CCPC enrollment jumps 20 percent

By DARLENE BIRKES For The News

Latest registration figures for Clarendon College-Pampa Center show a 20 percent increase over the 1999 spring semester, according to Joe Kyle Reeve, dean of CC-Pampa Center.

This means an increase of approximately 46 more students currently enrolled. Enrollment dates for the short term continuing education courses for the spring semester soon will be announced at a later date.

The move into the new academic center at 1607 W. Kentucky is about complete, according to Reeve. The move took about a week with both students and faculty helping. Arrival date for the furniture in the foyer is late February.

Because of furniture delays, the community open house and dedication will be held Sunday afterntoon, March 5.

"Everyone is excited about the new classroom building," said Reeve. "The attitude of the faculty and students is completely changed. They feel more professional, more like attending college."

"It is such an improvement; the difference is unbelievable," said Kim Jeffrey, government and criminal justice teacher. "This looks like a real college and will create opportunity for more students."

Returnee Dennis Boyd said, "So much better than the other."

"I feel better because it is a more professional atmosphere. Most of us are going to college to be professionals, and I felt like I was in grade school at the old building. It gives a new outlook," said The secretarial science lab is not named returnee Marilyn Dworshak.

History teacher Doug Rapstine said, "I love it. It's beautiful. Thanks to everyone who made it possible. It is a realasset to the town."

The new classroom building was recently named the M.K. Brown Academic Center in recognition of the $600,000 donation made to the building fund by the M.K. Brown Foundation. Foundation chairman Bill Waters helped spearhead the fund-raising rally for the new building. Rooms named for donors of $100,000 in donation or in kind include the chemistry lab named for Celanese; the computer lab for Don and Betty Fletcher; multi-media lab for Cabot; and the biology lab for Dr. Ray Hampton and family, donors of the land.

West Texas Landscape and Irrigation of Pampa was low bidder on the landscaping of the new center with the bid of $86,867. This includes grass, a drip system and 121 trees. The trees include pinion pines, red oak, red bud, cedar elm, Bradford pear and youpon holly bushes.

The Las Pampas Koi and Watergarden Society will put in a water garden with book-sculpture fountain at the northeastern side of the academic building. The pond area will be seven feet wide, according to Loyd Waters, PCF board member and Watergarden Society represemative.

Donations and memorials/honorariums can still be made to Pampa Center Foundation, P.O. Box 632, Pampa, TX 79066

City will burn ice storm limbs during February

By KATE B. DICKSON Associate Publisher

Last winter's ice storm is just a memory for most Pampans but to the city's sanitation and landfill departments one big chore looms to get rid of the mounds of limbs that remain.

So, on Sundays next month, Pampans can expect to see plumes of smoke rising into the air from the landfill as several controlled burns will be held, weather permitting, said Rick Stone, sanitation superintendent, and Jim Benton, landfill supervisor.

While the magnitude of these burns will be substantial and smoke may be visible from all over the city, Stone said citizens need not be concerned as the burns will be closely monitored by the Pampa Fire Department.

Stone said a decision was made to burn the limbs because the volume is so large that putting them in the landfill makes no sense, he said. To do so would take up too much expensive landfill space and the labor cost would be excessive. The large volume also makes it impossible for landfill crews to do what they normally do with limbs - grind them into free mulch for citizens to pick up at the landfill, Stone said. Mulch may be had by first checking in at the gatehouse. The Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission has granted the city a permit for the burning, Stone said.

Tons upon tons of limbs were brought to the landfill after the ice storm and Stone recalls how loaded trucks were backed up from the gatehouse "half way to Browning Street."

And it that wasn't enough, Stone said limbs from the storm continue to come into the landfill including some arriving as recently as last week.

"That wasn't the last of them, either," he said. "It you drive down the alleys and look over into people's yards you can still see downed limbs. And there are broken limbs that have never been cut away from trees, too."

Heating oil price rise to get review

WASHINGTON (AP) - Perplexed by the sudden, steep rise in prices, the Energy Department has begun more closely monitoring the heating oil market, Energy Secretary Bill Richardson says.

Richardson also on Wednesday said he was delaying the delivery of 5 million barrels of oil to the Strategic Petroleum Reserve in an attempt to stem oil price increases. He continues to be opposed to releasing any of the 580 million barrels of oil already in the emergency reserve in order to help lower prices.

But many economists doubt that holding off on the oil deliveries will have much impact. The United States consumes about 18 million barrels of oil a day, according to the American Petroleum Institute. Still, said Richardson, "given today's market conditions, it simply makes sense" to postpone the deliveries.

The Clinton administration has been under pressure to act as oil prices have edged close to $30 a barrel from a low of less than $12 a barrel a year ago. Also, heating oil prices have nearly doubled in some parts of the Northeast recently.

