EMPLOYMENT TO BE BASED ON ONE MONTH

May Be Continued If Minor Illness Is Prevalent

ENROLLMENT IS GROWING FAST

Completion of Addition to Central High Imperative

The school board authorized the hiring of a school nurse for a one-month term at a meeting yesterday afternoon.

The nurse will be engaged immediately as numerous cases of whooping cough and other illnesses have been reported.

Continuation of the service of the nurse will be discussed at the end of the month's term.

On account of absences the meeting was adjourned until this afternoon, when further business will be discussed before the football game.

Supt. R. C. Campbell reports the enrollment of 20 new pupils in the Baker school, 24 pupils in the Lamar school, and one additional pupil in the Central high school.

He reports that all available rooms have been occupied, but that the new addition of twelve rooms to the high school building will be completed within the next two months.

At the rate of increase, the cottages will still be needed.

Goes On Talking

Bishop Barris of Birmingham was just beginning a sermon on creation the other day in St. Paul's cathedral, London, when a band of men, led by a minister, marched in the front of the cathedral and demanded that he be cast out of the church for upholding Darwin's theory. After the protest the men marched out and the bishop shown above went on with his sermon, in which he affirmed his belief in evolution.

Local Boy Takes Part in Fraternity Contest at O. U.

(Special to The News.) NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 21—Alfred Gilliland of Pampa won much approval in a recently staged pugilistic contest directed by the inter-fraternity council at the University of Oklahoma. He was chosen to compete among the representatives of 23 fraternities in a "free-for-all" battle royal.

Gilliland weighed in at 140, while some were as heavy as 164 pounds. One by one, contestants were eliminated, until only two remained, one of whom was the Pampa youth. Although he was eliminated finally on a fluke push, he received many compliments for his gameness.

He is a pledge to Lambda Chi Alpha, national social fraternity.

Boy Scouts Find Alleys and Many Homes and Residences In Need of Further Cleaning

Only 40 percent of the business houses and residences of the city were given a clean bill by the Boy Scouts in their fire prevention campaign last Saturday. More than 1,000 reports were turned in to the Rev. Tom Brabham after the survey.

In going over the reports, it was noticed that the alleys of the city are in a deplorable condition, not only being strewn with rubbish, but being a menace to the health of residents of the city. The Scouts will ask the city council to take up the matter immediately as the longer the condition lasts the greater menace it is to the city.

During the drive not only business houses and residences were inspected but the vacant lots in the city. The residential sections of the city were in much better condition than the business section.

In appreciation of the assistance rendered by the Scouts, local merchants subscribed enough money to pay for the banners used in the parade, and to purchase a loving cup to be presented to the Scout troop by Mayor F. P. Reid within the next two weeks.

The following merchants and individuals contributed to the Fire Prevention Week fund:

F. P. Kees, Mitchell's, Gordon Stores company, People's store, Diamond C Dry Goods company, C. B. Barnard Dry Goods company, Kraft's Mint, C. & C. Mercantile company, Woodward-Lane grocery, Kees & Thomas, Crystal Palace confectionary, Cross Dry Goods company, Hayter Bros. store, Russell Jewelry, L. T. Hill company, J. S. Wynne, Wade's store, C. T. Hunkapillar, M-System store, C. V. Gott, E. S. Graves, Morris Drug store, John Roby, Panhandle Lumber company, J. E. Murfee company, Biggs Horn company, W. W. Henry, Central Market & Grocery, B. & C. cafe, Walter Coffee, Bonney's cafe, H. & K. Drug store, O. T. Smith.

W. C. Montgomery was chairman of committees for the week, and the merchants' committee was composed of A. A. Gordon, W. C. Mitchell, and J. E. Murfee.

W. A. Taylor, local representative of the association, was chairman of the meeting. An interesting address by H. G. Decker manager for Texas showed that in Pampa alone the association has placed between $50,000 and $70,000. He requested citizens of Pampa to take 1,000 shares.

Claim of Fall Refuted Regarding Oil Drainage

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Oct. 21—Through geologists, the government's oil counsel endeavored today in the district of Columbia Supreme Court to disprove the contention of the defense that the compelling motive of Albert Fall in leasing the Teapot Dome to Harry Sinclair was the danger of drainage by adjacent wells.

George Smith, director of the Geological Survey, testified that in the latter part of 1921, six months before the lease was executed by the former secretary of the interior, he sent a geologist to the reserve, who reported the situation as to possible drainage to have been unchanged since the date of the executive order establishing the Wyoming naval oil reserve.

