women's Conference, but released Sunday, Dirksen said "all that is needed is to translate people's wants into purchasing action and that requires only expressions of confidence in 'high government circles.'"

There were these other developments on the economic front: —A leading adviser to President Kennedy, Dr. Paul A. Samuelson of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, predicted the recession would hit bottom by June, and there would be no need for a general tax cut to stimulate recovery.

Samuelson, an economics professor, said Kennedy might issue recommendations next week on how to spur industrial productivity by encouraging business investment.

The government reported that businessmen plan a mild 3 percent reduction in investment spending this year. This cutback would be much shallower than the 17 percent reduction in outlays for new factories and plant modernization which intensified the 1958 recession.

The same survey, made by the Commerce Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission, also forecast a 3 percent sales rise, with the notable exceptions of autos and steel — two basic industries in which sales are falling, this year.

Today's Lenten Message
By THE REV. DR. STUART M. PATERSON
Pastor, Westport Presbyterian Church, Kansas City, Mo.
(Written for UPI)

What are you giving up during Lent? This is a question often asked during this season. And we will not deny that self-discipline and commitment to sacrifice are important virtues in the life of a Christian.

But could this period not more properly be used in a positive way? One of the most justified observations of the average critic today, as he looks upon the average Christian, is that which prompts him to say, "He is no different than the rest of us."

And that is often true. For our faith has closely identified itself with our materialistic culture, our conformity to the crowd and our "freedom" — by which we mean the right to live as we please.

These days might bring us to face that which the Master of life demanded of His disciples — a loyalty which will speak out when confronted by the pressures of business and society, an evidence that what HE taught us is a practical thing to be expressed by convictions which may make us quite "different," and a spirit of love and service toward all of God's children of whatever race or color.

What have you done today that only a Christian would do? Perhaps that is a more potent point of emphasis than "What shall I give up during Lent?"

Kennedy Orders New Spending Cuts On American Servicemen Abroad

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy has urged new spending cuts on American servicemen abroad expected to save up to $110 million a year and help ease the drain on U.S. gold reserves.

Included in the program announced Sunday by the President was a ban on transportation of newly purchased foreign-made automobiles at U.S. government expense.

"Primary emphasis in achieving this reduction will be on the voluntary actions of the individuals involved," a White House statement said. But it also listed "a number of specific actions" by the military departments "to insure the reduction of expenditures in overseas areas."

The statement was a follow-up to a voluntary plan which Defense

Peace Corps Plan May Include Aid At Home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy today was considering whether to broaden his "Peace Corps" to send trained technicians and other volunteers into needy areas at home as well as abroad.

The President, elated by the response to his plan, said Sunday the administration was studying the possibility of using Peace Corps members in slum and depressed areas in this country.

The plan, as announced originally by the President, called for Americans to go overseas without salary to teach and work with the peoples of underdeveloped countries. The volunteers would get their living expenses paid.

Kennedy discussed the plan Sunday in an interview with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt for her television program, "Prospects of Mankind." The program was filmed for showing on educational

Many Texas Senatorial Candidates Accused Of Running For Publicity

AUSTIN (UPI) — Seventy-two persons—the most in Texas history—were official candidates today for the U.S. Senate seat Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson vacated.

Most of them will never campaign. But they all paid a $50 filing fee each, which is about the cheapest way — perhaps the only way — to get their names printed on two million ballots and in most of the state's newspapers.

The candidates include a children's clothes designer, a woman preacher, a Negro farmer, an unemployed stenographer, a sprinkling of politicians and Delbert Grandstaff, crooner, Bing Crosby's father-in-law.

Voters will make their choice April 4 in a special election, but the eventual winner will probably have to be determined in a runoff.

The list of candidates was more than double the old record of 29 for a special Senate election in Meeting Precedes Missions' Week The Central Baptist Woman's Missionary Union met Wednesday morning in the church for a day of special mission study preceding the Home Missions Week of Prayer.

The morning period of study was led by Mrs. Charlie Thomas, who gave a portion of the book, "The Dreamer Cometh", by William A. Carlton, the story of Luther Rice, pioneer Baptist preacher, was related by Mrs. Thomas, who was dressed in an 1800 costume and seated in an old-fashioned living room.

