AY out West" there is a mysterious land that only a few persons have visited. Certain parts of it are practically unknown. It is a vast, strange land, a part of Southeastern Utah concerning which even those who live in Utah know little. This State has been noted for its Great Salt Lake, but this too is not entirely known, for few persons understand that three mountain chains cross this lake, traceable by the islands and limestone cliffs piled fantastically and giving an impression of utter loneliness. Another part of Utah contains strange Hot Pots, or queer springs that sometimes boil and that are surrounded by a sort of medicated These two features, the Great Sait Lake and Hot Pots, make Utah distinctive but they are minor curiosities compared with the red rocks, many canyons, buttos and queer promontories of Southeastern Utah.

In early days the Ute and Navajo Indians ranged over this country and there are hundreds of square miles without settlements. Here, are four immense natural bridges. three of them, not far apart, have been named "The Natural Bridge National Monument," because the Government has taken them over in order to preserve them. fourth natural bridge-some distance away-is in a canyon tributhree to the Colorado River. Washhigton has also set aside this woner as a National Monument and calls it and the surrounding land "The Rainbow Bridge National Monument."

Other Natural Bridges

There, are other marvelous natural bridges in ours and other countries but the Utah bridges have the greatest height and largest They excel the famous Pont d' Arc in France, Once the Natural Bridge of Virginia was said to. be our most remarkable example of nature's bridge work. It is certainly remarkable and geologista say it is of massive limestone similar to that which made the famous Luray Caverns a few miles away. It is the roof arch of a vanished cave and is well worth seeing. There is also a curious natural bridge in Western Canada formed by the Kicking Horse In the Bahama Islands there is a coral rock rising out the sea which has an opening like a window and this forms a natural

Eastern Kentucky has many small natural bridges, some very strong and sound. They are all examples of erosion, varying slightly, here and there, according to local conditions and all seeming wonderful to those who see them. In fact John Marshall, Chief Justice of the United States, called the Virginia Bridge, "God's greatest marvel in stone." If he had known of the existence of Utah's wonders he would have reserved his praise for them for all other natural bridges are babies by com-

The Wonder Bridges

Let us visit these marvelous natural creations in Utah going first to the three bridges that are the nucleus of the Natural Bridges National Monument. The whole Monument comprises 2,700 acres. At Blanding we outfit with guides, horses and pack train and start on a trail which crosses a series of canyons, climbs a high mesa, passes through a wooded ridge and finally enters White Canyon which many iles away reached the Colorado In this White Canyon are the three marvelous bridges.

Washington sent men to measure these bridges and here is the report: "The Owanchomo or Rock Mound Bridge, so called from a conical mound upon it, is probably the oldest, for it has been carved and chiseled by erosion until its span is comparatively a narrow strip of rock. It is the smallest of the three bridges, and yet it has a span of 194 feet, being 35 feet wide on top but only ten feet thick in the center. It rises 108 feet above the stream bed of a short canyon and is known locally as the Edwin Bridge. Moving our pack train slowly further down this canyon we come to the Kachina or as it is better known, the Caroline Bridge. A symbol carved on this bridge, recsacred dancers of the Hopi Indians, gives it its name. It rises to a height of 205 feet above the stream bed and has a span of 186 feet, a width of 49 feet, and a thickness of 107 feet in its smallest part. These are official figures and as you halt among the huge fragments of rocks and piles of sand and gravel under and near the bridge it seems even larger than this. Astounding as these two bridges are, your guide will tell you to reserve your enthusiasm, for if you feel equal to the extra journey you can press on for about three more miles and see the greatest marvel of all, the Sipapu Bridge, known locally as the Augusta Bridge. This marvel is quoted as having a span of 261 feet, being 128 feet wide, and 65 feet thick at its smallest part. It rises to a height of 222 feet above the stream bed. This bridge has a beautiful setting and is wonderfully smooth and well proportioned. It is called Sipapu because all Pueblo Indians believe they come into the world and go out of it through an opening called by this name which means "portal

