More Than 30 Are Victims of Early Winter Blizzards

CONTINUANCE OF COLD WAVE IS PREDICTED

Rescue Efforts Are Necessary Along Great Lakes

BAD WEATHER VERY EXTENSIVE

Panhandle Temperature Starts Upward Climb Today

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—More than 30 persons have met death in the sub-zero blast which yesterday continued to fan the continent from coast to coast.

Abatement of the snowfall and high wind which piled drifts so high in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Iowa as to delay trains and block highways, and which sent rescue boats scurrying along the Great Lakes shores to aid crews of foundering vessels does not mean that the mercury will begin a quick climb, weather officials said. They predicted that the cold spell would reach its peak today, but would remain for a few days to keep the weather a constant topic of conversation.

Moderating weather greeted residents of the Panhandle region today, and overcoats, lately much in evidence, were much fewer on Pampa streets today.

Texas temperatures were still low this morning in the wake of the most severe weather of the year, but relief is promised for tonight and tomorrow.

State temperatures today ranged from 20 degrees at Texline to 44 degrees at Galveston.

That New Ford—A Church

Even newer than his new car will be the 17-century English church which Henry Ford plans to reproduce on his Sudbury, Mass., property. As a model, he will use the First Church of Christ at Bradford, near Haverhill, which is pictured above. It was copied in 1848 by Richard Bond, of Boston, from an edifice built in London two centuries before by Sir Christopher Wren. Regarded as one of the most beautiful church buildings in New England and known as the birthplace of the American Board of Foreign Missions, it is a combination of Gothic, Corinthian and Ionic architecture without, with Romanesque windows and Grecian frieses within.

Heavy Gas Encountered in Pampa Field Wells—Many Locations Are Being Made for Early Drilling

The Delaney, Estick and Reiger No. 2 Jackson in section 88, block B-2, an offset to the first big gusher in the Bowers pool, struck heavy gas yesterday at 2,715 feet, and is drilling ahead.

Th Operators Oil company last night shot its No. 2 Bowers in section 85, block B-2, and completed it for a gasser. The well was plugged back from 3,431 feet to 2,845 feet where the big gas was found. A shot was used to break the cement used when the gas was eased off. It is making 20,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

The Operators Oil company's No. 1 Jackson in section 88, block B-2 is making 40 barrels an hour after being brought in early this week at 2,978 feet.

Edwards et al's No. 1 E. J. Case in section 182, block B-2, is standing with 1,000 feet of oil in the hole. Seventy million cubic feet of gas was shut off between 2,512 to 2,630 feet, with the first show of oil at 3,025 feet.

The Guernsey Oil company's No. 1 McKinney in section 163, block 3 struck lime at 2,458 feet, which is 54 feet higher than the Camel Oil company's No. 1 Harrah in the same section. The elevation at that point is 3,340 feet. The well is drilling ahead at 2,620 feet.

The rig is being built for the Guernsey Oil company's No. 2, McKinney in section 163, block 3. Two more locations have been made by the company in the same section.

The Texas company has made a location for well No. 1 4,330 feet each day from the south and west lines of the southeast 1-4 of section 92, block B12, to be drilled immediately.

The Roxana Petroleum company's No. 3 Worley in section 39, block 3, now flowing 70 barrels a day at 3,078 feet, will be drilled deeper.

The Roxana Petroleum company is preparing to plug and abandon its No. 1 Worley in section 39, block 3. The well was shot from 2,910 to 3,010 feet but failed to respond.

Sunday School Class Presents Pleasing Comedy of Western Life as Effort to Help Build Church

"An Arizona Cowboy," a four-act western comedy directed and played by local people, was enjoyed by theatre-goers present at the Rex last night.

Several exceptionally well cast parts rose above the usual run of home-spun comedy, and the play included villains, hen-pecked husband, city slickers, virtuous cowboy heroes, tempted youth, Indians, cow-punchers, and other typically western characters.

