Pampan rescues friend, best man in mission he didn thave to go on

By MARILYN POWERS Staff Writer

When Mike Porter of Pampa completed his 50th flying mission during World War II, he was supposed to get to come home.

Instead, his commanding officer asked him if he would fly just one more mission before leaving.

The Germans, Porter was told, were abandoning a prisoner of war camp in Austria in the wake of advancing Russian forces. U.S. servicemen were in the camp and needed to be rescued.

"I was asked to take a flight of seven aircraft and go and get the POWs," Porter said.

Porter, who was stationed in Italy from March to October 1944, flew B-24s for the U.S. Army Air Corps. Each B-24 could hold 37 men in addition to the flight crew.

"We landed and loaded up the POWs, and the Russians were firing at us. My plane was shot several

Six of the seven planes were loaded with 37 POWs, and the seventh carried 35, the last of the U.S. prisoners of war which were left at the camp. The total number of POWs rescued by Porter's flight group was 257.

"After we got safely away, and were cruising over the Adriatic Sea, I heard someo e yell, 'Porter! Is that you?" he sai

He looked ack over his shoulder, and there was friend, Vince Ollney, who had been best man at his wedding, among the POWs who had been loaded into his plane.

Ollney, who normally weighed 220 pounds, had lost 92 pounds while in the German prisoner of war camp. When he was given a physical after landing safely in Italy, he weighed 128 pounds and had to have a large growth removed before going home to the U.S.

Ollney was flown home, but Porter boarded a ship at Naples and sailed for home after the memorable 51st mission, he said.

Porter served in the Air Corps for ears and nine months, and we awarded the Distinguished Flying

Pitner: Animal Control 'grossly understaffed'

By DAVID BOWSER Staff Writer

Police Chief Trevlyn Pitner told the city commission this week that based on his experience, Pampa's animal control department needs more people.

"It's grossly understaffed," Pitner said.

He said he had the same number of people in animal control as Pampa does when he was police chief at the City of Fritch, a town of 2,500 people.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: We, the people, bury our heroes with the promise to remember. The Congress of the United States has created the National Moment of Remembrance to reach Americans with one simple message: Don't forget the true meaning of Memorial Day to honor our fallen. No other holidays would be possible without the sacrifices of those brave men and women who have died for freedom since the founding of our nation. Today let us all unite in remembrance to honor those who have ensured that freedom rings in the home of the brave.

Participation may be informal. It can be as simple as ringing a bell to mark the moment. Bells carry significant symbolism -- from "proclaiming liberty throughout the land" to the marking of the passing of a soul. The Moment of Remembrance is a time to remember our fallen and to make a commitment to give something back to our country in their memory. -- CARMELLA LASPADA, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, WHITE HOUSE COMMISSION ON REMEMBRANCE

DEAR CARMELLA: I'm pleased to share your message with my readers, some of whom may not be aware of what the true meaning of this holiday is about. Readers, although most of you will be devoting today to your personal pursuits, Memorial Day really isn't about us. It's for all those families whose loved ones aren't here to enjoy the freedoms they secured for us. At 3 p.m., let's stand as one, and show them the respect they deserve.

And while I'm on the subject of respect, there is now another way of honoring those heroes who are still serving our country. Visit OperationDearAbby.net and show our troops stationed worldwide how much their efforts are appreciated by sending them a message of support. Bless you, one and all!

Abby, the only expression I could offer them for their kindness was an unwrapped bar of Palmolive soap -- DALE C. BISHOFF, U.S. ARMY (Ret.)

Newsweek reveals media elite bias

The Newsweek magazine story falsely reporting desecration of the Koran by American military interrogators in Guantanamo, Cuba, where terror suspects are being held, is the fourth major false report printed or aired by a highly respected arm of the Anglo-American journalistic establishment in the past year.

Each of those inaccurate stories has roiled the political waters and threatened to inflict colossal damage on either President Bush or British Prime Minister Tony Blair and on American and British efforts to defeat terrorists and the regime of Saddam Hussein.