In Massachusetts, the average retail price rose to $1.74 per gallon earlier this week, more than double what it was this time last year.

Not so fast: States demand youngest drivers train longer

The insurance institute for Highway Safety found that as a group, 16-year-olds die in car accidents at nearly three times the rate of the general population. Its analysis of 1996 accidents found that 35 of 100,000 16-year-old drivers were killed in accidents. In the general population, 12 drivers died per 100,000.

Hennigan is behind the wheel of the famfly car, Dad right next to her with pointers: A bit of gas now, slow it down here. The 16-year-old is learning more than how to drive. She is learning patience.

Not just patience behind the wheel, but patience to wait for the day she can drive like an adult. Unlike her older brother and sister before her, she has to wait at least six months longer for that right. So do other teen-agers in half the country.

Shaken by high numbers of serious accidents among the youngest drivers, the nation is embracing a new approach to putting teen-agers on the road. The goal:

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) - Annie Slow the transition from back seat to driver's seat, and give teen-agers more time to learn, to mature.

> In half the nation, driving privileges now come in three phases, with each step bringing more responsibility. Only it teenage drivers pass the first two steps without tickets or crashes do they get full privileges

> Now Annie must wait at least six more months. Not much time in the eyes of her father, Bob. But for Annie, who would like to drive teammates to next summer's softball games, it is a huge chunk of high school life.

"It's been -- '16. ... Yeah, I can drive.

Freedom.' But now it's kind of like freedom but not treedom," she says.

In the Republican presidential campaign debate Wednesday night, Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the GOP front-runner, said he would not dip into the strategic oil reserve to reduce oil prices, saying the stockpile is designed to help the nation weather a national emergency. Instead, he said the president must "jawbone" oil producing nations and persuade them to drop prices. Richardson said his department would more

Meanwhile, the president of the American Trucking Associations urged Clinton to withdraw oil already in the government reserve in Texas and Louisiana to counter soaring prices in diesel fuel. Walter McCormick, the ATA's president, said in a letter that diesel fuel, which like heating oil is made from fuel oil distillate, jumped 47 percent the past year, including an increase of 11 cents per gallon last week.

Teen-agers complained of unfairness, so some states allowed flexibility for jobs or late sports practice.

But survivors of crashes, even crashes themselves, made the strongest arguments. Survivors testified in Maryland and Massachusetts. In Wisconsin, a fatal van wreck made headlines in the midst of legislative debate.

"If this bill was law today, these two teen-agers would be alive," the sponsor of Wisconsin's medsure, Rep. Luther Olsen, said after a 16-year-old who just got his license flipped his van near Milwaukee. Put on a fast track, the bill passed last vear.

Steel comes back, but at what cost?

Rescuing an industry by artificial means may not be for the good of all.

During the protests at the World Trade Organization's meeting in Seattle, one of the recurring complaints was that foreign manufacturers were "dumping" their products on American markets, depressing our industries and costing American jobs

So union officials and steelworkers had to be encouraged by a recent report that indicated the U.S. steel industry seems to be making a comeback.

The most recent slump in the industry has been blamed on increased, cheap Asian steel imports as Asian manufacturers tried to recover from economic collapse. Fighting back against imports, industry leaders enlisted the aid of the Department of Commerce "to push imports out of the country," in the words of industry analyst Charles Bradford.

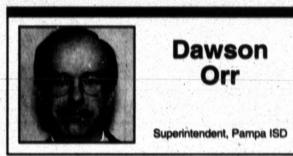

The Clinton administration has filed lawsuits against 30 countries accusing them of selling steel in the U.S. at prices below production costs, known as dumping.

Meanwhile, the report noted that domestic steelmakers are raising prices - no surprise, given government's willingness to buffer the industry from competition. This likely will result in higher costs for making products with steel such as cars and construction equipment. These increased costs will of course be passed along to the consumer as higher prices. In a global marketplace, manufacturers should be able to buy from whichever supplier offers the best price. What difference does it make if that supplier is in another country considering how it helps U.S. consumers? By forcing U.S. automakers to buy higher-priced domestic steel, the government is depressing the automobile market with higher prices. In an attempt to save jobs in the steel industry, the government might be costing automotive jobs. For all the effort to shore up U.S. steel, the jury is still out on whether or not a rebound in the industry will save steelworkers' jobs. The report noted that because of increased automation in steel mills, some companies are considering further cuts in the workforce. The CEO of Birmingham Steel told stockholders recently that he was considering temporary plant closings and layoffs in an attempt to make the company profitable again. The bottom line is increased productivity can lead to job losses. And yet to stay competitive in the global economy companies have to operate as efficiently as possible. Sometimes this means replacing workers with automated processes. The U.S. steel industry employed 81,500 workers in 1998, a number that has been in steady decline since the early 1980s. Perhaps it's time for Americans to discuss if it's a good-idea for the whole economy to prop up a segment of it that might be more efficiently served from abroad.