Mrs. Fred Clark, Jr., mission study chairman, introduced each chapter with a poem and attractive poster chart. During a chapter intermission, Mrs. Jack Cullison, who was also dressed in an 1800 costume, gave a telephone conversation skit of an early WMU convention report which was both informative and entertaining.

A noon salad luncheon was served to approximately 45 ladies. Following lunch, Mrs. Claude Turner taught the remaining chapters of mission study. The afternoon session was in form of a convention with the "delegates" wearing their circle badges and seated in groups.

Put Easter Egg Money Into Pretty Ensemble This Spring

NEW YORK (NEA) — Many a woman will put her Easter egg money into an ensemble this spring knowing that it will serve her long and well when the big day is over. In 1961 terminology, an ensemble is nearly anything a woman wants it to be. And therefore is found in nearly any department of a large store with possible exception of the toy department.

An ensemble can be a really snappy suit or it can nip over into the coat department, to borrow a coat there and add a dress really just meant for it alone. There are many costumes of both descriptions around this spring. It has reached a point where a girl can't be sure just what she's buying or wearing.

If it's a print dress worn with wool coat lined with matching print, then she has an ensemble and a mighty handy thing to have in spring. It can march proudly in the Easter parade intact. Then later, both dress and coat can go places on their own.

The ensemble that falls in to the suite costume is usually a three-piece range. That is, jacket and skirt with color-coordinated blouse. The blouse may be print or solid color. Either way, it qualifies.

Because it is so variable and versatile, the Iris contributes greatly to the effectiveness of every kind of garden, regardless of its size. Through careful selection of types, you can have Iris in bloom from April until October.

When planning your garden, whether copying a picture or using your own imagination in the layout, you can find an Iris to suit most any location or setting. The exquisite tall Japanese Iris can be planted where you will have an extra supply of moisture or you will find many species to plant where you only water occasionally.

Some Iris are even adept to drought. So there is no reason why everyone cannot find a spot in their garden for Iris. Iris, as well as people, have their aristocrats, some species for one reason or another that stands out from the general crowd. The Roof Iris is one in this special group. In its native Japan, the people grow it in the thatched roofs of their cottages by the thousands, hence its intriguing name. It grows only one foot high.

The Vesper Iris would also fall into this class. It is another Oriental Iris. The Japanese Iris are outstanding in many ways. Some of them open nearly one foot wide. Some bloom three feet from the ground; yet others are dwarf. Their growing habits are different. They come from "crowns" instead of "rhizomes." They have unusually long roots for obtaining a good supply of moisture and they do not multiply fast.

Planting and caring for Iris is relatively easy. Most authorities recommend they be planted on a 1/2 inch deep. Others say very shallow with part of the rhizome exposed, especially in heavy soil. Do not plant very close together as they multiply fast. The best time for planting, recommended by most authorities, is from August through October, but because of their hardiness they can be planted almost any time during the spring, summer or fall. They should be divided every two or three years. This should be done after the flower has faded. Cut the leaves to one-third their length and replant. Early and during flowering they require a little more water. In the fall be careful not to over water them as they are dormant and need to rest. A good rule to follow is to water them about as often as you water the grass.

Iris may be enjoyed in many beautiful arrangements inside the home as well as in the garden. So when your Iris bloom this spring enjoy them.

Hoe Down

by Mrs. V. K. Osborn Top o' Texas Garden Club

Very soon now gardens all over Pampa will come alive with some beautiful blooms. First will come the crocus, which are already beginning to blossom; then the tulips, daffodils and other bulbs; then the Iris. The Iris is a very interesting flower to me. Some of them are as delicate as an orchid, while others have a rough texture.

The Iris has more than 100 distinct species with probably thousands of hybrids and variations. These can be divided into four groups. In a gardener's language, these are the bulbous, the crested, the beardless and bearded.

The BULBOUS (with a basal bulb) include the Spanish, Dutch, and English irises; the CRESTED (with rhizomes or fleshy root stocks) includes cristata, gracilipes, tectorum and japonica with its relatives and hybrids; the BEARDLESS (fibrous root system with a fondness for water) has the largest number of species. All American wild irises are beardless. Among the beardless irises are the Louisiana, Siberian and Japanese irises; the bearded irises are the most popular for gardeners. They have rhizomes and prefer dry feet. The modern hybrid races are divided into dwarf, intermediate and tall varieties.