Carson Loftus as the shy, cowboy-shepherd hero drew his way through a rather difficult role, and handled his gun with speed that "got the draw" with reality. His portrayal of solid virtues finally won the hand of the young lady owning a big ranch—a part well played by Mrs. Phillip R. Pond. A companion romance between the sweet and capable girl from the poor house and the ranch youth caught by the girl from the California underworld was one of the fine achievements of the play. The parts taken by Miss Nellie Hardin and Joe Strother, and Mrs. Carol Kingsbery had the role of sister to the head of the Black-shear gang.

Much of the play centered around the hen-pecked husband, who when out of the presence of his wife rose to heights of wit and exaggeration in telling of his experiences "in '89." Phillip R. Pond was the wise-cracking 89'er, and Mrs. James Sackett had the part of his long-suffering but dominating wife.

W. C. Montgomery made an interesting and adequate gang leader from Los Angeles, who had in his plots Grizzly Grimm, a rough character played by the Rev. Tom W. Brabham.

One of the best played parts was that of Yow Kee (Walter Hardin), Chinese cook whose humor came in almost every scene. Big Elk, the Indian chieftain, was a strong character in the person of C. N. Melton, whose last speech over the body of his winsome and brave young daughter (Mrs. Ralph Trimble) was particularly realistic.

The well garbed cowboys included Chas. T. Allen, Gordon Saulsbury, James Saltzman, Onan Barnard, and Don Saulsbury.

Between act specialties by Mrs. Don Jacques, accordion; Nellie and Walter Hardin; and Lewis Hardin, R. B. Fisher and Fred Burrow, drew much applause.

The comedy was directed by Mrs. Carson Loftus, and was presented by the Friendship class of the First Methodist church. The proceeds will go toward furnishing the new church building. Stage properties were provided by Kees & Thomas, J. E. Murfee company, and the Diamond C. company.

Stinnett Proposes Impounding of Water in Panhandle Streams

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—A plan to establish flood reservoirs on West Texas rivers was urged today by A. S. Stinnett, Texas flood commissioner of Amarillo, Texas, before the House of the flood control committee.

The impounding of the waters, Stinnett said, would irrigate 500,000 acres of arid land in the Texas Panhandle, which would greatly enhance the resources and development of the section.

ROAD ILLS—State Senator

Stuart recently got very red in the face in discussing the Texas road situation. It has not been unusual for anyone to attack the state highway commissions in recent years, but the general impression seems to be now that the commission is doing fairly well.

Senator Stuart vociferously attacked the commission and the governor, and advocated a different system of road building. His chief target was the failure to close up the paving gaps in various parts of the state.

The present system of assisting counties which vote road bonds has its drawbacks, but it is probably much more equitable than would be a system to connect certain highways crossing the entire state.

The bureau finds that iron and steel workers averaged $34.41 a full time week, automobile workers $36.37 and hosiery and underwear workers $22.73.

There were 783 strikes reported in 1926, the lowest number since the war, with 378 recorded for the first six months of 1927.

not meet with approval in many places.

In road discussions emanating from Fort Worth there is apt to be unusual feeling at this time, for the reason that Fort Worth and Dallas are in a row over a proposed direct route from Dallas into Northwest Texas. Whereas Fort Worth has considered herself the guardian to things West Texas and as the gateway to this section, Dallas has devised a route which would take much traffic away from Fort Worth.

West Texas, particularly, should searchingly study any proposal which would radically change the present system of road building. Not many across-the-state roads would touch this section, and as too often has been the situation in the past, our taxes would go to help some other part of the state.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — The government's Bureau of Labor Statistics, from its name, might be expected to have nothing on hand in its annual report except plenty of dull reading.

But the bureau is the Labor Department's fact-finding division and if you would know the trend of wages, the extent of unemployment and the ups and downs of the cost of living, read on.

Roughly speaking, the bureau's report shows that the cost of living has gone down more proportionately than wages have, but that industry is getting along with fewer workers than it did eight years ago.

Shoe workers, for instance, averaged $25.87 a full-time week in 1926, an average increase of 95.4. Cotton mill workers averaged $17.48, working an average of 53.3 hours a week, after an average increase of 191.8 per cent between 1913 and 1920 and a drop of 29.7 per cent since.