Few decisions impact the daily routines of a community more than the school calendar. The start of school signals the end of summer activities and the beginning of new daily routines, athletic events, school concerts, homework and a host of related activities.

As superintendent, I am frequently asked why school starts so much earlier than in years gone by. Many adults remember Labor Day as the event that marks the end of summer and are puzzled to find school starting on Aug. 12.

There are numerous reasons that the school calendar has changed over the years, some due to legislative actions and others due to changes in other parts of the educational world. Perhaps the most significant difference is in the length of the school year. Simply stated, students go to school more days than in the past. In 1990, students went to school for 175 days. Since that time, the Texas Legislature, within the broader context of transition into a new school routine than by many reforms to improve student learning, attending school for five consecutive days. has lengthened the school year to 180 days of student instruction. A second factor that influences the start of the school year is the desire of high schools to follow the college model of finishing the fall term before the Christmas break. The secondary division teachers in Pampa ISD have consistently espoused the view that having students finish the term, and their final exams, is a better use of instructional time than returning from Christmas for a period of reteaching and review prior to taking exams. Thus, the desire to finish the fall term prior to the Christmas break, while maintaining a comparable number of days in the fall and spring terms, has also contributed to an earlier start.

Another factor that influences the starting date of the school year in our district is the desire of many teachers of younger children to start school on a Thursday rather than a Monday. They believe that going to school for two days, followed by a weekend, is a better changed due to many factors which have become entwined and are difficult to separate. There is no doubt that the earlier start has impacted family vacations, summer camps, recreational activities, church mission trips and many other events. It is also true that changing to a later start will impact other practices and plans that have become important to others. Balancing all needs, desires and considerations is difficult. Simply stated, some choices are mutually exclusive. For instance, starting in late August and finishing the term before Christmas while enjoying a two week Christmas vacation is impossible.

In January, the school district will begin developing a calendar for presentation to the Board of Trustees for its consideration, deliberation and approval. The district's goal in adopting a calendar will be to provide a supportive time-line for instruction while honoring the diversity of needs among our students, teachers, parents and community.

The district will follow a process that gathers input and recommendations from the various groups of stakeholders in the community.

Written recommendations, suggestions or comments are particularly helpful and may be

In addition, the Board of Trustees will hold a public meeting on Jan. 31 for the purpose of listening to ideas and recommendations regarding this important decision. This meeting will be held at Pampa Middle School Library beginning at 7 p.m.

The last factor I will mention that influences the calendar is the number of holidays included in the calendar. Our district for several years has taken three days at Thanksgiving, two full weeks at Christmas, a week in the spring, and several other days throughout the school year. The Wednesday of Thanksgiving week was born of necessity due to large numbers of students being absent or being checked out by mid-day due to family travel plans. Other holiday periods have simply become what people are used to and expect. In brief summary, the school calendar has

Peace for Israel, Syria costly for U.S.

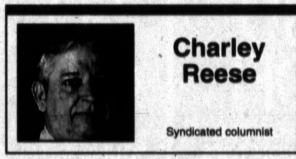

Why should we pay for peace between Israel and Syria?

The Israelis have indicated that, if they sign a peace deal with Syria, they expect the U.S. tax-payers to ante up about $17 billion.

Excuse me? What's in it for us? Frankly, it's no skin off our nose if the Israelis and Syrians don't make peace. Israel invaded Syria and, since 1967, has occupied Syrian territory on the Golan Heights. For that reason, though a ceasefire is in place, the two countries remain in a state of war. It seems to me that it's entirely in the self-interest of the two countries to make peace. But why should U.S. taxpayers pay for American taxpayers paid for the Camp David peace treaty and the Wye River agreement. Altogether, Israel has tapped American taxpayers for amounts approaching $100 bil-lion if you throw in the annual bribe to Egypt that was apparently part of the deal for the Camp David peace treaty. Now Israel has put the United States on notice that peace with Syria will cost at least $17 billion, more money than the U.S. space program gets annually. Don't you think it's about time for the American people to put their representatives and senators on notice that they are not willing to pay for other people's peace treaties? After all, at the end of all of America's wars, no third country ever showed up and said, "Hey, guys, if you make peace, we'll pay you umpteen billions." As I recall, we paid for our own wars and our own peace treaties, and, most of the time, we ended up repairing the country we had whipped. We paid for our own ecurity measures.

