

Bush preparing to send 2007 budget to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will use his new budget to propose cutting the size of the Army Reserve to its lowest level in three decades and stripping up to $4 billion from two fighter aircraft programs.

The proposals, likely to face opposition on Capitol Hill, come as the Defense Department struggles to trim personnel costs and other expenses to pay for the war in Iraq and a host of other pricey aircraft and high-tech programs. Bush will send his 2007 budget to Congress on Feb. 6. The proposed Army Reserve cut is part of a broader plan to achieve a new balance of troop strength and combat power among the active Army, the National Guard and reserves to fight the global war on terrorism and to defend the homeland.

The Army sent a letter to members of Congress on Thursday outlining the plan. A copy was provided to The Associated Press.

Under the plan, the authorized troop strength of the Army Reserve would drop from 205,000 — the current number of slots it is allowed — to 188,000, the actual number of soldiers it had at the end of 2005. Because of recruiting and other problems, the Army Reserve has been unable to fill its ranks to its authorized level.

Army leaders have said they are taking a similar approach to shrinking the National Guard. They are proposing to cut that force from its authorized level of 350,000 soldiers to 333,000, the actual number now on the rolls.

Some in Congress have vowed to fight the National Guard cuts. Its soldiers and resources are controlled by state governors unless Guard units are mobilized by the president for federal duty, as Bush did after the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks.

"I remain convinced that we do not have a large enough force," Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., said in a letter to Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld.

Proposals to cut funding in two key jet fighter programs were described by defense analysts and congressional aides, some of whom spoke on condition of anonymity because the reductions have not been announced.

Under the plan, the authorized troop strength of the Army Reserve would drop from 205,000 — the current number of slots it is allowed — to 188,000, the actual number of soldiers it had at the end of 2005.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — George Foreman could be in for a legal grilling.

A $50 million lawsuit filed late last week in Superior Court alleges the former boxing champion and an international law firm defrauded a company hired to launch a line of George Foreman steaks.

Foreman will be asked to take the stand when the case comes to trial, Eric Yuhl, an attorney for GreatMeals USA Inc., said Friday.

The former world heavyweight champion has become a household name for hawking a popular line of grills. Foreman expanded into lines of clothing and cleaning supplies.

The suit claims fraud, breach of contract and interference with contract against Foreman, the law firm of Greenberg Traurig LLP and John C. Kirkland, a partner in the firm.

A call to Foreman's attorney was not immediately returned Friday. A call to Kirkland also was not immediately returned.

GreatMeals alleges it was hired in 2003 by Omaha, Neb.-based George Foreman Foods Inc. to create a Web site for the steaks and to handle sales through the Interpet, catalogs and cable shopping networks.

The Washington, D.C.-based company alleges it spent hundreds of thousands of dollars, reached a $37 million licensing deal with the Home Shopping Network and had a catalog ready to launch when the deal collapsed because Foreman refused to do any promotions.

"He had soured on the deal based on, we believe, misinformation provided by his lawyers," Yuhl said.

George Foreman Foods filed for bankruptcy in November 2003.

Foreman, who had a profit-sharing deal as a spokesman, has sued the company's president. In court filings, Foreman contended the company introduced products under his name that he didn't approve.

Rural Health scholarship applications available

LUBBOCK — The Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center Office of Rural and Community Health has opened the 2006-2007 Rural Health Education Scholarship application. The Rural Health Scholarship Program provides approximately $150,000 in financial assistance annually to students committed to returning to a rural community to practice.

The Rural Health Education Scholarship Program is geared to address the shortage of health professionals in rural West Texas by easing the expense of college for rural students.

The Rural Health Education

Scholarship program is part of Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center's rural health initiatives to develop a pipeline of health care professionals to meet the health care work force needs of West Texas.

This pipeline begins with the work of the West Texas Area Health Education Center Program and its regional centers to promote health careers to young people across West Texas.

The Panhandle AHEC offers classroom presentations, health careers summer camps, and other activities to area schools in an effort to foster students' interest in health careers and the opportunities that exist in rural communities.

Entering freshmen, junior college transfers, and current students at Texas Tech University as well as incoming and current students at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, who are eligible for in-state tuition, are eligible to apply for the scholarship.

Scholarship recipients must show a substantial interest in health careers in rural Texas. Priority is given to students from rural Texas.

The scholarship amount for undergraduate students is generally $2,500 per year for a maximum of four years and is renewable providing the student maintains a 3.2 grade point average and participates in rural health-focused activities. The number and amount of awards offered are based on funding availability.

For more information on the scholarship and to submit applications online, visit <http://www.ttuhsc.edu/ruralhealth/scholarships.aspx> or contact Liz Inskip-Paulk in the Office of Rural and Community Health at (806) 743-1338.

For more information about having the Panhandle AHEC come to your school, contact Cynthia Harper-Gosselin at (806) 212-6182.

cover a percentage of the costs to fence waterways, eliminate invasive plant species and plant native vegetation. Landowners will also receive expert advice on their conservation plans from NWF biologists.

The first grant project included riparian fencing, invasive species control, planting trees and grasses, and creating alternative water sources for cattle. The second phase of the project will continue those efforts.

"The majority of habitat along the Canadian River is privately owned," said Joel Pedersen, NWF senior biologist. "We are excited about the past success of this initiative and look forward to helping additional landowners enhance their property for wildlife. It is only through landowner cooperation that this project is possible."

In addition, the grant also paid for a Hunting Heritage Landowner Program Field Day on the Gene Howe Wildlife Management Area so Texas landowners could learn conservation techniques for enhancing riparian habitat.

Through the Southern Great Plains Riparian Initiative, NWF volunteers restore wildlife habitat along flowing waterways to prevent erosion and to provide food and cover for wildlife. Riparian habitat includes rivers, streams and creeks, and is very important wildlife habitat in the southwestern states.

To date, 18,800 acres have been improved through the NWF's Southern Great Plains Riparian Initiative.

Landowners in the Canadian River watershed interested in participating in this project should call the NWF at (800) THE-NWTF (843-6983).

Government should take a cue from business and cut fat

When big corporations get into financial trouble, they look inside their firms and make tough decisions.

Ford Motor Co. is going to close plants and lay off thousands to trim the fat and make themselves more profitable.

General Motors announces the same tactic, as does DaimlerChrysler.

Profits are down, stockholders are upset, and these giant corporations must survive present economic conditions by making these tough decisions.

As announcements of these decisions reach the public, investors are buoyed by the news and immediately stock goes up in those firms.

That is good news for the future.

Wouldn't it be grand if the federal government would look inside its workings and make the same tough decisions?

The federal bureaucracy is bloated and generally a waste of resources. It is so large and lumbering that every time it tries to do something on a grand scale, it fails.

Look at the recent Medicare prescription changes. It was such a boondoggle that many seniors missed out on their medications.

Now reports have surfaced that the federal bureaucracy botched the Hurricane Katrina response, although the state bureaucracies probably share that blame, too.

Even the performance of the bureaucratic levels on daily tasks is a waste of resources. This is evidenced by trying to contact a federal agency only to get the runaround because they are busy having their coffee and conversing around a water cooler.

Frustration sets in when a citizen tries to make a telephone call to an agency, say Social Security, for example. Ninety percent of the time you get a busy signal. If you are lucky enough to slide in between the busy signals, you get someone's voice mail. If you are really lucky, you might get a call back in a few days.

I was at the downtown post office in Amarillo the other day, standing in line to mail a package.