The cost of living is still practically 75 per cent higher than in 1913, figuring from the average worker's standpoint, but it is much lower than in the first part of 1920.

The bureau finds that iron and steel workers averaged $34.41 a full time week, automobile workers $36.37 and hosiery and underwear workers $22.73.

There were 783 strikes reported in 1926, the lowest number since the war, with 378 recorded for the first six months of 1927.

Men involved in the 1926 strikes numbered only 330,000.

He'll Do His Christmas Shopping Early

Don Houston

Unemployment in recent months has begun to bother some of those in the Labor Department and the number of unemployed has been placed as high as 3,000,000. It is estimated that there were 12,000,000 persons at work in factories in 1919 and only 8,500,000 now.

Taking even 1923 as a normal year, the bureau's tables show a 10 per cent falling off in the number employed in manufacturing industries. Population, however, has increased. Going back to 1919, and pursuing the general average to the present time, it would appear that population had increased 10 per cent and that the wage earners per 1000 population had decreased in number more than 20 per cent.

The cost of living is still practically 75 per cent higher than in 1913, figuring from the average worker's standpoint, but it is much lower than in the first part of 1920.

In those industries studied by the bureau, wages have kept well ahead of the higher cost of living, in proportion. Much of the difference is going into installment buying.

A mother-in-law is only a relative trouble, after all.

New Emblem Chosen for Hospitals

An emblem to represent hospital work throughout the world has been designed by Dr. William H. Walsh (right), executive secretary of the American Hospital Association. The new symbol is shown above.

CHICAGO—An emblem that will represent hospital work to the world as the Red Cross insignia represents relief work has been adopted by the American Hospital Association. It will be used both here and abroad.

The symbol will be put to the same use as that of the Red Cross. It will decorate stationary of hospitals, will be flown as a flag, and will appear on placards and posters.

Dr. William H. Walsh, executive secretary of the hospital association, originated the emblem. He devoted his leisure hours for the last ten years to a study of heraldry and obtained advice from over the world before drafting the design.

The emblem is in the form of a shield quartered by a Lorraine Cross in horizon blue, surmounted by an eagle poised for flight, flanked by gold maple leaves, and placed in a meditation with the words "American Hospital Association," on a scroll around the lower circle.

In the upper right quadrant is a cream white Maltese cross on a maroon background. The upper left quadrant contains the rod of Aesculapius in maroon on a cream white background. The Greek lamp of knowledge in maroon on a white field is in the lower right quadrant and in the lower left is the Greek cross in cream white on a maroon field.

The Lorraine cross has been used since the ninth century as an emblem depicting relief to the unfortunate, and every other part of the insignia is meaningful. The maple leaves symbolize Canada; the American eagle, the United States.

The Latin expression Nisi Dominus Frustra (Unless the Lord be with us, all our efforts are in vain) will be used in foreign countries.

Markets

German Dance Floors to Be Ruled By Waltz

LIN—The winter season's is the waltz, according to the Union of German Dancers. The waltz is still remain on the top, the Black Bottom and a violent Charleston, the Yale and the Heebie-Jeebies.

At the annual congress of the Dancing Masters the "Modern Waltz" won the applause of thousands. It has less "turns" and more "walking" than its classical predecessor. The slow, lulling rhythm remains, but the dancer is no longer in danger of becoming dizzy.

Now it's up to the orchestra to play in the correct tempo, and to the dancing public not to dance the Black Bottom or Tango to waltz music. Otherwise the dancing masters threaten to hang placards: "Dance to the music being played, please" as protest.

Unusual Care and Expense Shown in Fine Duplexes Erected Here by B. S. Via on West Browning Avenue

"No objections to children" is the sincere declaration of B. S. Via with respect to the fine new duplexes he has had constructed at the corner of West Browning avenue and Ward street. Mr. Via is connected with the legal department of the Empire Gas and Fuel company, and is planning further investments here.

Neatly designed and surrounded almost with new sidewalks, the buildings are of themselves attractive, but the interior furnishings have to be seen to be fully appreciated.