L. E. Patton, fireman, and an unidentified Mexican apparently riding under the baggage car, were killed. A. J. Steele, a passenger, and J. W. Gorman, the engineer, were badly hurt.

Concrete Work on Methodist Church To Start Monday

The excavation work of the basement of the First Methodist church was completed today and is ready for the concrete. The forms will be set the latter part of this week, and it is hoped that the contractors will commence running the concrete Monday.

As soon as the basement for the new part of the church has been completed, work on the erection of the body of the church will commence and be rushed while the weather is suitable.

A week from Sunday is the close of the most successful in its history. During the past year 175 members have been received into the church and the financial standing of the church is at its highest.

The total offerings and donations for the year total $16,773.98, which does not include all the funds for the erection of the new church. The pastor is sure that this report will lead the conference, which convenes in two weeks.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Suspicion attaches in turn to Miss St. Clair, Pfyfe and Leacock. Vance eliminates Miss St. Clair, and when Pfyfe's testimony tends to exonerate Leacock, Markham is about to arrest the latter when Vance intervenes. Major Benson brings Miss Hoffman to Markham's office.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIII

The girl raised her head prettily, and related her story in a capable, well-modulated voice.

"About a week ago—I think it was Wednesday—Mr. Pfyfe called on Mr. Alvin Benson in his private office. I was in the next room, where my typewriter is located.

"There's only a glass partition between the two rooms, and when anyone talks loudly in Mr. Benson's office I can hear them. In about five minutes Mr. Pfyfe and Mr. Benson began to quarrel. I thought it was funny, for they were such good friends; but I didn't pay much attention to it, and went on with my typing.

"Their voices got very loud, though, and I caught several words. Major Benson asked me this morning what the words were; so I suppose you want to know, too. Well, they kept referring to a note; and once or twice a check was mentioned. Several times I caught the word 'father-in-law', 'nothing doing.'

"Then Mr. Benson called me in private drawer in the safe. I got it marked 'Pfyfe-Personal' out of his private drawer in the safe. I got it for him, but right after that our bookkeeper wanted me for something, so I didn't hear any more.

"About 15 minutes later, when Mr. Pfyfe had gone, Mr. Benson called me to put the envelope back. And he told me that if Mr. Pfyfe ever called again, I wasn't under any circumstances, to let him into the private office unless he himself was there. He also told me that I wasn't to give the envelope to anybody—not even on a written order. . . . And that is all, Mr. Markham."

During her recital I had been as much interested in Vance's actions as in what she had been saying.

When first she had entered the room, his casual glance had quickly changed to one of attentive animation, and he had studied her closely. When Markham had placed the chair for her, he had risen and reached for a book lying on the table near her; and, in doing so, he had leaned unnecessarily close to her in order to inspect—or so it appeared to me—the side of her head. And during her story he had continued his observation, at times bending slightly to the right or left his view of her.

Unaccountable as his actions had seemed, I knew that some serious consideration had prompted the scrutiny.

When she finished speaking Major Benson reached in his pocket, and tossed a long manilla envelope on the desk before Markham.

"Here it is," he said. "I got Miss Hoffman to bring it to me the moment she told me her story."

Markham picked it up hesitatingly, as if doubtful of his right to inspect its contents.

"You'd better look at it," the Major advised. "That envelope may very possibly have an important bearing on the case."

Markham removed the elastic band, and spread the contents of the envelope before him. They consisted of three items—a cancelled check for $10,000 made out to Leander Pfyfe and signed by Alvin Benson; a note for $10,000 to Alvin Benson signed by Pfyfe, and a brief confession, also signed by Pfyfe, saying the check was a forgery.

The check was dated March 20th of the current year. The confession and the note were dated two days later. The note—which was for 90 days—fell due on Friday, June 21st, only three days off.

For fully five minutes Markham studied these documents in silence. Their sudden introduction into the case seemed to mystify him. Nor had any of the perplexity left his face when he finally put them back in the envelope.

He questioned the girl carefully, and had her repeat certain parts of her story. But nothing more could be learned from her; and at length he turned to the major.

"I'll keep this envelope a while, if you'll let me. I don't see its significance at present, but I'd like to think it over."

When Major Benson and his secretary had gone, Vance rose and extended his legs.

"A la fin!" he murmured. "All things journey; sun and moon, morning, noon, and afternoon, night and all her stars. Videlicet: we begin to make progress."

"What the devil are you driving at?" The new complication of Pfyfe's peccadilloes had left Markham irritable.