It is high time that the American people got the point: The organs of establishment journalism are slanted and biased toward the left and disregard the standards of fair and accurate reportwith ing, impunity, when election is on the line. The list of false stories is telling: • In the spring of 2004, the BBC reported that Blair had ordered his intelligence people to "sex up" reports of the Iraqi program to make weapons of mass destruction. For months, Blair was on the defensive because of the report, and the intelligence operative who alleged source of the story committed suicide. It took a parliamentary commission to debunk the story and to force a BBC retraction. The ongoing damage to Blair's credibility likely helped to account for his marginal showing in the most recent U.K. election.

 In September 2004, CBS News' "60 Minutes" television program used forged and phony documents to try to besmirch Bush's record in the Texas National Guard. It was only the careless error of the forger in printing the suffix "th" above the line that led to the truth.

Someone should wash their mouths out

It's too bad that there isn't a Great Mama in the sky who could take a bar of Octagon soap and wash out the mouths of the politicians in Washington, not to mention those of many of the talk-show tribe. Vituperation and ad hominem attacks have largely replaced debate in the U.S.

It is an extremely dangerous trend. Words might not be able to break bones, but they can destroy moderation. One of the factors that led to war in 1861 was the extreme vitriol of New England abolitionists. By demonizing not only slavery, but all Southerners, they made it impossible for any Southern moderate to survive politically. It was impossible to be seen as taking the same position on slavery as those people who were proclaiming their desire to see every man, woman and child in the South murdered. There is Standing among the family members and dignitaries that historic New Year's Day to see the approximately 3,000 soldiers of the brigade off was Maj. Gen. Michael H. Taylor, 36th Infantry Division commander.

General Taylor of Lufkin, Texas, again stood among his troops during a recent visit in southern and central Iraq to see firsthand the vital security mission they have performed since they deployed.

The division commander said the thing that stood out to him the most during his visit was the consistency of how the soldiers feel about their mission after looking in their eyes and hearing the tone of their voice; he could tell that they were proud of the work they were doing in Iraq.

"These soldiers work long and hard hours and earn everything they get," General Taylor said. "Our country will always be indebted to them for what they do for us and the Iraqi people.'

After touring the various camps and remote outposts located along the Euphrates Valley in triple-digit heat, Taylor said it is very clear to him that the soldiers of the 56th BCT are doing a great job and are helping to make a difference in the lives of the Iraqi people - and that makes him proud.

stop, General Taylor expressed his sincere thanks to the soldiers and their families in Texas for their dedication and sacrifice relayed a heartfelt message from back home that the citizens of America, especially Texas, never stop appreciating their service as well as those of the sailors, airmen and Marines serving in Iraq.

"The people back in Texas, especially the World War II veterans of the 36th Infantry Division Patchers), would be unbelievably proud of what these young soldiers are doing," he said.

Command Sgt. Maj. Rodger Brownlee, of Weatherford, Texas, the senior noncommissioned officer of the division, joined General Taylor on the visit said that the trip went very well and that he and the general were glad to be able to see a majority of the units of the 56th BCT even though the trip was short.

Sergeant Major Brownlee said that, from his perspective as the senior NCO, the visit with the enlisted soldiers was meaningful and that he was impressed with their level of professionalism and dedication to the mission.

"I shouldn't be amazed at our soldiers, but I still am when I see that we still produced men and woman in this country who are willing to sacrifice their time and put their life in danger to fight for what we believe the hottest days to date – and took their time to visit all the camps so that they could meet with as many soldiers as they can and shake their hands," the specialist said. "That means

Specialist Lopez added that, for him, the visit shows that the general and the CSM truly care about them and, most importantly, the people back home in Texas.

"It really is good to know that he wants to come out here to Iraq and that makes us feel good," Specialist Lopez said. "The general and CSM visit definitely reminds us here in Iraq that there are a lot of people back home supporting for us and wishing that we all come back home safe.'

Pitner said there have been complaints, but again that comes back to being short handed, both at the animal shelter and with the police department.

He said dog bites and attacks are given high priority, but beyond that the department handles calls as best they can.

"We've had some calls where the animal wardens weren't able to respond and our officers weren't able to respond immediately," Pitner said.

He said such situations eventually get handled, but it's difficult.

Sandy Burns, animal control supervisor, said that 95 percent of the dogs they pick up are adopted or reclaimed. She said the reclaim fees for lost dogs that have been taken to the shelter are five dollars for a pick-up fee and three dollars a day boarding fee.