THE CHAOLINE MATURAL BRIDGE. WYOTH 98 FT

How Discovered The original finding of these area remarkable Utah wonders reads like remance, Over this plateau country, in 1983, Horace J. Long, a mining engineer, who was prospecting and placer mining used to ride occasionally to the little town of Hite. Utah. On one of these trips he fell in with a cattlemin named Scorup, who had ranged his cattle in San Juan County, and who asked Long if he had ever seen 'the big arches' in the White Canyon. Questioning brought further description and Long arranged to make the trip with Scornp. All took the men three days with pack horses to reach the White Canyon from the Colorado. The Canyon is about five hundred feet wide and when they descended into the gorge and saw the first bridge Scorup called "Caroline" in honor of his mother. Both men felt they were gazing on one of the wonders of the world, but they pushed on down the canyon until they came to the second bridge, so high that the trees of California would seem dwarfed beside it. Long was delighted, and as it was his turn at naming he called it "Augusta" after his wife and managed to get a photograph. They found the Little Bridge further down, and this is named after a later explorer.

Near these bridges are some cliff dwellers ruins which furnish proof that the prehistoric inhabitants of the region possessed an appreciation of these strange objects of Nature, and it is thought the In-dians venerated the arches. But it is curious that nearby Indians called them collectively, by an Indian term meaning "the space under a horse's belly between his fore and hind legs."

- Bululops Arch. After a long or short stay at these bridges let us press on with

FROM PIER TO PIER pack train to the corner of San Juan County, where is the remarkable Rainbow Arch, now a part of the "Rainbow Bridge National Monument." It is about one hundred and sixty miles by trail from the Three National Bridges through a country rich in scenery and his toric interest. The Rainbow Bridge is in a canyon tributary to the Colorado and called by the Indians, "The Canyon of the Stone Rainbow." The journey is well worth while, for the Indians hold the Capitol at Washington and there would be room to space. Of salmon pink sandstone, the proportions are almost perfect and you see that unlike the three other large bridges which have a flat top above, thus imitating the arch of the rainbow.

This bridge was searched for in 1908, when the Department of the Interior sent a man to report concerning a natural bridge in Utah. Failing to find it, because of storms, later a party consisting of Indian guides and W. B. Douglass. of the United States General Land Office, secured John Wetherill, a well known western character, to gulde them, and in August; 1909, they reached the bridge. The arch was surveyed by Douglass, and May, 1910, it was made a National Monument. This bridge is considcred the greatest among the natural bridges of the world.

How Formed Scientists say that these bridges were formed in the process of ages, by water pushing and cutting smoothing and altering the great sandstone beds. The constant swirling of water against elevations of sandstone once in a while revealed a soft place and the water ate out a half cone-shaped care. Waters on the other side ground out a similar half dome and when in the course of time, the backs of these, semi-circular caves came together, the waters found a shorter ourse through the opening, enlarged the archway and smoothed off the sides. Thus a bridge was formed and became a mighty span of enduring rock.

Alone, silent, majestic, beautiful stand these mysterious bridges. Some day they will probably be so easy of access that the most frivolous "tripper" will gaze upon them. But today they are not for many eyes to see because few per-sons are willing to take the time and strength to reach them. But the bridges can wait. Long before stood there. Like the Indians who knew of them before the white man they will remain slight, inlions of years in the making, the bridges suggest eternity.

Australian Industry Runs Into Enormous Figures - Almost As Many Sheep As There Are People in the United States. By NORMAN C. McLOUD

S the tourist traverses the interland of Australia he bers that he grows dizzy tryestimate the size of the finelia. After the first few glimpses he gives up in despair and contents imself with the knowledge that he is in the midst of the greatest wool-growing region in the world, containing one-sixth of all sheep known to civilization.

With eighty to ninety-and setimes a hundred million sheep in her pastures, the Commonwealth of Australia may be excused for pointing with pride. The animals are all ever the place-in flocks running from a few hundred to many thousand. There are many individual flocks with a population as great as that of a good sized

Not Drenmed Of Bg Plonecks This is a state of affairs that was not foreseen by the early set's tiers of the island continent. The ploneers confined themselves to the east coast in the vicinity of Sydney, little thought of the riches har awaited these who ventured beyond the constal range of mountains. The man who might have ventured to predict that the hinterland would become a gold mine of wool production would have been classified as a dreamer. The land in the neighborhood of the first settlement was so barren and inhospitable that there was little to encourage visions of fertility on the other side of the mountains.