We grow species originally coming from Central and Southern Europe, North Africa, Northern India and China. Still others come from Japan and Siberia. The United States is not lacking, we have our sections of wild Iris also. The mountains to the northwest are rich in color from the many kinds of Dwarf Irises. The Louisiana Iris is in the experimental stage of adapting it to more northern growing conditions. The lower half of the Mississippi River country has the unique Copper Iris.

Iris have influenced human events for at least 14 hundred years. Ancient tales have it that as early as the 6th Century King Clovis, ruler of the Franks, was pinned down in battle on the banks of the Rhine. Having somewhat of a naturalist's eye, he saw yellow clumps of swamp Iris blooming. Concluding that the water was shallow enough for human wading, he and his followers splashed their way across and lived to fight another day. Tale or truth, it is a fact that King Clovis chose the Iris as his personal emblem, an honor that the royal family maintained for many years.

Because it is so variable and versatile, the Iris contributes greatly to the effectiveness of every kind of garden, regardless of its size. Through careful selection of types, you can have Iris in bloom from April until October. If you choose only one color of flower to grow it would be no excuse not to grow an Iris, for practically every known color is available. Blues, pinks, whites, coppers, purples, golds, burnt oranges and rich browns, not to mention the many color combinations. They grow from 4 inches to 4 feet tall and have blooms from very small to extremely large. As a rule all varieties are very hardy. But occasionally they meet their match in insects and disease.

When planning your garden, whether copying a picture or using your own imagination in the layout, you can find an Iris to suit most any location or setting. The exquisite tall Japanese Iris can be planted where you will have an extra supply of moisture or you will find many species to plant where you only water occasionally. Normal Pattern Due In Texas' Weather Picture

By United Press International

Calm returned to the Texas weather scene today in the wake of dust, wind, hail and thunderstorms which struck scattered sections of the state over the week end.

The cool front which triggered Sunday's violent weather was expected to race on out of the state during the day and its effect on the unseasonably high temperatures was due to be limited to only minor cooling and less humidity.

The five-day extended forecasts called for normal to above-normal temperatures for all sections.

Skies were partly cloudy today following Sunday's high dust clouds. Yesterday's high was in the upper 60s and this morning's low was 30 degrees. A high around 55 is predicted for Pampa tomorrow with tonight's low in the mid-30s.

cause "it is prohibited by the Constitution and the Supreme Court has made that very clear."

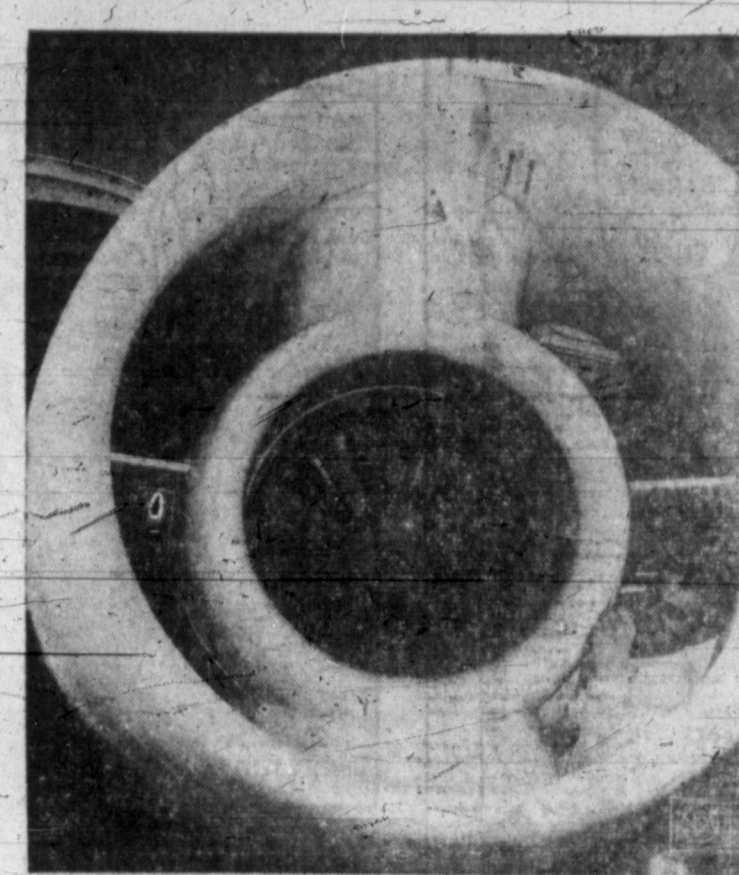

But McCormack said there was no constitutional bar to the federal government "making long-term loans at reasonable rates of interest for the construction or the renovation or the repair of private schools."