"Int'restin' young woman, this Miss Hoffman—eh, what?" Vance rejoined irrelevantly.

"Didn't care especially for the deceased Benson. And she fairly detests the aromatic Leander. He has probably told her he was misunderstood by Mrs. Pfyfe, and invited her to dinner."

"Well, she's pretty enough," commented Markham indifferently. "Benson, too, may have made advances—which is why she disliked him."

"Oh, absolutely," Vance mused a moment. "Pretty—yes; but misleadin'. She's an ambitious gal, and capable, too—knows her business. She's no ball of snuff. She has a solid, honest streak in her—a bit of Teutonic blood, I'd say."

He paused meditatively. "I knew, Markham, I have a suspicion you'll hear from little Miss Katinka again."

"Crystal-gazing, eh?" mumbled Markham.

"Oh, dear no!" Vance was looking lazily out of the window. "But I did enter the silence, so to speak, and indulged in a bit of cranio-logical contemplation."

"I thought I noticed you ogling the girl," said Markham. "But since her hair was bobbed and she had her hat on, how could you analyze the bumps?—if that's the phrase you phrenologists use."

"Forget not Goldsmith's preacher," Vance admonished. "Truth from his lips prevailed, and those who came to scoff remained at cetera. . . . To begin with, I'm no phrenologist. But I believe in epochal, racial, and heredity variations in skulls. In that respect I'm merely an old-fashioned Darwinian."

"Every child knows that the skull of the Pittdown man differs from that of the Cromagnard; and even a lawyer could distinguish an Aryan head from a Ural-Altai head, or a Maylaic from a Negroillo. And if one is versed at all in the Mendelian theory, hereditary cranial similarities can be detected."

"But all this erudition is beyond you think Pfyfe guilty—is that despite the young woman's hat and hair. I could see the contour of her head and the bone structure in her face; and I even caught a glimpse of her ear."

"And thereby deduced that we'd hear from her again," added Markham scornfully.

"Indirectly—yes," admitted Vance. Then, after a pause; "I say, in view of Miss Hoffman's revelation, do not Colonel Ostrander's comments of yesterday begin to take on a phosphorescent aspect?"

"Look here!" said Markham impatiently. "Cut out these circumlocutions, and get to the point."

Vance turned slowly from the window, and regarded him pensively.

"Markham—I put the question academically—doesn't Pfyfe's forged check, with its accompanying confession and its shortly-due note, constitute a rather strong motive for doing away with Benson?"

Markham sat up suddenly.

"You thing Pfyfe guilty—is that it?"

"Well, here's the touchin' situation: Pfyfe obviously signed Benson's name on a check, told him about it, and got the surprise of his life when his dear old pal asked him for a 90-day note to cover the amount, and also for a written confession to hold over him to insure payment."

"Now consider the subsequent facts:—first, Pfyfe called on Benson a week ago and had a quarrel in which the check was mentioned—Damon was probably pleading with Pfyfe to extend the note, and was vulgarly informed that there was 'nothing doing'."

"Secondly, Benson was shot two days later, less than a week before the note fell due."

"Thirdly, Pfyfe was at Benson's house the hour of the shooting, and not only lied to you about his whereabouts, but bribed a garage owner to keep silent about his car."

"Fourthly, his explanation, when caught of his unwarded search for Haig and Haig was, to say the least, a bit thick. And don't forget that the original tale of his lonely quest for nature's solitudes in the Catskills—with his mysterious stopover in New York to confer a farewell benediction upon some anonymous person—was not all that one could have hoped for in the lone of plain-ability."

"Fifthly, he is an impulsive gambler, given to taking chances; and his experiences in South Africa would certainly have familiarized him with fire-arms."

"Sixthly, he was rather eager to involve Leacock, and did a bit of caddish tale-bearing to that end, even informing you that he saw the Captain on the spot at the fatal moment."

"Seventhly—but why bore you? Have I not supplied you with all the factors you hold so dear,—what are they now?—motive, time, place, opportunity, conduct? All that's wanting is the criminal agent. But then, the Captain's gun is at the bottom of the East River; so you're not very much better off in his case, what?"

Marriages Are Rare With Oxford Women

OXFORD, Eng. —No man loves a woman who understands him too well, and more tragedies arise between those who have not received the higher training, believes Mrs. E. G. R. Taylor, lecturer in geography at University College, London.