I was under the impression that Israel was a sovereign, independent country, but apparently it is a ward of the American taxpayers. Or maybe it's us, the Americans, who are not independent and are under the sovereignty of Israel. After all, Israel seems to have far more influence in Washington than the American people. Try squeezing $100 billion out of the federal treasury for your state and see how far you get. Neither Israel nor the rest of the Middle East has any strategic value for the United States. We even import only a small fraction of our oil imports from the Gulf States. The plain fact is that Israel is a strategic liability. Israel modifies and then sells arms and U.S. military technology in competition with the United States, even selling technology to America's potential enemies, such as China. It spies on the U.S. government and, according to the CIA, commits industrial espionage against American businesses. It blew up American diplomatic facilities in Cairo in a covert scheme to queer U.S. and Egyptian relations. In 1967, it attacked an American Navy ship in international waters, killing 34 and wounding 171. Yet, so powerful is the Israeli lobby's grip on the U.S. Congress that, for 33 years, the pleas of the Navy survivors of that ship for a congres-sional hearing have gone unheeded. In the meantime, these loyal American servicemen have been attacked as "anti-Sematic" simply because they have demanded a public hearing that they are entitled to. As columnist Joe Sobrar recently wrote, in America, you are anti-Sematic not if you hate Jews but if Jews hate you.

But that's not all. The Arab world had no quarrel with the United States until the United States began to one-sidedly support Israel, ever when it was in the wrong. Every American who has died - and those who will die - at the hands of a Middle East terrorist can thank the Israeli lobby for it. I don't think that you will find anywhere in world history where a great power has so surrendered its foreign policy to the lobby of so small a country.

Some day, of course, the American people will wake up to the fact that they have been played for suckers, but that's probably several billions of dollars and several hundreds of American lives down the roads

Students see teacher Steve,Porter everyday in the halls singing and dancing, but that is not all there is to him.

Porter, a government and social sciences teacher, obtained his initial desire for a career in education during his elementary school days.

It was at Alamo Elementary School where Porter met one of his favorite teachers, Mrs. Pile, who taught him how to read.

"I wanted to know how to read because I would look at books with pictures," said Porter, "but could not read the captions." Another influential person was Ruth Hart, who taught him in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades in a little country school.

"She was a great musician. Every once in a while she would stop teaching and she would go over to the piano and start playing. We would gather around and we would sing," said Porter.

He thought she was the greatest teacher he ever had.

Porter said that all of his greatest heroes have been teachers.

"That's why I have a guitar in my classroom. When it gets boring in class I pullout my guitar and I sing my students a song," Porter said. Although he has fond memories of school, Porter said he never stayed in one place too long because his father's job caused them to move around often.

He went to school in Paducah, Delwin, and Gutherie while eventually moving back to Paducah where he attended high school.

While at Paducah High, he was a baseball player and went on to play while attending South Plains Jr. College in Leveland.

"So I guess I teach them how to be successful in this world we live in."

After he graduated from South Plains, he went to West Texas State in Canyon where he graduated in 1970.

Soon after his school career ended, he was drafted. He went to California for six months of training. Then he came home on leave in Nov. of 1970 and got married to Martha Paris.

She went along with him to Ethiopia where they stayed for over a year.

The two came back to Pampa in 1972,

Steve Porter takes a breaks to share a song with students Linsey Hancock and C.J. Frazier and Porter was interviewed for a teaching and coaching job in the fall.

He was hired on at Pampa's Robert E. Lee Junior High and taught there until 1985 before coming to the high school.

Porter said he likes teaching because he loves kids and they are fun to be around.

He said he seeks to teach his students that they can do all things and accomplish anything if they put out an effort.

"So I guess I teach them how to be successful in this world we live in. It's a tough and demanding world," Porter said. Porter has two children – a son, John, who is studying to be a nurse, and a daughter, Stephanie, who works for Devry University in Arlington. tor

She is not afraid to say what she thinks. That is what makes tenth grader Rhianna Anglin unique.

Sixteen-year-old Rhianna said that when she graduates from high school she wants to attend college at the University of Texas or Boston University.

Once finished with college she plans on being an actress, and a musician (guitarist).

Rhianna decided to become an actress, she said, after going to New York and seeing Broadway plays and musicals.

Rhianna has even had some embarrassing moments in her acting skits, she said.

She once during a production came out at the wrong time and caused curricular activities like Speech and Debate and TAFE (Texas Association of Future Educators.) and former Drama teacher Mr. Dean Birkes because, "they have all taught me important lessons in life," said Anglin.

influenced her the most include her parents

Not only does she like those activities but she also likes to go to the movies and ride around with her friends.

Even though Rhianna is unique, if given the chance to change something about herself, she would change her hair color, she wouldn't have braces, and her eyes would be a different color.

Changing herself is not the only thing Rhianna would do. Pampa High School would see some changes if left up to this sophomore.

"Everybody should be accepted for, their differences and not judged by them." said Angin.

