NEW YORK (AP) — One of the nation's largest banks lowered its prime lending rate a half-percentage point to 5.5 percent, bringing the widely watched rate to its lowest level in more than two decades.

Most analysts said they expected other major U.S. banks to follow the move Monday by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. Harris Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago, a medium-sized regional institution, and the Bank of Montreal's U.S. office followed Morgan's lead, but no other big banks took immediate action.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service agreed to a tax break for businesses, a move that could cost the government billions of dollars in revenue.

Monday's decision, likely to affect the smallest family farm and the largest corporation, reverses the IRS position on the tax treatment of hedges — transactions used by businesses to protect themselves from fluctuations in interest rates, foreign currencies and commodity prices.

HOUSTON (AP) — Members of Houston's business and political establishment have made congressional approval of NAFTA a top priority, but the city's voters don't share unanimous support for the pact, a poll shows.

Thirty-one percent of participants in a Houston Chronicle survey said they support the North American Free Trade Agreement, which would phase out most tariffs and other barriers to the free movement of goods, services and investment among the United States, Mexico and Canada. Another 24 percent said they oppose the agreement, 26 percent were unsure and 18 percent did not answer.

The Port of Houston already handles more U.S.-Mexico commerce than any other port in either country.

DALLAS (AP) — The family of a 7-year-old killed while darting into traffic to reach an ice cream truck has asked a city commission to change rules governing the vehicles.

Five children have lost their lives in the last three years when they ran into streets at the sound of the familiar ice cream truck jingle. The latest was Victor Alfonso Garcia, who was killed in his eagerness to get to the ice cream truck. Officials said no charges are expected against the driver of the truck that hit the boy.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A transit tax to pay for the Alamodome is generating millions of dollars more than projected, and now the city and VIA Metropolitan Transit are at odds over who will control the money.

Transit officials said Monday's San Antonio Express-News the city has been collecting the tax money while ignoring VIA's request for accountability the past three years.

The transit board also has given the cold shoulder to the city's proposed 9-to-1 split of the unanticipated tax funds, claiming it is weighted too heavily in the city's favor.

Voters approved a 1/2-cent transit sales tax in 1989 to finance the domed stadium. The tax expires next April. The dome, which is owned by VIA, has been built and operated by the city, with the adjacent transit station built and run by VIA.

The original 1988 dome budget was based on estimated receipts of $160 million from the tax. Since then, the revenue projections have been revised five times, increasing by $22 million.

United Way hustles to reach goal

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

With nine days before the last progress report and party in this year's fund-raising drive, Pampa United Way has yet to reach the half-way mark toward its $335,000 goal for this year's campaign.

This morning, Pampa United Way had achieved 42.7 percent of its goal, said Katrina Bigham, executive administrator of Pampa United Way Inc. Pampa United Way has raised a total of $143,127 from pledges and contributions, with $191,913 still needed, she said.

"We're ahead of last year's pace, and I'm sure we're going to go over the top because the Pampa community always comes through with a real good flurry at the end," Dan McGrath, United Way fund-raising chairman, said today.

The final progress report and party sponsored by Pampa United Way will be Thursday, Oct. 28.

The $143,127 total as of this morning compares with $141,428.80 raised as of Thursday evening, Bigham said.

"The money's out there," Bigham said. "Meeting the goal by Oct. 28 is still possible if everybody will get out and get busy and work their (pledge) cards and get them turned in."

Bigham estimated that there are 200 volunteers working for the campaign this fall.

The amounts raised by Pampa United Way as of this morning, as well as the amount of money still needed for each, are: commercial division, $9,180 raised, with $7,820 still needed; major firms, $74,994, with $146,046 still needed; professional division, $12,920, with $17,080 not yet raised; public division, $11,293 raised, with $11,707 still needed; special gifts, $18,885, with $8,115 not yet raised; and individuals, $15,855 raised, with $1,145 still needed.

"It's time to roll up their sleeves and get busy," Bigham said. "They've kind of let it slide, with everything (else) going on."

Bigham said the Pampa United Way can extend its fund-raising campaign beyond Oct. 28, if necessary.

"We were hoping that we could get it cleaned up and finished by the 28th," she said.

The next United Way progress report meeting will be held during a breakfast session that begins at 7 a.m. Thursday in the M.K. Brown Meeting Room of the Community Building, 200 N. Ballard. No additional reservations for the event will be taken, as reservations for it have already been filled, Bigham said.

For the second day in a row, cool wet weather greeted residents of Pampa as they arose this morning. With a heavy mist and light showers, temperatures were expected to reach only into the fifty degree range today. (Pampa News photo)

Storms across Texas leave dead in wake

By The Associated Press

Severe storms that roared across the state for a second straight night have left two people dead and a trail of destruction.

Blue skies were obscured in the Texas Panhandle by heavy cloud cover this morning, mist, and light rain as heavy storms raged east and south.

Near Dallas, Rains County officials said that a man was killed Monday night in Emory, when a tornado blasted apart his trailer home. Officials were still trying to identify the man.

Fire department officials also reported a barn destroyed, and roofs ripped off several residences and businesses.

A student from South Houston High School drowned while on a school field trip to Galveston Island. Other students said he was caught in a strong undertow that apparently was caused by strong winds.

Luis E. Ayala, 16, could not swim and was probably standing on a sand bar when he was caught by the current, officials said.

"With the lateral currents and the troughs and the undertow, it makes for difficult conditions," said Sgt. Chuck Walsh, assistant director of the beach patrol division of the Galveston County Sheriff's Department.

Television station KETK in Jacksonville said the Rains County sheriff's department reported scattered damage about 10 miles northeast of Alba.

Some of the damage included a boat dealership on Lake Fork, two mobile homes, an outbuilding and the historic Caney Creek Schoolhouse, the station said.

A tornado was reported near Quitman, on the east side of Lake Fork. No injuries were reported.

Officials in Dallas and Tarrant counties reported heavy flooding; some motorists abandoned their cars to seek refuge from the rising waters.

Police in Arlington rescued an elderly couple when floodwaters forced them from their home.

Heavy storms in Mesquite caused damage at Hudson Airport, where winds ripped off hangar doors and loosed chains that had secured a single-engine plane. Some damage was reported to the plane's wings.

Hudson Airport manager Harry Silbey said he believed a small tornado may have caused the damage at the airport.

"The wind was at least 80 mph, and there was a narrow path of damaged trees in some nearby woods," he said.

It was the second night of storm damage in Texas.

Monday, San Angelo Lakeview High School principal Jim Hundley found his campus in disarray, ripped up by a tornado spawned by overnight storms.

Blown out windows, toppled power lines, broken roofs occurred Sunday night and early Monday at various places across Texas. However, no injuries were reported during the storms.

At Brownwood, the arms at a railroad crossing were ripped loose, a fence at Howard Payne University's baseball field was destroyed and a hotel lost part of its roof.

Another storm hit near Lampasas County on Monday. Deb Harris, a sheriff's department dispatcher, said there were no damage or injury reports.

City Commission to discuss hiring new city manager

The Pampa City Commission will hold a special meeting at 6 p.m. today in the City Commission chambers to discuss hiring a new city manager.

The mayor and commission will meet in regular session and then go immediately into special session to review a list of candidates for the city manager job.

The position became available when Pampa's former city manager, Glen Hackler, accepted the position of assistant city manager of Midland in July.

A list of candidates was given to the commission last Friday during another special executive session to discuss the matter. During that meeting, David W. Eisenlohr from the Dallas-based search firm of Ralph Andersen and Associates addressed the commission.

The date by which a new city manager will be hired has not been established, according to Mayor Richard Peet.

More than 50 people applied for the position, according to the Peet. During its search, the search firm advertised in state and national publications catering to municipal governments.

UN deadline passes: Haiti oil embargo in effect

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — A potentially devastating oil embargo was reimposed on Haiti today as its army commander ignored demands that he respect a plan for the return from exile of the country's elected president.

Six U.S. and three Canadian warships were offshore to enforce the embargo, and a French frigate was on the way to join them. But if Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras was worried, it did not show.

As the midnight deadline for signaling his acceptance of the peace plan approached Monday, Cedras relaxed with aides at army headquarters. News photographers snapped shots of him smoking a cigarette and joking.

Asked what the army would do if U.S. troops came ashore to rescue Americans, Cedras said: "I'm certain it will not reach such a point."

About 9,000 U.S. citizens live in Haiti, 8,000 of them Haitian-Americans. Belgium and Canada urged their citizens to leave Haiti over the weekend, and many did.

In the event an evacuation of American citizens was ordered, helicopters and hundreds of U.S. Marines were moved over the weekend to the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, 90 miles northwest of Haiti.

The goal of the embargo is to compel Cedras to live up to terms of the accord he signed to allow President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to return to office Oct. 30.

This capital of 1 million people came to life slowly on the first day of the embargo, which is sure to further burden an economy that is already the poorest in the Americas. "Gas supplies are normal. There's no rationing, yet," said a service station attendant, whose request to remain anonymous reflected widespread nervousness about the potential for violence. Prices remained stable at about $1.50 a gallon. There was no line.

Schools and government offices stayed closed a second day on Aristide's orders to mourn the assassination last week of his justice minister, Guy Malary, who was part of the transition Cabinet preparing for his return. Aristide's premier, Robert Malval, blamed military authorities for the murder.

Many stores also did not open — some out of respect for Aristide, others to assess the political situation, others because owners or employees left the capital over the weekend in fear of more army repression or a foreign invasion.

"I came because I need the money, but there's no business," said a jeweler's apprentice, who also asked not to be quoted by name.

The oil embargo, as well as other sanctions imposed after the 1991 coup ousting Aristide, had been suspended when Cedras signed the agreement in July. The sanctions devastated Haiti's economy, and life is expected to get more miserable now that the embargo has been reimposed.

While the naval blockade could ensure no tankers get through, the United Nations has taken no measures to prevent gasoline shipments from the Dominican Republic, which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti. The Dominican government is close to Haiti's army, and embargo violations across the border were reported before the earlier sanctions were lifted.

Former President can't scoot boot

HOUSTON (AP) — Not only does former President George Bush have a new residence in Houston, Texas' largest ballroom now bears his name.

The city of Houston on Monday officially named the 31,500 square foot ballroom of the George R. Brown Convention Center the George Bush Grand Ballroom.

Officials estimated about 1,500 invited guests turned out for the dedication ceremony, during which George and Barbara Bush were honored with speeches and a concert band.

The former president thanked city officials for the gesture and joked that some family members had trouble adjusting to the idea of a ballroom in his name.

"I mentioned this to my daughter and she said, 'Ballroom? You? You can't dance,'" Bush said.

Specialists discuss policies with juvenile probation board

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

The Gray County Juvenile Probation Board is to continue at 2 p.m. today a meeting begun Monday in the Gray County Courthouse.

The judges which comprise the board, District Judges Kent Sims and Lee Waters and County Judge Carl Kennedy, heard from three representatives of the Juvenile Probation Commission regarding the local juvenile probation office. The local office is headed by Ed Barker, who is scheduled to retire in 1994.

Harold Scoggin, program specialist with JPC, said the three had been invited to look at operating procedures, policies and files of the office and meet with local law enforcement personnel about the role of juvenile probation in the community. Since the district judges were new, he said, they wanted to affirm the role of the juvenile probation board in Gray County.

Others speaking to commissioners were Luis Guerrero, program specialist, and Scott Friedman, resource specialist.

Judges and representatives spent much of Monday's meeting reviewing funding, staffing and the board's role in juvenile probation.