Each large living room, with its matched, rich furnishings, is striking in every detail. Upon the hardwood floor of each is a beautiful velvet rug, mounted upon rug pads. Overstuffed furniture provided, along with many additional furnishings, including expensive pictures, console table of latest design, French plate glass mirror, smoking set, and floor lamp.

Adjacent is a large closet, from which the expensive portable bed may be drawn almost instantly. This closet has numerous shelves and much storage space.

The combined kitchen and dining rooms are unusually equipped. There are period furniture and waterproof table pads, rug, many built-in features, automatic gas water heater, Detroit Jewel gas range, gas heaters set flush with the wall, and complete cooking utensils. Imported dishes are further evidence of the desire of the builder to provide the best.

Decorations have been carried out with the utmost harmony in view, and walls and rich curtains are completely in keeping with the other fixtures. Cluster electric lights afford attractive illumination.

There are private bathrooms for each apartment, and ice boxes also are provided. Porches were placed at the front of each unit of the duplexes, but the equipment is similar.

Gray and Lang of the Tulsa Rig and Reel company drew the plans for the duplexes, and they were built by John T. Glover. Cement work was by E. F. Brake, plumbing by Davis Plumbing company, and painting and decorating by J. S. Gurley. Dunaway Brothers Hardware and Furniture company installed the furnishings. Cotton Electric company did the wiring and installation of electric lights, and building materials came from the Clem Lumber company.

Two duplexes are nearing completion, and already have been engaged

Amusements

AT THE REX

What a relief from viewing "heavy dramma" of the screen is afforded by "The Life of Riley," the feature-length comedy today at the Rex theatre! It is the light, frisky, funny.

George Sidney and Charlie Murray, co-featured in this film, which E. M. Asher produced for First National Pictures, certainly prove the contention that comedy teams are natural mirth-making material for the screen. Each of these comedians has been famous singly and in combination with "folly" on the stage and in celluloid.

Their work together in "The Life of Riley," however, reaches a new height in mirth-making for Sidney and Murray, individually and as a team. Excellent characterization provided in this original story by Mans Page assist the comers in topping their own records.

Sidney is Chief of Police in a rural town, and Murray is Fire Chief, Sidney is leeman on the side; Murray keeper of the general store The widow for whose hand they compete is played exceedingly well by Myrtle Stedman, and Sam Hardy, imitable comedy villain, is a "city slicker."

An unusual feature of "The Life of Riley," is a charmingly naive and wistful junior love affair enacted by June Marlowe and Stephen Carr. It is straight romance rather than comedy, although well-woven into the riotous, rapid-fire mirth sequences. Plot, too, enters into the story through the efforts of Riley, the Fire Chief, to sell his fire-extinguisher invention, and the villain's almost successful attempts to foil him.

All in all, "The Life of Riley" is an excellent comedy dish for those who like to smile, giggle, chuckle or howl. Our advice is to loosen your belt before the picture starts, and prepare for mirthful convulsions.

Patricia Sawyer Buried in Amarillo

Patricia Sawyer, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. R. Sawyer, was buried at L'ano cemetery at Amarillo yesterday following services at the parental home here, conducted by the Rev. W. L. Evans, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and Father C. C. French, pastor of the Catholic church.

More than a dozen cars from Pampa accompanied the body to the grave and the floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

A short service was conducted at the grave by Rev. Evans and Father French.

Discussions of the basic principles of life that come to one, thinking at the time of the year. The morning service is at 11 o'clock, and the evening service begins promptly at 7 o'clock.

The Bible School at 10 a. m., and three young people's meetings at 6 o'clock provide an hour for study and discussion aside from the pulpit ministry of the Word of God that enables one to have a well balanced day of religious education and development of the soul life.