Dennis Spies
Editor

There were about 10 people in line and three clerks working. One of the clerks finished with a customer and put a sign at his station saying, "Use Next Window" or something to that effect. He then joked with the other clerks for a minute and left to go on a "break."

That is not good customer service. The unions say they have to have so many breaks each day and they take advantage of them, ignoring customers who have to stand in line. It would not hurt that clerk to stay on duty for a few more minutes until the waiting line was more manageable for the other clerks.

I predict a voter revolt in America soon.

I think the populace is getting fed up with the corruption, the pandering, the wastefulness of the bureaucracy.

The only way for change to come is to vote in new people who want to eliminate the waste of our tax dollars. That may be a pie-in-the-sky attitude, but something needs to be done before the bloated bureaucracy implodes.

And while I'm on my soapbox ranting about public service, have you ever tried calling Southwestern Bell? You will be lucky to talk to a real person.

Equally as frustrating are those stupid robots who say, "Say your name." You say your name. "I didn't understand that. Say your name again."

And on and on ad nauseum. I generally refuse to be associated with businesses that do not care enough about their customers to be polite to them.

Once I had a problem with my computer at home. I called the Hewlett-Packard number that was provided. A man answered, but I could not understand him. I finally asked him where he was. He said India. He was very polite, but wasted my time and his because his command of the language was not where it should have been for customer service.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Jan. 29, the 29th day of 2006. There are 336 days left in the year. This is the Chinese New Year of the Dog.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on Jan. 29, 1956, editor-essayist H.L. Mencken, the "Sage of Baltimore," died at age 75.

On this date:

In 1820, Britain's King George III died at Windsor Castle, ending a reign that had seen both the American and French revolutions.

In 1843, the 25th president of the United States, William McKinley, was born in Niles, Ohio.

In 1845, Edgar Allan Poe's poem "The Raven" was first published, in the New York Evening Mirror.

In 1850, Henry Clay introduced in the Senate a compromise bill on slavery which included the admission of California into the Union as a free state.

In 1861, Kansas became the 34th state of the Union.

In 1936, the first members of baseball's Hall of Fame, including Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth, were named in Cooperstown, N.Y.

In 1958, actors Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward were married.

In 1963, the first members of football's Hall of Fame

'The world always makes the assumption that the exposure of an error is identical with the discovery of truth — that the error and truth are simply opposite. They are nothing of the sort. What the world turns to, when it is cured of one error, is usually simply another error, and maybe one worse than the first one.'

— H.L. Mencken
American writer (1880-1956)

were named in Canton, Ohio.

In 1979, President Carter formally welcomed Chinese Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping to the White House, following the establishment of diplomatic relations.

In 1998, a bomb rocked an abortion clinic in Birmingham, Ala., killing Robert Sanderson, an off-duty police officer working as a security guard, and critically injuring Emily Lyons, a nurse. (The bomber, Eric Rudolph, was captured in May 2003.)

Ten years ago: A Navy F-14 fighter jet crashed in Nashville, Tenn., demolishing three houses and killing five people.

Idle American: No question about that

Maybe folks in the news and sports spotlight need crutch answers for the barrage of questions they face in every town. One of them that many of the stars lean on is: "There's no question about that."

What this response often means includes:

- 1) "I'm already late, and you are making me even later, and/or
- 2) "I'll use this old line to buy a few seconds, then try to change the subject, or
- 3) "We both know that only a sound bite is going to make it on the air, so make do with a short response, buddy ..."

Perhaps the leaders in taking this line farthest from the reel are sports broadcasting teams who regularly describe games for two or three hours at a time. The line bobs up time and time again. No question about that ...

During college years, I thought I was doing OK on radio news and sports broadcasts on my small hometown radio station. (Key word: Thought.)

We had a frayed card taped on the plate glass in the studio, reading: "God save us from dead air." Often He didn't. (Remember, it's often hard to improve on silence.) One day, a fellow colleague droned on with the livestock report, as though he really knew about horses, cows, hogs and sheep. Credibility took leave, however, when he pronounced "ewes" with two syllables — "e-wees ..."

Too many media folks forget that brevity, humor and simplicity are first-cousins, and can be best friends. No one accuses the inimitable Paul Harvey of endearing himself to listeners with high d o l l a r words.

Indeed, relying on the cousins cited above — plus the best use of the pause by any person who's ever worn a microphone — Mr. Harvey achieved heralded status among broadcasters long ago. He's now in his seventh decade of distinction, and for many millions of us, the favorite by far ...

Sometimes the best interviews occur at holiday time.

Maybe it's because both interviewer and interviewee are in winding down modes, basking in memory's glow.

Consider this: Norm Hitzges, longtime Dallas radio sports authority, was interviewing Dallas Mavericks' Avery Johnson at Christmas time. He asked the coach to recount favorite childhood memories ...

Johnson, who grew up in a large inner city family in New Orleans, paused before offering a measured response. His well-chosen words came slowly.

"When I was in junior high, they were giving away new bicycles to inner city kids at the fire station," he recalled. "I knew there were more bikeless kids than there were bikes, so I waited in line for five hours to make sure I got one."

Why Democrats can't seem to sink Alito

The reason Democrats and liberals did not get more popular traction in their opposition to the appointment of Judge Samuel Alito to the Supreme Court is that their worldview of what constitutes a good nominee is sharply at variance with that of the American public at large.

To the likes of Sens. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.), Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.), Hillary Clinton (D-N.Y.) et al., the Supreme Court is a kind of super-Congress — nine special Senate seats — and the criterion for confirmation is agreement with the nominee on the key issues likely to come before the court.

But to the American voters, the Supreme Court is above politics and ideology and confirmation should be awarded based on personal attributes such as integrity, intelligence, judgment, compassion, wisdom, maturity, fairness and temperament.

Realizing this difference in perspective between the Democratic base and the public at large, President Bush has done very well with both the John Roberts and the Alito appointments. When his people forgot about the dichotomy — and nominated Harriet Miers who was seen as a poorly qualified if a conservative candidate — they got their heads handed to them.

Of course, ideology is as important (if not more so) to conservatives as it is to liberals. But with the White House comes the ability to get men or women who share your ideology approved as long as they are objectively well-qualified. Bill Clinton learned that lesson when the Senate easily approved his nominations of moderate liberal Stephen Breyer and ultraliberal Ruth Ginsburg. Republicans then, as with Democrats now, could not rally public opposition to a judge simply based on his or her ideology.

Exhibit highlights Indian beadwork

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — The American Indian peoples of the interior Pacific Northwest are renowned for creating exquisite, pictorial beadwork.

“Beaded Brilliance: Wearable Art from the Columbia River Plateau” is a major exhibition developed by the National Cowboy & Western Heritage Museum that amasses dozens of examples comprising several themes.

The exhibit is on view in the museum’s Robert S. and Grayce B. Kerr Changing Exhibition Gallery Feb. 10 through May 14.

The display includes more than 160 examples of American Indian beadwork from the interior Pacific Northwest. The items illustrate the figurative tradition that has been prevalent in the region since the late 19th century.

Beaded flat bags (single and double-sided) will comprise about one-half of the items on display. A variety of men’s vests, women’s dresses and dance yokes, bags, gauntlets, horse gear and other personal accessories also are included.

Many examples of Plateau figurative beadwork are whimsical in appearance. Individuals who are unfamiliar with the tradition may conclude that these items were made for sale to non-Indians.

This was seldom the case. The subject matter evident on bags, vests, gloves and other items often records the contemporary thoughts and concerns of the bead artists who made them.