Scoggin said the role of juvenile boards is changing.

He said that in the last year or so he had noticed a conflict between the local office and local law enforcement agencies. He said he is not sure that law enforcement knows what juvenile probation is supposed to do and probably some education of local officials about the role of juvenile probation would help.

The chief juvenile probation officer, he said, represents the board but the board is liable for the actions of the department.

Usually, Scoggin said, the chief writes a manual that is reviewed and approved by the board. The chief cannot go beyond the scope of the manual's authority.

The latest manual was reviewed and adopted in June 1991, said Waters. Guerrero said the manual needs review and modification including job descriptions and provisions for employee review.

Scoggin told the board about three areas of prevention: primary - keeping youths out of the system; secondary - preventing early offenders from going further into the system; and tertiary - pooling a coalition of resources aimed at aiding the hard core offender and his or her family.

Education programs aimed at the non-offender may be organized and staffed by a juvenile probation office. Most new state funding for juvenile probation offices is going to be in the area of prevention, Scoggin said.

When selecting a new chief probation officer, Scoggin said, the board needs to consider hiring someone with strong administrative skills. The chief needs to know how to write grant requests, hire people with strengths to complement his weaknesses and engage in public relations to get other agencies, both public and private, on board with juvenile probation. The three suggested active recruitment for a chief officer.

"Our concern is ... if you really want to work with kids in your community, we will provide you with the help," Scoggin said.

In today's meeting, the commission expects to visit with representatives of the Pampa Police Department and Sheriff's Office concerning juveniles.

Officials estimated that a list of concerns about the local office will be ready today after meeting staff members and reviewing office systems.

Panhandle cities to launch new recycling program

The City of Panhandle will join other communities in the Texas Panhandle to help reduce solid waste and protect the environment Saturday as they kick off the operation of a new recycling program.

Beginning at 11 a.m., the recycling center unveiling will be held at its headquarters located at 107 Euclid in Panhandle.

As officials from Panhandle and other area cities gather for the ceremony, Peggy Garner, commissioner of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, will give the keynote remarks.

The commission provided the funding necessary for the recycling center.

Panhandle's recycling program is designed to help the Texas Panhandle area, according to the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

As part of that commitment, over the last nine months, the cities of Borger, Fritch, Pampa, Panhandle and Stinnett have formed the Panhandle Environmental Partnership.

A plan devised by the five-city organization calls for each community to reduce the amount of solid waste being disposed of in city landfills by 17 percent during the next 12 months and a 50 percent reduction by the year 2000.

Immediately following the ribbon-cutting ceremony, a reception will be held at the Square House Museum in Panhandle.

To promote the recycling program, Peppy the Prairie Dog will be introduced to the public at the ceremony.

The mascot will help promote recycling and is designed to take the environmental protection message to school-aged children throughout the Panhandle.

Meeting scheduled to discuss digging damage to pipelines

Companies involved in the oil, natural gas and pipeline businesses will host an informal meeting Thursday evening to discuss a problem they all have and which is potentially very dangerous — people digging and unexpectedly striking a pipeline.

The meeting is scheduled to begin shortly after 7-p.m. and will be held in the Heritage Room of the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center.

Each year injuries are incurred, lives are lost and millions of dollars in damage and repairs are done because of "third parties" digging into a pipeline, according to a press release from The Pipeline Group, a Midland-based organization made up of companies which often use pipeline.

In addition to lives damages and lost, communications lines may be disrupted when expensive fiber-optics cables are damaged or severed, the press release said.

Some of the companies involved in the meeting include American Pipeline, Anadarko Petroleum Corp., Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America, Northern Natural Gas, Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line, Phillips Pipe Line, Texaco Pipeline, Texas Excavation Safety System, Transok Inc. and Williams Natural Gas.

Well water site closed for repairs

Residents of Pampa who have tried to pick up water from Pump Station #1 have found the spigot dry.

Plans to return the water pick-up location to its original site south of Hobart Street Park, next to the newly repainted water tank, have been delayed by a leak in the huge water storage unit, according to city officials.

As a result, people wanting to pick up their own water will have to continue to go to Pump Station #3 on South Barnes.

The South Barnes pump station has been the only pick-up location for water over the past few months due to the construction and renovation on Pump Station #1.

According to Nathan Hopson, Pampa's director of public works and interim city manager, work to repair the water tank and relocation of the water pick-up point should be completed in the next few weeks.

Judge questions school finance alternatives

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge has questioned what alternative school finance reform law might be developed if he throws out the current system requiring the richest school districts to share some local property tax wealth.

"If we can't do it this way, then I think we're in real trouble. I don't see any other way to do it," state District Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin said Monday during closing arguments in a trial on the law.

He suggested that a huge state tax increase or massive school consolidation might be the only other options. But McCown also cautioned observers not to assume he's going to uphold the law, which is meant to meet a 1989 Texas Supreme Court order to even out funding available to school districts of differing property wealth.

"These are complicated and difficult arguments, and whatever I do has to be something that can be written and justified," McCown said. "I often find that I am unable to write and justify what I want to do."

McCown said he would try to have a decision before the Christmas holidays on whether lawmakers must try again at reform. Any decision is expected to be appealed to the Supreme Court.

The new law gives the 98 school districts with more than $280,000 in property wealth per student several options for sharing. There are 1,048 school districts in the system, which is built on a combination of state aid and local property taxes.

Three previous school funding laws have been found unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court, a fact cited by McCown.

He said the Legislature and governor "are saying, 'Look, this is the best we can do,'" and noted that one expert said the law would give Texas among the nation's most equitable school finance systems.

"Is it appropriate for a court then to say that's unconstitutional, and you have to do something else?" McCown asked.

Lawyer Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, representing poor districts, said that's just what the judge should do.

"I think the state can do better," Kauffman said.

Property-poor school districts say the law would leave at least a $600 funding gap per student.

"Where's the point at which you're going to say this is as good as it needs to be?" McCown asked. Lawyer Rick Gray, representing poor school districts, suggested a gap of up to $200 per student could be acceptable.

Poor school districts also have complained that the law doesn't address school districts' cost of building classrooms. McCown indicated that could be handled separately.

Rich districts that oppose the way wealth-sharing is handled were treated none too gently by McCown.

"How do your clients suggest that equity be achieved?" the judge asked one lawyer for richer districts.

"Do they want ... legislative consolidation of districts? Or do they want a massive, billion-dollar-plus state income tax? Or the third alternative, are you saying that it just can't be done and the State of Texas has to live with the inequity?" McCown asked.

The lawyer, Steve Bickerstaff, said he would support an income tax "as long as we impose it on judges and lawyers."

The judge also wondered whether enough school districts are now in the same boat of wanting changes that they could successfully work through the Legislature.

"It looks to me like the boat's pretty full, and that the people in the boat are pretty angry," he said, as though thinking aloud. "Sail it over to the Legislature ... Come back (to court) in a few (legislative) sessions if you don't have any luck."

Southwestern Bell hopes for Caller ID settlement

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is hoping to negotiate the cost and other terms of its proposed caller identification service, avoiding a lengthy proceeding at the Public Utility Commission, a spokesman says.

A hearing is scheduled to begin Thursday at the PUC on the Caller ID proposal, which would allow customers to buy special units for their telephones that could give the number

Appraisal review board to hear valuation appeals

The Gray County Appraisal District review board on Wednesday is expected to hold a public hearing on appeals of tax valuations.

The Appraisal Review Board is also expected to approve changes to the appraisal tax roll for 1993 and previous years and hear a report from Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. Wednesday in the conference room of Gray County Appraisal District, 815 N. Sumner.

and name of the person whose phone was used to make the call.

"It is our desire to settle this case before the hearing," said Southwestern Bell spokesman Gary Volluz. He said that a final ruling otherwise would not be made until February, and Southwestern Bell wants to begin the service sooner.

The telephone company wants to offer Caller ID in the Austin area before the end of the year, he said. That would be followed by Houston and San Antonio beginning in 1994, and Dallas in 1995.

The attachment units would cost $50 to $150, according to Southwestern Bell.

The company has proposed charging $6.50 a month for telephone number displays on residential lines. If the customer wants the identity of the person or business whose phone was used to make the call, that would push the price to $8. Businesses would pay $8.50 and $12 for those services.

All callers could block their telephones from transmitting their number and name, without charge. Customers with Caller ID could pay $1 to block such anonymous calls.

PUC spokesman Guillermo Garcia said the commission staff is concerned because Southwestern Bell has said it would cost only "like 11 or 13 cents" to provide the service.

Volluz said that only included operating costs, not $62 million Southwestern Bell has spent to modify the telephone system to provide Caller ID.

Walter Washington of the Office of Public Utility Counsel, which represents residential and small business consumers, has recommended the charge not exceed $3 a month. Anonymous call rejection shouldn't be more than another 25 cents, he said.

Washington also said those who block their telephone numbers or names, then have a call rejected, should be allowed to use a special code to identify themselves so the call can be completed.

Southwestern Bell in June asked the PUC for permission to offer Caller ID after a law passed to keep the service from being restricted by state wiretapping laws.

Columbia astronauts launch into medical tests

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Columbia's astronauts today donated blood, saliva and urine samples as they began their first full day of medical experiments on the longest shuttle flight to date.

The seven-member crew, including a doctor, a biochemist and a veterinarian, are serving as both investigators and test subjects on the 14-day mission to study how the human body adjusts to freedom from gravity.

Shortly after being awakened by Mission Control today, astronauts M. Rhea Seddon, David Wolf, Shannon Lucid and Martin Fettman resumed a test of protein metabolism that will continue throughout their voyage.

By collecting the astronauts' body fluids, scientists will try to figure out why mammals tend to lose protein in weightlessness. That breakdown leads to shriveled muscles, an effect that would hinder the possibility of long space trips if not counterbalanced.

Crew members also kept close track of their body weight and everything they ate or drank to help researchers study changes in kidney functions and the flow of fluids within the body.

They began the tests just hours after Monday's belated launch. It took NASA three tries to launch Columbia; last week's attempts were ruined by equipment failures.

"As you can well imagine, there are seven very happy people up here," said shuttle commander John Blaha.

The mission is due to end Nov. 1 with a landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Fettman, America's first veterinarian in space, and Lucid, a biochemist, had catheters threading through their veins for liftoff to measure changes in the heart's structure and functions.

The flexible tubes were hooked to white backpacks with floating cables, giving the astronauts the look of insects. Lucid's catheter was removed Monday night and Fettman's was to be taken out today.

Fettman and Blaha also were wired up for an experiment simulating the sensation of falling. A skull-cap recorded head movements and leg electrodes measured muscle movement as they took turns dropping about a foot in a gizmo that pushes them downward in the weightless environment.

The rats are crucial to what lessons are learned during the flight. Five or six of them will be decapitated and dissected next week.

Half the rodents were slightly warmer than biologists wanted them to be because of an overheated cage. The crew turned off the thermostat Monday, and NASA said the cage had cooled to the proper temperature by morning.

Fettman also noticed overnight that one rat hid in a corner of his cage and wasn't drinking any water. Ground controllers kept an eye on the animal as astronauts slept and reported that it had perked up and become, as one said, "one thirsty rat."

Said NASA's Kari Fluegel: "We believe everything is fine with that particular rat."

Anti-smoking campaign gets close, personal

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A newspaper ad calls them drug pushers and puts their mug shots in a row like suspects in a police lineup.

Yet they promote a legal product used by millions.

It's the latest salvo in an anti-smoking campaign that seeks to embarrass individuals involved in tobacco sales.