Mrs. Taylor stated her beliefs following the disclosure by the Oxford Union Year Book that marriage among its women is rare, only one "Educated women do not marry," says Mrs. Taylor, "because they are too good for men. Men are afraid of women with university training. As soon as you educate a woman to expect something more out of life than marriage, home and children, she is not willing to undertake marriage readily."

"In my young days men looked on intellectual women with horror. I was always introduced at parties as being 'frightfully clever' and the result was that no young man would dance or talk to me."

Men students of the University, however, have offered other 'undergraduate,' as the girl student is known at the University, stresses frostily, knows nothing of makeup and thinks more of the inside of her head than the outside of her body.

The Oxford Union year book prints the names of women students who have been members of the University in the last septette of years, and intersperses in italics the names of those who have married. At Oxford the woman student is known as an 'undergraduate.'

SUN DOES NOT STERILIZE DRYING WASH, SAYS EXPERT

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO.—The prejudice in favor of hanging clothes on the sun is fast disappearing, believes Charles A. Luther of the People's Gas Light and Coke Company, expressed in an address today.

"Housewives have been misled by a false idea handed down through ages that the sun's rays have a beneficial effect on clothes," he explained. "Scientifically, this is not correct. The sun heats the air which circulates through the clothes. Moisture is absorbed more rapidly, the clothes dry in less time and are whiter because rapid absorption of moisture is what bleaches the clothes and not the rays of the sun. Furthermore, heat from the sun is not sufficient to destroy germs."

The domestic clothes dryer, he said, does what the sun and wind do. The heat generated by the dryer is such that the clothes which are removed as soon as dried are 75 per cent sterilized and if left in the dryer ten to twenty minutes after being dried, one hundred per cent sterilization is secured.

Stars of Professional Golf Are Out to Seek Title Honor at Dallas

Walter Hagen (left) will defend the United States Professional Golfers' association championship, which he has won four times, against an array of stellar players at Dallas, Texas, October 31 to November 5. Foremost among the opposition is Harry Cooper (upper right), a former Dallas lad who has been away from "home" a comparatively short while. Other dangerous contenders include Tommy Armour (center), national open champion, and Gene Sarazen (lower right).

DALLAS, Tex.—Links stars from coast to coast are included among those who have qualified for the Professional Golfers' Association national championship tournament over the course of the Cedar Crest Country Club near Dallas, October 31 to November 5.

Among those who have made the grade for Dallas are Tommy Armour of the Congressional club, Washington, D. C., the national open champion; Johnny Farrell of Quaker Ridge, holder of half a dozen titles; Harry Cooper of Los Angeles and Charles Guest of Hollywood, Southern California leaders; Gene Sarazen of Fresh Meadow, Jack Hutchinson of Glenview, Bill Melhorn of New York, Bobby Cruikshank of the Progress Club, Willie Ogg of Worcester, Harry Hampton of Memphis and Neil Christian of Portland, Ore.

The name of Walter Hagen, the defending P. G. A. champion, does not appear on this list, since it was not necessary for him to qualify. Those who go to Cedar Crest will engage in another stroke competition to determine the 32 to enter the first match round.

Hagen, four times winner, is expected to receive his stiffest competition from Cooper. "Lighthorse Harry," who was runner-up in the National Open this year, will be at home.

The local course is familiar ground for Cooper, who formerly lived in Dallas. And in an exhibition match last spring Cooper gave Hagen one of the worst beatings of his golfing career.

Among the outstanding shot-makers are Farrell, winner of eight tour-

PLAYING THE GAME

American Interest In Football

BY FIELDING H. YOST

Athletics, University of Michigan

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Development of the present much misunderstood shift plays in American football started in 1894 or 1895 with the abolition of the right of players to be in motion towards the line of scrimmage when the ball was passed.

Since that time the fundamental of the rules has been against the "running start," while previous to the rule changes of these two years as many as ten men were in motion forward when the ball was snapped.

The original American Rugby rules required only one man to be on the line of scrimmage when the ball was snapped. This resulted in the formation of the flying wedge, a V shaped formation. It started far back and the ball was snapped to one of the runners just before the line of scrimmage. This was the "running start" which was the cause of the "running start" rule. The Metropolitan district's representative in Brady's place.

As a result of Mike Brady, Maroneck, withdrawing Farrell, Leo Diegel of Fenimore and Fred Navak of St. Andrews were to play off to tie they had in the qualifying competition to decide which becomes the Metropolitan district's representative in Brady's place.