Programming related to the exhibit includes a Tuesdays at Sundown presentation March 21 by Mary Dodds Schlick of Mt. Hood, Ore.

Schlick is known for her work with Columbia River baskets. She was a long-time resident of Columbia River Indian reservations and has spent considerable time working with regional beadworkers.

She also served as consultant for the Heard Museum’s 1993 exhibit, “Glass Tapestry: Plateau Beaded Bags for The Elaine Horwitch Collection.”

On April 18, Tuesdays at Sundown will feature Steve Grafe who will talk about some of the messages communicated by exhibition objects in his presentation titled “Plateau Beadwork and Identity.”

A symposium relating to the manufacture and use of glass beads is scheduled for May 6.

The program will include presentations by known authorities on glass bead manufacturing, bead trade systems, American Indian beadwork traditions, West African beadwork and contemporary art beadwork.

Summer camp fair slated at WTAMU

CANYON — Camp representatives will be on campus to recruit summer employees during West Texas A&M University’s 2006 Summer Camp Fair from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 31 in the Jack B. Kelley Student Center Commons.

The annual fair gives students an opportunity to learn more about summer camp employment. Recruiters from 18 different camps will be looking for camp counselors, lifeguards and employees for specialized areas such as horseback riding and crafts. They will be able to provide detailed information about their camps, and many will have applications available. Those attending the event should be prepared for interviews.

“The Summer Camp Fair is an excellent opportunity for students of any major to work in a fun environment,” Yvonne Wieck, coordinator of WTAMU’s Student Employment Services, said. “They gain skills such as leadership, communication and teamwork that will prove valuable for future employment.” Potential earnings from summer camp employment can range anywhere from $1,000 to $4,000 with very few expenses for the employee.

Some of the camps scheduled to attend include All Saints Camp and Conference Center, Cal Farley’s, Camp Arrowhead, Camp Champions, Camp Classen YMCA, Camp Jewell YMCA, Camp Lonehollow, Camp Summit, Inc., Camp Waldemar, Ceta Canyon Camp and Retreat Center, Don Harrington Discovery Center, Girl Scout Camp Kiwanis, Hidden Falls Ranch Youth Camp, Lone Tree Bible Ranch, Philmont Scout Ranch, T BAR M Camps, Texas Lions Camp and Wonderland Amusement Park.

The Summer Camp Fair is presented by WTAMU Student Employment Services along with Career and Counseling Services, Recreational Sports and the Residence Hall Association. For more information, call Wieck at 806-651-2397.

Amarillo Museum of Art director tenders resignation

AMARILLO — Tom Toperzer, director and chief curator of Amarillo Museum of Art, recently tendered his resignation to the museum’s board, effective March 3.

Toperzer stated in his resignation letter that he believes “we all have at times, in our individual lives come to a crossroads, or at least a point where we realize a change is due. This is that time for me. I have been making my living as an art world worker since July of 1970, almost exclusively directing art museums and galleries. My close friends know I consider myself an artist, painter, who has been a museum professional to support my habit of art making.”

Toperzer went on to say he has “decided this is the time to make my studio the focus of my life.”

Toperzer’s directorship began in April 2004. During his tenure, the museum saw the addition of two new programs — the “Annual 12 x 12 Art Exhibition and Sale” and the “Panhandle Artist Hanging” — as well as such high profile exhibitions as “Jasper Johns: Prints, Watercolor USA: 4 Decades.”

Combating depression successful for many sufferers

(NAPSA) — Nearly 20 million Americans suffer from depression. The good news is that depression — even when it's chronic or debilitating — can be treated successfully.

In fact, more than 80 percent of people who seek treatment for depression show measurable improvement. Sadly, many people resist treatment because they are embarassed to admit their despondency.

They should know that they are not alone. Depression is the most common mental illness, affecting as many as one in every 20 adults and one in every 10 children and teens.

Depression can occur in anyone, and can be triggered by a traumatic experience or it can develop gradually over time. Often it strikes for no obvious reason.

The first step toward treating depression is identifying it. Typical symptoms of depression include:

- Persistent sad, anxious or "empty" moods
- Sleeping too much, too little or just plain tossing and turning

- Reduced or increased appetite that leads to weight loss or weight gain
- Loss of pleasure and interest in once enjoyable activities
- Restlessness, irritability and persistent physical symptoms that do not respond to

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH

How technology advances pain treatment

(NAPSA) — A pioneering new research unit is giving hope to people who suffer from chronic pain.

Medical knowledge of pain is incomplete and reliable data is difficult to produce. Researchers at the new Pain Clinical Research Hub (PCRH) — a unique scientific collaboration between King's College Hospital (KCH), King's College London (KCL) and Pfizer Limited — will use the latest imaging techniques to look inside the brains and nervous systems of people suffering pain, with the aim of discovering new ways to measure pain, establish the efficacy of new treatments and reduce the time it takes to develop these drugs into new medicines.

Long-term pain is now recognized as a significant element in many physical conditions, which causes a considerable adverse effect on the quality of patients' lives.

At worst, chronic pain can be disabling; it is not well characterized and has to be studied more thoroughly in order that it can be managed more effectively. By providing new diagnostic tools, the PCRH aims to help those patients currently receiving inadequate pain management, who need new and more effective treatment.

The PCRH will use state-of-the-art technology, including quantitative sensory testing and electrophysiological studies, as well as cutting-edge imaging techniques, particularly functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI). These imaging technologies and other clinical techniques have the potential to provide important information on the neural pathways and intensity of the pain experienced by patients.

A new research collaboration may help unlock the secrets of chronic pain.

Until now, researchers have generally relied on patients' individual, and often quite different, impressions of their pain. The work undertaken at the PCRH could provide new, objective measures of central activity during both pain perception and response to treatment. Furthermore, the PCRH wants to provide outstanding care to patients, offering new venues for accurate, reliable and objective treatments of pain.

"The Pain Clinical Research Hub is a vital step forward in developing our understanding of pain, what triggers it, how it is felt physically, and the impact it has on the lives of sufferers and their families," says professor Sally Davies. "The research will result in better pain prevention, treatment and management for the hundreds of thousands of people who live with constant and unremitting pain."

Program seeks disposal of old, unused antibiotics

By JAMES PRICHARD
Associated Press Writer

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A campaign to fight antibiotic resistance is urging Michigan residents to drop off their old, unused penicillin tablets and similar medicines at a drugstore chain.

In exchange they'll get educational materials telling them why it's important to stop incorrectly using these important drugs — such as skipping doses or saving the drugs for later use. If the effort is successful, it will be expanded nationally, supporters say.

The overuse of antibiotics is blamed for the global rise of dangerous, drug-resistant strains of bacteria that cause bronchitis, tuberculosis, staph infections and other diseases.

"It is a very serious public health threat because these bacteria are growing resistant to antibiotics and they spread very easily, and if we don't have drugs to treat them, we're in trouble," said Mary Eley, who leads the Michigan Antibiotic Resistance Reduction Coalition.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Foundation in Atlanta announced recently that it is joining with Eley's group and Walker-based retailer Meijer Inc. to launch the statewide pilot program, dubbed the "Antibiotic Roundup."

Consumers are being asked to take their expired or unused antibiotics — such as penicillin or tetracycline —

'It is a very serious public health threat because these bacteria are growing resistant to antibiotics and they spread very easily, and if we don't have drugs to treat them, we're in trouble.'

— Mary Eley
Michigan Antibiotic Resistance Reduction Coalition official to local Meijer pharmacies for disposal. In return, each participant will receive educational material on behaviors that contribute to the spread and development of antibiotic resistance along with a gift from Meijer.