But tobacco companies say the ad distorts the facts. And two newspapers, including The New York Times, refused to run it, raising questions about taste and fairness.

The ad by the Springfield-based Stop Teenage Addiction to Tobacco carries the headline "Meet Five of America's richest drug pushers."

Underneath are photographs of five top executives of companies that either sell tobacco products or accept advertising for them: publishers S.I. Newhouse and Rupert Murdoch, Laurence Tisch of Lorillard Tobacco, Henry Kravis of RJR Nabisco Holdings, and Michael Miles of Philip Morris Cos.

"This was very much a strategic decision to personalize this issue because we feel it's too easy to ignore a corporation's actions and just say, 'It's business as usual,'" the group's director, Jim Bergman, said Monday.

The anti-smoking group says tobacco companies sell cigarettes to young people by running ads that portray smoking as cool.

Other volleys in the campaign include a "Hall of Shame" in the group's newsletter, targeting individuals accused of encouraging young people to smoke; and flying an airplane trailing a banner reading "Larry Tisch Sells Cancer Sticks" over a New York City-area beach last summer.

The lineup ad ran in early October in The Washington Post; two Gannett newspapers in Westchester County, N.Y.; and the Patent Trader, a weekly in Cross River, N.Y. The group said it picked those papers because some of the executives in the ad live in Westchester County, just outside New York City.

A donor whom Bergman refused to name helped pay for the ad, which he said cost $9,000 in The Washington Post.

Spokesmen for the five executives named in the ad either said they had no comment or did not return phone calls.

But one tobacco company spokeswoman objected to the personalized attack.

"I'm not in a position to judge whether this was libelous or slanderous, but clearly the product line is legal," said Peggy Carter, a spokeswoman for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., a subsidiary of RJR Nabisco.

"I don't think anyone involved with the industry has any reason to be regarded as anything other than a business person."

Another tobacco spokesman denied that his company hawked cigarettes to under-age smokers.

The Tobacco Institute says 49 states bar tobacco sales to minors.

"We too agree that minors should not smoke and, therefore, we are very careful not to direct advertising to anyone but adult smokers," Philip Morris spokesman Barry Holt said.

One newspaper that rejected the ad, The New York Times, did so because "It crossed that line into questionable taste by targeting individual people," spokeswoman Nancy Nielsen said.

White separatist gets 18 months on weapons charge

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A white separatist was sentenced to 18 months in prison on a weapons charge that indirectly led to a shootout and siege that killed three people. His lawyer says he could be freed within months.

Randy Weaver even got a compliment from a federal judge at Monday's hearing.

Weaver's lawyer said he had been punished enough for his failure to appear at a trial on a federal weapons charge, especially since that missed court date led to the shootout and 11-day siege in which Weaver's wife, his son and a deputy U.S. marshal were killed.

"You've suffered probably far beyond what the court could do," U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge told Weaver. "I think you're a good person."

He fined Weaver $10,000 and said it was up to the federal Bureau of Prisons to decide what portion of the nearly 14 months Weaver has spent in jail will count as time served.

Defense lawyer Gerry Spence said Weaver could be free by the end of the year, and certainly no later than February.

"He'll be home by Christmas," predicted Weaver's brother-in-law, Keith Brown of Johnston, Iowa.

Weaver, 45, could have gotten up to 15 years in prison and $500,000 in fines for failing to appear at a 1991 trial on a charge of selling a sawed-off shotgun to a government informant, and for violating conditions for his release before that trial.

When he failed to appear in court, federal agents began trailing him. That led to the August 1992 shootout at Weaver's mountain compound about 40 miles south of the Canadian border.

The shootout started when Weaver, his son and family friend Kevin Harris encountered federal marshals near their cabin.

Weaver's 42-year-old wife, Vicki, his 14-year-old son, Samuel, and Deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan, 43, of Quincy, Mass., were killed in the subsequent firefight.

Serb leaders warned of air strikes if shelling continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is warning Serb leaders in unusually strong terms that they risk air strikes by NATO war planes if the shelling of Sarajevo persists.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher made the U.S. position clear in a note to Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic following the worst Serb shelling of Sarajevo in months.

"We've seen an escalation of violence within the last several days that is the source of very great concern to the United States," State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said shortly after Christopher's message was sent.

At least 10 people were killed and 57 wounded in Sarajevo over the weekend, most of them Saturday, officials said.

NATO warplanes, including two U.S. Air Force A-10 ground attack planes, roared low over a contested central Bosnian town on Monday, a day after fighters made a similar show of force over the hills ringing Sarajevo.

U.S. officials said Christopher's message reminded Milosevic that NATO resolutions calling for air strikes, if needed, to defend Sarajevo were still in effect.

But NATO has never made clear what provocations would prompt NATO military action. In addition, any such move would require the prior approval of U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and a meeting of NATO ambassadors.

Ban on pregnant cheerleaders criticized

AUSTIN (AP) — Four pregnant cheerleaders have a right to remain on their high school squad, a woman's rights group says.

School officials violated a federal anti-discrimination law by kicking four pregnant cheerleaders off the Hempstead High School squad, said Hannah Riddering, a spokeswoman for the National Organization for Women's state chapter.

The law says a school or institution that receives federal funds "shall not discriminate against or exclude any person on the basis of pregnancy," Riddering said. The district forced the girls off the squad in September after they said they were pregnant. One girl who had an abortion was allowed to return.

The school board has since voted to forbid pregnant students, or those who have children, from holding elective office on campus.

The cheerleaders' dismissal has created a furor in the town of about 3,500 people, 100 miles southeast of Austin. Some have accused the school district of discrimination because the fathers were not punished.

Salvation Army

A United Way Member Agency

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one in a series of profiles on the agencies and services funded by Pampa United Way assistance. The information is provided by the United Way from the 16 agencies receiving funding from the organization.

Deborah lives in Pampa. She has multiple sclerosis. Her gas was turned off in early spring when the weather was still cold because she had not been able to pay her bill. The Salvation Army with the help of other sources paid the bill to get her gas turned on. She was also in pain from having some teeth extracted. The Salvation Army had her prescriptions filled for pain and infection, and gave her enough gasoline to go to Amarillo to see her doctor. This month, because of high medical expenses, the Salvation Army paid her electric bill. This is just one example of what the Salvation Army does. Its motto is "Heart to God and Hand to Man." The United Way provides the largest source of the income for the Salvation Army to offer its services in the Pampa area.

Volunteers are currently out seeking contributions for the 1993 Pampa United Way fund-raising campaign. Those not being contacted may call the United Way office at 669-1001 for information on how to make contributions.

Principal soaks in tub of blue Jell-O to encourage students to read more INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — An elementary school principal made her students an offer they couldn't refuse: if they read a million pages, she'd spend a day in a tub of blue Jell-O.

After students reached the million-page mark last week, Patti Schumacher idled away a day in a tub topped off with 30 gallons of the turquoise stuff, all donated by students.

"The feet are the only part that's kind of cold, and they're not bad," said a wet suit-clad Schumacher.

The principal of William Southern Elementary School has made other such irresistible offers in the past, all to try to instill a love of reading in her students.

She spent a day on the school's roof and roller-skated around the parking lot in her nightgown.

Not wanting to lose the point in all that Jell-O, Schumacher spent last Friday reading books to the classes who took turns visiting her in the tub.

"It's been fun, and I enjoy it," she said. "Plus, research tells you that children who achieve high will be the best independent readers. It's worthwhile if you instill a love of reading."

The extra time on her hands gave her the chance to think about what she'd have to do when her students read their next million pages.

Maybe sit in a tub of peanut butter. Or anchovies, as one sixth grader suggested.

"That will strictly be up to the kids," she said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Open society key to nations' futures

Imagine that the president of the United States went on national television and made a speech both to his own countrymen and to Russians.

"Join with us," the president would intone, "as we demolish our own government controls, as we cut taxes, as we privatize health care and other socialized parts of our economy. We encourage you and all other peoples to join us in a race for freedom — a peaceful race to see which country can give its people the most liberty and the smallest government possible."

Such a speech would resonate not only across America and Russia, but across the world.

Whatever his failings, Ronald Reagan managed to project such a devotion to liberty, which helped embolden the peoples of Russia, Eastern Europe and Asia through the '80s to pursue democratic reforms and free economies.

The United States cannot, of course, simply rely on rhetoric. As long as Russia and other nations remain unstable, an adequate defense must be maintained. And though President Clinton is right to support Russian President Yeltsin, if Yeltsin is toppled the United States would have to work with his successor. But it is most unfortunate that the United States today seems to be sending a mixed message to the world at this critical juncture for Russia, marching backwards.

Even as he champions Yeltsin's reforms, Clinton has proposed for the United States a socialized medicine scheme resembling the one that sickened the ex-Soviet Union. And he's advancing a government-business "industrial policy" even as Russia struggles painfully to privatize inefficient, state-run industries. Other legislators continue to introduce bills to regulate and control aspects of American life: television violence, drug use, service of gays in the military, the arts, industry/labor relations, consensual sex, farm subsidies, grazing fees — well, the list could continue indefinitely, since nearly everyone, even those screaming the loudest for freedom, wants the government to interfere with something, it seems.

Today news spreads almost instantaneously around the globe. Americans watch, with hope, but also with lingering Cold War fears, as Russia's government and people grope toward a resolution of the post-communist crisis.

Sometimes more than does Clinton, it seems Yeltsin understands that an open society is the key both to his own future and to the advancement of Russia beyond its societal sclerosis.

But Yeltsin faces many people, including despairing peasants and workers, who now are looking back to the seemingly stable days of Brezhnevite communism. Hardline Communists — put down by Yeltsin just a couple of weeks ago — remain ready to exploit the dissatisfaction.

How best might the United States encourage the people of Russia not to despair?

One cannot help wondering how things might look to them were a different message heard when they turned, as they always do, to America.

Awakening to the dangers

Nearly 10 months after U.S. Marines waded ashore in Mogadishu, Congress abruptly noticed that our forces face dangers more serious than being blinded by television lights. This month, following the lead of the Senate, the House voted to demand that the president ask for congressional approval to keep American troops in Somalia beyond Nov. 15. Recently, lawmakers have been assailing the administration for staying in Somalia long after we should have left.

It's heartening to see the members stand up on their hind legs and protest a bad policy. It would have been not only heartening but useful if Congress had managed such a show before the Somalia deployment, when most lawmakers were eager to take a stand against mass starvation, ignoring the warnings that the United States would be sucked into a messy war it had no pressing reason to fight.

The Senate waited until Feb. 4, almost two months after the arrival of American forces, before speaking up, and then only to say "bravo." The House was tongue-tied until late May, when it finally got around to authorizing the original operation and then approved American peacekeeping in Somalia for up to a year.

Suddenly, though, breezy complacency is out of fashion on Capitol Hill. What has happened since last spring? The sort of development no congressman could reasonably be expected to foresee when endorsing military action in a war-ravaged nation — some of our soldiers got killed. When the bloodshed reached a new high earlier this month in a battle that produced at least 90 American casualties, including at least 12 dead, Congress turned from anxious to angry.

The reversal dramatized the congressional habit of falling in slavishly behind the president whenever he launches a military undertaking that enjoys general popular approval, only to affect indignation at his bungling when trouble arises. Congress likes to get a full share of the credit for a successful expedition and none of the blame for a failure.