THE STORY THUS FAR

Tony Harrison, 13, is orphaned when Jeff Harrison, his father, is shot in a poker game in Caldwell, Kas. He is befriended by Gordon W. Lillie, a restaurant waiter by Joe Craig foreman of the Bar K ranch, who takes Tony to the Bar K to live, and by Titus Moore, owner of the ranch, which is in the Cherokee Strip. There the shy little boy meets Rita tomboy daughter of Titus Moore. The year is 1880, and Gordon Lillie is thinking of joining David Payne, who is agitating for the Indian territory lands, when he gets an offer of a teaching post in the Indian school in Pawnee. He and Craig are in Caldwell some time later when Craig decides to go after a saloon owner named Shafer, former marshal of Caldwell, who Craig thinks is crooked and possessor of a knowledge of the whereabouts of Tom Benton, murderer of Jeff Harrison. He conspires with John Blake, editor of the Caldwell paper, to declare war on Shafer in an editorial. He suspects that Shafer will attempt revenge and insists on spending the night with Blake. At midnight they see men moving outside.

CHAPTER XVI

Two black shadows glided swiftly toward the rear of the Caldwell Tribune. Three men sat silently watching from the window. Then Craig's voice broke the stillness. "You little boys had better run home and play," he drawled evenly. "You might get burned." The shadows straightened, hesitated momentarily, and then dropped their burdens and ran back to the line of waiting horsemen. "They'll hold a council of war now," pronounced Pawnee Bill, and grinned in the darkness at Craig. Blake seemed amazed. "What I don't get at all is how you called the turn on them, Craig." "You can say I was lucky," Craig said laconically. "They're not through yet. We'll have some shooting directly." As he spoke, the line of black figures began to move. Once more came the rumble of horses' hoofs on the sodden ground and the horsemen swerved off to the left. Craig moved behind the desk. "You two had better duck, too," he advised the others. "Lead will be flying in the window before we're much older." The hoofbeats grew louder and faster and the riders came charging past. There was a rattle of shots; splintered glass fell to the floor from the raised windows; several bullets buried themselves in the farther wall and some tore into the desk barricade. "Fools!" uttered Pawnee Bill contemptuously. "They're acting like a bunch of crazy Indians with an immigrant wagon to play with." He rose swiftly and fired twice at one of the flashes. Craig's gun barked from the other window, and Blake sprang to the top of the desk, where he stood between the two windows and fired through the empty sash. Once more the raiders charged past. "They must be full of liquor," announced Craig, "or they wouldn't be taking such chances." He smiled grimly. "I'm aiming high, to keep from hitting a horse." Calmly he stuck his gun out of the opening and emptied it. There was a sharp cry. "That one went home," said Craig. And now there came the sound of galloping hoofs from another direction. "I thought somebody would hear the commotion," remarked Pawnee Bill. "Watch 'em run now?" They could hear a sharp command from one of the men outside. At the sound of the voice, Craig stirred uneasily and lifted his head. Then came the loud beat of hoofs again, and the raiding party moved off at a gallop. Craig sat wordless, his chin cupped in his hand. Five minutes later the marshal of Caldwell leading a motly assortment of men, most of whom had poured forth from the saloons at the sound of continued shooting, was listening to their story. Pawnee Bill indicated the direction taken by the riders. "And if I were you, Marshal, I'd send a man to the Oasis to see if Shafer is hanging around. Just on an off chance." The marshal darted him a swift look of comprehension and issued a quiet order. Craig spoke up suddenly. "I'd be obliged," he said, "if one of you boys would lend me your horse. I've got a longing to ride after them just to see where they head for."

Once More the Raiders Charged Past.

The marshal said something to one of his followers, who dismounted and came over to Craig. "Here, brother, help yourself to mine. Don't ride him too hard, though. He's a good animal and I think considerable of him."

Craig murmured his thanks and sprang into the saddle. "Come on," he cried; "we're wasting valuable time." He spoke sharply to the horse and galloped off.

Half a mile out of town they came upon a riderless horse nibbling grass beside the trail. Beside him lay the sprawled figure of a man. Craig saw it and checked his mount sharply. "Here you are," he said to the marshal, and walked over to the fallen figure and knelt down beside it.

Then he uttered an exclamation. "Cashion! Well, I'll be damned." A queer look spread over his features. "Dead," announced the marshal.