"I would clearly and definitely say that the provision of that kind is justified and I would support it," McCormack said in a 15-minute TV interview with Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, (R-N.Y.).

Overnight minimum temperatures ranged from a crisp 23 degrees at Dalhart to 70 at Houston, Corpus Christi and Brownsville. Other low readings included 30 at Amarillo, 35 at Lubbock, 38 at Wichita Falls, 39 at Alpine, 40 at Midland and 41 at El Paso.

NEW FAN JET—This new type jet engine develops about 40 per cent more power than a conventional type but consumes the same amount of fuel. The GE engine, shown being serviced in San Diego, Calif., has compressor blades in the inner circle which pull a torrent of air (56 tons a minute) into the combustion chamber. The outer circle channels the air to a large fan at the rear. Combined effect of fan and engine produces the radical power increase.

Joint Property Cases Raise Many Questions

AUSTIN (UPI)—Recent State Supreme Court decisions in joint property cases raise questions about almost every marital bank and savings account in Texas, a business law assistant professor said Saturday.

Jack Ledbetter, attorney who teaches business law at the University of Texas, said "as a result of two recent decisions by the Supreme Court of Texas it appears today that the survivorship feature of a joint bank and savings account and joint stock certificates as we generally see them are invalid where the account of certificate is owned by a husband and wife and purchased with community funds."

The cases were Hilley versus Hilley and Stefan versus Pollard. In the Hilley case, the court said that when W. E. Hilley died, his wife should share with his son by a previous marriage ownership of stocks brought in the husband's and wife's joint names. The court said the laws of descent of community property hold sway over laws of survivorship. Ledbetter said there are two ways to avoid legal tangles in such cases.

"The first is by preparation of a proper and carefully worded last will and testament giving the property in question to one's spouse," he said. "The second is by 'partition' of the asset and re-combination as a joint tenancy of separate property. Both of these actions have unique legal requirements and possible pitfalls, and neither should be attempted except with the advice and consultation of a competent attorney."

Spirit Of Altruism

Let us talk about foreign aid within the context of national altruism. In the previous editorial we have pointed out that the act of spoliation of Americans for the alleged benefit of "under" developed countries and their populations cannot be classed as altruism since it rests upon the concept of plunder.

But our political leaders tell us that these actions wherein Americans and their earnings are put upon the block of expedience by their government are "necessary" to halt the spread of communism. We would differ.

A program of forced sharing cannot halt the spread of communism, if IS communism.

Communism can be detected not by national origin but by economic law. When many persons are looted so that persons in other nations can be rewarded for the fact of their non-production, the very core of Marxian share-the-wealth is being extolled and made legally virtuous.

When our official representatives, be they in the White House, the halls of congress or elsewhere, advocate this practice they are deluding the public when they insist that the program is altruistic, necessary or anti-communistic.

Indeed, were we even part-way informed of the true nature of communism and Marxism we would withdraw promptly from this annual share-the-wealth program with alien peoples.

And such a withdrawal would be the greatest kindness and the greatest altruism we could display toward these other peoples, we are presently supporting in whole or in part.

Why? Because our withdrawal would signal our recognition of the fact that these other people were potentially as self-reliant and masterful as we are. This would put all peoples on a footing of equality. Instead, we are creating a kind of world in which there are two classes of people: the productive who are the targets for legalized looting; the non-productive who are inferiors and must be supported by the forced largesse from their superiors.

Is this altruism? Hardly. We might seek to emphasize the point that the greatest evil in this practice does not descend upon us, the looted, but upon those others, the rewarded.

Altruism, to be practiced successfully, must actually aid the recipient of kindness. Those who become second-class citizens as a result of repeated acts of violence will always be those who are made to suffer worst. This is human exploitation at its most venal.