Two roofing companies in Pampa have joined together to ensure the happiness of a special group of students. Ronnie Parsley approached his lifelong friend, Bob Crawford, about matching funds to donate to the Senior Development Class at Pampa High School. Crawford and his friend, Ronnie Parsley, each donated $600 to the class fund. The money will be used to fund a banquet later this year honoring teachers, peer tutors and businesses who provide job training for senior development students.

Daughter Is Grateful She Shared Words of Love With Her Dad

DEAR ABBY: Over the years you have printed many letters about the importance of telling the people you care about that you love them

About four years ago, I took heed. When talking to my dad, with whom I was very close, I closed with, "I love you, Daddy." He seemed surprised, and then responded, "I love you, too, honey." From then on, every time I ended a conversation with my dad, we had the same exchange.

My dad went to sleep in his home last Nov. 26 and didn't wake up. I want you to know how grateful I am that you woke me up. You have no idea how comforting it is to know the last words we said to each other were those of love. Thank you, Abby, for waking me up before it was too late.

BONNIE BARNETT, IRVING, TEXAS

DEAR BONNIE: Please accept my deepest sympathy for the loss of your beloved father. I may have given you the mes-sage, but you had to be receptive and ready to hear it and take action.

It takes only a moment to say, "I love you," or to express appreciation. And as important as the spoken word is, the written word can be enjoyed over and over again. Read on:

Two weeks later the contractor died of a heart attack. I spoke to his widow at the funeral. She told me her husband actually cried when he got my son's letter. He had done dozens of small jobs gratis at the church and was usually thanked with a word - but that was the only time he ever got a letter of thanks.

SCRANTON, Penn (AP) Don Budge, who swept all four major tennis tournaments in 1938 to become the sport's first "Grand Slam" winner, died Wednesday of cardiac arrest. He was 84. He died at Mercy Hospital in Scranton, Pa., hospital spokeswoman Mary Leone said.

Budge was injured in a car accident in northeastern Pennsylvania on Dec. 14 when 'he lost control and drove off the road. He was hospitalized Poughkeepsie, N.Y., until Jan. 8, when he was transferred to a nursing facility near his home in Dingmans Ferry. Budge was taken to Mercy Hospital on Jan. 17. Budge had a complete game built around a whiplash backhand, which still is considered the best acked up strong serve with power and accuracy off the ground and volleyed effectively. He was inducted into the Tennis Hall of Fame in 1964, and selected one of Tennis Magazine's 20 greatest players of the 20th century. During Centre Court cere-monies at Wimbledon in 1998, Budge was introduced as "the tall redheaded Californian with the greatest backhand ever." His mark on the game, in fact, was much greater. "I consider him the finest player 365 days a year who ever lived," tennis great Bill Tilden once said. Born June 13, 1915, in Oakland, Calif., John Donald Budge was a superb athlete who played all popular team sports, including baseball and basketball. When he was 13, his brother Lloyd, who played on the ten-nis team at the University of California, persuaded Don to take tennis seriously. Nine years later, Budge beat Germany's Baron Gottfried Von Cramm in what is considered to be one of the best Davis Cup matches ever. That same year, 1937, Budge won both Wimbledon and the U.S. Championships. In 1938, he became the first player to onships of Australia, France and the United States.

might be coming tonight. Super Bowl Week in Atlanta has featured shivering players, com-plaining coaches, icy winds and heat blowers on the practice field. If the weather forecasters are right, a snowstorm might be in the offing, too. Did anyone say Iditarod?

"It's disappointing that you can be in a situation where you are preparing for the biggest game of the year that you don't have ideal situations," Rams coach Dick Vermeil said on a blustery Wednesday morning, when the wind-chill factor hit minus-8. "But that is how it is and we will handle

Later in the day, after practicing outside at the Falcons' training complex, Vermeil wasn't any more thrilled about the conditions.

"It's ridiculous," Vermeil said. "But there's nothing you can do about it except try to survive."

St. Louis practiced in winter jackets, gloves, thermal underwear, wool caps and thermal neck and face warmers. Equipment manager Todd Hewitt rented six heat blowers, stationing them at the end of the practice field. Between drills, most players hud-dled around the blowers like moths drawn to light.

The Titans wish they had the same opportunity at the morning-media session. Held in a tent outside their luxury hotel - the Titans already had occupied the indoor banquet facilities, making them unusable — the players froze due to an inadequate heating system.

ATLANTA (AP) - All that was sweatshirt as he tried to keep icicles from forming on him.

"T'm freezing," Jones said. "They've got me over here by the door, actually a slit in the tent. They need to have some rookies over here. The Rams are inside? See, we're the stepchild, we get no love."

The Titans will get more attention and some relief, the NFL promised. A dozen more heaters were to be employed this morn-ing, when the temperatures weren't expected to climb significantly.

"I got a cold Tuesday," said Titans GM Floyd Reese. "Our guys will have pneumonia by the time it's all over with.