Nearly 500,000 Michigan residents are believed to use antibiotics incorrectly. For example, colds, the flu and most sore throats are caused by viruses, not bacteria, but some people try to treat them with antibiotics.

That can help the germs become resistant to antibiotics. So can skipping doses, stopping medication early or saving antibiotics for future illnesses.

During the past decade, many types of bacteria have become less responsive to antibiotic treatment, according to the CDC Foundation, an independent organization that links scientists at the CDC with outside partners and resources.

Pampa takes two in Hereford

By MICHAEL J. STEVENS
Sports Editor

Harvesters 58, Whitefaces 55
Pampa used a strong fourth quarter to notch its fourth district win of the season Friday night. The Harvesters were either outscored or tied in the first three periods (11-13, 8-10, 16-16), but rallied in the final period, 23-16. The win was big for Pampa, as the Harvesters are not only playing for playoff seeding, they still have hopes of at least a share of the District 3-4A title, but must win all remaining games to achieve it. Jarett Kotara led the scoring for Pampa with 18. Sharod Youn scored 14. Tyler Hall hit 11. Pampa (19-5, 4-1) is back home for another "Pack

The Pit" night against Randall Tuesday. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Lady Harvesters 49, Lady Whitefaces 35
Pampa cruised to an early win over Hereford Friday night, improving to 13-15 overall, 5-2 in district. The Lady Harvesters dominated the Lady Whitefaces throughout the game, especially in the first three quarters (16-2, 10-6, 10-7) before setting the cruise control and running out the clock. The win important to Pampa as teams scramble for the top three playoff spots with the season winding down. The Lady Harvesters will host one of the teams expected to be there at the end, Randall, in The Pit Tuesday night. That game is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

OLYMPICS
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michelle Kwan is going to Turin. Kwan sealed her spot on the Olympic team, showing a five-person monitoring committee she'll be healthy enough to compete. The five-time world and nine-time U.S.

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — After seven frustrating years, Amelie Mauresmo has her first Grand Slam singles title. Mauresmo's long wait ended Saturday when Justine Henin-Hardenne retired in the second set of their Australian Open final because of stomach pain. Mauresmo led 6-1, 2-0 when Henin-Hardenne walked to the net and told the umpire she could not continue.

NBAer Bryant follows 81 with 30 points in Lakers victory

(AP) — For an encore to his 81-point performance, Kobe Bryant put together another late scoring spree. Bryant scored 25 of his 30 points in the final quarter and overtime to lead the Los Angeles Lakers to a 106-105 victory over the Golden State Warriors on Friday night. Five nights after his remarkable performance against Toronto, Bryant's scoring was timely enough to help the Lakers win for the eighth time in 11 games. Hesitant to shoot through the opening three quarters, when he was 2-of-12 from the floor and Los Angeles fell behind 73-66, Bryant scored 16 points in the fourth — including a pair of free throws that evened it at 94 with 7.1 seconds left. "It took me three quarters to kind of get the rhythm down on what they were trying to do defensively so I could go into attack mode in the fourth quarter, where I was able to start attacking the basket a little bit and get something going," he said. Bryant scored nine points in overtime, including four free throws in the final 6.7 seconds to give Los Angeles just enough to withstand Mickael Pietrus' 3-pointer for Golden State at the buzzer. "Kobe is always a factor in the game," Los Angeles coach Phil Jackson said. "I don't think Golden State stopped him from scoring; he just got other guys involved in the offense. It was a game where Kobe did not have to force the issue until late." In other NBA games, it was: Boston 84, Sacramento 74; Cleveland 93, Indiana 89; Minnesota 96, Houston 92; Detroit 95, Memphis 89;

the Los Angeles Clippers 105, Denver 87; Phoenix 110, Atlanta 106; New York 97, Orlando 94; Miami 91, Charlotte 85; Milwaukee 108, Toronto 87; Chicago 90, Washington 79; and Portland 88, New Jersey 83. Bryant finished 7-of-22 from the floor, 2-of-4 from 3-point range and made 14 of 16 free throws. He also had eight assists. Baron Davis led Golden State with 29 points and Pietrus had 20. Derek Fisher, Bryant's former backcourt partner with the Lakers, scored 18 points but was called for an offensive foul with 12.8 seconds left in regulation, leading to Bryant's tying free throws.

"Kobe Bryant is a load down the stretch," Warriors coach Mike Montgomery said. "He keeps coming at you. He gets calls when he needs calls. He is smart." Celtics 84, Kings 74
At Boston, Paul Pierce scored 18 points and the Celtics beat Sacramento in Ron Artest's first game with the Kings. Artest wore out his welcome in Indiana and was traded to Sacramento for Peja Stojakovic on Wednesday in an attempt to turn around the Kings' sinking season. He had 15 points, six rebounds and four steals against the Celtics. Boston's Kendrick Perkins had 13 points and 11 rebounds.

BIG 12 COACHES

High expectations normal for Texas, new to Missouri

DALLAS (AP) — As always, the expectations are high for the Texas Longhorns after they won their second national championship in four years. The preseason hype for Missouri is a new experience.

Missouri is the only Big 12 team besides the unanimously top-ranked Longhorns listed in each of the three major preseason polls. The Tigers are coming off their third straight NCAA tournament appearance, but the 40 wins last season were their most since 1991.

They're not used to so much recognition early.

"We're going to have expectations externally that we really haven't had to deal with early in the season," Tigers coach Tim Jamieson said Thursday during the Big 12 coaches preseason conference call.

The Tigers are 10th through 14th in the three major polls, and were picked by Big 12 coaches to finish third in the league behind Texas and Nebraska, which along with Baylor also went to the College World Series last year.

Instead of the polls, Jamieson has pressed his team to focus on the day-to-day activities that come with preparing for the season.

"We're not going to talk about (polls) any more," he said. "That is not something we want to discuss in the dugout, at practice, in the clubhouse. ... It's a pat on the back, and it sure feels good, but it's not going to mean a lot if we're not there at the end of the year."

Missouri has all of its position starters back except All-Big 12 outfielder James Boone (.340, 8 home runs and 72 RBIs). The Tigers return their top two starting pitchers — juniors Max Scherzer (9-4, 1.86 ERA) and Nathan Culp (9-2, 3.50), a left-hander.

Texas lost five position starters, including three senior infielders. While they return six pitchers, they have to find a replacement for closer J. Brent Cox (8-3, 19 saves, 1.73).

"We have to move forward. We have to put an infield together and find a short reliever," said coach Augie Garrido, the winningest coach in college baseball with 1,486 victories — 391 over the last nine seasons in Texas.

"We have a lot of new players that have a chance to make important contributions," Garrido said. "We're just getting ready to take the journey."

Baylor, which has to replace three top pitchers, was picked fourth by the Big 12 coaches, followed by Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Texas A&M, Kansas, Texas Tech and Kansas State.

"It was really, really hard not to pick Missouri to win this league," said Baylor coach Steve Smith, who gave his preseason nod to Texas, "until somebody beats them."

Nebraska won a school-record and NCAA-high 57 games last season. Among the Cornhuskers' 15 returning lettermen are pitchers Joba Chamberlain (10-2, 2.81), Johnny Dorn (12-2, 2.16) and Brett Jensen (3-5, 1.96).

"Mention those guys, that is comforting. That helps," Huskers coach Mike Anderson said. "Obviously, you like going into a year having your No. 1 pitcher back. And Dorn, last year we didn't talk much about him but had high expectations."