The end result of this process is to make people who might otherwise be fine, upright and self-sustaining citizens, mealy-mouthed mendicants at the trough of the prosperity of others. They will never become prosperous by this process.

At best, they can only become willful and demanding. At worst, they are nurtured by the slow fires of hatred. For the entire affair is demeaning, patronizing, destructive of human dignity.

A person may, when he is in dire straits, receive help from someone who is privately concerned, and in the process retain his dignity and go forward to self-reliance and success.

A person who receives stolen goods becomes at once a party to the crime.

But there is something even more important that should be reckoned with at this juncture. For economic principles apply not only between nations but between persons within a given nation. If it is wrong for us to sustain others overseas; it is equally wrong for us to sustain some within our borders who may not produce with the vigor others have shown.

The admission of an ocean or two to the argument does not alter a principle; it is no more altruistic to rob the people of the United States that Laotians may have their daily bread than it is to rob the people of Texas so that those in Alabama may be sustained.

Following thru on this line of reasoning it is quickly apparent that the idea of taking from the productive to give to the non-productive is inherently evil, even when the victim of the plundering lives in the same city with the target of politicized charity.

Altruism is not the final human good. Self-reliance and productivity are far above it in nobility and worth.

In the end it must be learned that the greatest charity of all is that charity which permits a man NOT to interfere in the lives of others even for the supposed "good" of the others.

True charity is found in the honest belief that others CAN and WILL manage their own affairs if we do not patronize, do not exploit, and do not reward simply on the basis of equalizing production.

Many people dread being alone and hence place undue emphasis upon popularity and the company of others. If they but knew it, the greatest loneliness exists in crowds. The way to banish loneliness lies thru a doorway which is inside each human heart and mind.

By now, after several decades of unremitting effort, it would appear that a great many of the American people have finally become alarmed over the situation we face as a nation and as an economy.

The good people who, at an early date, discovered that there was evidence of subversion in our midst, that the policies which had apparently guided the nation with safety for close to a hundred and forty years were no longer being followed, have succeeded in awakening many millions of people to the fact of danger.

Indeed, since the Russian spunk was fired; since Khrushchev announced that he would "bury us"; since the income tax is taking more and more of our earnings; and since there is someone in power intent upon dividing our wealth, it is quite clear that the area of alarm has spread.

We have had occasion to talk to many people from various walks of life and in a number of different places in the country. Virtual without exception, there appears to be a rather universal belief that "something" has gone wrong.

We could state categorically that the average "man on the street" is now rather thoroughly convinced that the nation is moving thru some "trying times," that conditions are "difficult and dangerous," that "something" has gone wrong and that "something" else

LAID TO INDIA

Indian Libertarian, Bombay, Ind. The United States Government has announced two $25 million (Rs. 11.9 crores) loans to the Government of India — one for the importation of capital equipment and the other for financing the importation of steel and steel products needed by private and public enterprises.

Repayable in rupees, these two loans have been approved by the U.S. Development Loan Fund and will provide immediate help to ward India's foreign exchange requirements during the closing months of the Second Five Year Plan.

The capital equipment loan is the first non-project-type loan by the DLF and will be used for procuring equipment to increase the productive capacity of small enterprises in the fields of metallurgy, electrical installations, machine tools, earthmoving equipment and chemicals.

The steel loan is the third in a series and steel sheets are expected to account for more than half of the procurement under this loan. The remainder will be used for tinplate, strips, tool and alloy steel billets, wire and rods.

Just Like On TV—

Allen - Scott Reports: McNamara Sounding Out Explosive Idea—Merging Missile-Space Activities Under AF

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary McNamara either is a man of exceptional audacity or he just doesn't care how long he holds his lofty cabinet job — in charge of spending more than half the stupendous $80 billion-plus federal budget.

For the second time in the little more than a month the former Ford executive has been in office, he is literally rushing in "where angels fear to tread."

To the goggle-eyed amazement of Pentagon insiders, McNamara is taking soundings on a hyper-explosive idea of merging the missile and space activities of all the military services, totaling some $2 billion annually, under one authority—the Air Force.

That would mean giving the Air Force control of the Navy's proudly successful 900-mile solid-fuel Polaris, and the Army's still-developing Nike-Zeus anti-missile missile.

