PAMPA — A Pampa woman pleaded guilty today to assaulting another woman.

Madeline Melendez, 20, pleaded guilty in 223rd District Court today to assault charges. Authorities accused Melendez of hitting another woman over the head with a gun during a fight on Feb. 27, 1997, at 1061 Prairie. The gun went off during the fight, officers said.

District Judge Lee Waters sentenced Melendez to 90 days in jail, probated to one year deferred adjudication and a $500 fine.

PAMPA — The Pampa Police Department remind drivers that blocking traffic by parking in the middle of the street is a violation of state law. Police officials said they have gotten many complaints recently about the problem especially in front of the post office and Pampa Middle School. Police will issue warnings for violations in these areas Jan. 20, after that citations will be issued for any violation.

HOUSTON (AP) — A bill that already has the stamp of approval from state utility regulators could give Texans their best defense yet against unwanted telemarketers if it becomes law.

Under the proposal by state Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, Texans wishing to bar uninvited sales calls could add their names to a single, statewide "don't call" list.

Telemarketers who call names on the restricted list could be fined up to $5,000 per day for each violation.

Three more sirens to give better coverage

By KATE B. DICKSON
Associate Publisher

Three more sirens will be added to the new ones already in place in an effort to enhance the outdoor tornado warning system if a city commission plan goes through.

Though the funding source hasn't been identified — a lease purchase is possible — commissioners agreed last week the new sirens should be bought.

The consensus of the council was to go along with Commissioner Jeff McCormick's recommendation the three sirens be purchased together and not put in place one at a time as money becomes available.

Under the plan, the city will pay an estimated $52,000 for two sirens and the LEPC has funds on hand to buy one unit, according to Ken Hall, emergency management coordinator.

The new sirens will be placed primarily near schools and will provide overlapping coverage with sirens already in place, Hall said.

Drug evidence hearing today

Testimony was expected this afternoon in a pretrial evidence suppression hearing in connection with an undercover narcotics arrest.

James Ivan McKinney, 22, was arrested May 28, 1997, and charged with possession of a controlled substance. Officers with the Panhandle Regional Narcotics Trafficking Task Force said they had information that a Pampa man was selling methamphetamine in the 600 block of North Gray Street. After obtaining a search warrant, officers arrived to find the man's wife at home alone. She told officers that her husband was with a friend in a blue pickup.

While police were searching the home, the man returned, riding in a blue Ford pickup. McKinney was driving, according to authorities. As McKinney got out of the pickup, officers said, a syringe and bag of white powder fell to the floor board of the truck.

Officers said a search of the house turned up a syringe, rolling papers and residue from a marijuana pipe were found in the bedroom. They said a marijuana pipe was found in the living room of the house during the search.

McKinney was indicted June 26, 1997, for possession of a controlled substance. Officers said a field test of the white powder indicated it was 0.18 grams of methamphetamine.

A hearing was scheduled in Judge Lee Waters 223rd District Court at 1:30 p.m. today to hear McKinney's motion to suppress evidence.

Making music ... Whim turns serious

By JEFF WEST
Staff Writer

How do you help make music if you can't sing and don't play an instrument?

Bobby Nowell knows. He's a maker of musical instruments.

Nowell works at Celanese most of the time but he and his wife, Linda, have always enjoyed music. In fact, about four years ago they went on a Rhythm and Blues Cruise where they saw and met a lot of blues musicians. They enjoyed it so much they decided to go again the next year.

While on the cruise one of the big things to do was to get the autographs of the musicians. Bobby thought the next time it would be fun to have something special for all the musicians to autograph. He decided to make a fake guitar to sign, which he felt would be a great keepsake.

Nowell has always enjoyed woodworking and as he worked on the fake guitar he and Linda noticed that it was looking and feeling more and more like a real guitar. Eventually, he decided to make a real guitar. He had a friend from Amarillo, Andy Chase, do a custom job.

Bush, Perry inaugurations make history

Bush, who says he claimed a record portion of the state's growing Hispanic vote, voiced hope that the state will unify and celebrate its diverse cultures.

"Our diversity gives Texas new life, new energy, new blood and we should not fear it but welcome it," he said.

"We should be proud of our various heritages; we should celebrate them in festivals; we should enjoy their traditions in our homes; we should share them with friends," he said. "Texans don't belong in little ethnic and racial boxes." Bush also used the speech to revisit his theme of compassionate conservatism. Neither government nor economic growth can solve all problems, he said. "In fact, we're now putting too much hope in economics, just as we once put too much hope in government," he said.

"We must rally the armies of compassion that are in every community of this state. We must encourage them, to love, to nurture, to mentor, to help and thus to offer hope to those who have none. "Because here is the danger to Texas: If the dream is not available to all, it diminishes the dreams of the entire society. As we do to the least of us, we do to ourselves."

The elaborate ceremony, which includes a sea of folding chairs on the Capitol driveway and national television coverage, made history on two fronts:

— Bush became the first governor re-elected to a second consecutive term since those terms were changed from two years to four in 1974.

— Historical records indicated that Perry, who will preside over the state Senate and be next in line for the governor's office should Bush vacate it, became the first Republican inaugurated as lieutenant governor. Several accounts show that Republican James W. Flanagan won an election for lieutenant governor in 1869 but was appointed to the U.S. Senate a short time later and never was inaugurated.

Immigrant population in Texas increases

HOUSTON (AP) — The immigrant population of Texas is now 2.3 million, an increase of 51 percent since 1990, according to data from the United States Census Bureau.
 There were 1.5 million immigrants in Texas in 1990.
 Mark Krikorian, executive director of the National Center for Immigration Studies, said Monday that immigration laws that are more favorable to family reunification caused the immigration population to soar in California, New York, Florida and Texas. More than one-fourth of all the immigrants live in those four states.
 Immigrants make up 11.7 percent of Texas' 19.7 million residents, compared with 24.1 percent of California's 32.9 million.
 One in 10 U.S. residents is foreign-born, according to the study by the nonprofit think tank.
 A high percentage of the record 26.3 million foreign-born U.S. residents are poor and underedu-cated — nearly a third have less than a high school degree — and that has affected workers and business in the United States, Krikorian said.

 Immigrants take a disproportionate share of such unskilled jobs as maids, dishwashers, harvesters and factory workers — for annual salaries that range from $13,206 to $23,751 — but the study says their effect on the employment among native-born residents has been modest.
 It has made a difference for many businesses who have postponed mechanization and other capital improvements because they have a steady supply of cheap labor to do the work.
 About 20 percent of the immigrants live in poverty, compared with 12.7 percent among natives.
 The study, based on the Census Bureau's Current Population Survey for March 1998, says each generation of immigrants seems to improve its economic situation steadily.

MUSIC

tom paint job for him, learned how to install the electronic pickup needed and in a little while he had his first guitar.
 He didn't know how it would play and took it to Tarpley Music to have it tried out. Because Nowell doesn't play guitar, at all.
 "Tarpley's has been a lot of help to me," Bobby said.
 Not only do the folks at Tarpley Music make sure his guitars sound the way they should, they are displaying several on consignment. Nowell has several on display in Amarillo, too.
 After building a few hand-painted guitars Linda suggested Bobby try using cloth to decorate the instruments. Bobby doubted cloth would work but gave it a try. A little experimenting, a lot of varnish and a few months later the process did work. Bobby now has several cloth-covered guitars, the most popular being a U.S. flag motif.

 Bobby has crafted a few custom made guitars including an oversized body with a Route 66 sign painted on it for Andy Chase, an Amarillo musician and oversized friend.
 Because Bobby works full time it takes him about two months to build a guitar. He's completed 11 or so but says he took time out for a while to build a new woodworking shop to accommodate his sideline. While the materials and labor affect the price, Nowell says his guitars cost between $600-700.
 He's not thinking about making guitars full time, figuring he would have to hire people and get a building to make enough guitars, but the five or six guitars he can make every year have the sweet sound of dedication to them.