"We'll get it fixed. This is just another one of those bumps in the road. We just keep trucking." There won't be much trucking in the area if it snows; Atlanta was practically incapacitated by an ice storm last weekend.

So why not just move everything into the Georgia Dome, site Sunday's championship game?

Well, there's a little matter of spectacle over sport.

Vermeil wanted to practice inside, and the Dome is the only such facility in the area. But he was informed by the league that it wasn't a possibility before Friday for the Rams or the Titans, who are working out at Georgia Tech.

"All they told us," he said, "is there's 2,000 people decorating the dance floor."

This is not the first time the Super Bowl hasn't had super weather. Of course, most of the other instances occurred in places such as Pontiac, Mich., and Minneapolis.

Jr. VB camp starts today

PAMPA — The Pampa Junior Volleyball 2000 Camp under the direction of Lady Harvesters head coach Carmen Pennick starts today at the IMPACT Building on the PHS campus.

Registration will be held today at the IMPACT Building (located on the west side of Harvester Stadium) and the cost is $35. The camp runs through March 9.

Checks should be made out to Pampa ISD. A parent must be present to register their child and sign a parental consent. Thirdfourth graders register at 6 p.m.; Fifth-sixth graders register at 7:30 p.m.

Coach Pennick can be contacted at 669-4830 for more information.

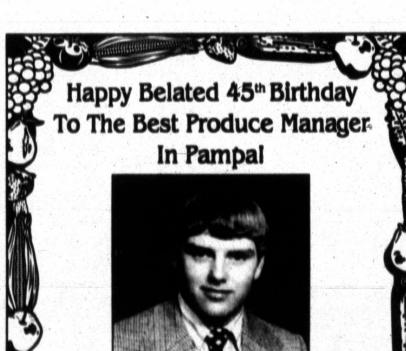

NIONS CALL HALLAN DRESSING

By halftime, the Pampa team was ahead by 14 points. Despite excellent shooting by the Alamo Catholic team in the second half, the rebounds and steals by the Pacers kept their lead unchallenge, giving them another victory.

Erin Raber and Kendra Raber did the most damage for the Lady Pacers.

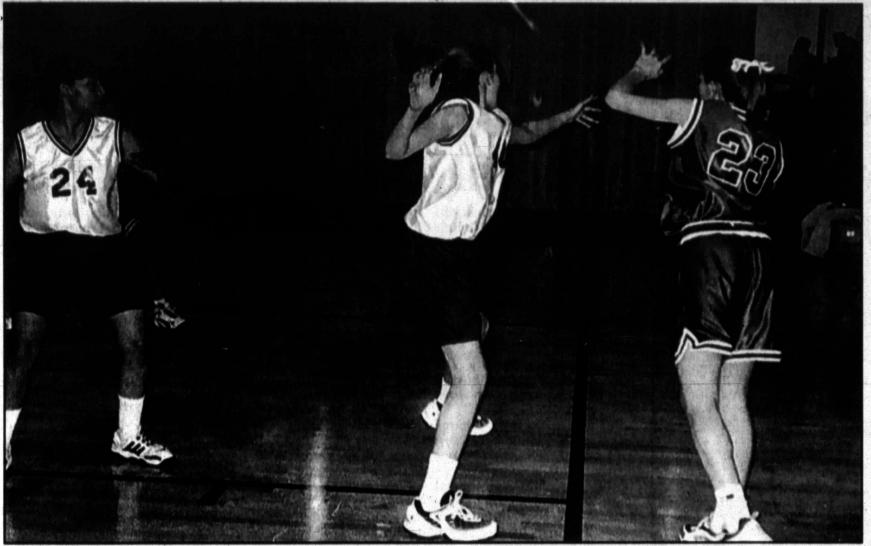

Erin Raber led the Pacer scoring and rebounding with 25 points and 20 rebounds. Kendra Raber was close behind with 20 points and 5 steals. Kellie Mullican had 6 points, Rainy Hopson 4, Shay Chapman 2 and Heather Parry

The Lady Harvesters conclude their regular-season play in Hereford and Plainview before advancing to post-season tournaments.

Campo becomes next Cowboys' head coach

IRVING, Texas (AP) - For 11 years, Dave Campo has had an up-close view of what it's like to be head coach of the Dallas Cowboys.

Now, it's his turn to feel the heat.

Campo became the fourth person in eight years to hold one of the most high-profile jobs in pro sports when Cowboys owner Jerry Jones promoted him Wednesday from defensive coordinator.

His insider's perspective is that things aren't as bad as last season's 8-8 record suggests.

"We have in place some out-standing football players," Campo said. "I just think we need to get refocused on what it takes to win, the discipline and the attitude needed to be successful.

"In my mind, this football team has a nucleus of players that with a little tweaking here is going to give us a chance to be successful.