With growing population came the exploration of the back country, bringing revelations of fertile plains and luxurious grasses which showed the possibility of the land in the raising of sheep. When the pioneers had once blazed the trail over the rugged mountain areas they laid the foundation for the industry which has done much to create the fame of the remote commonwealth. In less than a hundred years Australia became the world's foremost producer of wook The growing sheep industry demanded broader outlet for the meat products. There was no difficulty in finding a market for the wool shearings, as shipment of this class of merchandise involved none of the problems pertaining to per-Ishable mutton and lamb. The solution came with the installation of refrigerating equipment on oceangoing steamships. This modern innovation opened access to the corner butcher shops in the far corners of civilization, and gave the producers a new era of prosperity. Refrigeration proved to be the key to further progress in the development of the sheep-raising industry, and succeeding years have seen solid advancement in every phase of the business.

The land question has had strange evolution in the island continent. At the beginning of the sheep industry there was so much grazing area available that the squatters established claims to tracts of enormous size. This policy caused quick absorption of the almost limitless supply of territory and it looked as if later arrivals would find little encourageme because of an absence of good grass lands for their operations. In this situation economic laws took control and created an elasticity that was not fully foreseen.

Land Had To Be Cut Up The chief factor in the evolution was the prosperity of the industry itself. This came through improvement in the type of sheep and through the building of fences, the development of water-supply and a policy of subdivision which in creased the stock-carrying capacity of every acre involved. In this way the large landowners found themselves confronted with problems of presperity. The changes brought heavy increase in the value of acreage, and the ranchers found it undesirable to continue their extensive holdings. They began to figure that it was not good business to tie up capital and pay taxes on a hundred thousand acres when ten thousand would serve their own requirements. As a result of these economic conditions many large owners have deemed it wise to reduce the size of their individual 'holdings, while others have been forced to follow their example. The putcome has been to develop land-owning opportunities for new arrivals, and it is declared by Government authorities that the industry has benefited by concentrated operations on the smaller, better developed and more improved areas. Another factor in expanding the capacity of acreage has been the introduction of new grasses and clovers, which have been found to thrive on the moist areas near the coast. The importation of seed from Brazil has given pronounced impetus to the industry in New South Wales, and has effected the into thriving townships and live-tock centers. In this region the sheep approciate the mild climate, in which they may feed outdoors throughout the twelve months of the year. There is no need for housing or for hand-feeding.

Rabbits Caused Trouble

America has read and heard much of the ravages of the Australlan rabbit, and the stock raisers of the Commonwealth will tell you that the stories have not been exaggerated. The damage done by these pests in former years constituted one of the great problems of the Australian farmer and stock

Like the English sparrow of the United States, the rabbit of Australia was an importation. The early settlers found none of the animals in the territory. Introduction of the breed was undertaken for sport and for fur production. The small colonies that were thus established with such startling rapidity that the landowners found thomselves overwhelmed. The invasion became so magnified that within a few years the rabbit population constituted one of the most serious pests with which the human settlers were compelled to cope. Crops were destroyed wholesale, and grazing lands were devastated to a point that made serious inroads on the forage needed for

To counteract this menace the Australians tried many experiments and out of their concerted effort came the protection now universally provided in the form of rabbit-proof wire fences enclosing the grazing and farming lands. network of the fences is so fine that a rabbit cannot get through the mesh, and the results have justified the expenditure involved in this elaborate system of defense, Preparing Wool For Market In preparing wool for the market the first step is to wash it before ft is removed from the animal, to remove the dirt accumulated in pasture. A sheep tank is an interesting sight, in which the flocks are sent in swimming after shower baths with either hat or cold water. After the first watting the sheep are driven into a tank in which they swim toward a narrow opening, where their exit is marked by another shower bath. Sheep sheering is another process in which the statter finds much to compel his interest. A skilled shearer will cling the fleece in an unbroken sheet, causing the wool to retain its hadily shape almost as perfectly as if the animal had been skinned?

When the wool has been sorted and shipped to the manufacturer, it is subjected to a scouring process, to remove animal greases and to complete the cleaning. Careful drying is then required, followed by "teasing," a process in which the matted wool is opened out by mechanical tests, or spikes. The facture of westens and worsteds

FIRST PLAY OF GAME; RUNS

BY GAYLE TALBOT, JR. Associated Press Sports Writer DALLAS, Nov. 29. (P)-It took the Texas Christian University Horned Progs just 13 seconds to lick their old friends, the Southern Methodist Mustangs, at Ownby Stadium here today.