 He stressed even with new sirens, the system is designed for outdoor warnings and is not designed to wake people inside their homes.
 If the city wants a warning system that can be heard indoors, Hall said $210,000 will be needed to fund it. Such a system requires more and louder sirens.

 Hall showed commissioners an emergency alert receiver which can read and decode warning codes that are broadcast in times of bad weather.
 He suggested the $150 receivers would be a good addition to schools, homes and offices in order to provide an indoor warning system to go along with the sirens.

Ventura DNR appointee withdraws amid controversy

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Gov. Jesse Ventura's choice for head of the state's Department of Natural Resources withdrew his name today amid a controversy over his being twice ticketed for violating fish and game rules.
 Alan Horner, a former Navy SEAL like Ventura, told Ventura that his passion for the state's natural resources remain strong.
 "It is clear, however, that when I weigh my dedication to this job against the toll it may take on my personal and family life, my family comes first," Horner said in a statement.
 Ventura praised Horner, and expressed dismay over the controversy that had prompted two DNR officials to resign in protest.
 "While I understand that this action may be in the best interest of our citizens, I continue to be disheartened by the intense scrutiny placed on our citizens as they enter public service," Ventura said.
 Assistant Commissioner Gail Lewellan said Monday that she was stepping down because respect for game and fish laws must apply to all employees. Deputy Commissioner Ron Nargang, who planned to retire soon anyway, left Friday in protest after meeting with Horner.
 "I was hoping to stay with the DNR, assuming my philosophy of managing the DNR was compatible with the new commissioner," Lewellan said.
 "Apparently, it isn't."
 Lewellan also said Horner, a 52-year-old businessman, has given different versions of what happened when he received two tickets and a warning for violating DNR laws since 1988.

Ventura praised Horner, and expressed dismay over the controversy that had prompted two DNR officials to resign in protest.
"While I understand that this action may be in the best interest of our citizens; I continue to be disheartened by the intense scrutiny placed on our citizens as they enter public service," Ventura said.

News of Horner's violations surfaced after Ventura named him last week.
 Although DNR employees can be disciplined or fired for violating hunting and fishing rules, Horner and Ventura, the former professional wrestler whose election as a third-party candidate stunned the nation in November, have called the violations minor.

 DNR employees told WCCO-TV that during a department meeting after the violations became public, Horner minimized the violations and derided DNR game wardens as "crappie cops."
 "Without an apology or at least some clarification, major clarification of his stand, yes, he should resign," said Tony Cornish, who heads the state's Conservation Officers Union.
 Horner owns Aaron Carlson Corp., which manufactures architectural woodwork for commercial buildings. Like Ventura, he is a former Navy SEAL. The two did not know each other until after the election, when Horner sent in a resume to Ventura.
 Though he has no experience in state government, Horner has an undergraduate degree in zoology and a master's in business.
 The post of DNR commissioner is one of the toughest and most visible in Minnesota, where residents care passionately about fishing, hunting and outdoor sports. The appointment must be confirmed by the state Senate.

No escape

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — The 6,000 tax forms issued to Muscogee County school employees on Friday had a fatal flaw.
 "We are all dead," a middle school teacher said Monday.
 Instead of checking the box marked pension plans on their W-2 earnings statements, the district's payroll department checked deceased.
 "Unfortunately, the computer just printed in the wrong field," said school treasurer Fred Jones.
 Still, even death won't enable them to escape their 1998 taxes.
 School officials and area accountants say that by the April 15 filing deadline, the IRS will know they're alive.

USDA lowers crop insurance premiums

WASHINGTON — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman recently announced an estimated 30 percent premium reduction for farmers on crop insurance policies. To ensure all farmers have the opportunity to benefit from this one-time premium reduction this year, crop insurance companies will accept insurance applications on crops having sales closing dates already passed.

For example, an insured winter wheat farmer in Texas having a sales closing date of Sept. 30, 1998, for crop year 1999 coverage now has until March 15, 1999, to evaluate the benefits of increased protection at a lower cost. Producers choosing not to insure last September will have the same opportunity to use the discount to obtain "buy up" protection. "Buy up" protection is an amount of coverage that is at least 50 percent of a farm's yield and 100 percent of an established market price.

"Given low crop prices, we want to ensure that as many family farmers as possible take advantage this year of the opportunity to increase their crop insurance coverage or benefit from reduced cost," said Glickman. "The plans ... will help provide farmers greater security."

The funds for this one-time incentive are part of the $2.375 billion Congress appropriated to assist farmers suffering from crop and economic losses. This initiative is the first element of the USDA's plan to strengthen the farm safety net.

The application period will provide eligible farmers time to take advantage of the discount by either applying for insurance or increasing their protection. The final percentage of premium discount will depend on how many farmers choose to insure or increase their protection and will be announced after sales have closed.

Farmers growing crops with sales closing dates between July 31, 1998, and Feb. 15, 1999, are eligible to increase their protection or to obtain crop insurance in Texas by the following date: March 15, 1999.

Farmers should contact a crop insurance agent to obtain more information and to discuss their options. A listing of crop insurance agents is available at local Farm Service Agency offices.

Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers school to offer basic, advanced classes

FORT WORTH — Classes for the 1999 Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association School for Successful Ranching will offer something for producers with all levels of experience, according to C. Coney Burgess, president of TSCRA. The school will be held March 27-28 at Fort Worth prior to the association's annual convention.

The school will provide demonstrations using live animals, equipment and plant materials. Topics will include range and pasture management, beef cattle health and horse safety and theft prevention. Continuing education units will be offered for recertification of pesticide applicator licenses and advanced classes will be available in nutrition and risk management.

Drs. Allan McGinty and Darrell Ueckert of San Angelo Research and Extension Center will give a live Brush Busters demonstration using ATVs and sprayer equipment. "To ignore brush on rangeland or improved pasture until it is dense and mature is a common error among landowners," says McGinty. "Our Brush Busters program provides user-friendly, do-it-yourself technology that is highly selective and effective, environmentally friendly and usually much less expensive than conventional methods ..."

Dr. Barron Rector of Texas A&M University says there are about 150 species of plants that are important to livestock managers' decision-making ability. Rector plans to bring plants representing 10 different ecological areas of Texas to help producers identify which plants are poisonous and which show improvement or deterioration of the health of your land.

Other demonstrations will include how to deliver a live calf when problems occur such as backwards delivery or feed and legs turned back; how to visually assess the body condition of cows and how that relates to performance and reproduction; and how to avoid causing tenderness and injection site problems through proper animal health practices.

A special horse session with trainer Craig Cameron will help producers prevent safety problems and start a young horse on cattle. This will be a joint session with participants from the Tarrant County Horse-O-Rama. Butch Davis, TSCRA field inspector, will address horse identification and theft prevention. Horse owners can have their horses branded on-site if they have registered a brand with their county clerk.

The school is funded through Pfizer Animal Health's Cattlemen's College Program and an educational grant from Dow AgroSciences. Registration is $50 per person. For more information, call Sharla Ishmael or Kathy Wood at 1-800-242-7820 or (817) 332-7155.

Dreams can be scary

Jeff West

Pampa News staff

"To sleep, perchance to dream," that's the way ol' Billy Shakespeare put it back in his writing days. While I certainly like the sleep part of that quote, I'm thinking that ol' B.S. must have had different kind of dreams than those that wake me.