Craig appeared not to have heard him. He was staring abstractly at his hands, his mind intent on something else. Suddenly he sprang to his feet and spoke rapidly but quietly to the marshal. "Corbett, I'm going to follow the trail a little longer. You can stay here if you want, but—"

"I'm going with you. I'll send some of the boys back with—him." He indicated the dead man with a gesture of his thumb. "Did you know you'd hit anybody?" he asked.

"I thought so. I heard one of them let out a little yell. The others must have failed to see him fall off in the dark."

"Either that or they didn't think it would pay them to wait." He turned aside to issue a few more brief orders; then he and Craig mounted and rode off again, followed by three others. "You know who it was?" Corbett asked presently.

"Cashion? Yes. Used to be a friend of Tom Benton's. Remember him?"

"I've heard some of him. There's a murder charge against him."

They rode till daylight showed them the uselessness of pursuing any further. "They've probably doubled back," Corbett suggested, scratching his head doubtfully. "If we'd had daylight to follow the tracks they made, it would have been different. As it is, we're ten miles into the Indian territory now and I haven't got any right to be here. I'm going back."

Craig agreed to the hopelessness of a continued search. "I'm downright disappointed," Corbett, he said. "I'd sort of hoped to find something if we rounded them up."

"What do you mean?"

"I don't know if I can explain. Get this: I come into Caldwell one day, some time after the Harrison shooting, and find Cashion. Just when I'm ready to have him hauled in, Shafer—he's martial then—comes to his rescue and puts in a good word. Not long after that Cashion disappears. Now we find him mixing in Shafer's quarrel. This is Shafer's doing, Corbett; you know that; you're not a fool. All right. Now, who else do you think we might have found in that gang if we'd overhauled them?"

"I reckon you must mean Benton."

"That's exactly who I mean. Take my word for it; Shafer is mixed up in a lot of crooked work. It'll be a nice day's work when you put him behind the bars."

Corbett considered this in silence. "I find I'm agreeing with you," he said presently, "but I've got to have some evidence against the man."

"We'll see what kind of story he's got concerning his whereabouts last night," Craig suggested. "I'm going to pay him a visit in his saloon this afternoon. Do you want to be along?"

"You'd better leave that to me, Craig. It's up to me to talk to him; I'm marshal of Caldwell."

"I'm not trying to butt in. I've got what you might call a strong personal interest in this thing and I want to see it through. Why can't you deputize me temporarily to make my actions official?"

"You'll promise not to take advantage of me? I don't want Shafer potted just to satisfy a personal quarrel."

"Personally," said Craig, "we've never quarreled. I'll be defending your interests in the thing, all the way through."

"That satisfies me," Corbett told him. "You call for me when you get ready to pay your visit."

Craig rode directly to John Blake's shop. Pawnee Bill met him with the information that the man who had gone to the Oasis the night before had reported Shafer absent. "The bartender told him Shafer had left about 11 o'clock, saying he was sleepy."

Craig nodded. "Blake," he said, "you can get ready to write an editorial about the retirement of Shafer as active proprietor of the Oasis. Right after noon we're going to call on him."

When he entered the Oasis a few hours later, accompanied by Corbett and Pawnee Bill, Shafer was standing behind the bar loudly proclaiming that the unfortunate occurrence of the preceding night had placed him in an embarrassing position. He paled almost imperceptibly as he caught sight of Corbett and his companions, but nodded with an attempt at cordiality.

"I was just saying, Marshal, that I wouldn't have had that happen for anything. Here Blake comes out against me and the same night somebody tries to burn him out. It don't look good for me, I'll admit, but I was in bed at the time."

Craig let his gaze drift carelessly about the saloon. It flickered momentarily as it encountered two men seated at a table and apparently absorbed in a quiet game of cards. They were the men he had seen in the Oasis the day before and who had followed him as he left. The rest of the crowd was made up on usual hangers-on, augmented by a few curiosity seekers.

He turned around to face Shafer as the latter finished his speech. "It is too bad," he sympathized. "Where do you sleep, Shafer, upstairs?"

Shafer's face turned sullen. "I don't remember addressing you, Craig. I was talking to the marshal."