Bill Clinton has indulged this preference by using the latest battle to justify sending more troops and equipment to Somalia. Mark Twain said that a cat which sat on a hot stove would never again sit on a hot stove, but that it would also never sit on a cold one. That puts felines one up on Clinton, who balks at jumping off a hot stove, lest anyone doubt his resolve.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher has hastened to deny that the latest bloodshed is cause for extricating ourselves from Somalia: "It's a time for Americans to be very steady in our purpose and not talk about getting out." This is like being steady in your purpose to march through a bog that turns out to contain quicksand. Sometimes, steadiness is stupidity.

Christopher thinks there will be ample time for departure once our mission is accomplished. "We came there to do a job — that is, to establish security," he said. "And I think until that job is done, we shouldn't get out."

No one, however, has the faintest idea when "security" will be established in a country that has been battered by internal conflict for 15 years. And the truth is, we didn't go into Somalia to "establish security" in any general sense. We went in to protect emergency food deliveries, which were being hijacked by local bandits.

The Bush administration, which sent in the Marines just six weeks short of leaving office, envisioned "an operation that will take two or three months." By March, the job of feeding Somalia was done. But the Clinton administration declined to withdraw entirely.

Why? Because of the fear that without a large U.S. presence in the United Nations peacekeeping force, the country would revert to anarchy. But we should have been fully aware of that risk all along. It was clear at the outset that confining the task to feeding the country would be devilishly hard, since only outside military force could prevent the revival of the conditions that produced the famine. Once you assume responsibility for Somalia's welfare, it's hard to escape.

The United Nations has never had any interest in helping the United States escape. It has always wanted to keep us there as long as possible to help with the job of "nation-building." The logic of our original participation made it hard to resist.

Lots of people who favored the intervention are waking up to the mistake we have made in getting into a war on the other side of the globe in which no important national interest is at stake. But the time to question dangerous and unnecessary military engagements is before they lead to disaster, when the questions can actually do some good.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 19, the 292nd day of 1993. There are 73 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 19, 1781, British troops under Lord Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown, Va., as the American Revolution neared its end.

On this date:

In 1765, the Stamp Act Congress, meeting in New York, drew up a declaration of rights and liberties.

In 1812, French forces under Napoleon Bonaparte began their retreat from Moscow.

In 1864, Confederate Gen. Jubal A. Early attacked Union forces at Cedar Creek, Va. The Union troops were able to rally under Gen. Phil Sheridan and defeat the Confederates.

In 1950, United Nations forces entered Pyongyang, the capital of North Korea.

In 1951, President Truman signed an act formally ending the state of war with Germany.

Abuse: The scars of violence

Editor's Note: Lewis Grizzard is off this week. Here is one of his best columns from the past.

Her letter said she had a message and she wanted me to print it.

She said that it was important. That subject was hitting a woman. I decided to give her this forum. What follows is her message:

"I believe there are many men out there who have either hit a woman, have thought about it, or are capable of doing so.

"I want you to print this for a purpose — to prevent those men who are capable of hitting a woman from doing so, to commend those who have thought about it and have then abstained, and to expand the minds of those who have struck out and may do so again.

"I'm not a battered wife, nor do I see my husband as a wife-beater. I am simply married to a man who has hit me several times in furious moments.

"To him, it was a bad experience. To me, it was a loss of self. He regrets, then forgets. I will never forget.

"I suppose men find it easy to be aggressive at times. They lose control and express their aggression in a violent manner. Women wear the scars of that violence forever.

"Last night my husband hit me again. I have nothing physical to show for it. I don't have a single bruise nor a broken bone. The only remains of the experience are those which none can see, scars which affect me in a way in which I feel more alone than ever.

"It hurts to be hit. It hurts to have someone look at you with eyes that see little and with hands that exercise no restraint.

"Long after the action, when those eyes are no longer looking at you, there still remains an imprint deep in your soul as you begin to look at yourself as those eyes did.

"All of a sudden, no matter where you stood before, you become as small as the eyes which saw you in the heat of anger.

"The loss of self-respect is immense.

"Nobody should be hit. Not an animal, not a man, not a woman or child. Nothing beautiful should be made to feel less than something that deserves some degree of respect.

"Last night my husband hit me again. I feel like I have been robbed of the beauty I saw in myself.

"Perhaps I will get the feeling back that there is something beautiful about me, but why do I have to go through this? Wouldn't it have just been so simple for my husband to have used a little self-restraint?

"I truly believe there are many men out there who can learn from what I have had to say, and I know there are women out there who can relate to my experience.

"Last night my husband hit me again. The positive side of this — and, believe it or not, there is one — is that I want to share what I feel. If one husband reads this and never strikes his wife again, then my suffering will have been worth it."

The damdest thing about my job is what people write me. They spill out their guts. They plead for help. Too often, there is absolutely nothing I can do to help them.

I didn't take this job, I remind myself, to try to save the world. But then you get something that really touches you, as this woman's message.

Her husband hits her. It makes her feel ugly. It makes her feel betrayed. She is begging to be understood.

Hitting any woman is a cheap shot. It's cowardly. If I could change the world, one of the first things I would do is get rid of the creeps and cowards who do it anyway.

That's my message.

Violence: Don't blame it on the TV

"Assassination," wrote George Bernard Shaw, "is the extreme form of censorship."

Congressional hearings and bills dealing with violence on television are far more palatable forms of censorship, but their intent and end results are the same: the suppression of freedom of speech.

Censorship by intimidation eventually achieve the same goals as censorship by assassination. The former just takes a little longer.

As a father — and a rather conservative one at that — I fully support efforts to prescribe social conduct. As a journalist, I oppose any effort to constrain the fullest expression of free speech, even when it deeply offends and pains me.

Yet, one law of history is immutable: Every social ill has demanded a scapegoat, from the witches in Salem to teenagers. For today's rampaging violence, television has been designated as the scapegoat.

"And yet when men ceased to believe in witches, they ceased to be," wrote Theodore Schroeder.

Today's witch is television violence, according to many right-wing conservatives. Joined by violent witch-seeking members of Congress, right-wing voices are sabotaging the First Amendment with McCarthyian ferocity.

One of the more surprising finger-pointers is Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., author of the Television Violence Act of 1990. Before his election to the Senate, Simon had built a distinguished career as a journalist, author and staunch advocate of the First Amendment's protection of freedom of speech.

But carrying Simon's legislation initiative to its logical conclusion would birth a Movie Violence Act, a Newspaper Violence Act, a Magazine Violence Act, a School Textbook Violence Act, a Teenage Violence Act, a Rap Lyrics Violence Act and a Police Brutality Violence Act.

Chuck Stone

To single out television programs as the sole culprit for today's spate of violence is tantamount to blaming the full moon for accelerated sexual activity.

Ironically, television has been both scapegoated and idolized. Since the late 1940s, 3,000 contradictory reports on television's effect on viewers found that TV led to hyperactivity among children, passivity among children, viewers' isolation, comfort for the lonely, family disintegration and family togetherness.

Unfortunately, we must accept the fact that violence is omnipresent in our society, and that it stems from many sources.

The violence-prone can find therapeutic fulfillment in Miami's television station, WSVN. The station saturates its violence-loving viewers with what a Wall Street Journal headline described as "corpses, blood and sex."

In the gore-splattered headlines of supermarket tabloids, violent impulses get a cathartic airing. Recently, violence was the sole topic of four headlines of one page of the puritanically dignified New York Times: "Bombs Kill 8 in Israel," "U.S. Bombs Iraqis," "Egypt Says Two Guerrillas Were Killed by Their Own Bomb," "Quaddafi Says He Won't Surrender Bomb Suspects."

Even two pages of my favorite newspaper, The Philadelphia Daily News, featured two facing pages of carnage-ridden headlines: "6th Suspect Held in Killing of Friend," "His Killers Poured Salt in His Wounds," "Life for Killer," "Parent-Killing Brothers' Trial Opens."

Gone to the movies lately? Hard Target, The Fugitive, Final Friday, A Bronx Tale and Warlock are among the current offerings. We've got so many cinematic terminators out there that they almost bump into each other in their respective plots.

In the last two months, Time magazine has featured two cover stories, "America the Violent" and "The Deadly Love Affairs Between America's Kids and Their Guns." Not to be outdone, Newsweek featured a cover, "Teen Violence: Wild in the Streets."

Now, factor in the rhetorical violence of rap lyrics, the officially sanctioned, unlawful violence of cops in Los Angeles, Detroit, New York and Miami. And don't forget that all of you patronizers of artistic violence and apologists for official violence play your part.

Television cannot be absolved of blame for America's violence. But neither is it solely responsible for the violent disintegration of America's civility.

Most spouses don't cheat, researcher says

By CONNIE CASS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Never mind what they say on Oprah and Donahue. About 85 percent of American husbands and wives are faithful to each other, says a researcher out to dispel myths about adultery.

"There are probably more scientifically worthless 'facts' on extramarital relations than on any other facet of human behavior," said Tom W. Smith of the National Opinion Research Center.

About 15 percent of married or previously married Americans have cheated on a spouse, Smith, director of the center's General Social Survey, said in a report Monday at an American Enterprise Institute seminar.

Perhaps 3 percent to 4 percent of husbands and wives have a sexual partner outside their marriage in a given year, he said.

Smith said TV talk shows and popular magazines commonly report much higher numbers of marital cheaters that are not based on scientific research.

Author Shere Hite wrote that in response to her questionnaire 75 percent of women married more than five years reported having affairs. And in a 1990 magazine article, Dr. Joyce Brothers said 50 percent of married women have had affairs.

"The problem has been the lack of good scientific information," Smith said in an interview Monday. "There's been a vacuum. And when you have a vacuum, something fills it up. It may be Phil Donahue, it may be Shere Hite."

Other studies have found affairs to be more common than the General Social Survey did, but still well below estimates often repeated in the popular media.

For example, the Kinsey Institute of Sex Research at Indiana University estimated in 1990 that 37 percent of married men and 29 percent of married women have been unfaithful.

An ABC News-Washington Post national telephone poll in 1987 found that 89 percent of respondents said they never had an affair while married.

The General Social Survey has found the level of extramarital activity basically unchanged in five separate surveys from 1988 to this year, Smith said.

In the 1993 survey of people who were married or previously married, 21 percent of men and 13 percent of women reported having an affair, Smith said.

The studies suggest that extramarital affairs are more common among younger people than among those born before 1940. Fewer people age 50 or older report having had an affair, Smith said.

Smith could not say whether fear of contracting AIDS through sexual contact had reduced marital cheating. But he said several studies have found that relatively few adults report changing their sexual behavior because of AIDS.

For example, a 1987 Gallup Poll found that only 6.8 percent of married people said they had changed their sexual behavior due to AIDS, compared to 19 percent of never married people.

"A lot of married people tell you there was nothing I needed to change," Smith said.

Smith also said infidelity is more common among residents of large central cities, among those who attend church less often, among those who have been divorced, among people unhappy with their marriage and among blacks compared to whites. The surveys found little difference by socioeconomic status.

About 1,400 people are interviewed in person each year for the national General Social Survey. Questions about sexual behavior are answered on a private, written questionnaire at the end of the interview.

The General Social Survey does not normally report an overall margin of error, because it varies in analysis of each question, said Woody Carter, senior survey director. There was an 82 percent completion rate in 1993. The survey was conducted over four months ending in mid-May.

Looka there! It's a pot-bellied streaker

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Police confirmed Monday they were investigating reports that a pot-bellied man wearing nothing but a towel around his head has been frightening women at apartment complexes on the city's north side.

Police have received reports about two incidents. The latest was 4 a.m. Saturday; another woman made a report early Sept.