The final score was 13 to 0, but the Frogs' second touchdown merely was incidental. The verdict was rendered on the opening play of the muddy tussle, when Richard "Red" Oliver, who is just a split second slower than Cy Leland for the century, tucked the kickoff under his arm and romped straight down the field 85 yards for a touchdown. Experts figured it took three seconds for the oval to reach Oliver and 10 more for him to race off the 85 steps. He wasn't forced to run his best, as he passed the last Mustang about 60 yards short of his goal and was able to loaf the rest of the way. Besides, the field was a loblolly and conducive to anything but first class sprinting.

Well, Griffith kicked the extra point and the bout might just have well been called off right there. Those seven points stared the Pon ies in the face for the next three hours, and no matter how hard they wallowed and skidded about they could hever catch up. They were credited with nine first downs to four for the Christians, but it didn't show on the score board.

As though to remove any doubt of their superiority and have no element of luck recorded in their victory, the Frogs collected themselves late in the final period and drove across for another score Hinton paved the way when he got off a 70-yard punt that Gilbert, Pony quarterback, allowed to roll out on his three-yard lnie. The field resembled a marsh, and the performers looked like so many mud pies after Brooklyn Nationals, is spending a half-dozen plays. The slippery ball scotched the Mustang passing game and made any kind of a play hazardous. Fumbles were so frequent the official scorer lost count. Except for their opening romp by Oliver it was a pretty dull performance, as some 10,000 water soaked spectators were willing to testify when it was over.

Southern Methodist made its bravest showing in the second quarter, when it pfled up five first downs to one for the Frogs and threatened several times to score. Twice the Mustangs worked their way to their opponents' 10-yard line, only to be stopped there by the Frogs and the treacherous footing. Again in the same period they lost the ball on the Christians' 25-yard line.

Late in the battle, after the Frogs had scored their second touchdown and had the thing sewed up, the Ponies again made quite a gesture. Spearman, Frog halfback, fumbled and Mills recovered for the Methodists 11 yards from the goal line Three plunges by Walker, sophomore back, gained only five yards, however, and Gibert's attempted pass on fourth down was knocked

Outside of the personal satisfaction gained from downing their dearest rivals, the Frogs finished in third place in the conference standing, while Southern Methodist drop-

Baylor tried but one pass and that was good for a touchdown. Late in the second quarter Wilson got loose around left end for 16 yards to the Owl 20 yard line. Baylor inserted Alford, a passer, even though not a single pass had been attempted up to that stage. The first play was a line charge good for one yard, but on the second, Alford shot a pass straight down the field to McElreath who was not bothered as he ran eight vards across the final chalk line. Lewter's place kick for the extra point was perfect.

The Bears had all the edge in the first half, taking the ball to the eight-yard line right after the game opened. The Owl line held, however, and Lewter's place kick fail-

Rice came back strong in the second half but whenever it looked as if the invaders might get somewhere, one would slip and be thrown for a loss or be intercepted. The Rice passing attack proved a boomerang, only two being completed and four being caught by Baylor men. Paradeaux, who was all over the field in his final appearance, inter- hapepned. ### SEVENTEEN CONTRACTS GIVEN FOR ROAD, BRIDGE WORK, BY STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 29. —(P)— Seaplane DO-X bridge work in 13 counties were awarded today by the state highway commission. The contracts aggregated $927,294 and specified the use of local labor wherever possible in an effort to relieve the unemployment situation. Most of the work requires a large amount of manual labor.

Formal award on six projects was withheld pending approval of plans by the United States bureau of public roads. The formal award will be made next week.

The commission also withheld award of a contract in DeWitt county, pending receipt of the county's share of the cost of the project.

W. R. Ely, chairman, said the commission probably would ask the legislature to enact a law giving the commission the right to prescribe the minimum wage scale to be paid by contractors on highway work. He said he had been informed some contractors were paying as low as 20 cents an hour for manual labor. "A condition of this kind is deplorable," Ely said, "and steps should be taken to correct it."