For much of my life I would have almost denied that I had dreams, I never remembered them or had them wake me up (except the occasional falling thing that a lot of people have just as they drift off.) But the last few years my dreams wake me up more and more. Occasionally I can remember exactly what happens but more often it's just a sense of dread. A feeling that I'm trapped in a spiral of nothing but work, TV, sleep, back to work, it's really scary ... no, wait, that's the real life, my dreams are even worse, there's never any TV in my dreams.

I guess I started thinking about dreaming more after watching an episode of the Fox show, Ally McBeal. This is a show about lawyers. Now, since part of most of my days are spent with lawyers or the law, I wouldn't normally watch a show about lawyers but many of these TV lawyers have short skirts and great legs and that's pretty far removed from the lawyers I know so it's o.k.

Anyway, this particular show had a terminally ill woman who wanted to be put in a coma so she could dream all the time. It seems she had over the years created a wonderful husband and children in her dreams, something she couldn't do in life. I was less interested in the outcome of the show as knowing how you could have consistent, progressive dreams. If I dream up a woman in my dreams she either chases me with a hatchet or is yelling at me about something. There's usually someone yelling at me in my dreams, familiar people in my usual routine.

I'd almost welcome a dream where I was being chased by a big, ugly monster over hill and dale, (what is a dale anyway?), or facing down Saddam Hussein's Republican Guard with only a pig's foot to keep them at bay. At least then I'd have a change of scenery in my dreams. Now, not even the scenery changes. I've given up hoping that Sandra Bullock will visit my dreams, and if she did she'd only yell at me about something.

While I've seen books that supposedly tell you how to interpret dreams, I don't think I would want to do that even if I could remember details long enough to look in a book, besides I don't know that I really want to find the answer. Memories of the dreams can be scary enough knowing what they meant might be more than I could handle. I wonder if there's a book out there to tell you how to just shut dreams down. To sleep, perchance to not dream. That would be cool.

Be good to one another and be good to yourselves.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 19, the 19th day of 1999. There are 346 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 19, 1807, Robert E. Lee, commander in chief of the Confederate armies, was born in Stratford, Va.

On this date:

In 1736, James Watt, inventor of the steam engine, was born in Scotland.

In 1809, author Edgar Allan Poe was born in Boston.

In 1853, Verdi's opera "Il Trovatore" premiered in Rome.

In 1861, Georgia seceded from the Union.

In 1944, the federal government relinquished control of the nation's railroads following settlement of a wage dispute.

In 1955, a presidential news conference was filmed for television for the first time, with permission from President Eisenhower.

Time to shake apathy, reclaim basic freedoms

■ A momentous time in history should be an occasion for action.

Milestones play a big part in the human experience. Without them, a lot of motivation would never materialize.

For instance, the turning of the calendar from December to January seems to have a magical effect on many people. They make resolutions for the new year, vow to do better with a new start and generally show signs of turning the proverbial new leaf.

Alas, with so many though, they quickly lose their momentum and soon fall back into the standard one-foot-in-front-of-the-other mode.

Perhaps it is this attitude, coupled with a tendency to get wrapped up in your own little world with all your own little (and sometimes big) problems, that causes the general public to be less vigilant.

At any rate, this widespread epidemic of apathy opens the door for a lot of the social and public ills that plague the American scene.

Ironically, one of the biggest complaints in today's world, the infringement of government on nearly all aspects of life, has been made possible by the lack of interest by a majority of the people who are affected by the intrusions.

As a prime example, this always is the time of the year that average Americans realize just how much of their hard-earned money has been seized by the federal government. Many grumble about the almost unlimited power of the Internal Revenue Service to lift that money from their pockets (despite some recent cursory efforts by Congress to clamp down on the IRS practices). But few translate their concerns into action. They just accept the status quo and pony up the cash.

The same goes for the day-to-day business of bureaucracies at every level. Often these "official" doings present hardships for various reasons, but any attempts at changing the system end with mutual shrugs by those who could make a difference — the taxpayers who pay the salaries and the bills.

Most Americans are vaguely aware that this entire nation came about as a result of a massive revolt generated by unfair taxing policies. But any thought of a modern-day Boston Tea Party is lost in complacency and a desire to pursue the path of least resistance.

Which brings us right back to the subject of milestones.

Looming on the horizon are a couple of significant milestones that are sure to generate more excitement than the mere changing of one year to the next.

Soon we will be entering a new century and a new millennium (some will insist on celebrating these mutual events as 2000 arrives, despite the fact that simple math proves that the real observance will come on Jan. 1, 2001). The pomp and circumstance that goes along with such observances already has started (along with concerns about what 2000 will do to our computer-dependent society).

So with the confusion about when the century and millennium really begin and all the awareness that goes along with the hoopla, this would seem to be a fine time to mount a campaign to right some of the wrongs that we all see in our current political process.

For the two new milestones that await (whether you choose 2000 or 2001 as the effective date, or choose a biblical perspective that says Jesus Christ was born in 4 B.C., so the second "millennium" really passed in 1996), wouldn't it be nice to give yourself a gift befitting the heritage of this nation — namely some more personal freedom and liberty.

The governmental system, bloated as it is by years of abuse and public neglect, won't be easily dismantled. But if the trend isn't reversed, the problems only will get worse.

So why not use these symbolic milestones as an impetus to reclaim some of the freedoms that were guaranteed in the historic and often forgotten documents created by the founding fathers?

Applying the Nixon standard

On July 30, 1974, the House Judiciary Committee convened to debate articles of impeachment against President Nixon. The tide was running against him. Thanks to the Watergate scandal, his approval rating was down to 29 percent. He was facing a Supreme Court order to turn over tapes of White House conversations he had tried to keep secret. The previous day, the committee had approved articles accusing him of obstruction of justice and abuse of power.

Now, the committee had to consider a third article, holding him accountable for defying a congressional subpoena. After a debate, the members narrowly approved it. They proceeded to reject an article claiming that Nixon usurped the powers of Congress by carrying out a secret bombing campaign in Cambodia. Then, with a prime-time national TV audience watching, the committee turned to the final article, dealing with Nixon's underpayment of federal income taxes and acceptance of government-financed improvements on his homes in California and Florida.

This was no small matter. During his first term, Nixon somehow managed to pay only modest amounts to the Internal Revenue Service. There was a simple explanation, it turned out: When he donated his vice presidential papers to the National Archives, he and his lawyers backdated the gift to circumvent a change in tax law. After an IRS investigation and a review of his returns by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, Nixon was ordered to pay $467,000.

This episode provoked public outrage, and Nixon's more vociferous critics regarded it as a serious offense. Here, ordinary citizens were presented with the spectacle of the head of the executive branch breaking the law to avoid paying the taxes needed to finance the operations of government — a violation likely to erode not only public confidence in their leaders but compliance with tax laws. In filing a 1040 form, the taxpayer attests to its accuracy under penalty of perjury — and Nixon's form was grossly inaccurate.

Some Democrats argued that by arranging the federally paid improvements at his private residences, Nixon not only enriched himself but violated the Constitution, which says that aside from his salary, the president "shall not receive ... any other emolument from the United States."

But the Judiciary Committee didn't buy it. Some members questioned whether Nixon was aware of the fraud, but the consensus on the committee was simply that the matter didn't rise to the level of impeachable conduct. Said Illinois Republican Tom Railsback, who voted for the first two articles of impeachment, "I suggest there's a serious question as to whether something involving his personal tax liability has anything to do with his conduct of the office of the president." Every Republican voted no.

No fewer than nine of the 21 committee Democrats took the same view. "I don't find this an abuse of power," said Jerome Waldie of California. Utah's Wayne Owens agreed: "I believe Mr. Nixon knowingly underpaid his taxes ... and knowingly had improvements made on his home. But these offenses don't rise to the level of impeachability." Robert Drinan of Massachusetts, one of the most liberal members of the House, voted for all of the other articles but opposed this one.