To the Army and Navy and their flabbergasted congressional champions, McNamara's ambitious proposal is like waving a red flag at an enraged bull.

Already one backstage investigation has been set in motion. Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), veteran chairman of the powerful House Armed Services Committee, is determined "to get at the bottom of this, and find out who and what's behind it."

The POLARIS program will never be put under the Air Force as long as I'm around," adds Vinson, long and justly renowned as the "father" of the modern Navy. A member of Congress since November 1914, he is outranked only by Speaker Sam Rayburn, Tex., who started in March 1913.

NOW HEAR THIS—Vinson and other congressional leaders got wind of McNamara's "revolutionary" plan informally.

It was leaked to them. McNamara had sent copies of it to the Joint Chiefs of Staff for their comments. Not long thereafter, other copies found their way to Capitol Hill where they had "bombshell" effect on Army and Navy partisans.

When Vinson learned of the matter, he immediately phoned McNamara for an explanation.

The Defense Secretary gave emphatic assurances nothing would be done without first consulting Vinson and his key committee. Said McNamara, "I wouldn't think of doing otherwise."

"I'm glad to hear you say that," replied Vinson drily, "because it would be most unwise not to do so."

Significantly indicative of the Army's attitude was the view expressed by Lieutenant General Arthur Trudeau, chief of its Research and Development. Questioned by congressional leaders about merging all space exploration under one service, he replied:

"Space is so vast that there is room for all the services to explore the innumerable problems confronting us."

McNamara's first explosive episode occurred two weeks after he took office.

A so-called background briefing for a small group of hand-picked newsmen resulted in widely-published stories that refuted Democratic campaign charges of a dangerous missile gap. Both the President and McNamara had to issue statements to "clarify" this blunder.

Apparently in an effort to avoid such gaffs, McNamara is reviving the "truth squad" of his predecessor.

As instituted by former Defense Secretary Thomas Gates, this "squad" consisted of two officers each from the Army and Air Force, and one from the Navy and Marines. It was headed by retired Marine Brigadier General Donald Hittle.

Purpose of the group was to advise the Defense Secretary on how to avert public controversies, and to provide answers for "critical" letters and statements.

Gates credited the "truth squad" with enabling him to keep from making a "single major mistake. My relations with Congress and the press improved 100 per cent after this group was established. It was one of the best things I did."

The "squad" was disbanded after the November election. In restoring it, McNamara named Lieutenant Colonel Charles Le Clair as the new chairman.

Pegler Says:

Beck Tough Opponent, But He Never Whines

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

SEATTLE — Charles O. Carroll, the Republican prosecuting attorney of King County (Seattle), Washington, concedes this much about Dave Beck: He is a tough man in a fight or misfortune who has never whined in his great adversity nor squealed on any one.

Jimmy Hoffa, his protege and friend, dumped him out of the presidency of the Teamsters Union. But the worst Beck has said of Hoffa is that he talks too much.

Mr. Carroll had to prosecute Beck and his son, Dave, Jr., on grand larceny charges so petty that it seems weird now that Seattle juries convicted them. Dave was a big man and Seattle has a low sense of civic honor after decades of unionism.

For all their publicity, the Kennedys, Jack and Bobby, came up with only three cheap jobs in which Beck and Dave, Jr., held back money from the sale of old, beat-up cars belonging to the Teamsters. The amount was less than $2,000 each time. And these fellows were handling millions without supervision. Beck himself told me he could walk away with a million of his own today after costs of liquidation.

There were many other offenses, but these larcenies were discovered by the income tax people of the treasury and handed over to the Kennedys, who then took credit for discovery. Their newspaper clique whooped and bucked for Pulitzer awards. The income tax statute does not run against income tax fraud, but the irregularities by which the income was taken had been outlawed by State of Washington laws long ago.

So Mr. Carroll had to content himself with paltry stuff from the Kennedys. And his budget was so skimpy that he had to scrounge on a newspaper which was spending some money on the McCellan hearings in Washington. That was his only means of getting the daily record of the senate committee's hearings.