Contracts for work estimated to cost in excess of $1,000,000 will be awarded Monday.

Six men left aboard the plane when her officers and the rest of the crew went ashore turned fire extinguishers on the blaze and stood by to protect the gas tanks. It was a brave thing they did, for less than an hour before hundreds of gallons of fuel had been poured into those tanks and one spark would have touched off a terrific explosion.

For five minutes they fought their own battle. Then the fire was out, almost as quickly as it had started. The rest of the ship was saved, although the gleaming hull was blackened by smoke, and the pas-

Any details that have not already been worked out in regard to the change will be disposed of at a meeting of the Pampa Library association Monday afternoon at the First Methodist church. Mrs. B. E. Finley, president, is urging large representation from clubs and

The new library room is on the right hand side upon entering the east door of the city hall. New furnishings will include a long reading table, a table for reference work, a desk and chair for the librarian, and 12 arm chairs. Another feature will be the children's corner, which will contain a shelf of books for boys and girls and reading tables. History of Library

The library was formed two and ne-half years ago in the home of the Rev. and Mrs. James Todd. Three representatives from each civic club in the city were the organizers, and every book in this first library was donated. Rev. Todd was the first president of the library association, serving for two

Since the organization, the library has steadily grown until there will be more than 3,000 volumes when the new books arrive this week. There, are 1,472 patrons, about 50 per cent being children.

THE NEW CHEVROLET SIX

Strikingly beautiful, fleet and smart -a masterpiece of Fisher styling

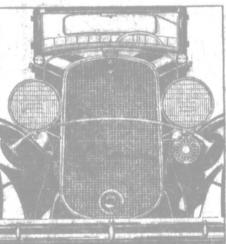

In the entire field of modern coachcraft no symbol has come to mean more to the buyer of a motor car than Body by Fisher. And never has Fisher's superiority been more strikingly exemplified than in the beautiful new bodies of the Bigger and Better Chevrolet Six!

Working with the added advantage of a lengthened wheelbase, Fisher designers have been able to achieve in the new Chevrolet a degree of smartness, comfort and impressiveness hitherto considered exclusive to cars far higher in price.

Inside and out, you will discover scores of refinement. that stamp this car as a masterpiece of modern coachwork. Radiator, headlamps and tie-bar have been artistically grouped to create an unusually attractive and distinctive ensemble. Mouldings sweep back from the graceful new radiator in an unbroken line to blend with the smart new body contours. And new colors, in carefully devised combinations, lend a new individuality.

Front view of the new Chevrolet Sport Coupe

The greater quality and heauty of the new Chevrolet-Fisher bodies have a counterpart in the many improvements which have been provided in the chassis of this final note of charm.

Interiors, too, are exceptional in

Do You Believe In Pampa

Every day Pampa lumbermen have prospective citizens call upon them with a request for estimate of cost of a four or five room house.

The callers in most cases are women who have spent several days househunting while the husband was attending to other details preparatory to moving. They preferred to rent a nice, comfortable home, but after having found nothing desirable the lady begins trying to devise a way to build. In some cases the lumberman is able to co-operate but in many instances the parties seeking homes do not have enough money to do their part on the lumberman's proposition. In such cases many good citizens are denied a place to live and are forced to move on to some other place.

The great demand is "Give Us a Place to Live." Apartment houses are crowded, rent houses are scarce, and still the newcomers are arriving daily to become permanent citizens. Right now the business managers of two of Pampa's largest stores are seeking living quarters.

Pampa is a substantial town—is rapidly becoming a substantial city. Rental property is the best investment that can be made. Good tenants are waiting for some one to express their faith in lumber, cement and glass.

The cash is on the barrel head to rent your house when it is completed.

Preston is a unique person in this world. He probably knows more newspaper editors and correspondents than any other living man. He calls by their first names nearly all newspapermen who have worked in Washington these last three decades. He is one of those admired characters for whom no one ever finds criticism. Correspondents regard him as a jewel of inestimable value and that appraisal begins on initial contact because Jim insists on being as helpful to the newest, greenest arrival as to those veterans whom he has known for many years.

Very much like a fond nurse with a large brood, Jim Preston rules over the three large rooms behind the press seats in the Senate chamber. There some 365 eligible correspondents discuss, write, telegraph and phone news. Few persons

James D. Preston ever see those rooms because one of Jim's well done jobs is to keep out those who don't belong inside.