Attorney Richard Cates, who was senior associate special counsel to the committee, says the tax charge stirred little interest among the members. "Many of them didn't pay that much attention to it," he recalls. "They were looking for conduct that subverted the Constitution."

In their brief against President Clinton, the House impeachment managers insist that if he is not removed for his alleged perjury and obstruction of justice in a civil case about personal behavior before he took office, then impeachment will be a dead letter: "The bar will be so high that only a convicted felon or a traitor will need to be concerned."

But it's his critics, not his defenders, who want to change the standard. What was good enough for Nixon, they suggest, is too good for Clinton. In Nixon's case, the Judiciary Committee concluded, in a bipartisan vote, that ordinary violations of the law didn't warrant the use of this formidable weapon. Removing a president who has been chosen by the American people was something to be reserved for abuses of his position as president.

Republicans had no trouble with that proposition in 1974. But in 1974, impeachment was about preserving our constitutional order, not about destroying political enemies by any means available. It was a different world, a long time ago.

Tribute to a truly unique politician

I worked at one time for a Florida governor who had three qualities very unusual for a politician: He was honest, he was courageous and he had a great sense of humor.

It was his sense of humor that caused me the most headaches, because part of my job was to be concerned about his relations with the press. But he refused to cater to the press, and I loved him for it, despite the damage it caused him.

This former governor's name is Claude Kirk. He's retired now and to my knowledge is the only Florida governor since the War Between the States to leave office poorer than when he went in. Most Florida governors, like most politicians these days, have remarkable good luck with their investments and job offers after leaving office. But in politics, honesty is definitely not the best policy in a monetary sense. You get my drift, I'm sure.

One liberal editor of a major paper was particularly malicious in his constant attacks on the governor. I once told the governor, "Most of these guys are all ego and easy to flatter, so why don't you call (name excluded) now and then and ask his advice on some subject?"

"Why should I call (the editor)?" the governor replied. "I don't even like the (expletive deleted)." And that was the end of that topic.

Florida has a cabinet form of government, and the cabinet meetings are usually long, routine and dull. It was the custom at that time for The Associated Press or the United Press guy to sit through them and then share the story with the rest of the press corps.

Charley Reese

Syndicated columnist

Kirk, however, was unpredictable, so when he instructed me to inform the capitol press corps that he would make an important announcement at the next cabinet meeting, they had no choice but to show up.

I had asked him what he intended to announce.

"Well, if I don't tell you, then you can't tell them. Right?" he said with a smile. "Go post the notice."

The day of the cabinet meeting, the entire press corps showed up, visibly annoyed. The governor proceeded through the long, routine agenda with no hint at all about what his announcement would be. As the hours passed, the press corps was getting angry and restless.

Finally, after the last trivial item had been handled and some four and a half hours had passed, Governor Kirk said, "I now have a very important announcement to make. On the next Apollo mission, the astronauts are going carry real Florida orange juice instead of Tang." Then he abruptly left the room.

It was like a stun grenade had exploded. There was a second of silence. The journalists, their morning shot, stood there with their mouths open like dead fish. Then there was an eruption of profanity, cursing and tossing of notebooks as they stormed out of the room.

In the meantime, the governor was in his private office, where he was practically falling on the floor laughing. It is not a good idea for a politician to play practical jokes on the press, particularly a liberal press that didn't like the Republican governor to begin with.

But, by God, it was funny.

He showed the same courage on more serious occasions. When Rap Brown came to Florida, Kirk went to the city where he was speaking to a large crowd and, unannounced, walked through the crowd alone up onto the stage, where he snatched the microphone out of Brown's hand and began to engage him and the audience in a debate. The "burn, baby, burn" demagogue was completely deflated. I've never seen Kirk's like again among politicians.

N.D. man makes mark by starting Christian tattoo group

By BRIAN WITTE
Associated Press Writer

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Randy Mastre is a tattoo artist of Christian themes. He inks Jesus into his customers.

His tattooed Biblical inscriptions and portraits of Christ provide startling contrast to more typical flaming skulls and "Born to Raise Hell" markings adorning the leather-clad bikers he rubs elbows with at national tattoo conventions. It was at one of those conventions that he met the Rev. Daniel Ostrowski, a born-again Christian and Word of Faith pastor who runs a tattoo parlor in Wausau, Wis.

Last year, the two decided to unite other Christian tattooers. Since then, almost 100 tattoo parlors across the nation have heard the call of the Christian Tattoo Association.

"Our idea is: Let's take Christianity out of cloistered halls and put it right in the forum where people live, and let's make it so real, so up-to-date, so today that it impacts peoples' lives," Ostrowski says.

Adds Mastre, who is studying to be a Pentecostal pastor, "I think the best way to put it is a few like-minded people that are trying their very best to share the word of God in a place where it's never heard."

At tattoo conventions, they put up a table and work the crowd.

Some members adopt tattoos that cover their entire backs. Tattoos of St. Michael slaying the devil and the Last Supper are popular.

"I've seen hundreds of full-back Christian tattoos," Mastre says. Mastre says he's wanted to start a Christian tattoo group for years. He said Christians in the industry need to encourage each other.

"We don't want everybody in the world to think that tattooing is the work of the devil because it isn't," Mastre says. "It's a beautiful art form."

Rand Johnson, a tattooer in Willmar, Minn., describes the group as a ministry focused on people in the tattoo industry — and whoever else will listen.

"For the most part, the world of tattoos and tattooing and such is a pretty dark world, and as a Christian you want to shed a little light in there," Johnson says.

Some members of the clergy aren't wild about the idea.

Fargo Bishop Rick Foss says that if somebody has to have a tattoo, he'd rather it have a Christian theme. But, he adds, there are better ways to spread God's word.

"I'd be really surprised if anybody could make a very good case in the Bible or the basis of Christian tradition that this is somehow a really good thing," says Foss, who heads the Eastern North Dakota Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Some clergy members who are against tattooing cite a Biblical passage in Leviticus, which they say warns, "Ye shall not make any cuttings in your flesh for the dead, nor print any marks upon you..."

Mastre argues that by the Old Covenant, they have to do it all,"

Mastre said. "They just can't pick out one thing or the other."

Christian tattoos have always comprised a sizable piece of the tattoo market, Ostrowski says. What's new is the effort to organize.

From small Biblical quotations to portraits of Jesus, Mastre works in his tattoo parlor in a Bismarck mall. A sign saying "Praise the Lord" hangs above one of his studios, where he'll make a small tattoo for $40 to $100. Larger works run from $300 into the thousands.

Mastre says he also removes about 40 tattoos a month.

"I know that several times people have come in with demonic type of tattoos, and they've become Christian and wanted them removed or covered," he says.

Dad, three young sons die in mountain crash

HONOBIA, Okla. (AP) — No cause has been determined for a plane crash that killed an Arkansas doctor and his three young sons in the Kiamichi Mountains of southeastern Oklahoma.

But police at the scene say the Kiamichi range's steep climbs have contributed to more than one plane crash in the past.

"If you get down real low, you'll hit a hill sooner or later," Lt. John Sparks of the Arkansas State Police said Monday.

Arkansas State Police in a helicopter spotted the plane missing since Saturday night at 9:40 a.m. about halfway up a mountain in the Kiamichi Mountains.

"It would appear that the wreckage was scattered through a heavily wooded area, very rugged terrain," Bill Sadler, public information officer for the State Police, said from Little Rock, Ark.