"My top priority is to restore the championship attitude. We didn't get it done this year. We have to look at the entire team and take it from there."

Campo arrived in Dallas in 1989 as part of the crew Jimmy Johnson brought with him from the University of Miami after Jones bought the team and hired his old college teammate to be head coach.

Campo was in charge of the secondary for six seasons, then Barry Switzer promoted him to defensive coordinator in 1995. He held that job through the C4-36 hours and had a very detailed plan of how he would run the team," Jones said. "I knew we were on the same page." "When I went to Jerry," Campo said, "I wanted to make sure he had a pretty good idea what I was all about. We discussed a number of things, but the biggest thing was that I felt I had a working knowledge of this team."

Campo, 52, is the first of the five coaches in Cowboys history to come from within the staff. Like his predecessors, he came with no NFL head-coaching experience.

Campo — whose small size, glasses and graying blonde hair make him look more like a college professor than a coach hasn't been a head coach at any level. He was an assistant at 11 colleges over 18 years before joining the Cowboys. At first, he used to be a bit short-tempered with players, but he's refined that over the years. Yet there's still the chance his fuse will blow — just enough to keep guys on edge. "He may only be 5-6 or 5-7, but he really gets after guys," safety Darren Woodson said.

Now Campo has a five-year contract worth $800,000 to $1 million per season. That's the same length Gailey got, but for more money.

Although Campo has never coached on offense, he believes he knows enough about it from all the years he's spent studying how to stop it.

"I want to attack," Campo said. "That's my philosophy. I want to be aggressive. I want to go after the jugular vein as many times as possible."

That's exactly what quarterback Troy Aikman wanted to hear.

"We proved you can run the football pretty good and not score points and not win games," Aikman said. "You've got to be able to make big plays to score points and win games."

Campo could have new coordinators on offense and defense as soon as today.

New England quarterbacks coach Jack Reilly, who had the same job in Dallas in 1997, is the front-runner to lead the offense. He's expected to bring back the system Dallas used during its championship years.

The top candidate for the defensive job is secondary coach Mike Zimmer.

The 6-4, 3-6, 6-7 (0), 7-6 (5), 6-1 victory sent Agassi into the Australian Open title match against the winner of Friday's semifinal between defending champion Yevgeny Kafelnikov and No. 12 Magnus Norman.

Sampras, serving at up to 129 mph, hit 37 aces and played a perfect tiebreaker in the third set, but Agassi bounced back with pesky returns and winners crosscourt, down the line or into Sampras' body.

Agassi is the first player since Rod Laver in 1969 to reach four consecutive Grand Slam finals. He won the French and U.S. Opens last year, in between losing the Wimbledon final to Sampras, whom he replaced later as No. 1.

Sampras, who skipped the because of fatigue and missed and ended the 2-hour, 47-minute the U.S. Open with a back injury, match with a serve that Sampras

I let it slip away in the tiebreaker and I just got a little down on myself," Sampras said.

Agassi broke back for 4-4 with a serve return that skipped off the net cord, forcing Sampras to volley wide.

On his first set point, Agassi pounced on a short volley by Sampras for a forehand winner.

He followed up by breaking Sampras in the second game of the final set with a forehand serve return down the line, and gained one more break in the sixth game with a backhand cross-court pass.

Serving for the match, Agassi saved one break point when Australian Open last year Sampras hit a backhand long,

"You only ever get a couple of chances against Pete. I let a few opportunities slip by in the second set. He let a few go by in the fourth," he said. "In the fifth, I played well at the right time."

In the 7-0 third-set tiebreaker, Agassi added, "I was a spectator."

Both players said the cold, windy conditions made it hard to play good tennis. "It was an emotional match,"

Sampras said. "In the span of five minutes, the whole match changed."

He smiled when asked about the end of his perfect record in five-setters at the Australian.

"I was doomed," he said. "I'm disappointed but I'm not-walking out of here with my final.

"It took me a set to figure out how I was going to deal with (the injury)," he said, but the cause of losing was that "he outplayed me.

The women's semifinals were where Lindsay Davenport stopped cheering for Jennifer Capriati's comeback.

With her reputation and a place in the Australian Open final on the line, Davenport overcame Capriati's late rally and beat her in a tense tiebreaker.

Davenport's 6-2, 7-6 (4) victory sent her into the championship match against Martina Hingis, who has won 27 consecutive matches here on her way to three titles and a place in this year's

The win breaks Baylor's 22game Big 12 losing streak that dates back two seasons.

Baylor first-year coach Dave Bliss said the key for the Bears was capitalizing on turnovers. Baylor scored 15 points off 16 Tech turnovers.

"This is a great win for us because we don't get a lot of them," Bliss said. "We talked at halftime about knowing they would make a run in the second half. We were able to weather that run and build ourselves another cushion."