Oklahoma, with eight position starters and three starting pitchers back from another NCAA regional team, and Texas A&M have new head coaches.

Sunny Golloway led the Sooners to a 12-6 record as interim coach at the end of last season after coach Larry Cochell resigned after making racially insensitive comments. Oklahoma hired Gene Stephenson, but the same day he was hired, he decided to return to Wichita State. Four days later, Golloway had the interim tag lifted.

Rob Childress, Nebraska's pitching coach the last eight seasons, replaced the fired Mark Johnson at Texas A&M. The Aggies haven't been to the College World Series since 1999 and were second-to-last in the Big 12 last season.

"Talk about the Big 12, everybody is good," Childress said. "What makes good teams great is a blue-collar attitude, go and outwork people."

Oklahoma State, now in its third season under Frank Anderson, was 34-25 last season but finished under .500 in the Big 12 (12-15) for the first time.

Kansas plays the earliest opener in the Big 12, Wednesday at Hawaii-Hilo. Senior first baseman Jared Schweitzer (.366, 7 HRs, 32 RBIs) is among six returning starters.

Larry Hays goes into his 20th season at Texas Tech, which has to replace six position starters. Hays has 730 of his 1,425 victories (fourth among active coaches) with the Red Raiders.

"I'm happy to still be here," Hays said. "It's going to be a year where we're going to depend tremendously on new players. We have one obviously weakness, that's experience at this level."

For the players, not the coach. Kansas State third-year coach Brad Hill can depend on 20 returning lettermen from last year's 30-25 squad. That includes eight pitchers, with the weekend starting rotation intact.

Rouen ready for third Super Bowl

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — Tom Rouen doesn't bring up the 1998 Super Bowl very often to Mike Holmgren.

"Never," Rouen emphatically said.

Job security is too important to the Seahawks punter.

Rouen will play in his third Super Bowl when Seattle faces the Pittsburgh Steelers on Feb. 5. This time, he'll be on the same sideline as Holmgren, unlike Rouen's first Super Bowl experience when his Denver Broncos beat Holmgren's Green Bay Packers.

OK, so he is a punter. But Rouen has the most playoff experience on Seattle's youthful roster, having been in 15 playoff games. Rouen, wide receiver Joe Jurevicius and defensive end Grant Wistrom will play in their third Super Bowls.

Rouen is 2-0 in the NFL's big game, winning twice with Denver, and is fortunate to be in the position of kicking in the Super Bowl again.

"This is awesome," Rouen said. "It's always different every time and guys are just so excited to get there."

Despite his experience and proven consistency, Rouen was jobless after being cut by the Carolina Panthers at the end of training camp. Instead of planning for life after football, the 37-year-old Rouen continue to work out, waiting for the phone to ring.

That call came in early October, and from a familiar voice.

Rouen spent the 2003 and the start of the 2004 season with the Seahawks. He averaged 41.2 yards per kick in 2003 and started the next season just as strong, averaging 42 yards.

But he injured his hamstring in the fourth game against St. Louis and was later placed on injured reserve.

Leo Araguz beat out Chris Kluwe for Seattle's punting job in training camp, but after averaging 46 yards per kick in the opener against Jacksonville, his numbers dropped.

Seattle special teams coach Bob Casullo was shocked Rouen was available. He was among a group of punters brought in for a one day tryout as a possible replacement for Araguz.

Rouen won, hands down. "It was obvious he had been honing his skills and he outkicked the competition. He was the best one," Casullo said. "He's very solid. He knows all the situations and he knows how to handle all the situations."

Again, Rouen provided consistency. He averaged at least 40 yards a kick in seven of his 11 regular-season games, with a season-long kick of 62 yards against Indianapolis when the Seahawks beat the Colts and clinched home-field advantage.

He was 24th in the NFL averaging 41.6 per kick this season. In the playoffs, Rouen has punted nine times and averaged 42 yards.

"We kicked in a lot of really bad weather games and we were able to come out ahead in every single game. That's the best you can hope for," Rouen said. "During the year, you can't compare yourself to someone kicking in a dome when you're kicking in a blizzard on the same day. But comparing the guys that I went against, I had a good solid year."

Perhaps Rouen's worst kick of the season came in Seattle's most important game. In the NFC title game against Carolina, Rouen's second punt was a 42-yard line drive. The kick gave Carolina's Steve Smith ample opportunity to run up on the punt and return it 59 yards for a touchdown.

Instead of letting the poor punt affect his performance, Rouen's next kick was a perfect 40-yard boot that was downed at the Carolina 1. His veteran guile played a large part in that, Casullo believes.

"He made one mistake, he knew it, he owned up to it," Casullo said. "A young punter that may have affected him drastically. ... Tom erased it from his mind."

Despite his experience, Rouen is still very teachable and is always asking for pointers. His goal against the Steelers will be trying to give Seattle's coverage units a chance to contain Antwaan Randle El.

On a local level, I had occasion to call then Pampa Wal-Mart Friday. I looked in the telephone book and there were some numbers listed, including bakery, tire and lube, 1 hour photo, etc.

I didn't want any of those, so I just called for the bakery since it was first on the list. I told the lady what I was calling about, and she said, "You'll have to call the main number."

"What is it?" I asked.

She gave it to me. I called it and finished the chore I had called about.

Now, if Wal-Mart wanted to be customer friendly, do you suppose that they would think about publishing their main number in the telephone book? The Borger store main number is listed.

In case you are curious, the main number is 665-0727.

"My other best memory was watching Billy Graham's crusades on television with my family," Johnson said. How refreshing ...

In an earlier interview, Hitzges asked the Mavs' now-retired center, Shawn Bradley, about the most troublesome part of being seven and a half feet tall.

Bradley's quick answer: "Bubblegum ..."

As it turned out, it had nothing to do with sports or the lame joke about the uncoordinated player's ability to walk and chew gum at the same time. It had more to do with dry-cleaning bills.

He explained that in restaurants, his knees often rub against the underside of tables, where bubblegum, weeks or months removed from wrappers, is deposited. And he often leaves restaurants wearing it on the knees of his pants ...

Still another radio personality perks things up with descriptions of bumper stickers spotted on the way to work. (I listen carefully to see if she calls them bumper "snickers," like Paul Harvey, but to her credit, she doesn't.)

Maybe she could call them "automotive adornment admonitions." Whatever, a couple of recent ones include: Gold Prospector Reveals Secret; Gets Lode Off His Mind.

And the other: I Do Not Suffer From Insanity; I Enjoy Every Minute Of It ...

Well, I've done it again, "unlodging" on you. Don't blame God. In my youth, listeners were not saved from dead air. Now, readers are not spared from dead space.

No question about that ...

Morris

The Robert Bork nomination failed, ultimately, not so much because he was a conservative but because his opponents managed to cast doubts on his temperament by engaging him in harsh rhetorical exchanges during his hearings. Clarence Thomas was not seriously opposed because of his conservatism but as a result of the allegations of Anita Hill that he sexually harassed her.

The failure of voters to understand the role of ideology in court decisions seems to fly in the face of the knee-jerk conservatism of Antonin Scalia, Thomas and, during his tenure, Rehnquist and the automatic liberalism of John Paul Stevens and Ginsburg. But voters are not deluded; they simply do not see Roe v. Wade in quite the apocalyptic terms that both the left and the right do. To the vast middle of the American political spectrum, it is more important that a Supreme Court nominee be a good person with sterling credentials than be predictably for or against Roe v. Wade.