The Oklahoma Highway Patrol identified the dead pilot as Dr. Bruce Brown Jr., 36, of Springdale, Ark. Brown's sons — Weston Michael, 8; Joshua Garrett, 5, and Hayden David, 3; — were also aboard.

"The plane disintegrated as it went into the ground," said Lt. Derral Punneo of the Highway Patrol. "There's not any recognizable pieces."

The 1959 Cessna 182 took off from Dallas' Love Field late Saturday for Springdale. Brown had been visiting his sister in Dallas.

Capt. Charles C. Newcomb of the Oklahoma Wing of the Civil Air Patrol said the aircraft's last reported position was 50 miles southeast of McAlester.

Ben Frizzell, spokesman for the Oklahoma Office of Emergency Management, said the wreckage turned up seven miles north of Honobia in a rocky and heavily forested area of Pushmataha County.

"What we're talking about is the Kiamichi wilderness," Frizzell said. "There's a reason they call it wilderness."

Investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were called to the scene. Frizzell said those agencies will determine the cause and time of the crash.

Lt. Col. Don Van Alstine, Oklahoma wing vice commander for the Civil Air Patrol, said air controllers in Fort Worth had no indication of problems when they last heard from Brown late Saturday.

"His last communication was safe at 8,000, 9,000 feet," Van Alstine said. "The center said there was no stress to his voice. He was simply calling in."

However, officials noted that Brown's altitude dropped from about 9,000 to 5,000 feet before it went off the radar, Van Alstine said.

Brown was a native of Fort Smith, Ark., and attended the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences in Little Rock. He moved to Springdale in 1992 to practice obstetrics and gynecology at the Jones Clinic.

One of Brown's medical partners, Dr. Michael McMullin, said Brown loved to fly.

"It was his release, a way to get rid of the tension of the day," McMullin said.

Brown was mourned Monday throughout the medical community.

"This is going to affect a whole lot of lives," said Kaye Reese, vice president of marketing at Northwest Regional Medical Center. "It is a tremendous loss for everyone."

McMullin said employees were informing patients of Brown's death.

"This has been a very difficult time for the employees and patients. He was one of the busiest physicians. He saw more patients than other doctors," McMullin said.

Brown is survived by his wife, Kicia Magby and daughter Britney.

Sex discrimination suit nets female prof $12 million

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A jury has awarded more than $12.6 million to a former chemistry professor who had filed a sex discrimination lawsuit after being denied tenure at Hartford's Trinity College.

The award may be the largest ever in a U.S. tenure case, education experts said.

Leslie Craine, 55, was hired in 1987. She was given the unanimous recommendation of her department but was denied tenure in 1993. She sued and lost her job the following year.

The case went to trial in November in Hartford Superior Court. The jury issued its verdict Thursday.

Jurors rejected her claim of age discrimination but agreed with her on claims of sex discrimination and breach of contract. The award included $671,304 for loss of past and future wages, $2 million for sex discrimination, $4 million for emotional distress and $6 million in punitive damages.

"We asked the jury to send a message that it is not appropriate to treat women differently than men," said Jacques J. Parenteau, a lawyer for Craine.

A lawyer for the school, Felix J.

Springer, said women make up about half of Trinity's faculty and one-third of its tenured faculty, "a record I suspect is among the best in New England." The school plans to appeal.

Jordan Kurland, associate general secretary of the American Association of University Professors in Washington, said courts traditionally have deferred to schools on tenure decisions. He said the jury award may be the largest of its kind.

Craine now teaches part time at Central Connecticut State University in New Britain.

Runaway Dad Isn't Welcome To Walk Daughter Down Aisle

DEAR ABBY: I need some advice about how to talk to my father. I'm getting married soon and do not want him to give me away at the wedding ceremony.

He left when I was about 2 years old and came back into the picture again when I was 16. The man who was more like a father to me, and still is, is my grandfather. He is the person I would like to ask to give me away.

I haven't been able to come up with a diplomatic way of telling my father how I feel. I'm not even sure I want him at my wedding. He knows I don't value him as a daughter should value a father and has made several attempts to redeem himself in my eyes. However, I am far from impressed.

Since I am sadly lacking communication skills, will you please help me?

that Cary has done this to people all his life. Well, enough was enough! I sued him for what he owes me. No judgment has been rendered, but I do have a trial date.

Abby, men like Mike and Cary are the worst criminals of all. Not only do they take everything you have, they break your heart. I have been sick emotionally and physically, and cannot seem to get over it and have turned to God for his guidance.

DEAR DEVASTATED: You have my sympathy. There is give-and-take in all relationships, but it's supposed to be a two-way street. It's clear from your letter that you did all the giving and Cary did all the taking.

I'm pleased that you are finding comfort in God. I can't think of a more potent combination than God and a good lawyer. I hope you nail the buzzard.

require profound changes. Make choices in your best interest. Tonight: Talk to a partner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)  You have your hands full; information, calls and people keep coming in. Explore options, though with the hectic pace you barely have a second. Rather than blow a fuse, remain even and direct. Screen calls and do what you need to. Tonight: Let another choose.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)  Others are definitely in control; if you try to buck the trends, you quickly discover this! Listen to your inner voice concerning finances and a very difficult associate. Know that you won't change them. Emphasis is on daily matters, greater success and quality of life. Tonight: Accept an invitation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)  You are active and want to take charge. As usual, a partner nixes your enthusiasm. Tempters flare. However justified your anger, it simply won't help you. Deal with a partner, but isolate him from your key projects. Creativity remains your strong suit. Tonight: Let your ingenuity lead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)  You might not always have the right answers. Frustration comes out in day-to-day matters. Getting a project moving is difficult today. Restrictions make you feel negative; view them as indicators of where problems may lie. Tonight: Take a midweek break!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)  You might feel pressured to achieve. A family member has a distinct idea about what to do and which way to go. Still, you need to respond to your inner core. You have changed; remember that when dealing with others, especially if you feel their reactions are off. Tonight: Home. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)  Initiate talks. The pressure you feel could be coming from what you think others expect from you. Emphasis is on money and security. You offer much more than you realize. Listen to others, then evaluate some of the positive feedback you get. Tonight: Out and about.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)  The Sun's passage into your sign allows a new beginning. Financial matters are highlighted. You might not be sure about whether to act now. A friend has a certain agenda and might not be easily put off. You might need to disappoint this individual. Tonight: Treat another.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)  You are personality plus, though something could be brewing behind the scenes. Take some time before implementing important decisions. Sensitivity to others is high, though you could tell off an overbearing or difficult boss without hesitation. Tonight: Your call.

BASKETBALL

PAMPA — The Pampa Optimist boys basketball signups will be held today and Wednesday, starting at 5:30 at the Optimist Club.

The signup fee is $35. The two basketball leagues are divided into the 3rd-4th grades and the 5th-6th grades.

The Pampa Optimist Club is located at 601 E. Craven.

MIAMI — Miami lost a 36-34 squeaker to Higgins in a District 5-1A boys' game last weekend.

Garrett Barton had 19 points to lead Higgins in scoring.

Shane Thompson was high scorer for Miami with 15. Mike May followed with 6.

Miami held a seven-point lead (23-16) at halftime.

Booker had 13 points and Pool 11 to lead Higgins to victory in the girls' game.

Natalie Glenn had 5 points to lead Miami.

BASEBALL

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Rick Helling, who won 20 games last season to tie for the major league lead, agreed Monday to a $10.5 million, three-year contract with the Texas Rangers through 2001.

Hellir, who had a 20-7 record with a 4.41 ERA in 33 starts, will make $2.25 million in 1999, $3.75 million in 2000, and $4.5 million in 2001.

"My wife and I felt it was a good deal and we're happy with the confidence the Rangers showed in us for the long term," Helling said.