Texas Tech, the only Big 12 team without a basket during one stretch of the second half.

Tech coach James Dickey, who fell to 11-7 against Baylor, said he thought his team's play was flat at time

"I thought we missed some easy shots," Dickey said. "I thought they did a nice job of ball movement and we were slow to react."

Baylor, meanwhile, made nine of 22 3-pointers. Travis Stukes, who finished with 15 points, hit three of four shots from outside the 3-point arc in the second half.

The Bears also received doubledigit scoring from Terry Black with 14 points and Jamie Kendrick with 10.

Brodney Kennard led the Red Raiders with 15 points, while James Ware added 12.

Stars' Belfour stops 36 shots in win over Kings

DALLAS (AP) - Though Ed Belfour says that he'll welcome the nation for his team's domination of rest during the All-Star break, he Belfour said after stopping 36 shots Wednesday night in the Dallas Stars' 3-1 victory over the Los Angeles Kings, his fourth straight win since the All-Star teams were announced.

"But the rest will be something to take advantage of. I've been to All-Star games before."

The Stars set a franchise record by stretching their unbeaten string to 22 games (16-0-6) against the Kings, dating back to April 6, 1995." "I felt real focused," Belfour said after improving his record to 20-13-4 this season. "I like playing in games where I see a lot of shots. I want to play in games like that, where I have to make every save I can. Sometimes it's easier when the shots come one after the other."

Belfour had little margin for error as the Stars were outshot 37-18

"Eddie kept us in the game and let us win," said Stars defenseman Darryl Sydor, who had two assists. "We got outworked quite a bit but we'll take the two points."

The previous franchise record was 21 games (17-0-4), by the Minnesota North Stars against the Kings from 1970-73,

Belfour had no plausible explathe Kings, which include victories also feels snubbed for being left off the North American team. "I like to prove people wrong," in all four matchups this season. "The stars must be lined up right or something," Belfour said. "It's just something that's worked out for us."

"We're going to keep working hard against them until we beat them," Kings coach Andy Murray said. "I don't think they had but four or five scoring chances. But they're the defending champs. They find a way to win.

The difference, the Kings agreed, was Belfour, who survived an 18shot barrage in third period.

"I don't think we could have played a better game," Kings left wing Luc Robitaille said. "If we play like that, we could score seven or eight goals tomorrow. But Belfour was in the zone."

Sergei Zubov scored the tiebreaking goal on a power play early in the second period. Zubov's slap shot from the right point beat goalie Jamie Storr.

Mike Modano had a goal and two assists, and Brett Hull added an empty-net goal with 14.1 sec-onds left for the injury-plagued Stars. Dallas was missing several of its top players, including defenseman Derian Hatcher, center Joe Nieuwendyk and left wing Jere Lehtinen.

"We're missing a lot of guys, but we're finding ways to win," Modano said. "It may be ugly, but it's points on the board.'

The Stars' penalty killers kept the Kings scoreless in six powerplay chances as Dallas improved to 9-3 in its last 12 games.

The Stars took a 1-0 lead at 11:10 of the first period on Modano's 19th goal of the season, one second after the Kings killed a power play

The Kings tied it at 18:24 of the opening period when Craig Johnson scored his sixth of the season.

McLean slips by Samnorwood

McLEAN - McLean slipped by Samnorwood 46-44 Tuesday night in a District 9-1A basketball game.

Brett Montgomery led the Tigers with 20 points, followed by Chris Hauck with 12.

Bill Waters had 19 points and Luke Carter 13 to lead Samnorwood.

The Tigers are now 3-2 in district play and 8-9 for the season. Samnorwood won over McLean 54-47 in the girls game.

Candice Brewer was high scorer for Samnorwood with 15 points.

Amanda Cline had 20 points for McLean. Annie Weaver followed with 10.

Tralee Crisis Center wishes to thank ALL of the community members who recognized a need and responded with the gift of sharing. To the individuals, businesses, schools, organizations and churches that responded, you are too numerous to list individually. However, due to your generosity and your assistance, a total of 82 women and children were provided with food, clothing, toys and holiday wishes during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday seasons.

Each day of the year, the organization realizes more and more that this is a community where people truly understand the meaning of giving. Caring about one another, spreading holiday cheer and graciously considering others less fortunate is what the spirit is all about. Chapter CS, P.E.O. Sisterhood of Pampa recently announced Jo Doyle of Pampa was awarded a grant scholarship from International Office of the P.E.O. Program for Continuing Education. Doyle, left, was presented the scholarship by P.E.O. member Linda Holt. Doyle holds an associate degree of arts from Clarendon College-Pampa Center and plans to use the scholarship to pursue a bachelor of science degree in social work at West Texas A&M University. Doyle is currently a part-time counselor in life skills for both adult and juvenile groups.