Changes in the rule in 1894 prevented the use of the flying wedge, while additional changes in the rules in 1895 required the presence of five men on the line of scrimmage with the provision that one man might be in motion backward toward his own goal line. This change in the rule was followed by the famous guards back formation of Pennsylvania with its companion tackle back, turtle back and all mass formations.

After twenty years of such plays, in 1905, the rules again were changed, this time to provide for seven men on the line of scrimmage and soon after this what are generally known as shift plays came into use. It is necessary to make a distinction between a shift play and the general understanding of a shift play.

All teams use a shift of personnel. Some accomplish this shift upon a signal number, the players taking different number, the players taking different positions as they line up. Some shift in the huddle, a practice that Michigan has used since the introduction of that system of signal calling. In these shifts there is no attempt at a forward movement, just a different distribution of the personnel to get the best use of the abilities of different players.

The generally discussed shift as originated by Dr. H. L. Williams of Minnesota, where a group shifts and is supposed to stop, is the one that has been the center of public discussion for the past several years, and it is this shift which occasioned changes of the rules during the past year.

Following out the fundamentals of the game as evolved in 1894, the rules committee has attempted to stop all possibility of a "running start" by directing the officials to count "one, two, three, four," after a shift or huddle before the ball is put in play.

In spite of all this discussion of shifts and other styles of play, football has become as fundamental in its general scheme of attack as baseball. Line play especially, including the end positions, has become similar both on offense and defense. There remains, however, quite a difference in the disposition of the backs.

Ninety percent of the teams in the United States use what is known as the "Z" formation with a man shifted in the line and the backs at one side.

All teams use the punt formation, with the different backs disposed of in the angle back of the line to make the most value of their ability. This is the formation most largely used by Michigan, as it gives the greatest latitude to the attack and especially to the individual who can pass, run and kick. It is an ideal formation for running, kicking, bucking and passing.

BILLY EVANS Says

Many Grid Upsets Form meant nothing in collegiate football circles in the games of Saturday, Oct. 15.

The experts, who each week try to pick the scores of the big games all over the country, had a terrible day of it.

If what has happened in football since the opening of the season is to be taken as a criterion, the wise guy reads what the experts think, then bets the other way.

I cannot recall a day in the past 10 years where so many upsets have occurred, east, west, south and north. The teams simply refuse to run true to past performances.

The west produced more than its quota of surprises, particularly in Big Ten circles. Here are a few of the western upsets.

Picks Off in West

Minnesota, rated one of the most formidable teams in the country, picked as big Ten champions, could get no better than a 14-14 tie with Indiana, previously defeated by Chicago.

Despite the admitted strength of Iowa State, Bob Zuppke's Illinois eleven was generally picked to win at least two touchdowns. The Illinois were fortunate to get a 12-12 tie.

Purdue, after its 19-0 victory over Harvard, was favored to beat Chicago but went down to defeat by a one-point margin, the final score being 7-6.

The experts were about equally divided between Ohio State and Northwestern showed a rather decided superiority to win 19-13.

As a matter of fact, Michigan was about the only Big Ten team that ran true to form in defeating Wisconsin by two touchdowns.

Penn Goes Down

In the east it didn't take long to squelch Pennsylvania's hopes for a national championship team. Penn State, in perhaps the biggest upset of the day, overwhelmed Pennsylvania, 20-0.

The week previous Pennsylvania had defeated Brown's supposedly invincible "Iron Men," while Penn State had lost to Bucknell.

Lafayette figured to have the strongest team in years, could get no better than a tie with West Virginia. Lafayette had been picked to win by from three to five touchdowns. The score was 7-7.

Syracuse showed surprising strength in defeating the powerful Georgetown eleven 19-6, while a vastly improved Harvard team beat Holy Cross decisively.

If these form reversals continue each week-end what a busy winter it is going to be for the statisticians who try to prove things by the use of "figgers."

The south also produced food for gossip in the defeat of the Alabama team, three times Southern Conference champions. Georgia Tech turned the trick, 10-0. It was the first time a Tech team had scored on Alabama in five years.

Vanderbilt, regarded as one of the outstanding teams in the south, was badly jolted by Texas, 13-0.

In the far west, Stanford and Southern California played to a tie.

It was the same story in every section, reverse upon reverse and in a great many cases no logical reasons to offer for the upheaval.

If uncertainty means anything, and it usually makes for plenty of interest, this promises to be a great year for football.

DAILY NEWS' 1928 PROGRAM FOR PAMPA

- One or more new railroads. New city hall-auditorium. County agricultural agent. Additional street paving. Oil Exchange building. Expedite road paving work. Encourage existing industries. Invite new industries. Complete water, sewer systems. More and better homes. Extend Pampa trade territory. Develop dairying industry. Municipal band. Municipal airport. Pampa Fair. Associated Charities.

