COTTON PICTURE-BECOMING INTERESTING.

COLLEGE STATION -- The cotton market has been fairly quiet in recent months, but that situation should change before too long, contends a marketing specialist for the Teras Agricultural Extension Service.

With dwindling mill stocks of cotton and a crop situation still highly subject to the vagaries of weather, mills should soon begin to buy new crop cotton, and that should boost prices,' believes Charles K. Baker.

Another big factor, says Baker, is the foreign mills. They may actually start the buying spree, and when they do, domestic mills will want to get. their share of the crop before prices move too high. For domestic mills, its been a wait and see attitude, but once buying begins, the market shouldperk up."

Why have domestic mills stayed out of the market for so long?

There are two main reasons, points out the Texas A&M University specialist--high interest rates and a desire to hold the price line as long as possible. Ashort cotton crop for Texas and the United States is in the offing, and this should get mil's in the buying mood before too long. Baker earlier estimated the U.S. cotton crop at 13 million bales and this still looks like a good projection. More than 350,000 acres of cotton have already been lost in Texas due to dry conditions, and earlier planting estimates by the U.S. Department of Agriculture can now be evaluated as some 400,000 acres too high in Texas and the other Cotton Belt states.

'With a U.S. cotton crop of 13 million bales or less, stocks for 1975 will be at a 23-year low," notes Baker. 'Farmers are holding out for higher prices for their crop as they are face with skyrocketing production costs. The cost of producing a pound of cotton in Texas this year will probably reach 40 cents a pound, up about 9 cents from last year. This necessitates that farmers get a good priced for their crop or they won't be producing for very long.'

TEXAS CATTLE FEEDING GROWTH

COLLEGE STATION"The Texas Cattle feeding industry is projected to reach at least 7.3 million head level by 1980. That would be 70 per cent great-er than the 4.3 million head output recorded in 1972," pre- > dicts Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Uvacek says, 'Demand for beef is forecasted to continue to rise steadily through 1980. This will be brought about by a larger population and a substantial increase in the per capita disposable income level, plus added demand factors such as the food stamp program.' In 1973 Texas fed cattle marketings represented 17 per cent of the national total. If Texas attains the projected 7.3 million head level by 1980 and the rest of the nation grows to the expected 38.5 million head level, the Texas share of the national output will increase to 19 per cent.

My guess would be that Texas cattle feeding could easily reach that 7.3 million level and maybe even as much as 7.7 million head,' contends

The trend toward larger feedlots also seems certain. With bigger lots being utilized more efficiently, fewer such facilities will be needed. The upper-end of the Texas Panhandle has recorded the major growth in feedlots, in slaughtering plants and related beef industry firms. This area is in the sorghum belt, the principal cattle-feed supply region. you are. One interesting facet of this feeding expansion in the High Plains of Texas is the fact that within less than a 100 mile radius from Amaril'o are four other cattle feeding areas in other states: These other areas are still within easy reach of the same sorghum supplies, the same packers and the same other related industries. What then will keep cattle feeding in Texas? Probably even more important than that--Uvacek asks, 'What factors will cause cattle feeding to shift out of Texas?

He lists several important items -- a state corporate tax, state income tax, more stringent pollution laws, imbalance in intra-versus inter-state transportation rates, attitude of Texas toward the cattle feeding business, and other state or federal regulations affecting the industry.

'Certainly these and numerous other economic and political influences will dictate whether or not Texas can retain its leadership role in cattle feeding. They may even bemore important than competitive advantages.

'All Texasns must not only realize that Texas makes beef, but also that beef contributes greatly to the economic well-being of everyone in the state. The cattle feeding industry deserves and must receive everyone's support,' emphasizes Uvacek. ''It is the underlying Uvacek. "It is the underlying industry that supports thousands of other related industries.