4. One other woman who hadn't filed a police report also said she had seen the man.

The victim in the Sept. 4 episode said her 15-year-old neighbor also reported seeing the man during the summer, and added that other residents in surrounding complexes have seen him as well.

No reports had been filed, however, police said.

Bhutto chosen prime minister today, returns to power

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Benazir Bhutto was chosen prime minister and took the oath of office today in a triumphant comeback that gives her a second chance to address Pakistan's deep economic and social problems.

The National Assembly selected Ms. Bhutto by 121-72 over Nawaz Sharif, leader of the conservative Pakistan Muslim League.

"I am proud that the people of Pakistan have again placed their confidence in me," Bhutto said from the floor of the assembly.

Before the vote was announced, Bhutto toyed with her prayer beads, mumbled prayers and remained aloof from her party members.

Unlike 1988, when Bhutto's election restored democracy and ignited huge street celebrations, her political honeymoon is expected to be brief this time.

The economy continues to struggle and many citizens are frustrated with politicians, including Bhutto, who have been unable to form effective governments or ease poverty in the nation of 120 million people.

"The people of Pakistan are no longer interested in a change of faces. They want improvements and reforms," Bhutto acknowledged today.

Bhutto was sworn in for a five-year term. Her liberal Pakistan People's Party, which narrowly won national elections Oct. 6, will lead a coalition government that includes several smaller parties and independents.

Bhutto, who was the first woman to lead a modern Muslim state, again is expected to have a tough time surviving a full term.

Coalition governments in Pakistan have proved unstable and the Muslim League will be a strong opposition. Bhutto and Sharif are considered bitter enemies, but Sharif said he does not intend to undermine the new government.

"We give you our word that we will cooperate, and you have our unconditional support on everything that we feel is in the interest of the nation," Sharif told Bhutto in parliament.

Bhutto's previous government was dismissed in 1990 after only 20 months in power on charges of corruption and misuse. She was credited with restoring civil rights, but her government battled repeatedly with the military and the bureaucracy and was unable to institute any major programs.

Few Pakistanis believe their staggering social problems can be solved single-handedly by Bhutto.

Bhutto, 40, was educated at Harvard and Oxford and has three small children. She is the daughter of Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the prime minister who was overthrown in 1977 and hanged two years later.

During the campaign, Bhutto said she wanted to implement wide-ranging social programs to provide education, land and jobs for the poor.

Army supply clerk goes on shooting spree

FORT KNOX, Ky. (AP) — An Army supply clerk who recently found out he did not get a promotion killed his boss and two colleagues and critically wounded two others in a shooting spree at the nation's gold repository.

Arthur Hill fired in a controlled fashion and seemed calm before he turned the gun on himself, witnesses said.

Hill was in critical condition early today and was not expected to live, a spokesman at Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Louisville said.

Hill started firing about an hour after he reported to work Monday morning, but confined his shooting to one area, Army Lt. Col. Kevin Kelley said.

"It wasn't as though he went on a rampage through the building," Kelley said.

The 53-year-old retired Army master sergeant and his victims were civilians working at the Training Support Center at Fort Knox, home to where the nation's gold reserve and an Army tank training center.

One of those killed was Paul W. Higdon, 49, of Louisville, chief of the center. His son, Jason, said Hill had just learned that a 120-day temporary promotion to supervisor was not to be continued.

After the shootings, Hill drove 40 miles to the VA hospital in Louisville, walked into a bathroom and shot himself in the mouth with the .38-caliber gun he'd used earlier, authorities said.

"He didn't appear nervous, jittery or anything like that," hospital spokeswoman Maria Highbaugh said.

Hill had been treated for medical problems at the hospital but never admitted, Highbaugh said.

Higdon had mentioned Hill recently, his son said. "About a week ago he spoke of Mr. Hill and about how things weren't right with him," the son said. "We had no idea it would end like this."

Laurie Viggiano, a Fort Knox spokeswoman, said she did not have the details of Hill's promotion.

The other dead were identified as Deborah Glenn, 36, of Vine Grove and Wanda M. Simmons, 45, of Rockhaven.

The two wounded workers were airlifted to University of Louisville Hospital, where they were in critical but stable condition today with chest wounds, hospital spokeswoman Gayle Jewitt said.

Halliburton sells business

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co. said it has reached a preliminary agreement with Litton Industries Inc. and Western Atlas International Inc. for the sale of Halliburton's geophysical services and products business to Western Atlas.

Halliburton said Monday that it has agreed to continue negotiating the deal, including the cash price, with Litton and Western Atlas, Litton's majority-owned subsidiary. The business had 1992 revenues of some $470 million, Halliburton said.

A home where the buffalo can roam: Tallgrass Prairie land in Oklahoma

By DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press Writer

PAWHUSKA, Okla. (AP) — The sky was cloudy but words were encouraging Monday as 300 buffalo were returned to a preserved section of their ancestral homeland.

"This really marks the beginning of the place as a real preserve," said Joseph Williams, chairman of the board of The Nature Conservancy, which bought 36,000 acres of ranchland and renamed it the Tallgrass Prairie Preserve.

The audience watching the bison rumbling onto their new home on the range included retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, Osage Indians and about 500 supporters of the conservancy, a private, nationwide group.

The bison are central to the conservancy's 5-year-old effort to restore the ranchland to its condition in the early 1800s, before settlers destroyed their habitat and slaughtered millions of the shaggy-maned animals.

"You can stand on the top of one of these hills, look in all directions as far as you can possibly see, and see nothing but tallgrass prairie," said Schwarzkopf, who belongs to the environmental group. "In the middle of it all, the bison. That's exactly what our ancestors saw. That's what makes this special."

The conservancy bought land for the preserve after the National Park Service failed to create a much larger park. At times, federal plans included more than 400,000 acres of ranchland in the prairie belt that once reached from Oklahoma to the Dakotas.

Mineral rights and cattle ranching turned the Osage Indians and local ranchers against efforts to preserve larger areas in Oklahoma.

The conservancy considers the bison a critical tool in recreating the tallgrass ecosystem. Naturalists believe their grazing and wallowing will encourage the return of up to 700 species of native plants which have been suppressed by cattle grazing and introduced foreign plants.

Fire is the other ingredient. The Nature Conservancy burned about 24,000 acres in the spring and plans periodic burns throughout the year to complement the natural, rejuvenating fires started by lightning.

The herd will be allowed to grow to 1,800 over the next eight to 10 years; any additional bison will be sold.

"People get excited because it's bison and symbolic," said Williams, who also is chairman of The Williams Companies, a $4 billion energy and telecommunications corporation.

"We're not in the bison business. But bison were a very determinate factor. That's what is exciting. Now those forces are back in play," Williams said. "You're going to see rolling hills and waving grasses of a height that you probably never have seen before."

Conservatives threaten to withdraw NAFTA support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative House Republicans are threatening to withdraw support for the North American Free Trade Agreement unless the administration drops a proposal to raise international transportation taxes.

In a letter Monday to President Clinton originated by Rep. Thomas W. Ewing, R-Ill., with Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., among the signers, the lawmakers said:

"It would be difficult for many of us to support a NAFTA which includes tax increases. While revenue from the increased economic activity generated from the NAFTA should be more than enough to offset any lost tariff revenue, if an offset is needed we should cut spending rather than raise taxes."

The New York Times today quoted an unidentified administration official as saying Trade Representative Mickey Kantor would assure Congress that no final decision on the taxes had been made.

The conservative Republicans are objecting to an administration proposal to raise $2.3 billion in international transportation taxes over five years to replace tariff income lost under NAFTA. The proposed treaty would create the world's biggest trading bloc by eliminating virtually all trade obstacles between the United States, Canada and Mexico.

The Clinton administration is considering an increase of $5 a ticket on taxes assessed on international airline and cruise travel, along with higher taxes on Customs fees collected from trucks and trains that cross the border.

All 27 lawmakers who signed Ewing's letter have either endorsed NAFTA or are leaning toward it, and losing their support could seriously damage chances for congressional approval of the accord.

A vote in the House has been set for Nov. 17. Vote counters on both sides say only about 50 or 60 Democratic lawmakers remain truly undecided, and the agreement's proponents must win a heavy majority of those to amass the 218 votes needed to prevail.

Spring will be a short season

By FRANCINE PARNES
For AP Special Features

New York's Fashion Week begins on Halloween, but there's nothing spooky in store for spring '94. There will, however, be a certain feeling of déjà vu because not everything can be new.

Expect updates from seasons past as well as recurrent themes from the recent European shows. Look especially for sheer fabrics, soft silhouettes, neutral colors and short skirts.

Light, subdued non-colors that blanketed Milan — creamy white, beige and ecru — are heading this way.

Donna Karan calls her natural mineral tones, naming them after colored rocks and stones. "We're looking for soft shades such as rope, wheat and ivory," says Wilmer Weiss of San Francisco, senior vice president and fashion director of I. Magnin.

Miniskirts will be on the rise yet more modest than those in Europe, where some were so brief they were shown with matching underpants.

"There's no question we have a short collection, but it's not a micro collection," says Bud Konheim, CEO and chairman of Nicole Miller. "It's a nice short, a getting-out-of-the-cab short."

Make that 19 inches short, a full 2 inches longer than the 1991 highs.

"Short is very important," says Donna Karan, who is designing fingertip-length jackets that double as dresses.

Hope Brick of Houston, fashion director for Foley's stores, says short is "going to be the biggest fashion message. Short will once again be a fashion must-have."

Look, too, for dresses with a baby doll silhouette much like that shown in Europe by Gianni Versace, Christian Lacroix, Rifat Ozbek and Anna Molinari.

Konheim says the baby doll is a natural extension of the empire, which flares from just under the bustline. "Empire has come back very strong in the past two seasons, and now it's taking over," he says.

The well-dressed leg, according to Nicole Miller, will wear thigh-high stockings, a trend advocated abroad by Versace, Rena Lange and Dolce & Gabbana.

Then there are the anklets. The terminally trendy will combine their minis with schoolgirl cuffed socks over lightweight textured legwear, says Brick. And don't leave home without lug-soled footwear.

All of which means this is a much more relaxed, less dressy mini, or as Brick describes it, "not the short of the '80s that we teamed with nude legwear and high-heel footwear."

Spring will clearly be a season for see-through clothing.

"We'll see a lot more transparent fabrics, which will make underpinnings very important," Brick says, particularly Lycra bodysuits and tank tops.

"The anatomy on focus will be the midriff," she adds. "Tiny Lycra tops with wide-leg drawstring pants will be a casual uniform for those who dare."

"We love the midriff as an erogenous zone," says Tony Longoria, vice president of sales for Todd Oldham. "We think cropped stretch T-shirts are the new piece to wear under a jacket. And we also believe strongly in cropped jackets and cropped sweaters."

Also look for less structure this spring: Full, soft trousers and skirts and featherweight jackets, along with pleated silks and other crinkled sheers seen in Europe.

"I love especially when the fabrics are soft and gauzy," says Adrienne Vittadini, who has a lot of wide, sheer pants in her spring collection.

Along those lines, Todd Oldham plans silk pajama pants with boxy tops.

"Our show is based on dreams," says Longoria, Oldham's vice president of sales, "and that's why we're doing a lot of pajamas."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I had an affair with a co-worker I'll call Pete. I was single, but Pete was married. I didn't see anything wrong with it because he told me his wife was a cold fish, and he was going to divorce her and marry me.

After waiting for four years, it seemed like it was taking him an awfully long time to divorce his wife, so I decided to speed things up a little. I called Pete's wife and told her about Pete and me. Guess what? She said she knew all about it - and all the others. That's right, I wasn't the only one.