The 28-year-old right-hander made $216,500 last year and became one of the players with 2-3 years of major league service who became eligible for salary arbitration because of the 1990 lockout settlement.

Helling was the first Ranger pitcher to win his first six starts in a season last season. He went 5-0 in his last eight starts.

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Once comatose and near death from a persistent lung infection, Joe DiMaggio has gone home to work on his recovery — and his pitching.

The 84-year-old baseball great was released Monday from Memorial Regional Hospital, where he had spent more than three months. He hopes to visit Yankee Stadium in New York to throw out the season's opening pitch April 9.

"Mr. DiMaggio wishes to express his thanks to the doctors, ICU nurses and staff at Memorial Regional Hospital for helping him recover from infectious pneumonia, as well as to the 250 million people out there who are praying for him," his lawyer, Morris Engelberg, said in a statement Monday.

"Mr. DiMaggio is looking forward to opening day in Yankee Stadium."

New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner visited DiMaggio in early January.

"Joe will certainly toss out the first ball," Steinbrenner said Monday. "It's a wonderful moment for me personally and for the fans."

Hospital officials and DiMaggio's doctor's office refused to discuss his condition at the time of his discharge. Engelberg's statement did not elaborate.

DiMaggio entered the intensive care unit on Oct. 12 and spent 99 days there. He reportedly will have 24-hour nursing at his home in Hollywood.

DiMaggio had a cancerous tumor removed from his right lung two days after he was admitted. He had recurring pneumonia in his left lung despite treatment with three antibiotics, and had fluid drained from his lungs several times.

He slipped into a coma last month, prompting cardiologist Dr. Earl Barron to give him a slim chance of survival. When DiMaggio came out of the coma, his first order of business was to admonish his doctor for providing public updates on his condition. His privacy was more cherished than ever.

Atlanta revels in Falcons' first Super Bowl

ATLANTA (AP) — Start flapping those arms and jump on the bandwagon — the Atlanta Falcons are going to the Super Bowl.

The city awoke Monday with a giant "Dirty Bird" hangover, celebrating a gritty team that pulled off a stunning upset in the din of the Metrodome, conveniently forgetting all those years when the Falcons were treated like the crazy uncle that everyone in the family tries to ignore.

"Go Braves — and take the Falcons with you," was a popular bumper sticker in the 1980s when both teams were at the bottom of their respective sports.

Well, the Braves have tomahawk-chopped their way to seven straight postseason appearances in the 1990s, but it took the NFL's winningest coach and a strutting group of has-beens and never-weres to take the Falcons to their first championship game after 33 years.

Atlanta, which defeated Minnesota 30-27 in overtime Sunday for the NFC title, will meet the Denver Broncos in the Jan. 31 Super Bowl in Miami.

The team will begin its preparations on Wednesday, which left a couple of days to savor the moment. Actually, the party began Sunday night when the team arrived at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport and was greeted by more than 5,000 people. Nary a mention was made of those three years when the team failed to sell out a home game.

"You felt like you were in a dream world," said linebacker Jessie Tuggle, who has been with the Falcons for a dozen, mostly losing seasons. "You always talk about being in a Super Bowl and now we've done it. We earned the right to go to Miami. It means a lot when it all sinks in, the way everything fell together."

Another 4,000 or so revelers jammed the team's suburban training complex, creating a rush hour-like traffic jam in the middle of the night. The scene was surreal when the players appeared on a second-floor balcony, saluting the crowd that had spilled onto the practice field below.

"It was absolutely nuts," Tuggle said. "It was like a rock concert in Suwanee, Georgia."

Coach Dan Reeves, who underwent heart bypass surgery just five weeks ago, endured a whirlwind schedule Monday. After getting only 4 1/2 hours of sleep, he appeared on ABC's "Good Morning America," stopped by Piedmont Hospital for a routine check-up, and held his usual post-game news conference in Suwanee.

Of course, there was nothing routine or usual about this day. The Falcons have never played at this time of year, suffering through 25 losing seasons in their first 32 years.

After Reeves was hired as coach, the Falcons lost seven of their first eight games in 1997. Since then, they have won 22 of 26 — doubling the franchise's playoff victories from two to four in the span of eight days.

"It's incredible when you think about it," Reeves said, "coming from 1-7 halfway through your first year to be in the Super Bowl in the second year. I can't say enough about our players."

But much of the focus will be on Reeves at this Super Bowl. He'll be facing the team he coached for 12 years and took to three title games. He'll also be facing the coach he fired for alleged subordination and the quarterback who said playing for Reeves was "hell."

Reeves, who was fired by the Broncos after the 1992 season, insisted Monday that he has buried any hard feelings for Mike Shanahan and John Elway.

"I don't live in the past," the Falcons coach said. "If you're going to be a football coach and you preach and teach to the players that they should look to the next play and not think about the last one, I think you have to go through life the same way."

Pampa wrestlers compete in Cotton Bowl tourney

PAMPA — Recently, the Pampa Takedown Club sent five wrestlers to the Cotton Bowl Wrestling Tournament in Dallas.

The Cotton Bowl is one of the toughest tournaments in Texas, according to Pampa coach Rick Urquhart, and wrestlers come from as far away as New Jersey to test their wrestling skills.

"The young men who represented Pampa not only had to go out and wrestle their hearts out, but they had to watch their weight for the privilege to wrestle. These wrestlers have spent many hours in practice to be able to compete at this level of competition," Urquhart said.

Cuylar Brewer and Kyle Cambern both placed second in their respective divisions. Cuylar competed in the Division One 43-pound class and Kyle competed in the Division Four 120-pound class.

Kasey Urquhart placed fifth in the Division Three 55-pound class. Cammron Wall was seventh in the Division 1 37-pound class and Stephen Muniz was seventh in the Division 5 125-pound class.

Urquhart said he is very excited about the wrestling program in Pampa.

"The people and businesses have been great in their support and interest," he said. "I am also excited about the upcoming program in the high school here. We already have young men feeding into the high school athletic program and now that wrestling has become a UIL sport, I look forward to Pampa becoming a powerhouse in Texas wrestling."

Middle school teams play against Borger

PAMPA — Pampa played Borger in middle school girls' basketball action last week.

Borger defeated Pampa, 36-34, in the 7th grade game.

Jennie Waggoner had 18 points to lead Pampa in scoring. Abbi Covalt had 12 points and Chelsea Davis 4.

Borger defeated Pampa, 26-7, in the B team game.

Nerissa Perry, Michelle Cox and Amber Freeman had 2 points each while Stephanie Nelson had 1.

Borger defeated Pampa, 40-31, in the 8th grade division.

Leading scorers for Pampa were Valerie Velez with 11, Sarah Porter 9, Casey Fisher 4 and Kristy Farnum 4. Farnum had 9 rebounds while Lindsey Ledbetter had 5 and Stephanie Goldsmith 4.

Borger won the B team game, 25-20.

Scoring for Pampa were Hollie Gattis 10, Danielle Green 5 and Amber Diggars 3.

Green had 10 rebounds while Jessica Knipp and Gattis had 5 each and Christina Rodriguez 3.

PAMPA — Pampa and Borger played in middle school boys' basketball games last week.

In the 8th grade division, Borger won by a score of 59-49.

Leading scorers for Pampa were Chance Crain with 16 points, Clay Trimble 13 and James Silva 11.

Borger defeated Pampa 36-33 in the B team game.

Leading scorers for Pampa were Carlos Solis with 8 points, Tommy Abernathy 6, Matt Foust 5 and Jay Gerber 5.

Both Pampa teams have 4-5 records.

Borger won over Pampa, 55-48, in the 7th grade game.