Beck has been saying for years that the "labor movement is a business." Therefore, he feels not at all self-conscious because he got rich at it. Mr. Carroll replied that almost any fair hand at business could get rich with free access to the hundreds of millions of toilers' money. And there was — and there is to this day — the vast potential of shakedown money from business firms and small individual operators with a normal aversion to sabotage and broke legs.

"Labor has got only its labor to sell," Dave said during a long, reminiscent visit in my quarters in the Olympia Hotel. I said, "Dave, don't let's kid each other. You guys sell time, too, and your time isn't worth anything to employers unless those bums of yours are producing." Dave denied that his people ever practiced feather-bedding. I said, "Oh stop. How about those tramps in New York who got aboard the trucks in Jersey and drew a day's pay for riding under the river as helpers?"

This was the case in which Justice James Byrnes, later Truman's secretary of state, upheld a practice which a minority opinion correctly called highway robbery. Beck said that was only a local freak.

"Hoffa has great organizing ability," Dave said, "but he talks too much, but that Harold G. H. B. is there in St. Louis, he is a quiet

OUT OF UNIFORM
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI)—A youth who admitted stealing a police car might have gotten away with it if he hadn't forgotten the accessories.

A patrolman pulled up beside the stolen police cruiser Sunday to give his "fellow officer" a friendly warning that it was a violation of regulations to drive without a police cap. Sitting in the driver's seat was capless Grady Smith, 19, who confessed he stole the car after ditching another police cruiser earlier in the day.

FORESAKES THE STAGE
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, Ill., confided Sunday in the dulcet tones and flowery eloquence for which he is famed in the halls of Congress: that "I must confess a bid of wickedness, in a sense, that I always wanted to go on the stage." But he added sadly, "my saintly mother discouraged the idea and so, being a dutiful son, I did not."

ALL HAVE AMBITIONS
BISMARCK, N.D. (UPI) — In final moments of the North Dakota Legislature session Sunday night, Sen. Aloys Wartner Jr. asked all senators who planned to run for governor to declare themselves by standing up.

All 49 senators rose to their feet.

Senate Group Seeks Data On Price-Fixing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Estes Kefauver is seeking records of the grand jury proceedings in the electrical price-fixing cases preparatory to a far-reaching inquiry into the anatomy of the electrical industry, it was learned today.

The Tennessee Democrat disclosed his hope of obtaining the grand jury records as investigator for his Senate Anti-Trust and Monopoly subcommittee gathered evidence that identical bidding on electrical products purchased by government agencies is continuing.

In October, for example, five big companies submitted identical bids of $451,584 to the Tennessee Valley Authority for a 1,176,000 feet of conductor cable.

And on Nov. 21, four of the same five, Reynolds Metals, Rome Cable Division of Alcoa, the Southwire Co., and the Southern Electrical Co., a division of Olin - Mathieson Chemical Corp. turned in matching bids of a $18,486.65 for a smaller quantity of cable.

Three companies who pleaded guilty or no defense to indictments for alleged price-rigging on Dec. 1 were found to have submitted identical bids of $18,486.65 when TVA contracting officials opened offers to supply lightning arresters nine days later.

News Of Local Red Cross Activities

By LIBBY SHOTWELL
 Red Cross Executive Secretary

Pampa Chapter of the American Red Cross is celebrating Red Cross month with many varied activities. The Red Cross board will meet March 14 for regular meeting with V. E. Wafner, disaster chairman in charge of the program.

Since the goal was not reached in the United Fund campaign, Red Cross is asking people who support the organization to send their contributions to P.O. Box 1036, Pampa. If they were not contacted during the UF Drive. As usual letters will be mailed to persons who always contribute to the Red Cross but were not contacted during the United Fund Drive for their contribution. Our chapter chairman, A. J. Carubbi Jr., hopes in this way to cut down the deficit of Gray County's goal for local and national Red Cross.

The Gray Lady Corps will have a coffee in the City Club Room March 29 at 9:30 a.m. Ladies are asked to bring a good book to the coffee and these books will be given to local hospitals. Anyone in the community who has books they wish to donate, may bring them to the Red Cross office in the basement of City Hall. Jack Foster, Gray Lady chairman, is in charge of the program.

Pampa Chapter will also be host to the Re-Training Group at the Amarillo Air Force Base March 22. The Gray Ladies will be asked to bring cakes and an evening of games will be enjoyed by the servicemen.