THE A. P. SPEAKS-Ray Baumgartner, Texas chief of the Associated Press, was one of the large number of prominent men who have given Pampa the "once over" this week.

Mr. Baumgartner, whose headquarters is in Dallas, paid the Pampa Daily News a visit to get acquainted and to ascertain how his great organization may best serve the News now and in the future. He assured the News of his interest in the Pampa member of the world's largest and best news gathering agency, and thanked the News for its cooperation in filing important stories. Perhaps the biggest of these was that of the bank robbery, when fast work gave the story to the A. P. far in advance of any other news agency.

While here, Mr. Baumgartner discussed the oil situation at length, and planned to serve the News with information about every fluctuation in the crude market, within a few minutes of every change. The News, in turn, will file accounts of important developments in the Pampa field, to be flashed to the oil centers of the nation.

"Everywhere I go," said the A. P. Chief, "I hear about Pampa, usually in the form of predictions for its expansion. And having seen for myself, I am convinced that you have here an admirable foundation for a real city. We want to help you tell the world about your assets, and we will rely upon the Pampa Daily News our official representative here, for frequent stories for our thousands of client papers."

It is significant that the Associated Press representative asked for constructive news in addition to the deaths, accidents, and similar "timely" information. This attitude is distinctive of the press association which, in the interest of accuracy and fairness, omits much of the color and scandal with which other agencies feed their clients.

"We do not care for the sordid, trivial stories which so frequently appear where spite-work and human sentiment of the writer enters into the details," asserted Mr. Baumgartner. "The stories must be true, accurate, clean, and away from the unpleasant sides of life. The Associated Press cannot ignore the important events which just will want news that will help you occur, but predominantly it city to grow and make it a more pleasant place in which to live."

It is with such an association that the Daily News is affiliated for the betterment of Pampa, and as the city grows so will this newspaper, extending its press service and physical plant, and always stressing the constructive news of the city and community.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The organization of the western progressive group of senators to influence both legislation in the Seventieth Congress and the selection of the next Republican presidential nominee is one of the first important political events in a big political year.

Within that year we shall see what promises in many ways to be an extraordinary Congress, primaries and state conventions, a hot election campaign—(probably) and the election of the next president of the United States.

The new "progressive bloc," headed by Norris and Borah, is sure to be a powerful factor during the next Congress because of the nearly even strength of Republicans and Democrats in the Senate. These progressives will be Republicans, but if any reactionary legislation is passed over their prostrate forms it will be only with much help from the Democratic side of the aisle.

To a lesser extent, the progressives, if they hold together, may be expected to influence the Republican presidential nomination. Everyone knows that Uncle George Norris—their nominal candidate—will not be named, but it is likely that their united front will at least prevent nomination of such men as Coolidge and Hughes, whom they regard as reactionaries.

PRESS FORUM

The highest price ever paid in the United States for a purebred bull of a beef breed was $50,000. That same bull went to the packer the other day and the packer paid $92 for him, head, hoofs, horns and all.

The question then arises, What is a purebred bull worth $50,000 or $92? The answer probably is that he might be worth either sum to somebody at some time for some purpose.

In fact, it is a matter of record that the man who paid $50,000 for this bull got it all back and much more besides in less than three months at one public sale of fifty cows and heifers which were bred to the $50,000 bull.

What happened to the buyers who bought these cows and heifers and who were eventually caught when the purebred bubble burst in 1920 is another question.

For special purposes or under special conditions at special times a purebred animal may be worth almost any price that might be asked. To the average farmer and the average stockman, however, the value of a purebred is always going to be based fundamentally on what the introduction of better blood into the home herd will mean in the way of a market product of greater quantity or higher quality or lessened cost of production.

TWINKLES. Cattle prices have reached a new peace-time record. Give us more peace. Publicity is fleeting. Aimee had to get burned the other day to get a national dateline. Pipeline men predict 25,000-barrel production in the Gray county area of the Pampa field by January. Of course our oil is worth more than any other in this region, but it looks like the prophets would tackle the price problem a bit. "Judge not" is an injunction which evidently did not have politics and politicians in view. Senator Capper says "our laws are working better than our brains." Maybe because there are more of the former. Possibly that little affair down in Mexico is just a charivari for Ambassador Morrow.—The Wichita Beacon. Turkey will take its first complete census this month. The task has been greatly simplified by massacring the Armenians, driving out all the Greeks and ceding a lot of territory.—The Seattle Times.