Clarke Hale had 19 points, Andrew Curtis 10 and Collin Bowers 8 to lead Pampa scoring.

Pampa won the B team contest, 38-28, with Andy Rodgers leading the way with 17 points. Hunter Craig followed with 5.

Both Pampa teams have 6-3 records.

Harvesters win at Odessa

PAMPA — The Pampa boys' soccer team participated in the Odessa Tournament last weekend.

Pampa lost to Odessa High, 3-2, in a shootout in the first match, but then came back to defeat Killeen Ellison, 2-1. Curtis Johnson scored both Harvester goals.

Pampa closed out the tournament with a 1-0 loss to El Paso Bel Air.

"We've played all 5A teams so far. We haven't played a 4A team yet," said Pampa coach John True. "I guess that'll help us when we get to district."

The Harvesters play at Lubbock High today in Lubbock and then go to San Angelo on Saturday to meet Central High.

District play opens Feb. 2 with the Harvesters hosting Caprock. Pampa has a 2-3 record.

Vikings suffer the Monday blues

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Devastated. Stunned. Unbelieving.

The Minnesota Vikings were all of that and more Monday as they tried to come to terms with a reality almost no one except the Atlanta Falcons expected: that the Vikings won't be going to the Super Bowl for at least another year.

"I'm walking like I'm in the twilight zone," nose tackle Jerry Ball said. "I can't believe we lost that game. Honestly, I am truly in the twilight zone."

Ball spent much of Sunday night staring out the window of his downtown Minneapolis hotel room, wondering what went wrong in Sunday's 30-27 overtime loss to the Falcons in the NFC championship game.

He wasn't alone.

Gary Anderson barely slept after missing a 38-yard field goal — his first miss in more than a year — that would have clinched the victory. Randall Cunningham was up until 4 a.m. after leading the highest-scoring offense in NFL history to just seven points after halftime.

Bulls' Pippen is going to Houston

CHICAGO (AP) — Keep the door open, the exodus from the Chicago Bulls is picking up speed.

With Michael Jordan trading in his gym shoes for golf spikes, the Bulls are wasting little time in breaking up the six-time champions. Scottie Pippen will be traded to the Houston Rockets, with Steve Kerr and Luc Longley following him out the door.

The Bulls will sign Pippen to a five-year, $67.2 million deal — with an additional $15 million in incentives — and then promptly ship him to the Rockets. In return, Chicago will get forward Roy Rogers and a second-round draft pick, said numerous league sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"I am excited about my new career in Houston, and even though everything seems to be changing, I hope Bulls fans everywhere will understand that it is time for a new era to begin in Chicago," Pippen said Monday night in a statement released by his agent, Jimmy Sexton.

"Chicago has been my home for nearly half my life, and with family and friends here I will always treat the city as home. I only hope the city of Chicago will continue to treat me as one of their own. Thanks for all the great memories." Kerr, one of the best 3-point shooters in the league, will sign a five-year, $11 million deal with the San Antonio Spurs, according to a source close to the Bulls.

And Longley, the starting center on the Bulls' last three championship teams, was reportedly headed to the Phoenix Suns. According to newspaper reports, Longley will sign a five-year, $30 million deal with the Bulls, who will then trade him to Phoenix for forward Martin Muursepp, forward-center Mark Bryant and guard-forward Bubba Wells.

The departures of Pippen, Kerr and Longley are only part of the bad news for Bulls fans. Free agent Antonio McDyess has crossed the Bulls off his list of potential suitors because he wants to play for a winner, his agent said.

Phoenix and Denver are now the front-runners in the McDyess sweepstakes, James Bryant told The Associated Press.

"Houston and Chicago are out of the picture," Bryant said. "Tony has analyzed the situation carefully, and he's most at home with those two options: Phoenix is going to stay a winner and Denver is going to be a winner."

Bulls general manager Jerry Krause is keeping silent while he wheels and deals, but he said last week the Bulls had three options. If Jordan stayed, Chicago would try and bring back the championship team. If he left, the Bulls would try and sign their own key free agents and make a run at some of the others available.

And if those plans failed, the Bulls will rebuild completely. Chicago is still interested in free agent Brent Barry.

"Jerry is going to target key free agents in terms of being as competitive as we can this year," new coach Tim Floyd said. "If we are unable to get those guys, he will remain vigilant in his plans to bring it back to the level where it's been. But that could be a process."

Judging by the Pippen deal, it's going to be. Although the salaries for Pippen and Rogers do not match, the deal is allowable under NBA rules because Houston will have enough salary cap room to fit in Pippen's contract. His salary for this season will be $10.6 million.

The deal won't be finalized until the lockout ends Wednesday or Thursday. He should be in uniform for the Rockets when they play an exhibition game against San Antonio on Saturday.

"We're not going to confirm anything," Rockets spokesman Tim Frank said. "The lockout is technically not over. We're still under lockout restrictions. No deal can officially be done until that cloak is lifted."

Pippen, a six-time champion with the Bulls, is considered one of the top three free agents up for grabs as NBA teams prepare to open training camps delayed by the 6 1/2-month lockout. The seven-time All-Star forward had talked to the Rockets about signing with them as a free agent, and it wasn't immediately clear why he agreed to a sign-and-trade deal.

The acquisition of Pippen should clear the way for Charles Barkley to re-sign with Houston, giving the Rockets a formidable front line of Barkley, Pippen and Hakeem Olajuwon.

"I would like to thank the Chicago Bulls, the great people of the city of Chicago and all my teammates for 11 wonderful seasons," Pippen said. "I would also like to personally thank the Bulls for helping me through this period of free agency. I wish them the best, because that is what Chicago deserves."

Kubiak rejects University of Colorado offer

DENVER (AP) — The timing might have been wrong. Or maybe he just didn't feel ready for a head-coaching job.

Denver Broncos offensive coordinator Gary Kubiak wasn't sure, only that becoming the head coach at the University of Colorado didn't feel right.

Intent on devoting his full concentration to the Super Bowl, Kubiak on Monday turned down Colorado's offer.

Saying he was "not good at doing two things," the former Texas A&M quarterback said the previous five days — during which he was preparing the Broncos for the AFC championship game with the New York Jets while at the same time being courted for the Colorado job — had been unbearable.

On Sunday, after Denver's 23-10 victory, Kubiak said he planned to decide "within 24 to 48 hours" whether to accept the Colorado job, but that regardless he would remain with the Broncos through the Super Bowl on Jan. 31.

About 12 hours later, he rejected the Colorado offer.

"I'm here today not to give the answer everybody thought I was going to give, but I'm here to give the answer from my heart," an emotional Kubiak said Monday. "I've thought extremely hard about everything. I'm positive I'm doing the right thing, for me and for the University of Colorado."

"I realized I couldn't do this for another two weeks. Those kids at Colorado need somebody with a 100 percent commitment to getting going. I'm not there right now, and I don't know if I was going to be there in two weeks either."

"To be honest, I couldn't go through another day thinking about the next game plan and wondering what I'm going to be doing two weeks from now. I've got to think about one job."

Kubiak, 37, also insisted his answer would have been the same had the Broncos lost to the Jets.

Kubiak, who also has interviewed with the Cleveland Browns for that team's head-coaching job, said he would not be a candidate for any coaching job this year.

"I will be here for the Super Bowl, and I will be here next year," he said. "I need to grow as a coach, and I have a chance to continue to grow under the best. I need a little time, and I know the time that I need is right here with this organization and this commitment."

He insisted there were no negatives about the Colorado job and that Colorado athletic director Dick Tharp "bent over backwards to make this work. They were willing to wait for me. The opportunity there is tremendous, and somebody is getting a hell of a job."