Has Many Jobs Jim's other jobs, big and little, are too many for the telling. With a couple of assistants, including the veteran Bill Collins, he undertakes to keep in touch with everything going on in the Senate end of the capitol in which correspondents are interested. He keeps track of come elected officials to do for us what we should do, through through a thin mattress. He is tall, lean and red-faced, with black hair parted in the middle and a drooping mustache. He speaks with joke with nearly everyone who uses the gallery.

Beginning in 1900, Jim has superintended press arrangements at all national political conventions, allocating working press seats in conjunction with the standing compress seats were awarded as political favors. Prevents Confusion

At the 1928 conventions, Jim fixed it with the Resolutions Committees so that the party platforms could be given out 24 hours ahead of publication. That avoided such incidents as those at the Chicago Republican convention of 1920, when one newspaper scooped the country on the platform, and at Cleveland in 1924, when a copy was straked through a transom from a locked room.

THE TIME TO ADVERTISE

The average business man today is spending a good part of his time thinking of ways in which he can cut down expenses. Naturally, in many cases his mind turns to his advertising appropriations. At first glance, that part of should increase the power of the federal government the budget looks like a good place for the cutting process hold its place in the world councils. We must look to begin.

However, money spent for advertising is money will spent, good times or bad. Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, recently discussed the subject with Sturgis Dorrance, prominent Nw York advertising expert, and made a few comments that are worth repeating.

CENTRALIZATION TREND IS DANGEROUS There are two distinct and conflicting theories of government in this country; each is all right in its sphere but overemphasis upon either would be dangerous.

One is the old states' rights theory, upon which most time, one boing obliged to comply of us hase our arguments against over-centralization of with the wishes and habits of othpower in the federal government. An instance of this tendency is in the constant demand for federal relief. Even if this relief could be offered, it dangerous practice to force the national government to the reality than these pictures. One intervene in the business and life activities of the individual can, and should, be more comfortcitizen. It is socialistic, it is undemocratic, it is contrary winter than with the air thick to the original plan of union. Nevertheless, the writer enough to cut. The trick is simple recognizes that when people have a good government they Adequate covering is of prime imwish more of its blessings. The danger is in looking to wisdom. The basis of American liberty and prosperity neck and

President Hoover very wisely said recently that a lot of little things which show that Jim's aim is to give American cities should handle their own gangster problems, and not look to the federal government to do it for them. Remember, quartering of soldiers in colonial homes was one of the grievances against British rule. Moving $1000 on his 25th anniversary there to give him a flivver of federal troops into small municipalities or large would and a cash purse. Money was still coming in when they be unwise. It is with reluctance that the National Guard closed the fund and Jim drove the flivver for five years, is used in such instances. Briefly, government is best that governs least, and furthermore that government is best in which we individually participate most. The oldtime town councils in which the fathers of the colonies sat in pona benevolent gruffness and has some kind of a standing derous solemnity constituted the purest form of democ-

There are laws which are best administered by federal authority. These are those involving interstate problems. Local lawlessness, however, should be handled by local mittee of correspondents. If we sit back and wait for federal cleanups, we will wait in vain in most instances. Loca public opinion relaxes when responsibility is passed to tests. Diseases of the liver, kidneys federal hands.

Crime needs to be curbed as never before. Corruption gallery, seated 600 journalists from America and the rest in high places should be rooted out. Politics should be weaned from the spoils system. Every agency of detection and prosecution should be told to get "on its toes." Penology should be studied by citizens of this complex age.

But to shift local responsibility to federal forces-Even when the conference moved to the D. A. R. hall, that would be a sad day in this government of "free peowhere only a hundred press seats were provided, Jim still ple." Many duties of citizenship cannot be delegated. We must live our own lives, make our own decisions, observe our own laws, live our own religion, take local responsibilities, and look to elected officials-who are human like ourselves-for nominal interference in our affairs and for regulation of our commerce, transportation, and the like. Where the individual's opportunities cease, state and federal responsibilities begin.

It is inevitable that federal functions shall increase tremendously with regard to international relations. We strong trade organizations and firms to find market: abroad. We must relieve the national government of a much internal and local administration as possible.