But, in an even broader sense, voters are increasingly appalled at the growth of partisanship on Capitol Hill. Clinton's impeachment and the GOP government closures of the 1990s have left their legacy in the growing public impatience with shrill, blind partisan advocacy in their elected Congress. Their insistence on credentials and personal qualifications in Supreme Court nominees reflects their desire not to see this unappealing trait spread to the Supreme Court.

—Dick Morris was an adviser to Bill Clinton for 20 years.

treatment such as chronic pain or digestive disorders

- Difficulty concentrating, remembering or making decisions

- Noticeable fatigue or loss of energy

- Thoughts of suicide or death.

While not everyone with depression will have all these symptoms, one or more often are tell-tale signs. If you or someone you know spot any of these symptoms, don't hesitate to see a doctor.

Treatment for depression varies with each individual. The most common types of treatment are talk therapy, antidepressant medication, or a combination of these two options.

Close attention must be paid to any treatment regimen for depression. Careful monitoring by a doctor or caregiver, and the individual undergoing treatment is important to knowing whether the treatment is working or whether a different one should be tried.

Treating depression takes time, but it can be controlled to the point where patients can enjoy life. Leaving depression unnoticed and untreated, however, is a risk.

Remember, identifying depression and taking positive action is the first step on the path to getting it under control and, perhaps, even curing it.

During the eight-week program, Davenport and Ramos completed a variety of training which included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, firefighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety. An emphasis was also placed on physical fitness.

The capstone event of boot camp is "Battle Stations." This exercise is designed to promote sacrifice, dedication, teamwork

Make Valentine's Day special, adopt manatee for loved one

MAITLAND, Fla. — Break free from giving traditional Valentine's Day gifts this year. Adopt a manatee through Save the Manatee Club. For $25, your special valentine will receive an adoption certificate, photo, biography, membership handbook, and a subscription to Save the Manatee Club's informative newsletter, "The Manatee Zone."

Or for $35, each new member who joins the Adopt-A-Manatee program online will also receive a free plush manatee — yours to keep and cuddle, or give to your valentine. A personalized Valentine's Day gift card and message is included with every adoption.

Kathleen Phillips from Palm Beach County, Florida adopted a manatee for her husband Larry a number of years ago for Valentine's Day.

"I didn't think my husband needed candy or shorts with hearts on them, and since both my husband and I are animal lovers, I thought adopting a manatee seemed like a perfect gift alternative," said Kathleen. "I chose Robin from Blue Spring, and every year since then, I have renewed the adoption."

Robin is one of nineteen manatees available in Save the Manatee Club's adoption program at Blue Spring State Park near Orange City, Fla., about 40 minutes north-east of Orlando.

He was born in 1980, and like most manatees in the wild, Robin bears a number of scars all over his body from boat strikes. Despite past injuries, Robin remains playful and active, visiting the spring each year to enjoy the warm water during the cold months.

The 72-degree year-round temperature at Blue Spring is very attractive to Robin and many other manatees who seek this winter refuge when the surrounding waterway temperatures become too cold and can be potentially lethal to them.

Only about 3,000 manatees remain in the United States today, and they are listed as endangered by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service. Save the Manatee Club, a nonprofit organization, is the world's leading manatee conservation group and was established in 1981 by U.S. Senator Bob Graham and singer/songwriter Jimmy Buffett.

Funds from the adoption program at Blue Spring, as well as from the two other adoption programs at Homosassa Springs

WT to host 'Stock Market Game'

CANYON — Jean Walker, director of the West Texas Center for Economic Education at West Texas A&M University, is offering a training workshop from 2:30-4:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 31 for teachers of grades 4-12 who are interested in entering teams in the West Texas Stock Market Game.

The workshop will be in WT's Classroom Center, Room 214. There is no fee.

The Stock Market Game is an Internet-based investment simulation that gives teams of "investors" the mock wherewithal to invest $100,000 for a period of 10 weeks. The 10-week game for the spring semester begins Feb. 13. Students work in teams no larger than five students to simulate the investment of $100,000.

A special version of the game, Take Stock in Texas, is being offered for fourth- and seventh-grade students studying various levels of Texas history and geography. These students focus on Texas by analyzing and investing only in Texas companies.

Teachers can register for the workshop by contacting Walker at 806-651-2515 or jwalker@mail.wtamu.edu. Registrations also will be accepted at the door the day of the workshop.

Parents who homeschool their children are welcome, Walker said.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me if I'm being petty. We do pretty much whatever and go wherever my husband, "Al," wants. When he lost four family members in two years, I was at his side night and day, being supportive in every way I could. We go only to sporting events because that's what he likes. If I mention I'd like to go to a concert, a play or a movie, Al tells me to ask my sister or a girlfriend to go with me. Recently, two things happened that cut me to the core. First, my mother died. Al provided me no support at all. As I was packing to leave -- my parents live several hundred miles away -- he announced that he wasn't going with me. I made the long drive alone. Next was a major anniversary. Al told me he was planning a "big surprise" for me, a weekend at a hotel with dinner at a swanky restaurant -- the whole works. When we arrived, so did several of his buddies. It "just so happened" a big game was going on in the same city and they had tickets -- including one for Al. He canceled our dinner reservations and left with his friends. I spent our anniversary alone at the hotel. Abby, I love my husband, but I no longer like him very much. He can't seem to understand that there is anything wrong, no matter how much I try to explain it to him. I'm torn between keeping my mouth shut and staying, or leaving. We're both in our 50s. I'd have a rough time, but sadly, I don't think he'd miss me. -- CRUSHED IN LEWISVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR CRUSHED: You have my sympathy. That you were emotionally abandoned upon the death of a parent was unconscionable. And when your husband promised a big anniversary surprise, the cruel one he delivered was certainly not the kind of "surprise" anyone would normally expect. However, perhaps you should examine your own role in creating this "monster" to whom you are now married.

Was he this way during your courtship? If so, why did you marry him? If it happened only after the wedding, why did you tolerate it so passively that he never learned a happy marriage requires compromise? Whether you decide to stay or go, it's time you got some assertiveness training, because if you don't, this pattern will only repeat itself. Would he miss you if you left? Sometimes people don't realize they have a good thing until it's gone. But more important, would you miss him? Ask yourself, "Am I better off with him or without him?" The solution to this problem lies in the answer to that question.

DEAR ABBY: My friend -- I'll call her "Dina" -- has a difficult time getting pregnant. All the tests she had done came back normal. They can't find anything wrong with her, but she can't conceive. Dina does not want to adopt. She loves kids, but she wants one of her own. It is very difficult to tell her to relax and take it easy. I tried telling her that, but she keeps getting frustrated all the time, and now it's affecting her sex life and her marriage. Any ideas? -- CAREFREE IN SEASIDE, CALIF

DEAR CAREFREE: Your friend's problem is more common than you may think. Telling her to "relax and take it easy" was the wrong thing to do, however well-meant. She is hurting, and every monthly cycle that goes by is a reminder. Much as you might like to, you can't make the situation "better." My advice to you is to suggest that Dina and her husband talk with a fertility specialist, and possibly a psychotherapist, to help her deal with her pain, frustration, disappointment and anger.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY ASIAN READERS: Happy Chinese New Year, as you welcome the Year of the Dog.

Tougher U.S. border enforcement keeps illegals from going home

PARLIER, Calif. (AP) — Acres of leafless vineyards surround this town in California's San Joaquin Valley, the bare branches a stark reminder that in the middle of winter, there is little work in the fields.