Colorado is anxious to get a new coach on board since national letter-of-intent signing day is Feb. 3, three days after the Super Bowl. Former CU coach Rick Neuheisel had hoped to sign 23 players, but resigned to become head coach at the University of Washington on Jan. 9.

Kubiak spoke with Tharp last Wednesday night, and they spoke again after Sunday's game. After giving Tharp his decision, Kubiak was asked to sleep on it.

They talked again Monday morning, and Kubiak remained firm.

Shortly after the press conference, Tharp issued a statement expressing his disappointment.

"I had every reason to believe that Colorado would have a new football coach by today or tomorrow," Tharp said.

Kubiak said he discussed the possible move with Broncos head coach Mike Shanahan, owner Pat Bowlen, quarterback John Elway, his wife Rhonda and others. "It was a big-time struggle, but everything kept coming up the same," he said.

"I've had great conversations with Mike," he said. "He shared with me his own experiences. He was always an ear, but he was never a push one way or the other."

Maskew takes WF Rider job

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Rhudy Maskew, a former long-time assistant coach at Texas Tech, has been named head football coach at Wichita Falls Rider High School.

Maskew, 45, was hired Monday night. He replaces Bill Froman, who retired after leading Rider to a 4-9 record and the Class 4A quarterfinals.

Last season, Maskew was an assistant coach at Corpus Christi Flour Bluff High School, where he was special teams coordinator and coached running backs and quarterbacks.

He was an assistant coach at Texas Tech for 11 years before resigning in August 1997, citing health problems, as an NCAA investigation progressed. The NCAA alleged that Maskew and others broke NCAA rules in helping former defensive lineman Stephen Gaines become academically eligible.

Maskew had a heart attack and underwent an angioplasty in May 1997 to clear a blocked artery.

At Tech, Maskew worked as defensive coordinator and worked with special teams and running backs.

The former All-American offensive lineman-middle linebacker at Artesia, N.M., was chosen over current Rider assistant Charles Lynch and head coaches Steve Parr of Plainview, Mel Maxfield of Forney, Danny Stout of Midlothian and Hal Wasson of Mexia.

Korda struggles to victory in Australian Tennis Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — He was on a losing streak, his ankle hurt, criticism over his drug case swirled around him, and his opponent accused him of faking injury.

Thus went Petr Korda's return to the Australian Open, where last year, at age 30, the Czech player finally won his first Grand Slam tournament title and captured the fans' affections with his exuberant scissor-kicks and cartwheels.

The spectator support was still there today as Korda struggled to a 6-3, 6-7 (1-7), 6-4, 6-7 (4-7), 6-2 first-round victory over 83rd-ranked Galo Blanco of Spain.

But despite being defending champion, Korda was not invited to start out on center court. A capacity crowd of 6,000 watched him on Court One.

Korda shrugged off all, but the left ankle injury — "swollen, and it hurts" — and said today's victory would help him a lot.

He rose to No. 2 in the rankings after last year's Australian Open, but then slid into problems, including a positive test for steroids during Wimbledon and a 2-8 record in tournament matches over the year's last 4 1/2 months. He now is ranked 20th.

"Right now I won a match, which really counts for me a lot. And hopefully my performance is going to go to another high level, but I am only going to try as best I can to defend my title," Korda said.

He hurt his ankle while leading 4-3 in the third set.

The trainer told him it would be really painful, he said, and he replied: "I'll be on court until the last ball."

Blanco, however, refused to shake Korda's hand at the end of their match and later called Korda a liar who called for the trainer only to gain time to rest.

"If someone asks for the trainer ... and then runs like Korda did ... it's almost impossible," Blanco said through an interpreter.

Meanwhile, Blanco said his own week-old abdominal injury flared up when he was leading 4-1 in the fourth set, "so I couldn't serve very well, and that was the key point of the match."

Korda said he never had encountered such a match-end snub before. As for being left off center court, "it's life," he said. "You can't ask to play on the show court if your ranking is 21. ... As my father told me, it doesn't matter, you can play on the potato field with triangular balls, but you have to play tennis."

Pressure mounts on Serbian leader to abide by cease-fire

PETROVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serb forces pounded the hills surrounding a village where civilians were massacred, ignoring demands by NATO and the United States to honor a three-month-old cease-fire in Kosovo.

The continued shelling indicated the government was not softening its hard-line campaign against the ethnic Albanian Kosovo Liberation Army, which is seeking independence from Serbia, the main Yugoslav republic.

Two top NATO generals were en route to Belgrade and were expected to warn Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic of possible NATO strikes unless he abides by terms of the Oct. 12 agreement intended to end fighting.

In a series of provocative moves Monday, the Serb-led government ordered the American head of the international peace verification mission to leave the country within 48 hours and barred the chief U.N. war crimes prosecutor from entering Kosovo to investigate the massacre of 45 ethnic Albanians in the village of Racak.

Shelling in the Racak area, about 20 miles southwest of Pristina, drove an estimated 3,500 civilians into the hills and forests on Monday. Ruzhdi Jashari, a local Kosovo Albanian activist, said most of those fleeing lacked shelter and were suffering from cold and hunger.

Near Petrovo, a recently shelled village close to Racak, refugees huddled in front of two lean-tos made of sticks and straw and partially covered with plastic sheeting.

Nuriye Hysenaj, 61, said dozens sleep inside, sharing a space of two square yards and warmed by a small wood-burning stove. "They will kill us ... and nobody is doing anything to stop this bloodshed," she told a reporter.

State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said Monday that Gen. Wesley Clark, supreme allied commander in Europe, and German Gen. Klaus Naumann would demand that Milosevic bring to justice those responsible for the massacre in Racak.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said Milosevic will be making a "grave mistake" if he does not abide by the commitments he made during talks last October with U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke.

The generals were to have gone to Belgrade on Monday, but delayed the visit after Yugoslav authorities said Milosevic was too busy to see them.

Belgrade's tough stand follows increasing calls by Kosovo's Serb minority and Milosevic's ultra-nationalist allies for the government to crush the Kosovo Liberation Army. Ethnic Albanians form 90 percent of Kosovo's 2 million people, and most want independence.

Furthermore, it was uncertain whether all key NATO members would support military action. Germany's defense minister, Rudolf Scharping, said he was not ready to abandon diplomacy.

Tensions rose dramatically Saturday after international verifiers found the bodies of the ethnic Albanians, including three women and a 12-year-old boy, in a gully near Racak.

William Walker, the American head of the international peace verification mission, accused Serb police of the massacre, despite government claims the dead were guerrillas killed in combat.

The Yugoslav government, in a statement distributed by its Tanjug news agency, declared Monday that Walker's comments were in "flagrant violation of the agreement made" with the OSCE, which oversees the October agreement. The government ordered Walker to leave Yugoslavia within 48 hours.

Digital format PBS Kids Channel debut set this fall

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — PBS plans to boost spending on children's television, with some money devoted to a 24-hour PBS Kids Channel. The channel scheduled to begin broadcasting in September will include such shows as "Barney & Friends" and "Teletubbies," PBS President Ervin Duggan told the Television Critics Association on Monday.

By the end of 1999, about a third of the country will be able to receive the channel through PBS stations with digital capability, Duggan said.

How many viewers see it will depend on how many invest in costly digital TV sets. Duggan acknowledged that the initial audience will be small.

The channel is part of a children's initiative that will include new preschool programs, an expansion of the PBS Kids Web site and an increase in PBS's free book distribution program, Duggan said.

PBS expects to spend substantially more on children's programming and services next year. The budget for 1999 is $27 million; the proposed budget for 2000 is $40 million, PBS spokesman Tom Epstein said.

Over three years, the planned investment is about $125 million, said Kathy Quattrone, executive vice president of PBS Programming Services.