Band News

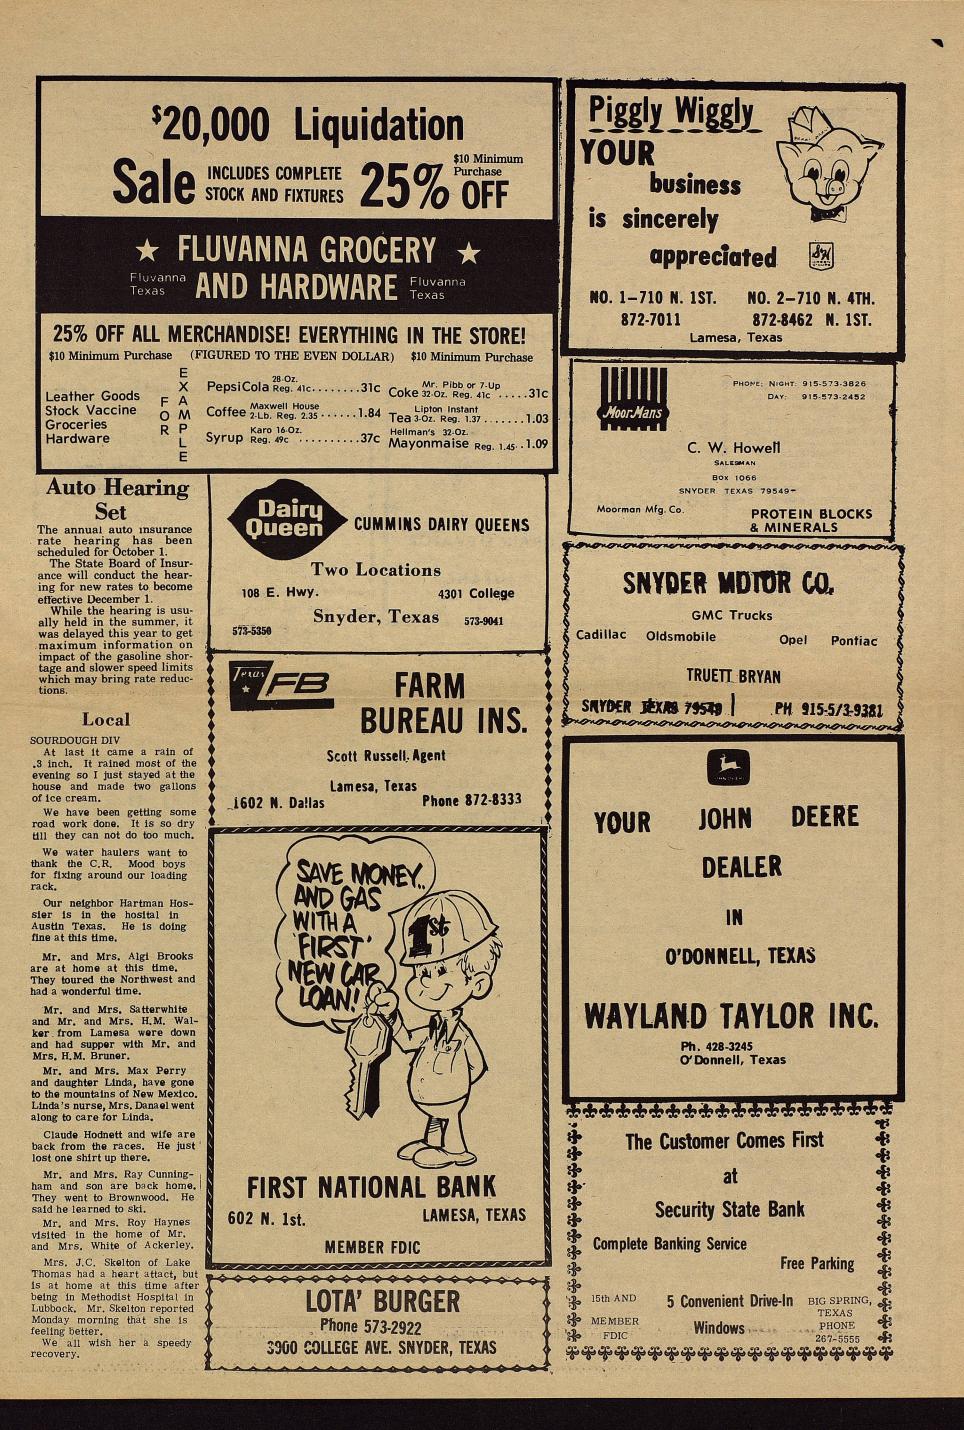

Students planning on being a member of the high school band for the coming school year are requested to come by the band hall some time during the afternoon, Monday August 12, after 3:00 p.m. Measurements for uniforms must be taken and ordered in order that the band will have uniforms for Marching Contest in November. Measurements will be taken for all band students -- cheerleaders, football players, twirlers--so everyone will need to come by. Orders for band records will be taken at this time.

BAND RECORDS

The Borden Coyote Band will once again have a record made from performances of the 1973-1974 school year. The Junior Band and the Royal Nonesuch vocal group will have selections on this year's recording along with the Coyote Band. If you would like to order a record, contact a band member and reserve the number of records you desire. You may also contact Mr. Parker at home or at school. Cash will not be necessary when you place the order, we would prefer payment on delivery which will be around the first of September. Prices for the records have climbed somewhat and this record will be avaiable for $4.00.

RMPT Has New Publication

Communities can now apply think tank' forecasting techniques developed by RAND Co-rportion and Douglas Aircraft personnel to the study of their own local health care needs. A new explanatory publication, Manual for Applying the Delphi Method to Assessing Community Health Care Needs, is available to community represent-atives through the Regional Medical Program of Texas (RMPT), a federally funded health gency in Austin.

This manual is one product of an attempt to use a formal method, the Delphi, to probe peoples opinions concerning community health care. The pilot study of Delphi techniques applied to community health care planning was sponsored by RMPT and conducted in cooperation with the Capital Area Planning Council, a 10-county Council of Government organization in Central Texas.

Milton Shoeman, Ph.D., and Seymour Schwartz, Austin he-alth management consultants. led the study team and helped prepare the manual.

'This study was one of the first times, if not the first, that the Delphi method was applied to social problems, Schwartz explained. Named for the legendary Greek oracle whose advice was sought in ancient times, the Delphi method is a means of generating input to decision making from individuals with relevant esperience, knowledge, and opinions in some area of concern--in this instance-assessing community health care needs. The goal of the Delphi method is to reconcile different, often conflicting, opinions into a meaningful consensus that forms a basis for decision making.

'You are objectively trying to get experts or knowledgeable people to reach a decision, if one can be reached,' Schwartz added.

To obtain a copy of the manual explaining how the Delphi method can be used in evaluating communtiy health.care needs, write the Regional Medical Program of Texas, 4200 N. Lamar, Room 200, Austin 78756.