City Commissioner Lana Miller says that's lower than most cities.

The implication was that the carelessness of the Bush administration had put into the hands of the insurgent terrorists the very weapons now being used to kill our troops. But the Pentagon soon established that the weapons either had, been removed early in the U.S. occupation or had never been there when our troops arrived. The Times story led John Kerry to change his TV ads and focus his endgame campaign on the allegation.

In fact, in all the years of the Clinton presidency, I cannot recall a single instance of a similarly inaccurate high-profile story attacking the Democratic president. Each of the scandal allegations ultimately proved to capture the Clintons in some sort of ethical violation. The sole exception that comes to mind is the FBIfile story, but, even there, the journalist reports that the files had been available to the White House staff were accurate. But when a Republican president is waging a war of which the left does not approve, a different journalistic standard appears to apply.

Not just for what she was able to accomplish at the track. But for what she was able to endure away from it. Throughout the month of May - especially after her amazing qualifying run - Patrick embarked on a whirlwind tour of activities. Indy, like so many other venues, would not have allowed this woman to compete. This is something some teams are currently working on. Dodge, for example, is currently working with a number of teams to develop minority drivers. One in particular is Erin Crocker, a former World of Outlaws driver now driving for Evernham Motorsports in some select ARCA races. EMS is also working

The Race Part II

When Patrick's crew chief opted to keep her out on the track late in the race, I thought it was a mistake. I thought she should have come in for fuel at least. She would later give up the lead. But following a late caution, took it back like a driver who has been there before. Again, the fans all stood and cheered her on. This was not a girl looking to champion a cause. This was a driver wanting to win a race. She would eventually relinquish the lead and finish fourth. Do you have any idea how many drivers would like to say they finished fourth at the Indianapolis 500? Heck, how many would like to say they finished, period.

Congratulations to you, Danica Patrick. What you accomplished yesterday should have been enough to silence the critics for now. A win in the next race or two will shut them up for a long, long time.

CONCORD, N.C. — His first two wins were immensely popular. This one earned Jimmie Johnson a shower of boos and beer

Johnson became the first driver to win three straight Coca-Cola 600s on Sunday night when he slid past Bobby Labonte in the final turn of the wreck-filled race.

But Johnson quickly found out it wasn't a popular victory when fans threw beer cans at his car during his cool-down lap and booed him when he began his celebration. So likable in his first three seasons, Johnson has slipped the past month after rival drivers accused him of aggressive driving that caused several accidents.

"I saw a few of them throwing beer cans at me," he said. "I don't think they liked (the win), but that's all right. It's been a rough month for us. Tonight was a tough race for us. We didn't have the best car until the end, when it mattered."

A NASCAR-record 22 cautions slowed the longest race on the schedule, and almost ruined Johnson's shot at the win. He and Hendrick Motorsports teammates Jeff Gordon and Brian Vickers were seemingly the only cars in contention for the victory.

But they all made pit stops under the green flag, and were caught a lap down when a caution came out with 44 laps to go. It opened the race up to a pack of contenders and seemed to eliminate the Hendrick cars.

But Johnson had worked his way back to fourth when the race restarted with five laps to go after the final caution.

Labout, the leader, did his best to hold off John on, who needed just three laps around Lowe's Motor Speedway to pull onto his bumper. Johnson got there on the final lap and edged ahead coming out of the final turn to grab his second victory of the season. He became the first driver to win three straight Coca-Cola 600s.

"Three 600s, that's just amazing," said Johnson, the Nextel Cup Series points leader. "It will sink in as the days wear on. Today, regardless of the record book, regardless of what was going on, we just wanted to have a solid race.

"We did that, and went into the record books at the same time.'

Labonte, off to a horrid start this season, kicked his car in disgust as he climbed out

"I just did it my way, and I lost," said Labonte, who was trying to end a 47-race winless streak on the 10-year anniversary of his first career victory.

Carl Edwards was third, followed by Jeremy Mayfield and pole-sitter Ryan Newman. Greg Biffle was sixth, Martin Truex Jr. seventh and Dale Jarrett, Ken Schrader and Rusty Wallace rounded out the top 10.