Player Prices Climb As the Ice Game Secures Foothold in America

nadian division with Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto. To supply the sudden demand for stars prices of Canada's best players, jumped to fanciful figures, but the gate receipts of the first year of American competition showed promising returns on the big investments of promoters. It costs, for instance, $300,000 for refrigerating machinery and other expenses to run a first class rink and $100,000 for a league franchise.

The ordinary player is worth $10,000 to $15,000 to his club as a trading or sale proposition. "Hockey" (Reginald) Smith, sold by the Ottawa Senators, world's champions, to the Montreal Maroons for $22,500 and a $15,000 player, Punch Broadbent, set the record in player sales in the ice sport. The Montreal Canadians refused an offer of $50,000 for Howie Morenz, leading scorer of the league, and Pittsburgh turned down an offer of $20,000 for Roy Worters, considered one of the best goal tenders in professional hockey.

Fast Ponca City Boy Will Meet Whittington Monday

American puck shooters is expected to be developed in another five years.

The National league is divided into two sections, American and Canadian, which play each other, but keep separate standings of victories and defeats so that the "world's series" of the ice can be played off between the American and Canadian leaders for the Stanley cup, emblematic of the world title since 1893.

Twenty Men Out For Basketball in First Practice

Twenty basketball enthusiasts turned out for practice Tuesday night for the first practice of the high school basketball team. Coach Dick and Dial are enthusiastic over the large turnout and the interest the boys are taking in their team this season. Last year only eight men reported for practice.

Many were the football tackles witnessed during the early minutes of play as the boys were still imbued with the football spirit. Seventeen of this year's football squad are out for basketball. Other boys plan to be out for practice as soon as uniforms can be obtained.

Troy Stalls and Jones Seltz, the two six-foot men of the team, are rivals for the center position and a battle for that position is looked for. Seltz showed superior in reach, but Stalls has an uncanny way of finding the basket. Other positions on the team will be hotly contested and the best man will win as the coaches have a world of material from which to choose.

Owing to the team having to practice out-of-doors, the workouts will be irregular and the team will be hampered until a gymnasium is erected.

CHICAGO—The speed, spills and thrills of hockey, which has grown into Canada's greatest game in the last 40 years, are being woven into a major league sport, with American assistance.

Salaries of $10,000 for a four-month season, player sales of $20,000 and $50,000 and high-priced club franchises already are established. And the winter ice sport is spreading into American colleges in the northern zone, one after another. In the east Yale, Harvard, Princeton and other colleges have taken it up for good. The northern "Big Three" of the middle west, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, have played it regularly for years, and Notre Dame and Illinois are starting it this winter.

The National hockey league is the present major outfit in the sport. Enthusiasts assert it will only be a few years until other leagues have sprung up because of popular interest in the sport. Most of the players now are Canadians, by a crop of

Bee Keeping on Side
UVEDALE, Tex.—The bee as an adjunct to the ranch is a new kind of diversification in farming here. The demand for queen bees in the ranching area is growing steadily. Roving bee men, with a few colonies of bees apiece, are reaching out into the ranch, area, renting an acre or two of ground near a water hole, paying rent either in cash or in honey.

BUENOS AIRES.—Aid is being sought from the Argentine Government to develop paper making from bullrushes. It is reported that experiments made with rushes from the banks of the Plata, Parana, Uruguay, Pilcomayo and Bermejo rivers show that the plant contains much cellulose and it is believed this may be extracted at low cost.

Night's Rest Disturbed.

Is nature's way of telling you "Danger Ahead" a Healthy Bladder Does Not Get A Night's Rest?
Mrs. W. E. Burdette, 412 South East St., Bloomington, Ill., says in her own home paper, the Bloomington Pantagraph: "Lithiated Buchu tablets relieved me of bladder weakness. Was distressed 20 to 25 times a night. I feel I am well. I tried many treatments, submitted to operation and much torture. In one week after taking Lithiated Buchu I could notice improvement. I will be glad to tell or write my experience."
Lithiated buchu is not a patent medicine. The formula is on the bottle. It cleanses the bladder as epsom salts do the bowels. The tablets cost 2c each at all drug stores. Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Locally at Patheco Drug Co.