Traditionally, many of the migrants who crossed the border illegally to plant and harvest return home to Mexico by the time the winter fog unfurls over California's farm belt, emptying towns such as Parlier.

That annual migration has slowed dramatically in the past few years as tougher border enforcement has prompted fears of capture and persuaded many immigrants to stay put — even if there is little work in the U.S.

Jorge Garcia, 26, left the Mexican state of Michoacan two years ago to join two cousins and a brother working the grapevines around this town just south of Fresno. Like roughly half the men and women who work the fields in the United States, he came illegally.

He had hoped to go home during the winter, after the vines were pruned. Now, the fruit stands scattered around this town of 12,000 are empty and shuttered, and there's little for him to do.

"Going home is too expensive and dangerous," he said.

Garcia and others like him choose to live meagerly through the winter rather than risk capture or dying of exposure when they try to return. He shares a house with friends and family members, hoping to get through the cold months by doing odd jobs in town.

Reliable numbers are hard to find, but a January 2005 survey by researchers at the University of California, San Diego found that 37 percent of undocumented immigrants returning to Mexico had stayed in the U.S. longer than they expected. About 79 percent of those interviewed said they knew someone who had remained in the United States because of more stringent border enforcement.

Among those who returned to Mexico last winter, 77.3 percent said they returned home less frequently over the past five years because it was becoming too difficult to evade the U.S. Border Patrol, too expensive to pay a smuggler to help them cross back or too dangerous, the university study showed.

Other research suggests a trend. In 1998, about 45 percent of the nation's farmworkers said they'd spent time out of the country with in the previous year, according to the National Agricultural Workers Survey. By 2002, 28 percent of farmworkers in the country said they'd spent time outside the U.S., the survey said.

The Border Patrol increased enforcement following the 2001 terrorist attacks, catching 905,065 people in 2003, 1,139,282 in 2004 and 1,171,305 last year.

'Once people come over, they don't go back because they don't want to risk getting caught.'

— Rogelio Fernandez
doctor

More border patrol agents along stretches that are easier to cross have pushed immigrants into rugged desert and mountain areas. A record 415 people died crossing the border illegally in the fiscal year that ended in September, according to the Border Patrol. The previous high was 383 deaths in 2000.

Some examples of the drop in migrant crossings are dramatic.

From Nov. 24, 2003, to Jan. 11, 2004, 141,412 immigrants entered Nogales, Mexico, from Arizona, according to Mexican authorities. That fell to 61,981 between November 2004 and January 2005. Between last Nov. 1 and Dec. 14, that number fell to less than 18,000.

"Once people come over, they don't go back because they don't want to risk being caught," said Rogelio Fernandez, a doctor and the associate director of the Parlier Family Health Center, which serves mostly farmworkers.

University of California, Davis labor economist Phil Martin calls it the "paradox of tougher enforcement."

"You actually get more people to stay," he said.

One indication of the trend can be found in the public schools, where enrollments used to plunge in the winter.

In Parlier, the school district has seen its population become more stable in recent years, a trend reflected in towns throughout much of California farm country.

Of the district's 3,400 students, 1,545 are the children of migrants, meaning their families have moved outside the district at least once in the last three years. That's down from 1,621 migrant students in 2003-2004.

Life can be difficult for those who stay.

A 130-unit migrant housing complex, where a furnished apartment rents for $10 a day, shuts down in the fall. Last year, 15 of the 25 camps around the state stayed open up to a month and a half longer.

Parlier's camp remained open until the end of October — one month longer than scheduled. With the camps closed, there are few affordable housing options.

The town is one of California's poorest, where many residents rely on seasonal farm work and migrants earn a median income of $6,250. The Community Food Bank of Fresno, which supplies Parlier with produce and other staples once a month, has seen demand rise throughout the San Joaquin Valley, chief executive officer Sarah Reyes said.

In 2004, the group distributed 7 million pounds of food to Fresno, Kings and Madera counties. Last year, the total reached 8.4 million pounds.

Immigrants would rather return to Mexico, where they have safety nets.

(But) "they're stuck here, living these really deprived existences," said Ron Strohlic, executive director of the California Institute for Rural Studies. "They are more of a drain on the system, and it's working in everyone's detriment."

Thirsty bird

In NYC, live poultry markets try to overcome bird flu fears

NEW YORK (AP) — The odor is the first clue, a sharp barnyard smell that seems out of place on a stretch of the Lower East Side near a Burger King and a Dunkin' Donuts. Hand-lettered signs advertise in English, Spanish and Chinese: live chickens, ducks, quail, pheasants.

While most Americans buy their birds mass-produced and shrink-wrapped, thousands of chickens and other fowl are killed fresh every day at hundreds of live poultry markets around the country, with roughly 90 such places in the New York City area alone.

And some fear such markets could introduce the deadly H5N1 bird flu strain into the United States.

Suzan Holl, a spokeswoman with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal Plant Health Inspection Service, said live poultry markets are a bird flu threat because of the possibility that low-grade strains of the virus could mutate into the lethal form. And she said the markets do not always have the best regulation.

"With the live-bird markets, it's a loose type of regulated business," she said.

Elizabeth Krushinskie, vice president for food safety at the U.S. Poultry and Egg Association, a trade group that represents mass producers, said the live markets

"absolutely" pose more of a bird flu threat than big processors do.

"The birds come from a variety of different flock sources," Krushinskie said. "They mix birds from all different origins together, birds of different species — ducks, chickens, turkeys." By contrast, she said, mass producers of poultry control the process from beginning to end and "there's no commingling of flocks."

In New York, state officials insist the markets are monitored so closely as to eliminate the risk, but some customers are staying away because of the bird flu scare.

Low-grade strains of avian flu are common and rarely lethal. But the deadly H5N1 form has killed or forced the slaughter of an estimated 140 million birds since it began ravaging poultry stocks across Asia in 2003. The virus has also jumped from poultry to people, killing more than 80 people in east Asia and Turkey.

Human cases have been traced to contact with sick birds — contact that is more likely in developing countries than in the United States. But at markets like the Lower East Side's Delancey Live Poultry, there is closer contact between bird and human than there is at a typical American supermarket.

Investigators tracked KFC restaurant murders for decades

HENDERSON, Texas (AP) — James Stroud remembers waiting for painful hours at the home of his longtime buddy who had gone missing, offering comfort and encouragement to his friend's parents and pregnant wife.

Finally, the phone rang, and almost simultaneously there was a knock on the door. Both messengers brought the same terrible news: David Maxwell was dead.

Maxwell had been shot in the head and dumped near an oil field, along with four others who disappeared the night before from the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant where they worked in the East Texas town of Kilgore.

"That's how the whole family found out," recalled Stroud, at the time a 20-year-old college student who would serve as a pallbearer at Maxwell's funeral.

That 1983 day was one of many Stroud would spend focused on what became known as the Kentucky Fried Chicken killings. Years later, as Rusk County sheriff, he investigated what is one of Texas' longest unsolved murder cases, helping lay the foundation for two murder indictments that were announced in November.

Now 43, Stroud believes divine guidance shaped the investigation — first when he switched to law enforcement studies instead of being a business major in college, and later when, as a rookie sheriff, he got a visit from a retired FBI agent who helped breathe new life into the probe.

"I'm at a point ... where I can look back and know that God knew exactly what he was doing, even when I didn't know it," said Stroud, who now runs a deli and Christian gift shop in Henderson.

It was about 20 miles north of Henderson, in Kilgore, hub of the 1930s East Texas oil rush, that the fatal events unfolded on a Friday night in September 1983.