I dumped the jerk immediately, and the worst of it was, he didn't care.

You have said it before, but say it again: "A guy who cheats on his wife will cheat on his girlfriend."

SADDER BUT WISER

DEAR SADDER: "Guys" don't have the exclusive on cheating. A woman who cheats on her husband will probably cheat on her lover.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter signed "McFrustrated," who fell for the waitress at a fast-food place, I had to write and tell you my story.

When I graduated from high school, I worked for the summer at a local McDonald's. Almost every night, three guys from the nearby air base would come in for their snack. One night only two came in. I jokingly asked where the third musketeer was, and a minute later, he came in. When he placed his order, it was for a Big Mac, large fries, large Coke, and a date for tomorrow night! I liked his looks and his manner, so I said OK.

That was in June; by February we were engaged, and got married the following May - 18 years ago!

I would like to suggest to "McFrustrated" to go ahead and ask the waitress for a date. If she's seeing someone, she will tell him so, and if she isn't...well, who knows, in another 18 years, he may be writing to thank you for the advice.

CAROLE LANGUI,
MAGNOLIA, DEL.

DEAR CAROLE: Not all waitresses were as lucky as you. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This letter concerns the one you printed signed "McFrustrated."

I am a fast-food waitress who had the unfortunate experience of encountering a "McFrustrated."

While I was working behind the counter, a man nearly twice my age came into the restaurant. After ordering his meal, he proceeded to ask me for a date. I told him I was only 15 years old, but he insisted that didn't make any difference and tried to talk me into it. He didn't get very far because I had the feeling that he wanted to take advantage of me.

After that episode, the man (like "McFrustrated") returned several times. The way he looked me up and down made me feel very uncomfortable.

My advice to "McFrustrated," after reading your column, is that "his waitress" either already has a man in her life or she is just not interested. His waitress is not the only fish in the sea, and it is obviously time to rebait his hook!

Pampa youth hits it big in pumpkin market

Some may try to corner the silver market, but Jonathan Brooks has the pumpkin market cornered — at least on the corner of Hobart and Terry.

The ten-year-old will set out his pumpkins Saturday at the corner where he did so well last year. "I've got about 17 pumpkins," he said. "Last year, I had about 25."

"The crop was down, but they were bigger this year," said his mother, Jerilyn Brooks.

The largest of the crop is 97 pounds, more than half again as big as 60 pound Jonathan. The 10-year-old entrepreneur has his 15-year-old brother, Adam, move it for him in a wheel barrow.

"There are just a couple of little ones," Jonathan said.

"We had Grandma come over the other night and bring her bathroom scale," Mrs. Brooks said.

Jonathan and his father, Neil, planted the pumpkins in the backyard.

"All it takes is planting the seed in the ground and keep watering them," Mrs. Brooks said. "Then you see one that keeps doubling in size and you think, 'My Goodness.'"

"There were four to a package for $1.69," he said. "They were supposed to be giant pumpkins, but only one came up."

Most of the pumpkins he has are in the 15 pound range, he said.

"He's already sold two," his mother said.

Not all the pumpkins are solely for business. Each member of the family gets one to carve for Halloween.

Jonathan hasn't decided yet who gets the 97-pound king of the pumpkin crop this year, but with next year in mind, he's already lay claim to the seed from it.

Churches talk about sex

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

The adults at a black Southern Baptist church in Houston had little faith their teens would embrace a campaign asking them to remain "sexually pure" until marriage.

"Initially, there was somewhat of a skepticism: Oh God, our kids will never go for that," said the Rev. Thomas Walker of Brentwood Baptist Church.

But Walker, who remembered himself the hardships of being a teen-age father, persisted.

On July 17, nearly 100 teens at his church made vows to be celibate until marriage. The next week, at a youth rally with five other churches, 194 teens took the pledge to follow biblical principles on sexuality.

Around the country, other churches are reporting similar experiences. As they have begun to talk about sex — even if only to encourage youths to abstain — tens of thousands of teenagers have signed on to the "True Love Waits" campaign that began in the Southern Baptist Convention and now spans several denominations and parachurch organizations.

Organizers hope to display up to 500,000 pledge cards at a rally in Washington, D.C., next July.

"These kids are hungry. They are starving for someone to tell them the truth," Walker says.

For many conservative Christian churches, the Bible is nearly unequivocal in encouraging men and women to remain chaste before marriage.

"For this is the will of God, your sanctification: that you abstain from unchastity; that each one of you know how to take a wife for himself in holiness and honor," Paul says in the fourth chapter of I Thessalonians.

But for a long time, many churches have been afraid to discuss sex.

Walker, 37, said when he was growing up, an admonition to "Keep your pants up" was the only way the subject was approached. "It was taboo. Nobody talked about it."

Eddie DeGarmo, part of the contemporary Christian music group DeGarmo & Key, remembers when he was in a church youth group, "The church acted like kids didn't have problems. But man, church kids have the same problems as other kids."

The Rev. Richard Ross, one of the campaign coordinators, said many teens were "thrilled" to discover that thousands of their peers shared their views on abstinence before marriage.

"I think they were becoming a little weary of adults insinuating they will all be promiscuous," Ross said. "They were ready for some significant group of adults to say, 'We believe in you.'"

Traci Bixler, a freshman at Oklahoma State University, has already written a sealed letter to her future husband telling him she loves him enough to wait.

"It was no question for me at all. It was something I definitely wanted to do," Bixler said of the chastity vow.

Robert Ladd, 17, a high school senior in Nashville, Tenn., who has been dating a homecoming queen at his school for 11 months, said the campaign might help adults think twice about pushing condoms as part of "safe sex" campaigns.

"For the most part, they think we're just going to mess around," he said. "They don't really think we can do it."

Even some of the youths at his church who took the chastity pledge expressed self-doubts, Walker said. Several of them came up to him later and said, "Mr. Walker, I'm scared. I don't know if I can do it."

But Walker said he is confident some will make it. The strength of the message lies not in its being anti-sex, or safe sex, but in being pro-faith, Walker says.

"If you are a child of the king, don't cheat yourself out of it," he tells youths at his church. "You really are somebody. You do have a special gift."

Briefs

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The family of a 2-year-old girl injured by an explosive device tossed by New York Mets outfielder Vince Coleman filed suit against him and former Los Angeles Dodgers outfielder Eric Davis.

The lawsuit on behalf of Amanda Santos alleges battery, intentional infliction of emotional distress, conspiracy to commit battery and inflict emotional distress, negligence and negligent infliction of emotional distress.

The Mets said Coleman will never again play for them, and the Dodgers traded Davis to the Detroit Tigers in August.

After a Mets-Dodgers game July 24, Coleman admitted setting off the explosive device. He was charged with a felony for illegal possession of an explosive. Coleman was a passenger in a vehicle driven by Davis.

Santos sustained an injury to the cornea in her left eye. The family's attorney, Darrell York, said filing the complaint allows him access to police and fire reports.

INDIAN RIVER, Mich. (AP)—Lindsey Hunter, one of two Detroit Pistons' first-round draft picks, agreed to a multiyear contract and will be ready to play Tuesday against Houston.

The contract was expected to be signed in Houston. Hunter, 10th pick overall, was the Southwestern Athletic Conference player of the year at Jackson State, averaging a league-leading 26.7 points per game, fifth in the nation.

He ranks second behind Purvis Short on the all-time Jackson State scoring list with 2,226 points and owns 12 school records, including most points in a season with 907, most career three-pointers (293) and points in a game (48).

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)—The NCAA asked Texas A&M to respond to allegations that at least seven football players were paid by a Dallas booster for work not done.

Dean Gage, the school's interim president, said Texas A&M will answer the letter in time for the NCAA infractions committee to deal with at its next meeting, Nov. 12-14.

Several athletes, including 1992's top rusher, Greg Hill, served suspensions as a result of the allegations. Hill played his first game last weekend after sitting out five games. Another player was suspended for the year, and three others were suspended for shorter periods.

A&M is accused of failing to monitor the university's employment program for football players and take appropriate action when learning of possible NCAA violations.

NEW YORK (AP)—Chris Chelios, all-star defenseman of the Chicago Blackhawks, was suspended two more games by the NHL for his part in last week's melee with the Hartford Whalers.

Last Thursday, Chelios resisted a linesman during a fight and joined a second altercation. He missed Saturday's game in Winnipeg and Monday's game against Dallas.

Detroit's Bob Probert and Toronto's Bob Rouse were suspended four games each for an incident last Friday. Rouse deliberately attempted to injure Probert, swinging his stick at him.

Hartford's Doug Houda received a five-game suspension for deliberately injuring Buffalo's Randy Moller with a head butt Oct. 10.

NEW YORK (AP)—Goaltender Felix Potvin of the Toronto Maple Leafs was named NHL player of the week after a 3-0 record, 1.67 goals-against average, and .952 save percentage.

LYON, France (AP)—Senegal's Yaya Dombia defeated France's Guillaume Raoux 6-2, 6-4, and No. 7 Andrei Chesnokov of Russia lost to Czech Republic's Daniel Vacek 6-4, 6-3 in the first round of the $600,000 Lyon Open.

In other first-round matches, Lionel Barthez of France defeated Marco Gorris of Spain, 6-3, 7-6 (7-4); Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland ousted Diego Nargiso of Italy, 6-3, 6-2; Czech Martin Damm eliminated Hendrik Dreckmann of Germany 7-5, 2-6, 6-2, and Markus Nawie of Germany downed Jordi Burillo of Spain, 6-4, 7-5.

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Second-seeded Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia served 14 aces on his way to a 6-1, 6-3 victory over Italy's Andrea Gaudenzi in the first round of the $335,000 Austrian Open ATP indoors.

In other first-round action, Jan Siemerink of Netherlands defeated Gianluca Pozzi of Italy, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3; Thomas Buchmayer of Austria outlasted countryman Thomas Prerovsky 6-2, 3-6, 7-5; Denmark's Kenneth Carlsen beat Milen Velev of Bulgaria, 4-6, 7-5, 6-1; and David Prinosil of Germany ousted compatriot Bernd Karbacher 7-6 (11-9), 6-3.

BEIJING (AP)—Steve Bryan, No. 117 in the world, upset third-seeded Henrik Holm 6-4, 6-4 in the opening round of the Salem Open. The tournament is the first ATP event played in the People's Republic of China.

In other matches, Chuck Adams ousted another Swede, fifth-seeded Mikael Pernfors, 6-1, 6-1; No. 6 Jonas Svensson of Sweden beat Pan Bing of China, 6-3, 6-2; Jonas Bjorkman of Sweden defeated Robbie Weiss 6-3, 6-2, and Kenny Thorne topped Doug Flach 6-1, 7-6 (10-8).

HORSE RACING

Monday's Races
CHICAGO (AP)—Bayou Bidder, $3.60, scored a six-length victory over Freezeny in the $21,000 Tostmah Purse at Hawthorne Race Course.

ELMONT, N.Y. (AP)—Mio Roberino, $27, won the $118,000 Tidal Handicap by 3 1/4 lengths over Binary Light at Belmont's closing feature.

World Series tie-breaker tonight

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Toronto manager Cito Gaston is facing a difficult DH dilemma in the next three games of the World Series.

Gaston seems to be in a no-win situation tonight when the Blue Jays play Philadelphia in Game 3 with the Series tied 1-1.

His options:
— Start Paul Molitor at first base and bench major league batting leader John Olerud (.363) for Game 3 against Danny Jackson. Then play Olerud against right-handers.