Then drop into boiling water to which 1 tablespoonful of vinegar has been added. Simmer twenty minutes and drain. Drop at once into cold water and let stand until cool. Cover with fresh cold water and let stand until cold. Drain and separate into small pieces. Care must be used while cooking that the water does not bubble violently, as the brains will fall apart.

Breakfast Apples

Four good-sized apples, 3-4 cup granulated sugar, few grains salt.

Choose tart, well flavored apples free from blemishes. Wash and remove cores without breaking fruit. Cut a thin, narrow paring from each apple at its largest circumference. Arrange side by side but not touching each other in a smooth sauce pan. Add water to half cover fruit and bring slowly to the boiling point with the pan closely covered. Remove cover and carefully turn over apples. Sprinkle with sugar and simmer until tender but not broken, basting with the sirup in the pan. Remove fruit and reduce sirup to 3-4 cup by rapid boiling. Pour over apples arranged in individual serving dishes. Chill and serve with cereal and cream.

Children should be taught to eat the crust of bread and rolls for the sake of their teeth. They should be cautioned, too, to chew their food thoroughly.

Panned summer squash is fine. Cut the squash in quarter inch slices, flour them, and brown in butter in a heavy skillet until they are tender and a deep gold in color.

Instead of cooking pumpkin and then rubbing it through a colander, try putting the fresh pumpkin through a food chopper. Then it cooks quickly and time and fuel are saved.

To test samples of fabrics for fastness to light, cover one half with cardboard and expose the rest to direct sunlight for ten days. To test for fastness in laundering, wash and dry half your sample under ordinary conditions. Curtain material should be tested in these ways before purchasing, and dress goods when possible.

Candler To Wed His Stenographer

Miss Florence Stevenson (left) is soon to wed Asa G. Candler, Jr., (right), son of the Atlanta soft drink magnate, whom she has served as secretary. Candler is the third in his family to wed an employe.

ATLANTA—The romance of the working girl who marries the millionaire employer is to come true again this month in the Candler family.

Miss Florence Stevenson has announced her engagement to Asa G. Candler, Jr., son of the founder of a famous soft drink company, whom she has served as his secretary for several years.

Candler, eldest heir to the family fortune and himself a grandfather, is only following in the footsteps of his father and younger brother, who startled society by marrying employes.

About six years ago, Walter, the third son, married Miss Marion Penland, a pretty girl who presided over a window in the bank of which he was cashier and his father president. Then in 1923, Asa G. Candler, Sr., suddenly married Mrs. Mae Little Ragan, who had been his stenographer.

The wedding came as the climax of a series of sensations involved in the announcement of Candler's engagement to Mrs. Onezima de Bouchelle, New Orleans society woman. Mrs. de Bouchelle came to Atlanta, announced their engagement had been broken by Candler and filed suit for breach of promise. She asked $500,000 damages, but Candler won the suit.

Two other weddings are to be celebrated in the Candler family this fall. John Candler, son of Asa Candler, Jr., is to marry Miss Elizabeth Brandon, daughter of a Virginia family, while Miss Catherine Candler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hoard Candler, will wed Dr. W. C. Warren, Jr., a young physician.

In addition to its interest in numerous business and industrial companies in the south, the Candler family also is active in the Atlanta Music Festival association, which each year brings the Metropolitan Opera company of New York to this city; the Municipal Opera association, which presents a season of light opera, and many other civic enterprises. The elder Candler has given millions to charity and Emory University.

he had many bright ideas which he had never had before.

Little McWhorter was taught the peril of strong drink at an early age. Every night little McWhorter had to trot down to the brewery and bring home a bucket of beer for his pop, until his pop began to observe that the older and fatter little McWhorter grew, the farther the "pop" was from the rim of the bucket.

So one day Pop McWhorter sneaked out and followed his son back from the brewery and, as a result of what he saw, the lad took a terrible tanning, and the bucket always came home full after that.

When the boy grew old enough to carry a little money he sometimes brought home a little, but his pop always confiscated that and finally the boy gave up in sheer disgust and became, according to the biographer, a life-long prohibitionist. Some of Senator McWhorter's enemies will sniff at this last statement, but let them sniff—so long as they don't sniff too near the senator!