Robbers showed up at the KFC on the main drag there around 10 p.m.

About an hour later, assistant manager Mary Tyler's daughter arrived to pick her up from work. Tyler, 37, wasn't there. Neither were her co-workers Opie Ann Hughes, 39; and Kilgore College fraternity brothers Joey Johnson, 20; Monty Landers, 19; and Maxwell.

Investigators would later find blood on the floor and a cash register tape that showed about $2,000 had been in the cash box.

The next morning, on a road that led to an oil field about 15 miles south of Kilgore, a petroleum worker made the ghastly discovery: the bodies of the five KFC workers, all shot in the head from behind. Maxwell, Johnson, Landers and Tyler were lined up. Hughes was about 50 yards away.

"It just doesn't seem like that long ago," Stroud said. "We were just kids. I was just a kid. But at that time, the thing that bothered me the most was that Lana was pregnant. ... She's going to have a baby and she's going to be by herself."

In 1990, Stroud joined the Kilgore Police Department. Six years later, at age 33, he was elected sheriff and inherited an office where big file cabinets were filled with KFC case information — but he also confronted a lingering sense among many that the old case could not be solved.

But not everyone felt that way. Soon after taking office, Stroud met retired FBI agent George Kieny, who had worked the case

'XI'm at a point ... where I can look back and know God knew exactly what he was doing, even when I didn't know it.'

— James Stroud
friend of victim

for the bureau and the Texas attorney general's office.

"I remember asking: Can it be solved? He said he felt it could be," Stroud said.

A later discussion of the case between the two led him to hire Kieny part-time. "Instead of trying to come up with some new idea, we decided to look at everything from the beginning, every report that had been written, every statement that had been taken, and gather all the evidence we could gather in the case," Stroud said.

The investigation involved multiple locations, victims, and law enforcement agencies, who sent evidence to multiple labs.

A grand jury investigated in 1985 but returned no indictments. About a decade later, a torn fingernail found on one victim led to an indictment, but capital murder charges were dropped when tests showed the nail was not the suspect's.

The Texas attorney general's office lost interest in the KFC case when the fingernail indictment fell through. And Kieny, who'd gone to work there after retiring from the FBI in 1995, soon resigned.

Again, the case went cold. And even when Stroud hired him, and he plunged into the voluminous files compiled during the early days of the investigation, there would be no quick breakthrough. Kieny re-interviewed people. He obtained a court order to collect a blood sample for DNA testing from the wife of the man initially linked to the fingernail. But again, no real leads.

Kieny and Stroud decided to present their investigation to an annual gathering of law enforcement officers, crime lab specialists, retired and active police from across Texas who routinely consider cold cases for discussion.

"A lot of good ideas came out of that," Stroud said, including applying new technology to old evidence.

On Sept. 11, 2001, as a stunned nation focused on the terrorist attacks, Kieny was busy consolidating old blood evidence from various Texas labs. A bloodstain on a box containing cash register tape from KFC, tested using new DNA technology, put Darrell Hartsfield at the scene. He and Romeo Pinkerton had been on a long list of suspects early in the investigation.

Hartsfield, 44, was easy to find — he was serving a 40-year prison sentence on drug charges.

Appearing before a grand jury, he claimed he wasn't at the scene. But the new DNA results supported earlier witness accounts that put Hartsfield at the restaurant that night. He was charged with perjury, and soon Attorney General Greg Abbott announced the capital murder indictments against Hartsfield and Pinkerton, 47, who was also linked to the scene by DNA evidence.

Stroud was no longer in office when the indictments were announced Nov. 17. In office eight years, he'd lost a re-election bid late last year. Still, he and Kieny said they know they did all they could do to help solve the case.

"That gives me some personal satisfaction," said Kieny, who volunteers to help with other cold cases and hopes to attend the KFC capital murder trials when they're scheduled.

For Stroud, it's the end of a long, personal journey that began with the death of a friend and a sad night waiting with the friend's widow. He's lost touch with Lana Maxwell, who gave birth to a boy named David, for his father.

"We stayed close for a year and a half," Stroud said. "She moved. Time went on."

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Jan. 29, 2006:
Your creativity flourishes this year, though sometimes you are not realistic with your ideas. Be willing to take charge of situations. You start projects that win favor. Your charisma runs high. Your biggest pitfall could be being too self-centered or me-oriented. Listen to others' feedback, and incorporate it into your plans. If you are single, you will draw many to your camp. Who would you like to choose? That issue will be your biggest problem. If you are attached, be more open and giving with your sweetie. This relationship isn't all about you. AQUARIUS can be demanding.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ The New Moon encourages you to take a second look at an important matter. A friend whispers in your ear. You have a way of bringing others out. You could be delighted by what you hear. Speak your mind. Tonight: Surround yourself with happy people. This Week: Hold back until late Wednesday, when you hit your power days.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Make a long-overdue resolution. You will gain if you follow through. Consider what is best for you ultimately. A long-term dream calls. You have every reason to succeed. Tonight: A must appearance. This Week: Activity, decisions and talks need to happen before Thursday, when you play reclusive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Make something you wish a must. It might be time to take steps to make a desire real. You will find out that you have many supporters cheering you on. You could be on the verge of a significant change. Tonight: New might work.

This Week: You're in the limelight nearly every day.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Your ability to visualize and change your ideas could help a partner or loved one. Use your creativity to talk this person into a "good idea." You might be pleased with the thanks you receive. Consider working as a team more often. Tonight: Be a duo. This Week: Investigate before jumping to a conclusion.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ A new beginning with a partner becomes possible. Use today's New Moon for wishing upon a star and creating more of what you want. A family member goes out of his or her way to make you happy. Someone makes a special effort. Tonight: Let others choose. This Week: Work with others individually. Follow through on research.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Make a decision about a diet or exercise plan today. You will be likely to follow through on it. Listen to what others think. Dream away. Discussions are animated and distracting. Why not indulge in some lighthearted laughter? Tonight: Early to bed. This Week: Others run with the ball. Let them.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ You make a decision about a loved one or child. Though you might want to make a public announcement, you might be better off encouraging someone else to open up. Don't make assumptions. Tonight: Let the child in you out. This Week: Push hard, as people will be very distracting from Wednesday on. How nice!
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Take your time making a choice. You might be concerned about a family member or domestic issue. Check out an investment with care. A new beginning becomes possible with a roommate or family member. Tonight: Order in. This Week: Touch your creativity, and your work or life will glow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Is a new car or computer in your future? It just might be. Start pricing them before you go off shopping. The more you know, the better off you will be. Others are full of information (and opinions). You could be easily overwhelmed. Tonight: Out and about. This Week: You bloom slowly but surely. Let your ingenuity out.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Decide to seize control of your finances and not be quite as easygoing as you have been. A financial matter needs your insight and self-discipline. Some of you might be starting your taxes — already! Tonight: Iron out the budget. This Week: Speak your mind. You are full of ideas and zip.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ A new resolution made on this New Moon could stick if you really decide to make it so. Others might tempt you to break your self-discipline. Don't let anyone distract you from your goals. A must appearance makes you happy. Tonight: A force to be dealt with. This Week: Handle financial matters, because by Wednesday afternoon, you will be busy with other people.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You make a personal decision. You might need to do research or check out information. Don't feel like you need to share your plans with everyone. Sometimes being discreet works best. Loosen up. Tonight: Get some extra sleep. This Week: You fly into this week a powerhouse not to be stopped.