— Bench third baseman Ed Sprague, better defensively, for Molitor. This is very risky because of Molitor's weak throwing arm.

— Use Molitor as a pinch hitter.

— Play Molitor in left field and give slumping Rickey Henderson a game or two to rest his sore hands. This move is the most unlikely.

Gaston said at Monday's workout he's fairly certain what the decision is and will announce it a few hours before game time at 8:12 p.m. EDT.

It wasn't a total day of intrigue, though. Gaston decided to make Todd Stottlemyre Toronto's Game 4 starter on Wednesday night against Tommy Greene.

The designated hitter question is becoming quite an issue between the two leagues and their team officials. The Blue Jays had the same problem when Dave Winfield was their DH during the season last year.

Blue Jays pitchers Pat Hentgen, Stottlemyre and Juan Guzman are just hoping to get through their at-bats without getting hurt or embarrassing themselves.

Hentgen, the Game 3 starter, has batted only three times since 1986 when he graduated from high school. But he did order some Louisville Slugger bats with his name on it.

"All my at-bats have been in spring training," said Hentgen,

19-9. "Two strikeouts and a groundout. It's a little scary. I expect two fastballs for strikes and a curveball."

Guzman actually fears hitting and would probably be more comfortable holding a hockey stick than a baseball bat. The right-hander declined to take any bunting practice before Game 2 but did get into the batting cage during Monday's workout.

"I think it's absolutely ridiculous that our pitchers have to hit," Toronto general manager Pat Gillick said. "Absolutely ridiculous. Someone is going to get hurt."

The speculation on Monday was that Gaston might sit Olerud for Game 3 against the left-handed Jackson. Olerud batted .396 with 20 homers against right-handers this season and .291 with four homers versus left-handers.

Still, it would seem odd not to have a .363 hitter in the starting lineup. Molitor hit .332 with 22 homers and 111 RBIs, leading the league with 211 hits so it's hard not to have his bat, either. "I'm prepared to be a pinch hitter," Olerud said. "Everyone is capable of doing the job. I don't expect too many hits from our pitchers, though."

Sprague hit .260 but gives the Blue Jays much better defense. Molitor last played third base in 1990 with the Milwaukee Brewers.

"No matter what I decide there will be second-guessing," Gaston said. "If Paul makes an error or gets hurt there will be questions."

World Series decisions are always magnified many times over for the managers. In 1991, Minnesota skipper Tom Kelly used DH Chili Davis in right field at Atlanta and it didn't work out.

The last time the Phillies made it to the World Series was in 1983 when Paul Owens was their manager. Owens caused some second-guessing when he benched slumping Pete Rose at first base in favor of veteran Tony Perez.

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd was scheduled to start Game 7 of the 1986 World Series for Boston against New York but the game was rained out. Manager John McNamara chose to come back with Bruce Hurst on three days' rest and the left-hander tired as the Mets rallied for an 8-5 victory, denying the Red Sox their first Series victory since 1918.

The media gathered in the Boston hotel after the game was washed out on Oct. 26, staking McNamara out for a decision. When Boyd found out he was hurt and upset.

Things worked out a lot better for Walter Alston and his Los Angeles Dodgers in 1965. Sandy Koufax beat Minnesota and Jim Katt, 7-0, in Game 5. But the Twins came back to win the next game to even the Series.

Koufax, who did not pitch the opener to observe Yom Kippor, returned on two days' rest and the Dodgers won 2-0.

Gaston will start to find out tonight if he made the right decision, too.

Pampa, Borger tied for first in 1-4A race

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

The wheels were set in motion last Friday night for a Pampa-Borger showdown to possibly determine at least one of the two District 1-4A playoff spots.

The two teams, which meet Oct. 29 in Harvester Stadium, are tied for the district lead at 2-0 after victories last week.

The Harvesters, 6-1 overall, piled up 405 yards in total offense last week in rolling to a 43-6 over Amarillo Caprock.

Senior running back Gregg Moore rushed for 70 yards and scored two touchdowns while junior end Jason Warren caught two touchdown passes to pace Pampa's offense.

"Our basic game plan was to be more balanced with our offense and get more of a running attack out of our one-back formation," said PHS head coach Dennis Cavalier. "We tried out some new things on offense and it worked out pretty good."

There was no doubt the Harvesters achieved offensive balance as five different players rushed for over 20 yards and five different players figured in Pampa's scoring. The Harvesters finished with 230 yards in rushing offense and quarterback Tony Cavalier completed six of 11 passes for 167 yards and two touchdowns.

Tim McCavit booted a 32-yard field goal and converted four of five extra point attempts. A pair of reserves also figured in the scoring parade. Shawn Lewis caught a 36-yard TD pass and reserve back Ross Watkins scored on a 3-yard run.

The Harvesters are averaging 310.4 yards in total offense, 216.5 yards on the ground and 93.8 yards through the air.

On the sideline during the Caprock game was Tyler Kendall, Pampa's starting strongside linebacker. Kendall sustained a knee injury in Pampa's 18-11 win over Dumas.

Kendall was scheduled to go through light workouts today to test his knee.

"We'll evaluate him Thursday and Friday to see how he's doing. We're not going to jeopardize his well-being just so he can play in the Hereford game," Cavalier said.

Borger played Dumas last week and the Bulldogs had the same problems putting away the Demons that the Harvesters did two weeks ago. Borger came from behind to win, 20-15, when quarterback Toby Guest threw a 45-yard scoring strike to Tim Baker with less than two minutes to play.

Borger is at home against Randall this Friday night while Pampa travels to Hereford. The Whitefaces pulled off a surprise last week, handing Randall only its second loss of the season, 29-27.

Cowboys back on Super Bowl track

IRVING (AP)—Jimmy Johnson says he believes the Dallas Cowboys will win the NFC East, but he won't say the team is the best in the NFL.

"It's too early in the season to say we're the best," Johnson said. "Injuries come into play. I did say I thought we'd win the division, and I still believe that."

The Cowboys get a week off, but don't need it. Their 26-17 victory Sunday over the San Francisco 49ers shows they are back on the Super Bowl track.

"We've won four in a row, but we're still one behind the New York Giants and they are playing extremely well," Johnson said.

"We have a very important stretch coming up against three division teams—Philadelphia, New York, and Phoenix. After we play those three games, we'll see how we stand. We have one of the better teams in the NFC, but we're not on top yet."

Johnson added, "We're playing better right now after six games than we did a year ago even if we're one game down on our record."

Johnson wasn't overjoyed to get a bye after four straight victories by the Cowboys.

"We just play 'em the way the NFL schedules 'em," Johnson said. "We'll have to make the best of it."

The Cowboys got Monday and today off. After spending the remainder of the week working on the Eagles, Johnson will then give the squad the weekend off.

"We have to keep working because we're getting better every week," said Johnson, whose club started with two losses before running back Emmitt Smith settled a contract dispute and returned to the lineup.

Troy Aikman and Michael Irvin blistered the 49ers Sunday in what Irvin called "pitch 'n catch."

Irvin caught 12 passes for 168 yards and one touchdown in his best day as a Cowboy.

"Some guys at the point of the catch shrug up," Aikman said. "Their strike zone gets a little smaller. Michael's gets bigger at the point of the catch. He's just phenomenal."

The Cowboys beat the 49ers, 30-20, in the NFC title game last year, and Sunday's rematch was a rerun. Dallas dominated in the second half again, increasing its record to 4-2, a game behind the New York Giants in the NFC East.

"The 49ers were the team of the 1980s, but we took it away from them in January and we want to keep it," Dallas owner Jerry Jones said. "We had a fire in the stadium on Wednesday, but it wasn't anything like the fire we had on the field Sunday."

Irvin said: "I think we're the best team in the NFL. We beat the 49ers in January and we beat them in October. That makes us the best."

Pampa Middle School teams beat Valleyview in volleyball

Pampa 8th graders defeated Valleyview, 15-5, 15-10, Monday night. April Lopez combined outstanding serves and set to held lead Pampa to victory.

Brooke Petty, Erin Cobb and Heather Robbin had some nice digs while Katy Cavalier, Aubra Clark, Tiffany McCullough, Jami Wells and Deidre Crawford gave Pampa a tough offensive hitting attack.

The Pampa 8th grade is now 8-0 in district play and 9-1 for the season.

Pampa also won the 7th grade A match, 6-15, 15-2, 15-10.

Pampa's service attack was led by Lisa Kirkpatrick, Heather Petty, Michelle Doucette and Kimberly Clark. Holly Brooks and Lori Lindsey turned in outstanding defensive performances.

Pampa's 7th grade B team lost in three matches.

Kelsey Yowell, Lindsey Scribner, Kristen Beasley and Molly Seabourne had an outstanding night of serving for Pampa. Defensive standouts were Ramona Salazar, Johnna Coward and Jennie Fatheree.

The Pampa Middle School volleyball tournament starts Saturday with the first match beginning at 8:30 a.m. with the 8th grade A team. The 7th grade A team plays at 9:30, followed by 7th grade B at 10:30 and 8th grade B at 11:30.

Pampa lost to Amarillo Black, 14-16, 11-15, in a 9th grade volleyball match Monday night.

Cara East led Pampa with 9 points while Nicole Meason added 5. Katy Fofin played one of her best defensive games, finishing with several blocks.

The Pampa 9th graders have a 10-5 record.

Pampa's B team won by a 15-4, 13-15, 15-12 score.

Tina Dwight scored 12 points for Pampa while Nicole Cagle had 7. Marisol Resendiz had 3 blocks.

The Pampa teams host Dumas at 6 p.m. next Monday night.

Spurs win first exhibition game

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Dennis Rodman scored 8 points and grabbed 19 rebounds Monday night as the Spurs defeated the Charlotte Hornets 113-105 for their first exhibition victory.

The Spurs led by 12 points after the first quarter, but were only ahead 54-53 at halftime. San Antonio still led 83-81 entering the fourth quarter, but Lloyd Daniels hit three free throws and Dale Ellis hit three jumpers as the Spurs used a 9-0 run to take a 92-81 lead.

Vinny Del Negro's 3-pointer with 3:15 to go gave San Antonio a 111-97 lead.

Daniels scored 19 points and Sleepy Floyd added 17 for San Antonio.

Johnny Newman led all scorers with 25 for Charlotte, which lost its second preseason game. San Antonio is 1-1.

The Spurs' David Robinson played only the first quarter, scoring 12 points, while Charlotte's front-line tandem of Larry Johnson and Alonzo Mourning didn't play at all due to injuries.

Longhorns beginning 'second season,' according to coach

AUSTIN (AP)—Texas coach John Mackovic says the Longhorns are beginning a "second season" when they meet Southern Methodist Saturday in the Alamodome in San Antonio.

The Longhorns are off to a 1-3-1 start overall, their worst since 1938. But they are 1-0 in the Southwest Conference, and Mackovic said Monday bowl hopes are very much alive.

Texas is 0-3-1 in non-conference games, but beat Rice in its only SWC match.

"Everything we set out to achieve is still ahead of us," Mackovic said Monday. "This is the first game of a six-game schedule and we have to win five games."

The NCAA requires that a team win six games against Division I opponents to qualify for a bowl. Texas faces SMU, Texas Tech, Houston, TCU, Baylor and Texas A&M over the next six weeks.

"Right now, we are just thinking about SMU," Mackovic said.

The second-year Texas coach praised the Mustangs (1-3-2, 1-1-1) who have battled back after getting the NCAA's "death penalty" four years ago. This season, the Ponies have led going into the fourth quarter of four games.