The senator's original name was not John or Jeroboam as you might think. It was Moses. Old Man McWhorter had insisted that the baby be named Moses because he probably would be wise like his father for the name Joseph in honor of her Uncle Mike. So when Mr. McWhorter became stubborn about it, the mother of his child heaved an anvil at him which knocked off his hat for the first time in many months and Old Man McWhorter walked about in a daze, muttering "Moses. Joseph Moses. Joseph—" and so on until Mrs. McWhorter took pity on her spouse and agreed to compromise with Moses. And Moses is until young McWhorter, entering politics, contracted it to Jo, for the sake of dignity.

At school, Moses was such a prodigy that the teachers couldn't teach him hardly anything. They did succeed, however, in teaching him that while a teacher might stand for a tack in her chair now and then, the use of spikes was quite gauche.

Baptists Expect "Success Week" To Be Effective

DALLAS, Oct. 19—Recent results of activities of Baptist workers in the state Conquest Campaign indicate that "success week," which begins Sunday, October 23, will be an outstanding success in the fall round-up of the campaign, according to D. F. S. Gerner, executive secretary of the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

During this week the eighteen district organizers appointed at the beginning of the campaign last December, will direct associational activities through the 120 associational organizers, in a concerted effort, in support of which similar organizations among the B. Y. P. U. and the Baptist Sunday Schools will be active. This combined force is perhaps the most gigantic that the Baptists of Texas ever organized and in magnitude and efficiency has been rivaled by few campaign bodies in any field in recent years. Not one of these hundred of organizers will receive compensation.

While it is impossible at this early date to compile final figures on donations made to the Campaign on October 12—"One Day for God"—the many reports, letters and checks already received at Baptist headquarters have proven the day an unusual success financially. It is believed that donations for that day will exceed expectations by a generous margin.

Publicity Stream Rising Rapidly As Presidential Campaigns Near

WASHINGTON—The first tangible evidence that Senator J. Boomboom McWhorter is a candidate for the presidential nomination is seen in the mysterious appearance here of a pamphlet purporting to be an account of the senator's life and times.

"J Boomboom McWhorter, Statesman and Patriot," is the title on the cover and the contents comprise an irresistible refutation of the sneers of certain jealous persons who profess to believe that McWhorter really isn't such a much.

A foreword carefully explains that the pamphlet has no political purpose, but you can't hamboozle official Washington, which has seen similar pamphlets before.

At any rate, it's the first time full justice has been done, for the senator has been wearing an injured look ever since he was advised that any senator who supplied more than three pages for the biographical section of the Congressional Directory would have to pay for the extra printing.

No attempt is made to conceal the senator's humble origins. The elder McWhorter was only a horseshoe pitcher, but he was a good one.

Little McWhorter used to carry the horseshoes for his father and then run out and retrieve them after they were pitched. One day a horseshoe hit little McWhorter in the noodle. Neighbors thought that the injury had affected little McWhorter's brain but, as the senator explains it, it was very beneficial, and after that

371 Students Out of 747 at Canyon Work Their Way

CANYON, Oct. 21.—A survey of the West Texas State Teachers college reveals that 371 students out of a group of 747 of college rank are paying all or part of their own expenses. In the high school department 22.1 per cent of the boys and girls are paying for their own education.

It has been found that the percentage of men is much higher than of women. Two hundred and two men are carrying their own financial responsibilities, while 169 depend on someone else to pay their bills; 405 women pay their own way, while 336 do not.

A large per cent of the students at Canyon have taught school and saved enough money to pay college expenses. Farming, working on roads, selling books, bookkeeping, clerking in stores, waiting tables in hotels and cafes, housework, giving music lessons, selling gasoline, and almost every other type of work has paved the way to college for these people.

A great many students do work in Canyon at the same time that they are carrying their college courses. Many girls do housework for board and room. A few do stenographic work, tutoring, and teaching. Men work in cafes, deliver newspapers, sell gasoline at filling stations, mow lawns, milk cows, do carpentry and many other things.

Many boys and girls come to Canyon to attend college with only enough money to pay their fees and a few days' board, confident that they will find work enough to carry them on, and most of them do. A few have very hard struggles to stay. Townspeople help a great number each year by lending them money, and they are also aided by student loan funds, but there is not nearly enough money to assist more than a tenth of those who deserve help.

Students who are paying for their own college education usually know exactly where they are going in life. Most of those in the Teachers college are planning to teach. Many are gaining valuable training for business careers. Those expecting to be lawyers stress public speaking, economics, and sociology. A large number of girls expect to be home demonstration agents. A few will enter journalism, some are preparing for the ministry, and three women are preparing to become missionaries.