"They have taken an offense (the run-and-shoot) and made it work for them," Mackovic said. "They attack the football and hang in there and scramble all over the field. That's a tribute to their coach that they never give up."

Mackovic said he voted for SMU coach Tom Rossley as the Southwest Conference coach of the year last season, when the Mustangs finished 5-6.

"I have a lot of respect for Tom Rossley, the way he has been able to keep the program moving forward," Mackovic said.

SMU threw for 399 yards in a 28-28 tie with Houston last week.

Black coaches boycott summit

By JIM O'CONNELL AP Basketball Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The inaugural NABC Issues Summit had another topic placed on the agenda before it was even called to order.

The gathering of college basketball coaches was to start today, but a large number of its members weren't there because of a boycott.

The Black Coaches Association voted unanimously earlier in the month to boycott the issues summit called by the National Association of Basketball Coaches to discuss four major topics: game-related issues, legislation, gender equity, and student-athlete welfare and ethics.

Among those scheduled to attend were coaches from Division I and II schools, school presidents, athletic directors, faculty representatives, conference commissioners and NCAA representatives.

"That's all we've been doing is going to committees and forums," said BCA founder and director Rudy Washington, the head coach at Drake. "Quite frankly, I've been in this system for 20 years and nothing has changed. Therefore, we have to go outside what has been traditional for us to try to get results."

That includes a major summit of their own with members of the Congressional Black Caucus in Washington today. Expected to attend that meeting were Washington, Nolan Richardson of Arkansas, John Thompson of Georgetown, John Chaney of Temple, George Raveling of Southern Cal, and Vivian Stringer, the women's coach at Iowa.

"They have the ability to create changes through government legislation if we can get them behind us," Washington said of the caucus.

The BCA's concerns include the reduction in scholarships by the NCAA, the number of minorities in coaching and on college faculties, and the absence of black executives in the NCAA or USA Basketball.

In a letter to Washington, NCAA President Joseph N. Crowley and the chairman of the NCAA Presidents Commission, Gregory O'Brien, said they agreed with some of Washington's criticism of the NCAA.

"We could not agree more with your criticism of the number of African-Americans in the NCAA national office and other positions in intercollegiate athletics administration," Crowley and O'Brien wrote. "We cannot defend the status quo, but we are committed to changing it."

They pointed to the NCAA's internship program for women and minorities and to its "aggressive recruitment efforts" at the NCAA's national office in Overland Park, Kan., where "three of the last eight administrative vacancies have been filled by African-Americans."

They also said they welcomed a discussion with the caucus on whether NCAA academic standards are denying opportunities to African-Americans.

NABC director Jim Haney said his organization, of which most of the boycotting coaches are members, shares the concerns of the BCA.

"As I see it, it is sort of a matter of timing," Haney said. "They've deemed it important to get people aware of their concerns. The issues summit kind of became the first event that the recognition could be made. I don't believe they are trying to hurt the NABC."

The NABC decided to conduct the issues summit because the main NCAA convention is held during the basketball season and the coaches felt their concerns weren't being heard by the full membership.

"We would like to bring together the many groups of people who have an effect on the game of basketball," NABC president and Holy Cross coach George Blaney said. "Our goal is to continue to create opportunity and keep the focus on the student-athlete."

The issues summit, being held in the city that will host the Final Four this season, runs through Wednesday.

or upon the written request of said defendants or their attorney, a sufficient portion of said property(s) in order to satisfy said judgment(s), interest, penalties, and cost; any property sold shall be subject to the right of redemption of the defendants or any person having an interest therein, to redeem the said property, or their interest therein, at any time within two years from the date the purchaser's deed is filed for record in the manner provided by law, and shall be subject to any other and further rights to which the defendants or anyone interested therein may be entitled, under the provisions of law. 'Demolition Man' still on top at box office; 'Hillbillies' at No. 2

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two new films failed to knock Demolition Man out of first place at the box office while an improbable story about the Jamaican bobsled team emerged as the season's sleeper hit.

Of the two new films in wide release, a movie adaptation of The Beverly Hillbillies fared the best, bringing in $9.5 million in its first weekend.

Judgment Night, starring Emilio Estevez, debuted poorly, netting a modest $4.1 million, according to figures released Monday by Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

Cool Runnings reported another strong take at the ticket window. The $11 million comedy about Jamaican athletes at the 1988 Winter Olympics earned $7 million for third place.

Although the film attracted only mildly positive reviews, it is one of the only current releases with family appeal. The Disney movie has made $26.6 million to date and has lost little momentum since its premiere, thanks to word-of-mouth recommendations.

Several new films introduced in limited release enjoyed positive results.

Tim Burton's The Nightmare Before Christmas opened in just two locations but grossed $130,000. The animated film broke house records at Hollywood's El Capitan theater and the Sutton Theatre in New York. It opens in 500 locations on Friday, a key test for the quirky film.

Rudy, a new story about a scrawny football player fulfilling his dream to play at Notre Dame, collected $830,000 in 117 locations.

The love story Mr. Wonderful bombed while the new Jeff Bridges film Fearless and the Chinese film Farewell My Concubine premiered strongly.

Michael J. Fox's new comedy For Love or Money fell off the Top 10 chart in just its third week of release.

Here are the weekend's top 20 films, according to Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc. Estimated ticket sales are from Friday through Sunday, with distributor, weekend gross, number of North American theater locations, average per location, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Figures are based on actual receipts and projections where actual figures were not available.

1. Demolition Man, Warner Bros., $10.3 million, 2,258 locations, $4,555 per location, $29.6 million, two weeks.

2. The Beverly Hillbillies, 20th Century Fox, $9.5 million, 2,152 locations, $4,426 per location, $9.5 million, one week.

3. Cool Runnings, Disney, $7 million, 1,819 locations, $3,853 per location, $26.6 million, three weeks.

4. Malice, Columbia, $5.5 million, 1,519 locations, $3,626 per location, $27.2 million, three weeks.

5. Judgment Night, Universal, $4.1 million, 1,543 locations, $2,650 per location, $4.1 million, one week.

6. The Good Son, 20th Century Fox, $3.2 million, 1,708 locations, $1,887 per location, $35.2 million, four weeks.

7. The Joy Luck Club, Disney, $3 million, 481 locations, $6,262 per location, $14.9 million, six weeks.

8. The Age of Innocence, Columbia, $2.7 million, 839 locations, $3,161 per location, $22.3 million, five weeks.

9. The Fugitive, Warner Bros., $2 million, 1,202 locations, $1,682 per location, $172.5 million, 11 weeks.

10. A Bronx Tale, Savoy, $1.88 million, 884 locations, $2,132 per location, $10.7 million, three weeks.

11. Mr. Jones, TriStar, $1.86 million, 1,483 locations, $1,252 per location, $6 million, two weeks.

12. The Program, Disney, $1.4 million, 1,222 locations, $1,151 per location, $18.9 million, four weeks.

13. Mr. Wonderful, Warner Bros., $1.2 million, 720 locations, $1,635 per location, $1.2 million, one week.

14. For Love or Money, Universal, $1.1 million, 1,240 locations, $897 per location, $9.1 million, three weeks.

15. Free Willy, Warner Bros., $1.1 million, 957 locations, $1,152 per location, $74.6 million, 14 weeks.

16. Mr. Nanny, New Line, $921,000, 1,293 locations, $712 per location, $3.4 million, two weeks.

17. Rudy, TriStar, $882,000, 117 locations, $7,532 per location, $1 million, 1 1/2 weeks.

18. Gettysburg, New Line, $748,000, 127 locations, $5,891 per location, $2.1 million, two weeks.

19. Jurassic Park, Universal, $656,000, 500 locations, $1,310 per location, $327.9 million, 19 weeks.

20. Hocus Pocus, Disney, $461,000, 429 locations, $1,075 per location, $37.7 million, 14 weeks.

High Court to review base closing dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether states and communities hard hit by cuts in defense spending may challenge military base closings in court.

Allowing such challenges could lead to an avalanche of lawsuits aimed at overturning the hundreds of base closings ordered as part of the post-Cold War move to a leaner military force.

The justices said they will review a federal appeals court ruling that let local officials and union members try to overturn the government's decision to close the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

The Clinton administration is arguing that federal law allows no judicial review of base closings aimed at cutting military spending.

Lawsuits over individual base closings would upset the process Congress adopted for making such politically difficult decisions, administration lawyers told the high court.

Since 1989, Congress and the president have agreed to close 250 military bases and realign another 152.

The court's decision is expected by July.

In other action Monday, the court: — Left intact a 97-year-old Arkansas woman's $1 million victory against supermarket tabloid Sun that used her photograph with a phony story about a pregnant, 101-year-old Australian.

— Agreed to use a California case to clarify federal judges' authority to enforce agreements that settled lawsuits once before them.

The Philadelphia shipyard was among the bases approved for closing in 1991 by President Bush under the 1990 Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act.

The law requires three rounds of base-closing decisions in 1991, 1993 and 1995. Under the law, the defense secretary makes recommendations to a special commission, which holds public hearings and recommends a closing list to the president.

The president must either accept or reject the list as a whole. If the president approves the closings, Congress has 45 days to veto them.

The decision to close the Philadelphia shipyard was challenged by Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware lawmakers, state and city officials and union leaders.

The lawsuit said federal officials violated the procedure spelled out in the law by withholding information and manipulating base-closure decisions.

A federal judge dismissed the case in 1991, saying the law did not allow judicial review.

But the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated the lawsuit, and reaffirmed its ruling last May after being told by the Supreme Court to take another look.

Review is allowed under the constitutional separation of powers doctrine, the appeals court said. It added that the president cannot take action unauthorized by federal law or the Constitution.

The government's appeal said the 1990 law is "structured to minimize the ways in which political maneuvering can delay or derail the base closure process."

Prisoners sue for religious freedom

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Dozens of Texas inmates file lawsuits each year in the name of religious freedom, but a former prison chaplain says hate — not religion — is the real motive behind many of them.

"A lot of these old religions prior to Christianity are being picked up by racists to use as a vehicle," Rev. Emmett Solomon, former chief chaplain for the Texas prison system, said in the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Solomon said he fielded hundreds of religious freedom complaints as prison chaplain, ranging from those of irate convicts who had been kicked out of prison church choirs to those of Indian inmates who wanted sweat lodges.

Solomon, who retired earlier this month, said racial motives are behind requests by black inmates who want Nation of Islam meetings and white inmates who want to start an Odinist church.

"There is currently a good deal of interest in the Nation of Islam," Solomon said. "But we have a Muslim program going. They claim they are a separate religion from Islam, but if they don't want to be a part of it, they don't have to be."

Odinists, whose beliefs are based on an old Norse religion, revere European ancestry.

Incarcerated gang members also try to use the religious freedom issue to hide the real purpose of meetings they hold within state prisons, officials say. A prison gang known as the Mexican Mafia, which officials say runs drugs and orders murders, has asked to hold religious meetings.

Another prison gang, the Self Defense Family, has asked to organize a Moorish Science Temple of America.

"Some of these may be legitimate religions," said Assistant Attorney General Adrian Young. "But they really just want to congregate and conduct gang activity."

An average of about 90 prison lawsuits are filed each month, according to the state attorney general's office.

Young said inmate lawsuits are not broken down into categories, but he estimated that 10 percent of the 2,000 pending cases are filed on First Amendment grounds.

State attorneys said one lawsuit filed by a group of female inmates sought to form a religious organization for witches — the Church of Wicca. But the inmates had asked to keep paraphernalia in their cells that could be considered contraband, including literature that told them how to brew alcoholic beverages, attorneys said.
